COBOURG, May 27.—Road paving on the Provincial Highway is now in progress in this district. The Paving and Mastic Company, Toronto, is at work on the section between Cobourg and the village of Grafton, but up to the present no section of the road has been entirely closed to traffic. The pipe lines and other preliminary work is being carried out and a number of local men are employed. It is hoped that this work may be completed in August.

West of Port Hope another section of the Provincial Highway is being paved, and the highway traffic is now being detoured north from Welcome to Canton, west to Banker's Hill, then south to the main road at Harness Corner.

Cattle from West.

George Wallbridge, a well-known cattle dealer of the Bay of Quinte district, has brought a carload of western milk cows to his pasture on Massessaga Point, where they will run for the summer. The animals come from Winnipeg and are stated to be young and in good condition.

CHILDREN BURNED IN PEMBROKE FIRE

Tots Were Left Alone While the Mother Went on Errand.

PEMBROKE, May 27.—(Canadian Press).—John and Antoinette Boire, aged three and two respectively, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed their home here this morning. The children had been left in the house by their mother for a short time while she went on an errand. She returned to find her home burning so quickly that the rescue of the children was impossible. Mrs. Boire was slightly burned when she attempted to enter the house. The cause of the fire is unknown.

TO-NIGHT IS THE NIGHT

If you do not feel well there is some reason for it. In nine cases out of ten it is due to your liver. So start tonight and take two Tanol Calomel Tablets or take one before meals and a glass of hot water in the morning to wash all poisons from the system. Calomel, as you know, is the only drug known that acts upon the liver and that is why there has been such wonderful results from the use of it in the new form called Tanol Calomel. Just get a few of these sample tablets from F. C. Webber's Drug Store, Peterborough, and you will be surprised how effective they are. m.-w.s.

PARIS, May 27.—(Canadian Press).—Agreement was reached here today by the Government and the opposition in the Senate whereby the French Embassy at the Vatican will be maintained.

COD LIVER OIL IN SUGAR COATED TABLETS FOR PUNY KIDS

Forget the nasty tasting, stomach upsetting cod liver oil and give the thin, puny, undeveloped children McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets if you want to give them a good appetite and put pounds of good, healthy flesh on their bones.

Doctors know all about them and so does Warne Drug Co., McDermid & Jury, James Lynch and all good pharmacists all over America, for they are in great demand, because they are not laggards but show results in a few days.

They are not expensive either—60 tablets—60 cents and children take them like candy.

A very sickly child, age 9, gained 12 pounds in seven months and is strong and healthy.

One skinny woman gained 9 pounds in 24 days.

SIGNIFICANCE OF CITIZENSHIP IN BRITISH EMPIRE EMPHASIZED TO CHILDREN OF LAKEFIELD SCHOOL

Celebration of Empire Day by Public School Children and Staff.

TEACHERS PRAISED

Responsibilities to Country and Community Stressed by Rev. Walter Cox.

LAKEFIELD, May 27.—At three o'clock on Friday afternoon the pupils of the public school, about two hundred in number, gathered in Miss Kennedy's room for a united celebration of Empire Day according to the lines suggested by the Minister of Education. Miss Duff, the principal of the school was in charge and received the hearty support and co-operation of her assistants, viz. Misses Kennedy, Simpson, Payne, Northcott and Kidd.

Rev. and Mrs. Walter Cox, Mrs. W. M. Graham and Mr. J. M. Simpson were present as visitors.

Miss Duff welcomed the visitors and outlined the history of Empire Day and what it means to every boy and girl. Miss Duff paid a tribute to the sympathy and co-operation of the school board and Mr. Marling and read a letter from the chairman, Mr. J. W. Ridpath, expressing his regret at not being able to be present. Owing to pressure of business he could not attend. Mrs. Duff expressed also her appreciation of the co-operation of the teachers. They have never failed to do anything she asked of them and there is a great inspiration in their helpfulness.

The school sang 'The Maple Leaf' led by Miss Simpson and Edna Howard followed by reciting "The Flag" in a very telling manner. Edna has only been a pupil of the school since Christmas but she has earned the appreciation of her teacher by her application to her work.

Frances Fairbairn and Margaret Richardson sang very sweetly, "I'm In Heaven When I'm In My Mothers' Arms", with the former playing a tuneful accompaniment on the auto harp.

This was followed by a recitation entitled "The Children's Song."

Proud Of the Teachers.

Mrs. W. M. Graham, the lady member of the School Board, was the next speaker, and expressed the deep interest of the Board in the working of the school and all its details. This interest was strong in the secretary, Mr. Marling, a man whom men look up to and women respect. The Board is proud of the teachers and the inspector's reports give great credit to both teachers and pupils. The neat, trim appearance of the pupils was something to be proud of. The Earl of Meath, who was one of the founders of Empire Day, hoped to stimulate pride of Empire and patriotism and to thus raise up in the young people British subjects worthy of the great traditions of the past. Patriotism is a virtue and a duty not just for use in war time but all the time.

The British Empire, the greatest the world has ever known is founded on justice truth, righteousness and integrity. It is what Britain has done for the world and not what she has taken from it that is the secret of her greatness It is a service to each other that makes us, as individuals, worth while. Sometimes we hear it said that Lakefield is not much of a place, just a village, but even so, some men who have made good in the great world, came from Lakefield and received their education in this very school. Some years ago, before the war, the German Emperor, in his great effort to cultivate good feeling with the United States, asked that a professor of one of the great American universities be sent to Berlin and one of the German professors sent to the States. Prof. Henry Schofield of Harvard University was the American choice and he went to Berlin but the Kaiser was very angry and why? Prof. Schofield was a Canadian and he did not want a Canadian as he had no desire to be friends with Canada or its people. Prof. Schofield was a Lakefield boy who received his early education in this very school and was a pupil of Miss Duff. This is one incident of a boy from Lakefield who made good and there are many others. Each year our government sets apart a week for Forest Preservation and this is one of the practical ways of showing our appreciation of our great heritage; two little poems on the value and beauty of trust were read, one by Joyce Kilmer, who gave his life in the great war just as did so many of our young men who gave their all, even their lives, to their country that we might enjoy freedom and plenty choosing the path of sacrifice, rather taking liberty at the country's expense.

"Oh Canada" was sung by the children.

Our Proud Boast.

Rev. Walter Cox was the next speaker and he announced that he would exercise the clergyman's privilege and give a text, one he felt suitable for the occasion, viz., "Ye are the light of the world." Every member of the British Empire is set as a light of the world. The speaker remembered learning in his earliest school days a little poem which began "Jesus bids us shine with a clear pure light." Once in passing through the city of Pittsburgh with its clouds of smoke rising from the great chimneys, a fellow passenger said' "Man makes the city, but God makes the country." We should be glad we live in the country where we can enjoy the beauty of nature spread out before us. In the days of the supremacy of the Roman Empire, the proudest boast a man could make was "I am a Roman." Now we believe there is a prouder boast "I am a member of the British Empire", this we believe to be second only to pride in being a Christian. Wherever the British flag has flown it has earned the respect and good will of the people. Lands where white man could not venture because of the savagery of the people are now free and safe for all people because of the influence of the British flag and all that it means. Where formerly danger signs were placed about the coasts warning travellers not to land we see church towers surmounted by the Cross of Christ.

There are four hundred million people of every race and tongue looking up with respect and honor to the one in whose person is embodied the power of the Empire, King George. Monarchy is a popular institution because of its permanence, and combined with our democratic form of government makes an ideal condition. The journey of the Prince of Wales, which has brought so much joy in its train is an example.

Empire Respected.

The British Empire is respected everywhere and we must live up to its reputation and we should begin in our schools and in our homes. We must realize our responsibilities as citizens of Lakefield and of the great British Empire and remember that little courtesies are cheap but they go far. Wherever there is darkness we should shed light. Wherever there is sin we should practice the opposite virtue. Courage is a British virtue and we should learn to have the courage of our convictions.

The boys and girls of today will have to carry on when the present leaders have passed away and wherever we go we should act that men may rely on our word and know that whatever we do is well done. As citizens of a great Empire we should always keep our Empire on top and from the top shed a beacon light to the whole world.

Obedience to Authority.

Mr. J. M. Simpson, principal of the High School, said a few words advocating obedience to authority as a British virtue and one not as common as it should be, is truth. We are citizens of Lakefield and in our school we have a community in which we are citizens with obligations and responsibilities. We should be respectful to the teachers and to each other, straightforward and true. Shakespeare says "To thine own self be true and thou cans't not then be false to any man." The Golden Rule is essential to us in school. Children are ambitious in too great haste because we can't be too well trained for the life to be and we need a good education which only comes by careful study. "Be true to yourselves and be truthful." It is a painful thing to see the light regard too often placed on truth. You cannot be true to yourself if you are telling lies and it is a sad thing to realize that you cannot be trusted.

In the British Empire we have a rich heritage and we should love our King, our Country and our God.

The singing of the National Anthem brought the proceedings to a close and ended what was a most inspiring celebration of a great day. The room, decorated with flags and pictures of our last three Sovereigns, in itself suggested pride of Empire and had a part in inspiring all present to a realization of what Empire Day means to us as individuals and as British subjects.

THE MODEL CHURCH SUBJECT OF SERMON

Rev. H. W. Foley Preached Eloquent Sermon at Warkworth Church.

WARKWORTH, May 27.—Rev. H. W. Foley of Hilton preached in the United Church both morning and evening services. In the evening the subject was the "Model Church," and the text was taken from the eleventh chapter of Acts and part of the nineteenth and twenty-sixth verses, "Now they which were scattered abroad came unto Antioch and assembled themselves for a whole year with the church and the people." The church at Antioch was taken as the model church and compared with the modern church. This church was not run by the minister as some of the churches of today, but by travellers, laymen—all people took part and all people gathered together. It was also pointed out that it was a union church, taking Jews, Gentiles, Greeks, etc., into the church which stood on the dividing line between the East and West. Mr. Foley brought out many facts, such as the model church being connectional, and also of a missionary spirit. The church is not the building, but the people, and each true Christian which is a partisan of Christ must have a missionary spirit. Although the churches of today differ greatly in form of worship from the church of Antioch, said Mr. Foley, still the same fundamentals were essential to the carrying on of God's work and the same spirit of Christianity exists today as it did in the days of the model church at Antioch.

CHARACTER TELLS THE STORY!

People throughout this country are giving more thought to hygiene and to the purity of remedies on the market, but no one doubts the purity of Doctor Pierce's vegetable medicines, for they have been so favorably known for over fifty years that everyone knows they are just what they are claimed to be. These medicines are the result of long research by a well-known physician, R. V. Pierce, M. D., who compounded them from health-giving herbs and roots long used in sickness by the Indians. Dr. Pierce's reputation as a leading and honored citizen of Buffalo, is a sufficient guarantee for the purity of that splendid tonic and blood purifier, the Golden Medical Discovery, and the equally fine nerve tonic and system builder for women's ailments, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. UNITED CHURCH ENTRUSTS MUCH TO ITS ELDERS

MORE DEMOCRACY

Laymen Will Share More of Responsibility Formerly Borne by the Pastors.

MILLBROOK, May 25.—"When union is consumated on June 10, we shall all be one, preachers, churches, properties, pews—that is a great thing to say."

These words were introductory to the sermon on, "The Polity of the Local Congregation in the United Church", preached on Sunday morning by Rev. F. H. Howard, who is a member of the Church Union committee.

"No one will be joining the Presbyterian church in cases where that denomination happens to be the stronger, or possibly no Methodist church is available, and no one will be joining the Methodist church because of a non-concurring majority retaining the building and the Methodist place of worship becoming the church home of the united congregations."

"Inspired by the same spirit and purpose, we become one in outward form and organization, as an expression of our aspiration toward God, and our devotion to the common good of humanity not only in this land, but to the uttermost parts of the earth."

The full constitution of the United Church is not yet written. The committee, which has been at work for months, has prepared only the necessary outlines to set the church in operation, and the General council will go forward and complete the task.

Local Administration

In local churches there are thr ee distinct govering bodies—the session, the committee of stewards, and the official board. The pastorial charge is the unit of organization, and the members of the three negotiating churches become the members of the United Church.

What the Methodist church has called the district meeting will be known as the Presbytery; what Presbyterians called the Synod becomes the Conference; and what either spoke of as the General Assembly, or the General Conference, will now be the United Council, and the latter body will hold its initial meeting immediately following the consumation of union.

Session's Responsibility

The elders, composing the Session, and the Committee of Stewards, will be chosen by a ballot vote of the congregation as a whole. Great responsibility is placed upon the Session in the United Church, its members being chosen with a special view to fostering the spiritual life of the people. They will share a responsibility which formerly rested lagely upon the minister. The Session's term of office has not yet been defined, but will probably be for five years, possibly longer.

The musical part of the service, and the general order of worship, is under the supervision of the Session, also the care of the poor and the visitation of the sick. Practically the duties which, in Methodism, were delegated to the class leaders, and district visitors, are assigned to the Session in the United Church. The object is to have the laymen share the responsibility with the pastor.

All matters of finance are left in the hands of the Committee of Stewards. The Official Board which meets quarterly, has for its personnel, the Session, the Committee of Stewards, and representatives of the various organizations such as the Sunday School, the missionay societies, the Ladies' Aid, etc.

The United Church will have a larger degree of democracy than has prevailed in either the Presbyterian, or Methodist churches, the pattern following rather the policy of the Congregational Church, but safeguaded against certain features considered undersirable in the confederation of these three bodies, soon to reach its culmination.

Pastoral Term

No time limit has been set to the pastoral term in the United Church though it may terminate in any one year should local reasons, or circumstances, seem to make this desirable or necessary. The Presbytery will present the matter to the Settlement Committee, and the Conference will be the final court of appeal. But, to avoid the danger of having any pulpit left vacant, all changes must take place at the one time, a pastor's term to cease when his successor is appointed.

The challenge to Protestantism cannot be met with a divided church. We are called by God to a larger service, and a more difficult task, than we can successfully venture upon, or carry through with honor to His Name, while there is division in the Christian hosts.

There will be no conscripts in the United Church. It is to be a home, the result of a love marriage, under the inspiration and guidance of Almighty God.

Fair Board's Meeting

The officers and directors of the Agicultural Society held a meeting recently to discuss advisability of having a Field Day of sports in the near future.

The President H. A. Fallis, was in the chair, and after full discussion of the event it was decided that the project was not feasible at present. The C.S.E.T. groups of the town are holding their annual Field Day, probably on July 1, and the Orange celebration being here on July 1, and the Orange celebration being here on the 12, there seems no fitting opportunity for any organization to put on any public event of a like nature until later in the season.

The committees for the different classes of entries in connection with with the annual Fall Fair were chosen at this meeting. This year, for the first time, the Agricultural Society added four lady directors to the executive, Mrs. J. H. Paul, Mrs. G. F. Harrington, Mrs. C. Thorndyke, and Miss M. Needham, and these, with others were made members of the committees in ladies' work, domestic science, art exhibit, etc.

Hitherto there have been no ladies on any of the committees in connection with the fall exhibition.

Millbrook Personals.

Dr. Cameron of Peterborough, was in town on Sunday, called here to assist Drs. H. A. Turner, and C. A. Richards, with a critical operation performed upon Mr. I. M. Nattrass at Dr. Turner's private hospital.

The patient is doing well as could be expected under the circumstances.

Mrs. Nattrass has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. B. Ware, of Indianapolis, but has been called home owing to her husband's serious condition.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Nattrass, and son, Vincent, of Toronto, motored down for the week end, on account of the serious illness of his brother Mr. I. M. Nattrass.

Mrs. (Dr.) Brand, and three children, of Toronto, were guests of her aunt, Miss Mary Kells, over the holiday week end.

Mrs. Jas. Dawson of Peterborough is the guest of her son, Mr. B. B. Dawson. Mrs. Dawson expects to leave for an extended visit with her brother, Mr. H. Benton of Winnipeg, within the next few weeks.

QUARTERLY BOARD PASSED RESOLUTION

Place on Record at Last Meeting Thanks for God[illegible]ies.

BETHANY, May 27.—The last quarterly meeting of the Official Board was held in the basement of the Methodist Church last week, and as this was the last meeting of the board under the name "Methodist" it was passed at the close of the regular business that the following resolution be adopted:

"In view of the fact that this, the last regular Official Board meeting, that we will have the privilege of holding under the name "Methodist," be it resolved that we place on record our appreciation of and gratitude to Almighty God for the innumeral blessings that have come into our lives as members of this board, and into the lives of those we represent in this community, not forgetting those who labored in the pioneer days of this township to lay well the foundation of the church of their choice.

"There are few of our churches that have not resounded their songs of praise and their exclamations of hearty thanksgiving to God for His rich blessings and soul-saving power as manifested amongst them.

"While we are doubly conscious that we are separating ourselves from the name so dear to us, we do so believing that we are not only responding to the leadership of our church, but also to the call of God to the larger field of opportunity, the broader outlook and a more aggressive campaign for the winning of the world to Christ. These principals we heartily endorse, and do hereby pledge our loyal support. We also desire, as a board, in this, our last meeting, to extend to all those who may desire to become members of the Union Church a hearty invitation to join with us."

CHOIR PICNIC A HAPPY AFFAIR

FAST BALL GAME.

By one who was there

The annual outing of St. Andrew's choir for some years has taken the form of a picnic at Mr. Crane's cottage. On Monday some fifty choir folk and a few favored guests motored to South Beach and then travelled by boat to the Island where the Director of Music of St. Andrew's Church awaited the arrival of his hungry choristers at his "Rock-bound coast" with a calmness of demeanor that was amazing, considering early breakfasts and long exposure to fresh air, with their consequent effect upon appetites. We ladies, however, had brought heavy laden baskets. Tables were set out, all hands "fell to," or rather, "fell at" the dainty and plentiful lunch and, taking into account the severity and length of the conflict, the casualties were few indeed. Canoes and row-boats occupied the time until the arrival of the down stream afternoon boat, which carried all parties concerned back to South Beach.

And then—"If you have tears—Prepare to shed them now," and then the Ball Game.

To begin at the beginning, the best looking man was chosen as umpire—namely, T. H. Gillespie, who shall hereafter be known as "Herb." Great difficulty was experienced in selecting the captains and, whilst the debate waxed loud and strong, Jerry McLellan and Rev. J. W. Gordon bribed the umpire to appoint them, which was done immediately. Now as to choosing up it was finally agreed that all the best looking men should line up behind "Jerry," whilst all those who could play ball should take their station behind the parson. This led to immense trouble. Frank Kerr said he belonged both places and the umpire said Frank could not qualify for either. The matter was finally left to a committee of the married ladies present, as it was thought that the unmarried women might be unduly influenced by such things as moustaches, "knickers" and flashy haberdashery generally. Mrs. Ford Turner reporting for the committee, gave the line up as follows.

"The Good Lookers."—Jerry McLellan, Earl Petrie, catcher; Lowe, Deyell, H. Wood, Smellie, Petrie, Flitton, Ward. There was a minority report against Dr. Ward being included but all the unmarried ladies raised such a row that the minority report was ignored.

The Ball Players.—J. W. Gordon, F. Kerr, Hugh Niven, Ted. Jackson, E. Crawford, Jim Petrie, R. Asquith, H. Asquith, A. Wood Weir. Frank Kerr was simply adorable at first base, accepting everything that came anywhere west of the pitcher's box and east of the Great Lakes. Ted. Jackson behind the bat was a picture baffling all imagination. He was everywhere and then some. Crawford as pitcher went the whole nineteen innings and with the valuable assistance of the umpire made a fine showing. By the way this seems the proper place to pay a richly deserved tribute to "Herb." He has many qualification for the position of arbiter. He has a fine tenor voice, he has never played ball, he is a married man and wears a fedora hat. In addition to all these he is a man of iron will and twice in succession drove Hugh Niven to the dug-out for protesting too much. There were those who said that Herb. at times confused first base and the home plate in calling strikes and balls but, in general and by and large, it can be fairly said on the whole, that now and then he was fully aware of what was going on around him. His most valuable contribution to the performance was to call the game on account of darkness at 3.30 p.m., declaring it a tie and announcing on his own responsibility as a highly paid official in the baseball world that when Ford Turner replaced Weir in left field the day was saved for the parson's gang. After Herb. had called for "three cheers and a tiger" for the umpire the carnage ceased, and supper at the hotel was announced.

Mr. Crane is seldom caught napping, but this time his choir sort of put one over on him. Mr. T. H. Gillespie having, rested from his labors in another sphere, in a neat little speech on behalf of the choir presented Mr. Crane with two beautiful motor robes as a token of respect and affection. The recipient was quite evidently deeply touched by the gift and in a few words referred to the pleasure it gave him to work with the members of the choir and to have their evidence of their attitude toward him. Mrs. Gerald McClelland then delighted everybody with inimitable readings.

It may have been a cold day but the picnickers did not notice it so busy and happy were they.

LOST HIS BASS DRUM

WASHINGTON, May 27—If you own a bass drum, you probably think it's one thing you neevr will lose. But P. F. Taylor lost his, he admits in an advertisement. It was riding on the back of his car until he hit a bump. When he reached his home the drum was gone. He drove 20 miles back over the road but couldn't find it.

HAD HEARTBURN AND HEADACHES FOR MANY YEARS

A LINE-O-TYPE.

French may be seeing its last days as the universal language of diplomacy, but it still holds its own as the universal language of the menu card, even in so cosmopolitan a city as Peterboro. It is still swagger to say "Oeufs Florentine" when you mean poached eggs with spinach; and to have an "entrecote Bordelaise" when you mean beefsteak with a certain kind of gravy dressing. All of which makes very funny the wrath of a French newspaper which discovered that in Paris of all places one is apt to come upon a menu like this:

Haddock
Mutton Chop Rizotto
Yaourt
Cassatta
Cafe.

The Parisian writer recognizes haddock and mutton chop as English words and rizzotto as an Italian name for a rice dish and cassatta as an Italian name for an ice, but he wants to know what language "yaourt" belongs to and also why coffee is the only thing labeled in French.

All of which seems to indicate that it is accounted chic to hide the identity of the foods provided behind a smoke screen of foreign words so that all the hapless diner can do is point.

Learn to Play.

Learning to play is the chief problem of this age of machinery, especially in an industrial city like this. Work was once thought the all-sufficient remedy for the mischief Satan proverbially finds for idle hands to do. But no longer! Work no more occupies all the time of even the busiest hands.

We have abolished child labor, and abbreviated adult labor, until some degree of leisure is the common lot of all of us. The "Idle hands" consist of everybody's hands, for an important part of every day. And Satan, notoriously, is finding plenty of mischief for them to do.

The only remedy is for us to get even busier than Satan, finding good things to do with leisure, in place of his mischief. The same machinery which provided the leisure can also provide the things—libraries, parks, social centres, athletic fields, dancing halls, radio, movie and theatrical programmes—but the tastes, knowledge and disposition to use these things can not be made by machinery nor bought for money.

These must start with the schools, and continue through every organ of adult education and leadership. The schools would be omitting half their task if they prepared the pupils only for the working part of life. One of their most important functions is to teach appreciation of the beautiful in music, nature, art and life, so long, indeed, as they do not make the practical subservient to this, as is the danger.

And with everything inviting attention, from brothels to churches from booze to Beethoven, people must learn to prefer wholesome pleasures, or it will make little difference how efficiently our machines do our work.

MAY HOLD TRIAL ON BALL FIELD

Plans Being Considered To Seat 20,000 at Hearing of Evolution Case.

TEACHER INDICTED.

DAYTON, Tenn., May 27.—John T Scopes, high school science teacher, was indicted by a Rhea County Grand Jury here on Monday, on a charge of teaching evolution in a public school in violation of the Tennessee law. The indictment reads:

"That John Thomas Scopes, heretofore on the 24th day of April, 1925, did unlawfully and wilfully teach in the public schools of Rhea County, Tenn., which said public schools are supported in part and in whole by the public school funds of the state certain theory and theories that deny the story of the Divine creation of man as taught in the Bible and did teach instead thereof that man has descended from a lower order of animals, he, the said John Thomas Scopes, being at the same time and prior thereto a teacher in the public schools of Rhea County, Tennessee, aforesaid, against the peace and dignity of the state."

Judge J. T. Raulston set Scope's trial for July 10, at Dayton.

The Grand Jury was assembled in special session to pass on the case presented as a result of preliminary hearing two weeks ago when three Justices of the Peace held Scopes for Grand Jury action. Judge Raulston presiding charged the jury on the law of the theory of evolution, as it shall be taught in the public schools of Tennessee, the first time such a charge has been delivered in a Tennessee court.

Reads First Chapter of Genesis.

Detailing something of the history of the Scopes case, the Judge said that he had called the Grand Jury together at the request of citizens for an immediate inquiry. He told the jury of the act involved, quoting the law which forbids the teaching of the theory of evolution in any state universities, normal or public schools.

The judge then turned to the Bible for some of his charge. He read in its entirety the first chapter of the Book of Genesis, King James version wherein the story of the creation of the world and of man is detailed.

"Since the act involved in this investigation provided that it shall be unlawful to teach any theory that denies the creation of man as taught in the Bible, it is proper that I call your attention to the account of creation as taught in the Bible," said Judge Raulston.

"The vital question," he continued after reading the Bible to the Grand Jury, "for your consideration is, has this statute been violated by the accused teaching a theory in the public schools of Rhea County that denies the story of the divine creation of man as taught in the Bible, and if such an offence has been committed, was it committed since the passing of this act and prior to this enquiry.

"If you find that the statute has been thus violated you should indict the guilty party promptly. You will bear in mind that in this investigation you are not interested to inquire into the policy or the wisdom of this legislation.

Emphasizes Discipline in Schools

"The school room is not only a place to develop the power of thought but also a place to develop discipline, power of restraint and character. If a teacher openly and flagrantly violates the law of the land in the exercise of his profession this example cannot be wholesome upon the undeveloped mind and naturally tends to create and breed a spirit of disregard for good order and a want of respect for necessary restraint in our body politic.

"In this investigation you should not be concerned as to the attitude of the accused as to whether or not he is willing or unwilling to be indicted, this would provide a great avenue of escape from the guilty. What you and I as court officials, are vitally interested in is to ascertain whether or not the law has been violated, and if it has, it becomes our duty to uphold the law and preserve its integrity."

The American Association for the Advancement of Science has joined actively in the evolution case. Dr. George W. Rappleyea, who instigated the court test, announced that Prof. M. I. Pupin, President of the association and member of Columbia University Faculty, had pledged support to the defence, promising a "scientific expert adviser" for the trial. Mr. Rappleyea also quoted Dr. Watson Davis, the editor of Science Service of Washington as saying: "We are coming to your support 14,300 strong."

With Dayton already crowded for preliminaries, attention was turned to the problem of caring for the still larger crowds expected to gather for the trial. Plans are being considered for the abandonmnet of the court house and the erection in the baseball park of a temporary structure which would have a seating capacity if 20,000.

Scopes is prepared to continue the case through the higher courts.

THIS IS A FAMILY.

Thirty-three persons, all of one family, are en route from Liverpool, to Hanley, Saskatchewan. They include families of three generations—Mr. and Mrs. George Bradley, their four married sons and daughter together with their families, whose ages range from 6 weeks to 65 years. They all came from Retford, Nottingham. Bradley, the grandparent, is the eldest son of a family of 24, and has several grand-uncles living. His wife is the youngest of a family of 17, and has had 11 children. They are journeying to Canada, so Bradley says, because opportunities for the young generation are brighter there.

WINE, WOMEN AND SONG RUIN PRINCE.

By MILTON BRONNER

LONDON, May, 27.—Wine, women and song—too much wine, too many women and too much song—have led to the royal bad egg of Europe, Prince George of Jugo-Slavia, being locked up in a private madhouse where herafter he will not be able to trouble the serenity of his royal brother, King Alexander, whose throne he should really be occupying.

"In view of the state of health of Prince George, elder brother of King Alexander, which is such that he urgently needs a change in the manner of his life and being put under the constant supervision of a doctor the king has indicated, under the Royal family law, a place of permanent residence for Prince George and appointed a special doctor.

All of which means—exit Prince George, from the European scene. It's the most amazing tale in the history of modern royalty. Up to about 1905, when he attained his majority—18—he was almost a model prince. He was the eldest son, and heir to the Serbian throne. He was the apple of the eye of his father, old King Peter, who, on his eighteenth birthday, before the assembled regiments of the nation siad to him: "My dear son, my joy at your birth 18 years ago was great. Today when you enter the officers' corps of my brave army my pride is greater. With the help of Providence you will one day inherit the Serbian throne and will be highest officer in the army in which you today step as lieutenant."

In less than six months George had made himself the talk and scandal of the Balkans. He beat his aides. He dressed as king and held drunken orgies. He threatened to horsewhip the premier. He drove a car at wild speed through the narrow, ill-paved streets of Belgrave. He paid swift court to pretty actresses in Vienna.

He was mad about pretty women. One day passing down a Belgrade street he saw the picture of Mlle. Lauret, an actress. He secured her address and posted a proposal of marriage.

Having quarreled with another pretty actress, he made disparaging remarks about her. She appeared at the Bear restaurant in Belgrade and publicly horsewhipped him. Of course, she was arrested, but the national feeling was on her side and the matter was discreetly dropped.

It is estimated he proposed marriage to at least 30 pretty women. He was the universal lover, paying court to girls of all nations.

The climax to his career came when his valet mysteriously died. There were sinister rumors connected with this and in 1909 Prince George, to the relief of the nation was induced to renounce his rights to the throne.

For a time he lived quietly in retirement. When the first Balkan war broke out he asked for a command but was refused, and was greatly enraged when his younger brother, the present King Alexander was given an army. Then he complained that he was not given an allowance compatible with his rank and position. He wrote letters to the Belgrade papers attacking the royal family.

For a time his brother confined him to residence in Nish. Released from exile, he once more apeared in Belgrade and would drive around town in his car, distributing posters insulting to his brother, the king. One of these read: "Beware of the fellow with big nose."

With all his eccentricities he is a brave soldier. When the World War broke out and the Austrians attacked Belgrade, George put himself at the head of some troops and successfully defended the capital. He was seriousliy wounded in action at Tsea and sent to France to convalesce. He was made a lieutenant colonel for barvery in the field but scornfully refused the promotion. His latest exploits have been to boost the course of the republicans and attack royalty.

It was manifest he would always be a fire-brand. Exile from Jugo-Slavia would not be effective. So the plan devised before now by royal families was put into effect. He was locked up—a prisoner for life, perhaps—as a sick man.

GRAVES DECORATED.

St. Peter's Cemetery Visited By I.O.D.E. Representatives Yesterday.

In connection with decoration of graves of deceased soldiers by the 57th Regimental Chapter, I.O.D.E., Mrs. F. A. Hodgson, who was out of the city on Empire Day, decorated the graves in St. Peter's Cemetery yesterday. There are about 20 such graves in St. Peter's Cemetery, and these are decorated with the little flags that are used in the Little Lake Cemetery.

KHAVI SANCTORUM FEASTS TRIBESMEN

Peterborough U.O.S. and P. Entertained at Bowmanville on Saturday.

Khavi Sanctorum No. 235, U.O.S. & P entertained the tribesmen of the several oases in District No. 34, including Cyzicus No. 24, Peterborough Mycerinus No. 41, Lindsay, together with several tribesmen from Oshawa; the meet being held in the I.O.O.F. Temple on Saturday evening.

The program included the conferring of the "Degree of Humility" on a class of 'Neophytes,' and the joint installation of the Officers of Cyzicus, and Khavi Sanctorums.

District Deputy Supreme Monarchas, J. G. Baldwin of Lindsay, was the installing officer, representing the Supreme Sanctorum, and who at the close of the ceremony received the hearty thanks of the meeting for the splendid manner in which he, together with the members of his suite, had carried out their duties. The splendid "Degree Team" of Cyzicus No. 24, Peterborough, together with Tribesmen Wm. Bryson of Lindsay and E. E. Bathe of Oshawa, conducted the degree work of the evening, with Degree Captain Sheik C. C. Mowry, R.G.H., in command, and the manner in which the work was put on received the hearty commendation of all privileged to be present and witness it.

Among the pleasing features of the evening was the presentation to Sheik Walter T. Byers, the retiring presiding officer of Cyzicus Sanctorum No. 24, of a Past Grand Monarch's jewel, the presentation being made by D.D.S.M. Baldwin.

At the close of the meeting an adjournment was made to the Bowman House where a 'Moon Feast' had been provided for the Tribesmen by the genial host, Cap. Dickinson, where songs, recitations and speeches proved a splendid final to an unusually successful treck of the Tribesmen.

Following are the officers of the two sanctorums, viz.:

DESERTED ONE ARMY WON V. C. ANOTHER

J. W. Davis Vindicated on Charge of Wartime Desertion From U.S. Army.

NEW YORK, May 27. — (United Press).—Jack W. Davis, of St. Louis, has been vindicated of a charge of war-time desertion from the army.

Major Wood, who presided at his court martial here, gave Davis his honorary discharge when it was shown that the Missourian, bored with training rookies at Fort Slocum deserted to enlist in the Canadian Army.

While United States officers were hunting Davis, he was winning the Victoria Cross and the distinguished service medal for heroism on the war front with the Canadians.

NEW TREATMENT FOR ABSCESSES

Not Necessary To Have Teeth Extracted When the New Method is Used.

IODINE APPLIED.

TORONTO, May 27 (Canadian Press).—The use of a new solution of iodine electrically applied, by which treatment the need for the extraction of abscessed teeth is abolished, formed the subject of an address by Dr. Harry B. Johnston, of Atlanta, Georgia, at the opening of the fifty-eighth annual convention of the Ontario Dental Association yesterday afternoon.

He described the new method as practically painless, taking in itself only 30 minutes, and merely consisting of driving electrolyzed iodine through the infected tooth and the surrounding tissues to effectively destroy all pathogenic bacteria. The ingres of other bacteria is then stopped by proper filling of the root canal. Cures had been effected in a 95 per cent. of the cases so far treated.

BLOCK MOTION TO OUTLAW GAS

ANOTHER MEETING.

GENEVA May 27. — (Canadian Press). — Further consideration of the United States proposal to prohibit traffic in poison gas was blocked yesterday by the Military and Naval Committee, after a heated debate.

Great Britain, Italy and Japan, supported by the minor delegations, recommended that the League call another international conference as soon as possible to consider the various aspects of chemical warfare.

Germany and the United States, with the half-hearted support of France, favored Representative Theodore E. Burton's resolution prohibiting international traffic or else the inclusion in the conference's final report of a resolution outlawing gas entirely.

STOCKING UP.

Juniper Island Campers Need Not Worry About Good Supply.

To meet the demand of campers who are already located, the Islinda is leaving the George Street wharf this morning with a supply of provisions and stores included in its cargo, which is destined for Juniper Island.

Mr. Lillico is leaving tomorrow and plans having the complete line of groceries available on Friday.

This store will be a decided convenience to summer guests, as it will not be necessary for them to worry about the food supply.

LOST SENSE OF SMELL

DALLAS, Tex., May 27—Because W. Kenneth Cyeer has lost his sense of smell, he has taken advantage of this unusual condition to make a special study of skunks. He has found that they can be tamed easily and make fine mousers.

The spotlight

YOU'VE been in a theatre when the stage was dark, and a spotlight suddenly focused upon the thing you wanted most to see. Advertisements are like spotlights. They focus attention upon the goods that interest you most.

You could wander in and out a dozen stores and, in the confusion of many objects, overlook what would please you best. Yet by reading the advertisements, without leaving your home you can tell definitely where the desired wares are, their price, how they will serve you. You can know actual values long before you buy.

Advertisements throw light on new comforts and improvements, too, you might like to own. They let you see conveniences other folks are enjoying — bring them within easy reach.

Let these spotlights guide you to standard goods. They'll help you save. Read the advertisements regularly.

Advertisements light the way to wise buying.

WOMEN'S INTERESTS

SUGAR IS LOW IN PETERBORO

Commencement of Preserving Season Favorable for Housewives This Year.

BUSINESS BETTER

With the commencement, practically, of the preserving season, Peterborough housewives have the comforting assurance that sugar is almost at a rock bottom price. "The lowest it has been in a long time" is the verdict of a wholesale dealer. Possibly fluctuations of the market will send the price up soon, but at the present time, it is at "low," a very satisfactory condition of affairs. A large crop has contributed to the present state.

Mr. J. E. Adams reports an increased volume of business, with a commencement of the tourist and summer resort trade. Canned goods are beginning to move freely and seem to be fairly plentiful, with the exception of corn, which is a very short supply at present. The anticipated shortage in canned peas failed to materialize and stocks appear to be fairly plentiful.

The postponed ratification by Parliament of the Australian trade treaty has caused the postponement also of advances in the price of dried fruits.

Apricots have registered an advance of late, also prunes. Flour and cereals are reported in a strong postion, with a recent advance of twenty cents on the barrel for the former.

Still in the wholesale lines, prices on wools have declined materially during the past fortnight. The wool market over the world is described as "poor," with no consumption, and the wheat market is said to be "sick," with many of the dealers holding large stocks on he hands, bought when the price was at its peak, and hard to dispose of.

In the fruit and vegetable lines, there are hothouse cucumbers coming in from Western Ontario, with wax beans and new peas from Southern Louisiana, and strawberries from the same section. From the Niagara Peninsula and also from gardens of the district comes asparagus and the new orange crop has arrived from California, the Late Valencias, a short crop, and not as cheap as usual. Frost shortened the navel crop and the market was bare before the Valencia arrived. Grapefruit too are slightly higher in price. The summer lemon the Berdelli, with extra good keeping qualities, is in the stores.

Bananas are quite cheap. Local strawberries are expected along in about a month's time, although a fruit calender hanging in W. Oke's office puts the date for their arrival a little earlier, around the 15th of June, when they are supposed to make their appearance from the Niagara Peninsula.

Maple sugar at 35 cents a pound is in the store windows, and plants in boxes are in strong demand. In the windows also are new cheeses, round and moon-shapes, with the "Gorgonzola," boasting bilious-looking green stripes on a yellow background, selling for 65 cents a pound. Cheese, like wine, is one of those things that improve with age and no one want to have anything much to do with either of them when they are young.

Cherries are a table luxury in the fruit stores, black and rich-looking, at 85 to a dollar for a pound.

FURS ARE DYED, TOO

Not only laces, but furs this year are dyed to match the costume with which they are worn.

UNIQUE BACK ON THIS COAT

That the back of the coat needn't be severely plain is demonstrated by this model of white wool, embroidered in red and black and cut with a shaped flounce that gives a full back and a plain front. The collar stands up and is embroidered on the under side. The use of pin tucks on the collar and the flounce is a new departure and so decorative that it deserves to be extensively copied.

C. O. S. PICNIC.

Y.W.C.A. Club Enjoyed Evening at Jackson Park Under Miss Storey.

The C. O. S. Club of the Young Women's Christian Association, the club of young girls whose motto is "Christ first, Others second, Self last," held their annual picnic yesterday as a wind-up to the season's club work. The girls picnicked past Jackson Park, near the creek, where they cooked a hot supper. Miss Margaret Storey, leader of the Club, was in charge.

FELIX THE CAT.

Girls Have Small Editions of Movie Reel Feline.

"Felix the Cat" is the latest idol of the ladies. In Toronto, all the girls have a replica of the sprightly little feline that graces the short movie reels in komical kartoon kapers. These little wooden novelties in black and white are rather an expensive item. They come at fifty cents and a dollar, and are almost an exact model of the little cat of the celluloid films. Cut out of hard black wood, with a graceful white patch on a rotund tummy, they have large black leather ears, movable hands and feet, and a tail that is done in conical sections that permits it to be twisted into any curly cue desired.

LOTS OF GOLD LACE.

Gold and silver laces are used lavishly this season for flounces and cape effects.

She doctored a headache —but a Corn was to blame

A corn isn't just a local pain. The tiny nerves beneath it are on the "main trunk line," linked with all the nerve centers of the system. . . . Doctors know that a tiny lump of callus on the toe—no bigger than a match-head—may make one feel mean all over. Indigestion, a headache, depressed spirits generally, are often corn-reflexes. . . . And Blue-jay makes a corn so needless! A cushiony pad—as cool as velvet—fits over the corn, stopping the pain in five seconds. You wear this two days in blissful comfort. When you take it off, the corn retires too, gently uprooted by the little brown disc of magic medication within the pad. . . . So dainty, so neat, so quick and sure. Science's final answer to the pain and nuisance of corns. For health's sake, end that corn tonight.

MAYBE YOUR BABY CAN DRAW AS WELL AS AS THIS TINY TOT

And Yet You Never Thought of Calling Her an Artist—British Youngster of Three Gains Distin ction.

"Maddy" and her drawings.

BY MILTON BRONNER

LONDON, May 27.—Madeline Bethel, a pretty fair-haired tot of three has the distinction of being the youngest "artist" whose "work" has ever been added to a permanent collection in Great Britain. And "Maddy" is blissfully ignorant of what it is all about. She just likes to make pictures on odd scraps of paper and can't understand as yet why Daddy and Mummy were so frightfully pleased not long ago when they got a letter.

"It's about you and your pictures, Maddy," said Daddy.

"Um," commented Madeleine who had the end of a lead pencil in her mouth. And that was that.

The honor came to the tot from the Royal Drawing Society, founded 1888 and whose first royal patron was King Edward VII. Its main object is to encourage the love and exercise of drawing among the children of Great Britain Many youngsters display quite extraordinary talent and the work of the better of them is collected year by year, showing the progress they make until they are really established artists.

Every year there is an exhibit of drawings collected from schools all over the kingdom. If youngsters are too small to go to school, their parents may send in their drawings for consideration by the committee. Several thousands are exhibited. And out of this multitude a few of the best are chosen each year and added to the permanent collection in honor of the late King Edward. This year 15 children had this honor conferred upon them.

Madeleine was the youngest. She devotes most of her time at present to attempts of depicting Daddy, Mummy and herself. And in the big catalogue of the Royal Drawing Society these are gravely put down as "Family Portraits."

Her father, A. Berthel is a painter and an art expert, so that it comes naturally to Madeleine to wish to draw what she sees and what she remembers.

No attempt has been made to teach her. She scribbles down her impressions of those around her. Her parents proudly claim for her that already she displays a considerable knowledge of art and has a very keen sense of the difference between a good painting and a bad one.

HOME TOWN RECIPE.

¾ cup fine cocoanut.
¼ cup butter.
¼ cup shortening.
1 egg.
½ cup brown sugar.
½ cup corn syrup.
½ cup cold water.
1 teaspoonful soda.
1 teaspoonful ground ginger.
1 teaspoonful cinnamon.
½ teaspoonful salt.
1 ½ cups flour.

Method—Cream shortening and butter and sugar; add egg and beat well. Brown sugar on stove and add water and corn syrup to sugar. Cool and add to creamed mixture. Mix flour, spice, Salt and soda, sift, and add cocoanut. Mix all together and bake half an hour.

Ice with butter icing and cocoanut.

MUSICAL RECITAL.

A piano recital by pupils of Mrs. Pearl Burford Curtis, of Toronto, visiting artist teacher from the Toronto Conservatory of Music, was held last evening in the hall of the local Conservatory of Music. The pupils presented a fine programme in excellent style, playing some difficult selections in a manner very creditable to themselves and the careful tuition of their teacher. The programme was as follows:

Godard's "Espagnole Bolero" and Cyril Scott's "Danse Nigre," by Miss Gwen Donley; Schubert's "Impromptu in A flat" and Ambroise's "Valse Brillante," by Miss Marguerite Rome; Siberius' "Romance" and Cyril Scott's "Lotus Land," by Miss Irine King; Chopin's "Ballade in A flat," by Miss Isobel McKee; Beethoven's "Variations in A major" and Paderewski's "Minuet in G major," by Miss Sarah Flusty; Beethoven's "Concerto C minor" (first movement), by Miss Mary Harstone, with second piano played by Mrs. Curtis; Chopin's "Etude in E, No. 3," and Henselt's "If I were a Bird," by Mr. James McKee; Schumann's "Scenes from Childhood," by Miss Margaret Widdess; Chopin's "Nocturne F" and Weber's "Moto Perpetuo," by Mr. Harry Northrop, and Mendelssohn's "Concerto G" by Miss Olga Fowler, with second piano played by Mrs. Curtis.

HOME-LIFE SOCIETY

SOCIAL EVENING.

Star of Bethlehem Entertained in Victoria Hall Last Night.

A social evening was held in Victoria Hall Tuesday night under the Star of Bethlehem L.O.B.A. No. 650, when a number of friends were entertained by a good programme of games and music. Some of the numbers included recitations and songs by Mrs. Brealey, Mrs. Bugg and Miss M. Bettis gave some musical numbers, the latter singing a solo which was very much appreciated.

Refreshments were then served, after which a hearty vote of thanks was given Mrs. Wigg for the capable manner in which she had arranged and conducted the meeting.

The committee consisted of Mrs. Wigg (convenor), Mrs. Cheu, Mrs. Burnham, Mrs. Kait and Mrs. J. Welsh.

The singing of the National Anthem closed the meeting.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

DON'T WASH EGGS.

If eggs are to be put away in water glass they should be clean but not washed. If soiled sponge lightly with vinegar.

VARNISH ON WALLS.

The walls of an ordinary kitchen or bathriom may be made waterproof by coating the ordinary wall paper with a thin coat of varnish.

SANDPAPER YOUR HAT.

Spots of dirt and grime may be removed from a light felt hat by rubbing with the finest grade of sandpaper.

USE WIRE BASKET.,

Time can be saved by washing small fruits and vegetables in a wire frying basket that may be plunged up and down in the water.

MUCH BRILLIANT RED

The brilliant red frock is met on all sides, and because it is usually of conservative cut if not color, it is not at all a discordant note in spring styes.

KING'S GRANDSON

king is Master Harry Lascelles, son king is Master Harry Lasceles, son of the Princess Mary. He is shown taking a sun bath in Hyde Park, London.

MUSICAL RECITAL.

A recital was held on May 22nd at the residence of Mrs. D. Sloane, 345 Roger street.

The first part of the program was rendered by the pupils of Mrs. Sloane and consisted of duetts and solos. The second part was furnished by Professor Sloanes' junior pupils. During the evening a guessing contest added much to the pleasure of the children and was open to all present. The first prize was won by Mildred Holden, second falling to Gladys Mortimer and third to Mrs. Kerr. The booby prize was captured by Richard Walsh. After the serving of refreshments to parents and pupils a very pleasant musical evening was brought to a close by the playing of the National Anthem by Beatrice Pooley.

Programme.

Duet, Bobolink Polka—Margaret Kerr and Mrs. Sloane.

Piano solo, Playing on the Lawn, Roxy Roche.

Duet, Violets, Adeline Anthony and Mrs. Sloane.

Piano solo, Mary's Pet Waltz, Margaret Bethune.

Cynthia Grey Says

GOSSIP ACTS AS A BOOMERANG

"The older I grow the more convinced I am that scandal is at the bottom of half the evil in the world . . . and through the loose tongues of others than by any other one cause."

Struthers Burt, the writer, has this to say.

And he adds this proverb from the Spanish to it: "'A fish dies through its own mouth.'"

His meaning is clear. For malicious gossip kills something in the soul of the person who spreads it.

The famous Margot Asquith tells about a party she attended in her early youth. She was gossiped about because she wore a thin white dress, when the other women had on their diamonds and satins.

"Do look at her! She has on her nightgown!" one woman said.

The whisper reached Margot's ears, and the woman made a life-long enemy of the most powerful woman in England . . . as Margot later was.

And so it often happens that slander and back-biting often miss the person for whom they were intended, and, like a boomerang, come back to smite the thrower."

Yours This BIRTHDAY

WEDNESDAY, MAY 27—If today is your birthday, you will be extremely beautiful if you are a woman. If a man, you will make a perfect matinee idol because of your handsome appearance. One of your real serious faults is your frivolous nature. You take nothing seriously and think only of having a gay time. Your health and beauty will be undermined unless you change your course before it is too late. You probably will marry around the age of 23.

The Moir you have the Merrier!

She buys Moir's Chocolates by the pound
And then there's nought to worry her;
For at kids' parties she has found
The 'Moir' you have the merrier.

It's up to you, the mother of them—nor is dad exempt from this duty either; to see that the candy they eat is scrupulously pure and very nourishing.

You'll approve of Moir's. They've an extra thick coating of mild, mellow, light brown chocolate, and centres the tongue can describe in sensations, but not in words.

For School Recess

Let them take a few to school each day. Moir's give renewed vigour to those ever active bodies and minds. Just as nourishing as bread and butter and no trouble to prepare.

GROVES YANKED AFTER SPOTTING CHAMPIONS SIX

Washington Easily Win First of Home Series With League Leaders.

RUTH ON BENCH.

Cleveland Dropped Double Bill to St. Louis—Lyons' First Defeat.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The world champions Senators celebrated their homecoming today by swamping the league leaders Philadelphia Athletics, 11 to 2. Lefty Groves, Connie Mack's costly southpaw, was relieved at the end of the fifth inning after yielding six runs which gave the Senators a lead that they were able to wide with the steady pitching of the veteran Coveleskie. Score:

Washington.. ....04020320x—11 11 0
Grove, Andrews, Stokes and Fox, Perkins; Coveleski and Ruel.

Browns Win Two.

ST. LOUIS, May 26.—With good pitching the Browns won both games of their first double header of this season here today against the Cleveland Indians. Elam Vangilder hurled the first victory, 8 to 4, and Dave Danforth tossed the second, 5 to 4. Ken Williams, outfielder, slammed out a circuit clout in the ninth inning of the first game in which George Sisler, Brown playing manager, bagged four hits. The score:

First Game:
Cleveland ....100200001— 4 11 1
St. Louis ....32020001x— 8 12 1
Shaute, Roy, Speece and Myatt; Vangilder and Dixon.

Second Game:

St. Louis ....000200201— 5 7 0

Detroit 8; Chicago 1

CHICAGO, May 26. — Dutch Leonard held Chicago to five hits today, while his team mates bunched hits off three local twirlers and won the first game of the series, 8 to 1. Chicago was saved from a shut-out when Mostil's triple and Collins' single scored one run. It was the first game of the season which Lyons had lost. Cobb, Detroit pilot, in smashing out a double, broke the lifetime record for extra base hits held by Honus Wagner. Cobb's record is now 1,000 extra base hits. Score:

Detroit ....002000015— 8 16 0
Chicago ....000001000— 1 5 3
Leonard and Bassler; Lyons, Connally, Mack anud Grabowski.

Yanks Split Double.

NEW YORK, May 26.—Babe Ruth, from the bench, watched the Yankees draw an even break in their twin bill with the Red Sox today when they came back strong after losing the first game, 3 to 2, and batted out a 6 to 1 victory in the second encounter. Shocker allowed but four scattered hits in the Yankee triumph, the only run off him being Tedt's homer in the fourth Scores:

First Game:
Boston ....000000300— 3 8 1
New York ....00001000l— 2 8 0
Ehmke and Picinich; Pennock and Schang.

GLAZER SAVED TORONTO GAME

PITCHER INJURED.

TORONTO, May 26. — Toronto swept the series with Buffalo and turned in their fourteenth consecutive victory here today when they just nosed out Buffalo by 7 to 6. Claude Satterfield started for the Leafs, but was taken out in the eighth, when the Bisons threatened to snatch the game out of the fire by scoring four runs. Glazer, who was sent in to stop the rally, pitched effectively.

Heath and Gehringer knocked out homers. Satterfield was leading batsman, having three hits including a triple. The score:

Buffalo ....000002040— 6 10 0
Toronto.... ....01003210x— 7 13 2

Rochester 7; Syracuse 5.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., May 26.—The Rochester Tribe made a clean sweep of the series with Syracuse here today by winning 7 to 6. The victory was costly, as Pitcher Horn was struck over the liver by a batted ball from Griffith's bat in the seventh inning and was carried from the field. He was taken to the clubhouse on a stretcher and later transferred by ambulance to a local hospital. It is feared that he has a ruptured liver. Score:

Syracuse.. ....30000003— 6 8 1
Rochester ....20200021— 7 10 3
Gresset, Boyd and McKee; Horn, H. Thormahlen and Head.

BASEBALL SIMPLIFIED

Please explain the exact meaning of a force play. If there is a runner on first and the batsman grounds to the first baseman, who touches that base retiring the batsman, is the runner on first compelled to run to second?

A force play in baseball hinges entirely on the batsman. There can never be a force play except when base runners must advance in order to make room for the batter who has hit the ball.

In the above play, the runner on first according to good baseball, must start for second the moment the batter grounds to the first baseman. He must vacate that base so the batsman can occupy it in case he should beat the play.

However, the moment the first baseman fielded the ball and retired the batsman at first, the force was removed.

The runner originally on first could continue on to second, if he so desired. Incidentally, he had the right to return to first if he so desired and could reach that base without being touched with the ball.

If he elected to continue on to second, the mere arrival of the ball at that base in advance of him did not retire the runner; it was necessary to touch him out. The retiring of the batsman at first removed the force and made it a touch play.

In order to have a clear conception of the force play, one need only remember that such a play can only happen when it is necessary for the runners to advance to make room for the batsman.

CONNIE MACK'S PENNANT SMILE RETURNS.

Says Team That Wins in American League Must Beat Washington.

Above are two interesting photographic studies of Connie Mack, elongated leader of the Athletics. One was taken back in 1914 after that disastrous world series with the Braves. The other, a recent picture, shows Connie all smiles as his team continues to set a hot pace in the 1925 chase; the best it has displayed in the last 11 seasons.

* * * * * * * * *

Connie's last real laugh was in 1914, when his team won the American League pennant.

However, it lost the world series in four straight games to the Boston Braves. The defeat of the Athletics was the greatest upset that has ever featured baseball.

Each defeat in that series brought a frown to Mack. When it was over the mop of Cornelius was decidedly wrinkled. He has been frowning ever since.

That winter he wrecked his once great ball club, selling most of his stars to the highest bidder. There was too much remorse connected with the 1914 series to go along with the same team. He decided to rebuild.

For seven years, in an effort to get together a new team, his strategy and endeavor brought nothing more than a tail-end berth in the majors.

In his eighth attempt he emerged from the basement and has been making progress ever since.

Mack is now sitting on the top of the world. For the first time in 10 years he actually believes he has an excellent chance to win the American League championship.

"I have a good ball club," says Mack. "It was good last year. I predicted we would finish second. We didn't. The ability was there but the club lacked confidence.

"In the south I shouted from the housetops that all my club needed was the will to win, believe in its ability.

"It has suddenly acquired that much-needed asset. I am not saying we are going to win the pennant, but if we don't, we will have a lot to say as to who does.

"What team do I regard as most dangerous? Washington. It has the spirit and harmony and proper respect for its manager, Stanley Harris.

"The team that wins the American League pennant must beat the Washington club. It plays smart baseball.

"New York and Detroit have disappointed. However, don't waste sympathy on them. These two clubs should shortly strike their stride and be up where they belong.

"Keep your eye on the Chicago White Sox. Eddie Collins seems destined to be as great a manager as player. There never was a better second baseman. Chicago is the dark horse, as they say of the team that no one picked to show."

SPORT GOSSIP AND COMMENT.

A feature of the Central Ontario League race so far this year is that each of the four teams has used a different pitcher in each of its two starts. Cairns and Gallagher, two left-handers, have turned in a win each for Kingston; Dainty, left-hander, and Breckenridge, right-hander, have won and lost, respectively, for Oshawa; Keon and Goyer, two right-handers, have each lost for Belleville, and Heckman, right-hander, has won and Whitehouse, southpaw, has lost for the Petes. Three of the four winning pitchers so far have thus been of the portsider brand, with Heckman the only right-hander to turn in a winning card.

* * * * * * * * *

There are two reasons for this profusion of pitchers. In the first place, all the teams have more twirlers on their staff than usual, and secondly, and more important, is the fact that with no split schedule the clubs can afford to take more chance in experimenting than in other seasons when the loss of a game might mean disaster, and each team used its ace as often as possible.

* * * * * * * * *

Manager Reeves of Oshawa introduced a new one on Monday by using left-handed pinch hitters against the southpaw slants of Ted Gallagher. The wily old Kingston portsider appreciated the strategy more than did anybody else.

* * * * * * * * *

Catcher Ty Tyson of Oshawa, who went through the entire 1924 campaign without a fielding misplay, had an error in his first game of the season. Well, anyway Tyson will not have to worry about equalling last year's record.

* * * * * * * * *

"You're a better man than I am, Gunga Dhin," shouted Shiner Johnston from the coaching line in Belleville Monday when Second Baseman Meagher got his shin in the way of a torrid smash from Wolfe's bat. The Belleville keystone performer had been doing a lot of talking on the coaching line just before this incident, and when Wolfe's drive tore the pins from in under him the whole Peterboro crew howled with glee.

* * * * * * * * *

Norman ("Slats") Kerr, the "Big Voice Palmer" of the Central Ontario League, was in attendance as usual at Monday's game in Belleville. It was not a good day for Slats, however, after the Petes had taken the lead in the fourth.

BETHANY WON IN HOLIDAY GAMES FROM VISITORS

Defeated Cogs in First Game 3-1 After a Hard Struggle.

BEAT MILLBROOK.

Winners Over Janetville Lost Final Game to Home Team.

BETHANY, May 27.—Bethany pried the lid off the 1925 ball season with a double win, in the ball tournament held on the holiday. The weather was anything but good for baseball but in spite of overhanging clouds and a cold wind, the largest crowd that ever attended this annual opening turned out and were rewarded with three good games of ball. The Fax Fun Co. also under the auspices of the B.A.A. played to a capacity house and over a hundred were turned away on account of no room being left. The receipts of the day were approximately $500.00.

The first game, an exhibition between Bethany and Peterboro Cogs was a well contested game and provided some fine fielding. R. Dawe, a junior, pitched exceptionally well and while four errors were made behind him he held the Cogs in check and only allowed six scattered hits and struck out seven batters.

A great improvement in the Bethany infield was in moving Ryley from first to second. While he plays both these position equally well there are more fielding plays at second. C. Staples at first made a good impression and played the position faultlessly.

An unfortunate accident happened in the first innings. W. Price going to second on a short play twisted his ankle and was compelled to retire for the rest of the games. G. Staples took his position at centre and made good. The other players did exceptionally well, when cold weather and no practice are considered, and while errors were made it was generally on account of their being too anxious. With more practice this will be overcome and Bethany will surey be heard from when the season gets under way.

The Cogs turned out a snappy team, which did some playing and if there was any weakness it was the infield, as several batted balls were fumbled long enough to get runners on, who should have been easy outs. However, that goes in a ball game.

Cognawagas—G. Williams, p; Davis, c; A. Rooke, 1b; H. Shadgett, 2b; F. Cripps, 3b; Halliday, ss; Wilson, rf; J. Billingley, lf; W. Brest, cf.

Bethany—R. Dawe, p; T. Staples, c; C. Staples, 1b; B. Ryley, 2b; R. Staples, 3b; K. Sisson, ss; H. Johnston, rf; H. Neals, lf; W. Price, cf; G. Staples, cf.

By innings:
Cognawagas .. ....1000000—1 6 2
Bethany .....0110l0x—3 8 4
Umpire—J. Carthcart.

The Second Game.

The second game was played between Millbrook and Janetville and while the latter lost by two runs, on the play they should have won, as they invariably had men on the paths but the much needed hits were not forthcoming.

The teams lined up as follows:

By innings:
Millbrook .. .. 1002010—4 4 1
Janetville .... 0001010—2 9 1
Umpire—C. Comisky.

The third game, the play off between the winners, was between Bethany and Millbrook, and was terminated at the end of the fourth innings by agreement of the two teams on account of the late hour. The feature of this game was G. Staples, another junior pitcher for Bethany, playing his first game this season. He pitched a masterly game, allowing 3 hits and striking out five men. Hutchinson and Russel pitching for Millbrook were touched for fourteen hits. Bethany went on a batting rampage, Ryley and R. Staples getting a triple each and H. Johnston and C. Staples each getting a double. Coupled with this heavy hitting they played errorless ball and were always in front.

Bethany — G. Staples, p; F. Staples, c; C. Staples, 1b; B. Ryley, 2b; R. Staples, 3b; K. Sisson, ss; H. Johnston, rf; H. Neals, lf; R. Dawe, cf.

By innings:
Millbrook .... 0010— 1 4 4
Bethany .. .. 2323—10 14 0
Umpires—C. Comisky, J. Cathcart.

Race Results.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

When the body action is too fast in the forward swing the right shoulder and perhaps the entire right side dip downward. This fault noticed in your play is a sure sign for you that you are losing control of the clubhead somewhere, and the chances are you lose it near the top of the back swing. The clubhead should fall over the top of the back swing and there be caught up in the wrists, at which time the grip tightens considerably—not vice-like, but enough to maintain control. Keep the fingers closed on the shaft. In going forward start through the hips, let the club "drift" downward with you, then whip it through. Keep up on the right leg. Push with the hands and arms all you can, but not with the body.

BRIGHTON WINS EXHIBITION GAME

Defeated Colborne 16-11—Both Teams Give Promise of Great Strength.

BRIGHTON, May 27.—Brighton opened the season auspiciously on Wednesday by defeating the strong Colborne team in an exhibition game. The score was 16-11. Considering the small amount of practice the teams have had, the game was fairly good and the result certainly pleased the Brighton fans. They feared that their team would be weak in the pitching department this year but if the work done by McCulloch, Langdon and Frise is any indication Brighton will get some good pitching this year.

Scriver Samis and Hawkins did some good fielding. Archer was behind the bat for Brighton and his pegging to bases featured the game. He threw out four runners. Nicholls, Colborne's new catcher, looked good.

Archer was the big noise with the stick, hitting a triple, a double and two singles. Other extra base hits were doubles by Myles and Turpin.

The teams:

Colborne—Mulhall, 2b; Hawkins, cf; Billcox, 3b; Warner, 1b, lf; Myles, ss; Mayhew, c; Barfett, lf; Allan rf; Ross, p, 4b; Nicholls, c, ss; Turpin, rf, p.

Brighton—Solomon, rf, lf; Cameron, cf; McKee, ss; Frise, 1b, p; Scriver, 2b; Samis, 3b; Archer, c; W. Brown, lf; C. Brown, p; Langdon, p; Cornwall, rf; McCulloch, p, rf, 1b.

Umpires—Adams and Cowie.

Score by innings:
Colborne ..... 310006100—11 12 6
Brighton ..... 21721201x—16 17 6

SOCCER NOTES

The senior game for Saturday is the Gordon Cup competition between the Canadian Woollens and Quaker Oats at the Oval. Referee, Wm. Rickard. Kick off at three o'clock.

A request (which was granted to C.G.E. select team) made by the Association for permission to play a game against the C.G.E. (Davenport) in Cobourg for the White trophy which was won by the select local C.G.E. last year. Woollens versus Thistle game on June 20 was held in obeyance so to give two teams a chance to arrange a suitable date.

It was arranged that Warsaw and Campbellford Gordon Cup semi-final be played on June 20th in Peterboro at Nicholls Oval, instead of 27th June.. Kick off at 3 o'clock. Referee, J. C. Russell.

Harry Curtis, the prominent C. P.C. junior, has signed senior form for Quaker Oats and cannot play until he is signed seven clear days. Quakers will be without his services on Saturday in the cup tie.

De Laval travel to Warsaw on Saturday and play in Warsaw. Frank McKinley, referee.

The draw for the First Round of the Taylor Challenge (Junior) Cup will take place next Monday evening in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

A junior player can sign a senior form without getting permission of a junior team but a senior must get permission from senior executive before reverting back to juniors. A player becomes a senior member whenever he signs a senior form, he is no longer a junior. A junior player can play three league games but no cup ties.

When A Back Passes to His Goal-Keeper.

Now for the queries. There are four of them: 1. A full back in taking a goal kick passes the ball back to the goal keeper, who completely misses it, and it rolls into the net. Is it a goal? 2. Same as No. 1, except that in this case the goalkeeper fumbles the ball. 3. Can a goal be scored direct from a free kick given against the goalkeeper for carrying the ball?

To answer the queries in their order. No. 1: It is a corner kick, not a goal. No. 2: The answer is that it is a goal. No. 3: No; carrying the ball is not one of the nine deadly sins referred to in Law 9.

Goal-Keepers Duties.

In clearing a goal the ball should be kicked at an angle, as it is more difficult for the opponents to score on a diagonal shot than on a straight shot. Let the goal keeper develop all possible speed in getting the ball away from his goal.

Penalty kicks are considered the test of a goal keeper. On this play his opponents face him with a 2 to 1 chance of scoring. Coolness is of vital importance. Hardy, the famous English goal keeper, was noted for his ability to save penalties. It was his system to move to one side of the goal, leaving one-third of the space exposed on one side and two thirds on the other. Ninety-nine per cent of the kickers would try for the larger opening, and Hardy, realizing this, was nearly always able to anticipate the direction of the shot.

On the corner kick, the goal keeper should remain at the upright farthest from the kicker, keeping the goal line clear of his own men. Since he is allowed the use of his hands, as much space as possible should be given him to move about for the purpose of stopping the ball. He should wait until the ball is kicked before he moves, so that he may locate its direction and see who is to receive it. A ball should always be fisted out of goal danger and never held by a goal keeper after a corner kick.

EXPECT NEW CHAMP.

Berlenbach Is Favored to Win Bout With Mike McTigue.

NEW YORK, May 27.—(Canadian Press).—Many boxing fans expect that a new light heavyweight king will be crowned at the Yankee Stadium on Friday night.

In spite of the statement that Mike McTigue, the titleholder, has wagered $5,000 that he will stop his challenger, hard swinging Paul Berlenbach of Astoria. Berlenbach is an 8 to 5 favorite. A long string of knockouts, an aggressive style and youth tilt the scales against the champion's greater experience and superb defence.

GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Last of Big Three Eliminated —E. H. Thompson Is Up.

WESTWARD HO, Eng., May 27. —(Canadian Press).—The last of the "Big Three" of British amateur golf was eliminated from the 1925 championship yesterday when E. H. Thompson of Wearside defeated Cyril Tolley, ex-champion, three up and two to play. Sir Ernest Holderness, title holder, and Roger Wethered were eliminated on Monday.

Another favorite for the amateur title was eliminated when E. F. Storey, last year's runner-up, lost to K. F. Fradgley of Warren, 3 up and 2 to play.

J. B. Pease defeated R. A. Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, by one hole.

A. F. Bourne of New York was eliminated by F. C. Longstaffs of Aldeburgh, 4 up and 3 to play.

RAYBESTOS AND ROYALS BATTLE

STRONG TEAMS.

The city series of the East Peterborough Baseball League will open at Exhibition Park on Thursday evening at six o'cock with a game between the Royals and Raybestos. Royals will put a strong team on the field. The club is a new-comer to sport circles and in an exhibition game at Keene on the holiday won an extra innings battle with the home team by the score of 9 to 8. Both Royals and Raybestos have a number of well known ball players on their rosters, and a lively contest is in store for the fans. The league season will be ushered in with the usual ceremonies.

Cross Bow, Lord Astor's horse, was seventh at the finish. The King's Runnymede was eighth and the French Horse, Ptolemy II., owned by Capt. Jefferson D. Cohen, which up to a fortnight ago was a hot favorite, came in tenth. Rain made the track unusually heavy.

SOCCER NEWS.

C. P. C. Team Lost Players, But Places Have Been Filled.

C. P. C. will hold their weekly practice Thursday night at 6 o'clock at King Edward Park. The following are asked to turn out: T. Montgomery, H. Bradley, J. Downer, S. Willis, D. Grant, A. Halliday, J. Gore, J. Mitchel, J. Buchan, J. Cross, W. James, T. Foster, J. Lynch, Sid Laidlaw, Westlake, J. Hewit, Frank Jefferies.

C. P. C.'s left half player, Roy Nicholls, will be missing in the line-up in future, having left town for Toronto, where he will play for the Swift Co. of that city.

Both positions on the team have been filled.

BOAT BEATS TRAIN

Gar Wood Made Better Time Than Twentieth Century Limited.

NEW YORK, May 27.—(Canadian Press).—Gar Wood, driving his motor speed boat Baby Gar IV. yesterday beat time of the Twentieth Century Limited between Albany and New York City. Wood's time between the railway bridge at Albany and the Columbia Yacht Club, Manhattan, was given out by an official observer in the boat as 2 hours and 58 minutes. The Twentieth Century's official time between these two points is 3 hours and 10 minutes.

COALES PREMIER.

Minister of Railways Elected to Succeed Massey in New Zealand.

WELLINGTON, May 27 (Canadian Press).—The Reform Party which holds the most seats in the House of Representatives has selected Hon. J. G. Coales, Minister of Railways, to succeed the late W. F. Massey as Premier of New Zealand.

THE SCOTTISH COVENANTERS

Eighty members of the Caledonian Club, headed by the pipe band, paraded to Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church on Sunday, where Rev. W. S. Edgar preached an inspiring sermon on "The Scottish Covenanters." He spoke from the text, "Of whom the world was not worthy," in Hebrews 11:38. There was a large congregation.

This eleventh chapter of Hebrews may be regarded as the roll book of a noble army, Rev. Mr. Edgar said. Human history records the triumphs of knowledge, courage, energy and statesmanship; the divine history records the triumphs of faith, that great power which rises from earth to God and passes from time into eternity. One of the brightest pages of this Divine history is found in the Old Testament. The writer of this book looks back upon it as a man might look up to the sky on a clear night when it is alive with stars and he sees it all bright and blazoned over with the names and deeds of those who have done valiantly through their trust in the living God.

He begins to count them one by one and then they crowd upon him so thick and fast that they cannot be reckoned up in order. They gather into clusters like the constellations of the heavens, like clouds of witnesses set on high for spectators as examples.

As the writer thinks of those grand old men of God and what they suffered and sacrificed for the faith he comes to the conclusion that they were too good for the earth—"Of whom the world was not worthy."

I want this morning to bring to your remembrance, the faith, the sufferings and the sacrifices of another group of men and women who, altough far removed in time from those Old Testament heroes and patriarchs, yet were one with them in spirit and aim, suffering and dying to keep true, vital, spiritual religion alive on the earth.

Solemn Covenant.

It may not prove uninteresting to give a brief sketch of the events that led up to the signing of the Solemn League and Covenant. Shortly after Charles I came to the throne the first stage of the struggle was entered upon. In many ways Charles was better than his father, but in one he was his equal—he hated the black bread of Presbyterianism and declared it no fit religion for a gentleman. Episcopacy, because it preached the divine right of kings, he loved and determined to force it upon the Scottish people despite all his vows to uphold Presbyterianism.

When he introduced on his own authority The Book of Canons, the dark thunderclouds began to rumble, but when the Dean of Edinburgh, in St. Gile's Cathedral, first attempted to read the liturgy, the thunderclouds burst. The famous Jenny Geddes, the moment the Dean started to erad, lifted her stool and threw it at his head, saying, "Ye'll no say Mass at my lug."

This was the spark that was needed to ignite the tinder of national discontent and start the great conflagration. The whole country was roused. Each man looked to the other to discover a leader in the crisis that had come. Men from all parts of the country hurried to Edinburgh. Determination was written upon their faces as they entered Greyfriars churchyard. When the National Covenant was read over and the Earl of Sutherland had signed it, a long sigh or relief came from the excited multitude, and men opened their veins and signed it with their blood. Within two months the whole nation had practically signed the covenant and Charles found himself confronted with an army of 30,000 men led by General Leslie. They easily conquered Charles and apparently the struggle was over and the liberty of the subject guaranteed.

After the execution of Charles the first by Cromwell the Covenanters enjoyed full religious liberty. But when Charles II was restored to the British throne the persecution was also restored and became fiercer than ever. Charles was not slow to let Scotland see that Presbyteriansism was obnoxious to him—that he believed as firmly as his father in the Divine Right of Kings. He determined to show the people of Scotland that he had a right to force upon them any form of religious worship he desired. For this purpose he picked two suitable men, Middleton, whom he made King's Commissioner, and Sharp, who became Archbishop of St. Andrew's. When these two men were let loose a reign of terror commenced in Scotland. Rather than submit to the dictation of these men and violate their conscience 400 ministers left their manses and churches in the middle of winter. They were forbidden to preach under the penalty of death and all who attended their conventicles on the moors and hillsides Were threatened with death,yet, despite these threatenings the coventicles were well attended. Of all the bright pages of our glorious Scottish history none is more bright than that which records the patient sufferings and the splendid sacrifices of our heroic Scottish Covenanters.

Like those Old Testament saints they too were stoned, were slain with the sword, they wandered in deserts and on mountains in dens and caves of the earth being destitute, afflicted, tormented—"Of whom the world was not worthy."

There is need for a statement of the principles that actuated the Covenanters, as it is difficult to remove from the public mind the false ideas put there by the illustrious Sir Walter Scott in his "Tales of a Grandfather."

Glory of Scotland.

It has been too common to regard the Covenanters as fanatics and rebels. The age however is redeeming their good name and ranking them with the heroes and heroines who have been the glory of Scotland. It is inconceivable that men gave up their estates and became wanderers on the face of the earth and even sacrificed life itself for the faith unless their hearts and minds were stirred by strong principles. The Covenanters believed that their present and eternal welfare was at stake; to give up the Covenant was to give up God. And the very principles they fought and bled for are recognized as of supreme worth today. If the covenanters need any defence they find it in the revolution of 1688. What was done then the Covenanters find to do fifty years earlier. Let us look more closely at some of those principles for which the Covenanters bled and died.

(1). The Covenanters stood for individual liberty of conscience in spiritual things. The King and the government were bent on forcing prelacy on a Presbyterian people. The royal supremacy in matters spiritual as well as civil was declared absolute obedience to the monarch as supreme in all religious questions—that was the sum and substance of the system. Erastianism is its name,a doctrine which all down the centuries bees abhorant to Scotsmen whose inbred love of freedom and spiritual independence have led them again and again to vindicate the right of the Lord Jesus to govern by His own laws the Church which He has purchased with His blood.

Isn't that a principle that all evangelical Christians admit and stand for today? We have to thank the Covenanters for it very largely.

Personal Religion.

If the Bible teaches any one doctrine with perfect clearness it is that of our personal relation to God and our individual accountability to Him and really, everything in character and practical life seems to depend on the full recognition of this fundamental truth. Weaken the sense of personal responsibility before God and you injure men very seriously. When the Church undertakes to save my soul it has done its best to win me for time and eternity.

The Covenanters resented very keenly the interference of King or Parliament, Pope or Prelate in the spiritual realm. With God's Word in their hand and God's spirit in their hearts they felt quite capable of determining for themselves what is that is good and acceptable and perfect will of God. Realize your individuality. It is a good thing now and again to remember that we stand alone that we are isolated from every other human being, and that each one of us stands out distinctly before God as if there was not another soul in the world. Do not confound yourself with other people, do not lean upon other people, stand upon your own feet.

A gardener said, the other day,that roses should be grown on their own roots, he said such roses were stronger and more fragrant and reached the utmost perfection of their nature. This is true also in the realm of the spirit. All this was felt by the Covenanters and they sternly resisted any encroachment on their personal and ind,vidual liberty by anyone, whether that be the monarch on the throne or any of his underlings, either in Church or State.

(2). Again, the Covenanters stood for a spiritual religion as opposed to a ritualistic or ecclesiastical religion. Someone warns us against allowing our religion to spoil our morality. Now the religion that spoils morality is a religion that is vitiated by foreign elements, that puts undue stress upon the observance of rites and ceremonies rather than upon spiritual faith and personal obedience. A spiritual religion will not distort character but will bring it to full fruition and to splendid perfection. The heroes of the Covenant, Donald Cargill, James Renwick, Alexander Pedan, Samuel Rutherford and Richard Cameron and the others were all deeply and truly spiritual men, mighty in faith, powerful in prayer and nothing less than a spiritual religion would satisfy them. These men were truly apostolic in their method of discharging the sacred office ,the unadulterated Word of God was plainly preached. They were not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ: the glories of redeeming grace were the themes on which they loved to discourse. Such sermons as preached by them,that have come, down to us bear unmistakable proof of evangelical fervour. The works of Samuel Rutherford and William Guthrie are typical in style and substance.

Now there is all the difference in the world between a spiritual faith and an ecclesiastical faith, there is the same difference as between the inner kernal and the outer shell. An ecclesiastical religion takes to do very largely with antiquity, its controversies and interpretations, It is greatly influenced by church courts, canons, rubrics and theories. It is almost wholly taken up with outward things, the observance of ceremonies, worship by means of symbols, honouring God through forms, whereas spiritual religion dispenses almost entirely with these outward forms and ceremonies and seeks through the illumination of the spirit to get a direct, clear vision of the Lord. The truly spiritual worshipper fixes his eye on the living Christ and the great facts and verities of his gospel. It is so easy to let human traditions and man-made institutions blind us to the higher things of the spiritual life, faith holiness and love. There are but two of the principles for which the Covenanters suffered and died and who will say, they are not worth dying for?

Hunted to Death.

For a few years it was my privilege to live in a part of Ayrshire rich in covenanting lore, a district where many of the Covenanters were killed, where they lie buried with rude monuments over their mortal remains. I used to take pleasure in visiting the martyr's monuments in Cumnock, Kirkcormel, Sanquhar and other places in that immediate neighbourhood. I have stood at the grave of Alexander Peden, the Prophet in Cumnock. This was the strangest man in the whole covenanting struggle and one of the best beloved. Around his name has grown a multitud of stories, many of them are highly improbably, yet he was fully entitled to the term "Prophet," which the people bestowed upon him.

This man died in his bed, but that was not the fault of his enemies. To the hour of his death they hunted him but failed to shed his blood. He was a native of Ayrshire, fairly well off. His social position gave him entrance into the best society, such as the Boswells of Auchinleck and the Bailies of Jarviswood. From an early period he felt called to the ministry and after being trained he was inducted to a parish in Galloway.

When the great struggle began with hundreds of other ministers, Peden left his church and took to preaching on the hillsides and lived the life of a wanderer Many predictions of Peden's were liberally fulfilled.

After years of suffering and persecution with body broken, he knew his race was run, he returned to his brother's home. The dragoons were watching for him and his brother's wife was afraid they would come and find him in the cave where he slept. They will not find me alive, he said. Next day he was dead. The Boswells of Auchinleck buried Peden in their private vault to save his body from insult, bus it was only for a time. The dragoons heard where Peden was buried and broke into his grave. His body was carried to Cumnock and hung on the gibbet in chains. The Countess of Dumfries interceded with the Council and Peden's body was buried at the foot of the gibbet. In honour to Peden others desired to be buried beside him. The foot of the gallows thus became the popular burying ground and the recognized churchyard of Cumnock.

Lion of The Covenant.

Another of the great men of the Covenant was Richard Cameron, called the Lion of the Covenant. When he passed from St. Andrew's University he had no decided religious convictions. But he began to attend the forbidden conventicles and this led to his becoming a new man. The spirit of the Covenanter sprang to life in him. Able, eloquent and burning with zeal for the cause of Christ, he was licensed to preach by the famous John Welch. Go your way, Ritchie said the great grandson of John Knox, when he sent him to preach-those who were styled the thieves of Annandale, Richard Cameron was a mighty preacher and he attended conventicle after conventicle, stirring men's souls like a trumpet blast, and then melting them to tears. Soon the dragoons with the bloody Claverhouse were hot on his trail. I have stood at the monument in Sanquhar where Cameron and twenty others read the famous Sanquhar declaration disowning King Charles as having any title to the crown of Scotland, which he had forfeited by his perjury, tyranny and breach of the Covenant. This was the first public testimony against the reigning house of Stuart. Undoubtedly it was rebellion, but eight years afterwards when the Stuarts were swept from the throne it was recognized to have been the voice of the people and the voice of God. What was treason in 1680 became the Revolution Settlement in 1688.

With the publication of the Declaration in which he disowned King Charles in the interests of King Jesus, Richard Cameron felt that his work was done. He lived in daily anticipation of death by violence. A reward of 5,000 marks was offered for him dead or alive. In less than a month after his visit to Sanquhar, near the battlefield of Dunnclog he preached his last sermon. A few days later at Ayrsmoss, between Muirkirk and Cumnock, he and a few others were surprised by a party of dragoons and Richard Cameron fell fighting at the head of his little band. The Scottish regiment Camerosians, was raised by him. Richard Cameron's chief characteristic was courage. Nothing on earth could frighten him. It was because he was so fearless a leader of men that he was named, "The Lion of the Covenant." No more lion-hearted man ever stood up for the cause of Christ and the Kingdom of God in Scotland. The roots of Cameron's courage lay in his faith. He died valiantly because he believed firmly. It was true of him as of Lord Lawrence that he feared man so little because he feared God so much. Faith is the secret of the lion-heart. What was it that rendered the Covenanters as a rule fearless in the face of persecution, pain and death? What was it that enabled the old covenanting saint as he lay weltering in his blood, to lift his head and declare to his murderers, "Though I had a thousand lives, though every hair of my head was a man I would sacrifice them all for Christ and his cause." What was it that enabled Margaret Wilson a young woman of 18 to calmly face feath by drowning while tied to a stake and seeing the water creep up inch by inch as the tide came in until it overwhelmed her. What was it that enabled these covenenting heroe's and heroines, young and old alike to be courageous unto death? It was faith; faith that realized that—

Standeth God within the shadows

Lasted Fifty Years.

The killing time in Scotland was no short sharp affair, it lasted upwards of fifty years and it is reckoned that around 18,000 men and women perished. Time would fail me to tell of the Marquis of Argyle, James Guthrie, Hugh McKail, Donald Cargill, Margaret McLauchlan, Robert Baillie, James Renwick, etc., who suffered persecution, imprisonment, torture and death rather than prove false to what they believed to be the will of God. I am glad to see so many of Scottish birth here this morning, especially the younger members of Caledonian Club. It is good for the young people of a country to feed their spirits on the heroic deeds of their gallant forefathers. And no country under heaven has nobler memories of a more glorious history on which to feed their spirit than that little land across the sea we call our own.

The story of the deeds of our covenanting forefathers—those grand old Scotsmen who bore the rain on their faces that we might have the sunshine and were willing that their blood should stain the heather rather than that they should flinch in their duty so their country and their God,—might shame a very coward into a hero. Study their deathless history, and cherish their inspiring memory that you may be stimulated to follow in their steps, and strike strong strokes for God and righteousness and truth.

"We're the sons of sires that baffled
Crowned and mitred tyranny
They defied the field and scaffold
For their birthrights, so will we."

Never let it be said that Scotland's sons and daughters in whose veins the blood of such saintly and heroic forefathers flows have degenerated into the cowardice and shame of being conquered by the world, the flesh and the devil.

In the name of our saintly and heroic dead who suffered and sacrificed for Christ's crown and covenant, whose martyred dust lies sleeping on the lone moorlands and the misty hills, the speaker said in conclusion. I urge you to prove yourselves their sons and daughters by the strong faith you cherish, by the high courage you show, by the pure spirit you breathe, and by the dauntless warfare you wage as good soldiers of Jesus Christ. So we come back to our text and, as the writer to the Hebrew's says of those saints and heroes of the old age and dispensation, we feel that we can say the same of our saintly and gallant Scottish Covenanters.

"Of whom the world was not worthy."

"They climbed the steep ascent of heaven,
Through peril, toil and pain:
O God to us may grace be given
To follow in their train."

OLD BOYS AND GIRLS COME HOME

In the month of May, on a sunny day, from the lovely Cove of Cork
With vessels nine, upon the brine two thousand souls embark.
They leave their home and friends alone, on Erin's shore so free
For a lonely strand in a foreign land in Canada o'er the sea.

While women weep by the sea so deep for faces they'll see no more
The sun shines bright in the morning light and the waves surge to the shore.
While sweethearts sigh and lovers cry, for dear ones far away.

The night comes on, with the setting sun, and the waves break on the shore.
In ships out of sight, in the dead of night, are friends who shall meet no more.
Then they look in vain, o'er the watery plain, for those who will never return
While only in dreams, shall their hopes redeem those faces for which they yearn.

Then the eagle screams and the sea gull streams, under a gloomy sky,
Then clouds arise and fill the skies and the waves are surging high
The lightning bright reflects the light and the thunder echoes loud
The vessel quakes as the torrent breaks out of a stormy cloud.

In the morning light, the sun rose bright, all trace of land concealed
No ships or bark, from Cove of Cork, across the sea revealed.
Then friends bewail, as the ships still sail for Canada's lonely shore.
As sunshine rose, their sorrow grows for the friends they will see no more.

They now arrive, in "twenty-five,"—Peter Robinson in command,
At Scott's Plains drear, that lonely year, they settled on the land.
In Douro wild are axes plied in many a forest nave
To clear the ground, where echoes sound the labors of the brave.

Their worries were many, their pleasures, if any, in future hopes had rest.
Privations unnumbered ever encumbered their new homes in the West.
Their labors were great in the land of their fate, the forest to conquer and burn.
Leaving home with its treasures, and joy without measure, 'twas toil they received in return.

On the records of time, men and women sublime have written their challenge to Fate.
In the fourth week in June, in community tune, their efforts we celebrate.
Old Girls, you hear, Old Boys, give ear, come home, don't you ever say "no,"
But meet on the sod where your forefathers trod—a hundred years ago.

—By P. G. Towns, President, Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion.

MANNA WON THE ENGLISH DERBY

Steve Donoghue Rode His Sixth Winner in the Classic Race.

TWENTY-SEVEN RAN.

EPSOM DOWNS, England, May 27—Manna, owned by H. E. Morriss, won the Derby, the classic of the English flat racing season here today. Zionist, owned by the Aga Khan, ran second, and the Sirdar, owned by A. K. Macomber, of the United States, ran third. Manna won in a canter by eight lengths. Two lengths separated the second and third runners. Twenty-seven ran.

The betting was 9 to 1 against Manna, 10 to 1 against Zionist, and 50 to 1 against the Sirdar. Steve Donoghue, the famous English jockey, was upon Manna, and won the Derby for the sixth time.

JUVENILE GAME TO-MORROW NIGHT

Kiwanis and Knights of Columbus Will Clash at Riverside.

There will be a good game in the Juvenile City League series at Riverside Park to-morrow night at six o'clock, when the Kiwanis and the Knights of Columbus Juveniles come together. Both these teams are strong, with some of the city's best known young players on their rosters and some good baseball can be expected.

GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP PLAYED AT LAMBTON

Canadian Open Tourney Will Take Place at End of July.

TORONTO, May 27.—(Canadian Press).—Plans are being advanced by the officials of the Royal Canadian Golf Association for the Canadian open championship, to be played on the course of the Lambton Golf and Country Club on July 30, 31 and August 1. It is expected that there will be a heavy entry list.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

CLOSES RUN TO-DAY.

The final showings of the Paramount picture, 'Dangerous Money,' starring Bebe Daniels, which opened at the Royal Theatre last Monday, will take place there to-night.

The story is one of a poor young girl who falls heir to a million dollars . It tells in an interesting and often amusing manner of how her girlhood love affair goes on the rocks—how she finally comes to her senses. It carries audiences from the East River section of Brooklyn to a fashionable finishing school for girls in upper New York State, then to Lake Como, and back to New York again—and it's action all through.

AMATEUR NIGHT THURSDAY AT ROYAL.

The usual number of amateurs will make their appearance at the Royal to-morrow night. New faces and songs, music and dancing. The feature attraction is "Young Ideas" from Sophie Kerr's 'Saturday Evening Post' story.

UP-TO-DATE COMEDY AT THE ROYAL THURSDAY — SOPHIE KERR'S "YOUNG IDEAS," FROM "SATURDAY EVENING POST."

"So I took the fifty thousand dollars and gave it to the rest of the family!"

If the heroine of "Young Ideas," Laura La Plante's Universal starring vehicle at the Royal Theatre to-morrow had got hold of fifty thousand dollars, that's what she would have done with it.

This Laura La Plante feature is from the pen of that popular fictionist, Sophie Kerr, and was originally called 'Relative Values.' The story is that of a girl who was willing to be the "goat" of the family, not only supporting a lot of relatives, but doing half the housework as well. A grandmother tied to her wheel chair, an uncle whose usefulness ended with the battle of Appomattox, an aunt who is "not long for this world," a younger sister with the laziness complex and a kid brother with the sleep complex — these are the millstones around her neck.

Heroine Is Photographer.

The heroine works for a rich young photographer who doesn't like to see her waste her life and besides is badly in love with her. So he does what he can to break the chain of "loyalty"—and finally he has to use desperate measures, and hence the story.

Strong Supporting Cast.

Fans may expect to see a fine cast in "Young Ideas," for it contains, besides the irresistible Miss La Plante, T. Roy Barnes, Lucille Ricksen, Buddy Messinger, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Jennie Lee, James O. Barrows, Hal Stevens, Rolfe Sedan, Frances Raymond, William Knight Ethel Broadhurst, Duke R. Lee, Brownie, "the wonder dog," three or four other trained animals and three or four famous vaudeville acts recruited from Los Angeles theatrical headquarters.

"Young Ideas" was prepared for the screen by Hugh Hoffman and directed by Robert F. Hill—the same combination responsible for "Excitement" and "The Dangerous Blonde," first two La Plante features, and photographed by Jackson Rose.

AT THE CAPITOL

IMPORTANT SCENES OF "THE HUNTED WOMAN" FILMED IN YOSEMITE.

After three weeks in the frozen expanse of hills overlooking the Yosemite, where Director John Conway of the William Fox staff made exteriors for "The Hunted Woman," he secured shots of some of the most beautiful mountain scenery ever obtained for the screen. The seven principals who went with him shivered between scenes while the thermometer ranged from 12 to 32 deg. below zero. They now have a greater appreciation than ever before of the hardihood of men in the far North.

Earl Schenck, who read with absorbing interest about the dash of Gunnar Kasson and Joe Sepalla through a blinding blizzard, with the bottom dropping out of the thermometer, as they rushed serum to Nome, is profound in his admiration for those "mushers" of the Northland

"We had just a slight touch of it," said Earl, "but that mad it possible for me to appreciate the superhuman endurance of those men. I believe that the most powerful man unaccustomed to the desperate cold and rough country, would have died if he tried to follow either of these marvellous mushers. That is a land where men are surely men."

Among the distinguished actors who divide honors with Seena Owen and Mr. Schenck are Cyril Chadwick Diana Miller, Francis McDonald and the gigantic Victor MacLaglen.

"The Hunted Woman" starts a three day run at the Capitol Theatre to-morrow.

GOLF CLUB OPENS THE 1925 SEASON

Extension Given For Playing of Matches—Inclement Weather.

The opening of the Peterboro Golf Club took place on Saturday and Monday, May 23rd and 25th.

The President's and the Captain's match was not completed owing to the inclement weather. An extension has been given until the end of this week for all players and the following is a list of those who have not yet played their matches. In each case the first player mentioned represents the President's team and the second player mentioned represents the Captain's team. The first player mentioned in each case will play against the second player in each case without handicaps. The matches can be played either as single or foursomes but must be played before the end of the week. If any player finds that his opponent cannot play he should report either to the president or the captain depending on which team he finds himself so that another match can be arranged for him, and if any member of the club who is not mentioned on the team is able to play he also should report to the president or the Captain and a match will be arranged for him. The losing team will entertain the winning team for supper on Saturday, May 30th. The course is now in good shape and all players are urged to take part in the match.

NORFOLK IS CHAMP

Negro Wins Light-Heavyweight Title Over Jack Reddick.

MOOSE JAW, Sask., May 27. — (Canadian Press).—Kid Norfolk, negro light heavyweight champion of the world, was awarded the judge's decision over Jack Reddick, Canadian light heavyweight champion, following twelve rounds of slugging here on Monday night. Both men tried desperately for knockouts, but were too evenly matched.

In the semi-final Leo Fontaine of Winnipeg triumphed over Harry Dillon of Chicago, following eight three-minute rounds of milling.

A MYSTERY.

In the window of Archibald and Richmond, what might be called the Eternal Fountain, may be viewed.

From a faucet suspended by fine wires from the ceiling a stream of water flows constantly into a glass bowl, the deception being so complete that the closest of observers are baffled.

The clerks jokingly assert that it is radio water, and that the intention is to tune in on 4.4 when the present mystery wears away.

YOUR VACATION.

By HUGH S. CUMMING
(Copyright, 1925, by United Press)

A vacation spent near the water all too frequently is accompanied by serious water accidents. Every vacationist should know how to administer first aid and what steps to take to prevent death by drowning.

Ordinary care and caution will do much to prevent accidents in the water. If you are inexperienced, you should not attempt to handle a sail boat or even a row boat. You should know better than to patronize pleasure craft that careless transportation companies allow to be overloaded. You should not attempt to change seats in small boats, unless you are exjerienced and even then you should exercise great caution in doing so.

If you cannot swim, you should be certain that you do not get into deep water. If you are using a bathing beach, you should be particularly careful to know that there are no shelves, holes, or sudden step-offs in the bottom.

It is also important in unknown water that some experienced swimmer make a careful survey to determine that there are no submerged roots rocks, or obstructions. Such obstructions quite frequently have resulted in grave injury or death to a person diving into the water.

When you are swimming be careful not to overtax your strength. Do not remain in the water too long or get so far out that you may be caught in an undertow. Every child should be taught to swim and all parents should appreciate the necessity for their children being given this kind of training.

As regards the rescuing of drowning persons, you should know that when ever possible you should attempt to rescue the drowning person without entering the water yourself. The best interests of the drowning person are served, when practicable, by holding or throwing something into the water on which he can support himself until he can be pulled ashore or reached from a boat.

In case a person has fallen into deep water near the shore, take an oar, a pole, or rope or even your coat and hold it out so that the drowning person may grasp it. Life preservers, boxes, oars, or logs may be thrown into the water close to the drowning person.

Remember that a small floating object is quite sufficient to sustain a person's weight in the water.

In later articles, methods of rescuing drowning persons from the water and resuscitating them will be set forth.

FINANCIAL NEWS.

Brisk Trade Brought Lower Levels At Toronto

TORONTO, May 27 (Canadian Press).—Trade on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning was fairly brisk with the majority of sales having a tendency to lower levels. British Columbia Fish, the most active issue with approximately 1,100 shares changing hands, closed at 37 1-4, a recession of 1-2 from yesterday. Smelters was active, but lost an eighth at 83 7-8. F. N. Burt eased off fractionally at 55. Abitibi probably suffered the largest decline when it dropped to 70 a net loss of 1 1-2 points. Winnipeg closed unchanged at 47 1-4, while Twin City eased off one eighth at 69 5-8.

Motor Shares and Utilities Led On New York Market

NEW YORK, May 27 (Canadian Press).—Motor shares developed another burst of strength in Wall Street today in reflection of the reports of expanding sales and earnings of the principal companies, Studebaker, Maxwell and Hudson breaking through to new high levels for the year. Better inquiry also was noted for public utilities, International Telephone leading the advance in that group by moving up 4 1-2 points before noon. A steady accumulation also took place during the morning in a number of steel, electric, leather, department store and food shares. Rails ruled relatively firm, despite poor April earnings reports by Pennsylvania and some of the Western systems. Persistent selling took place in General Baking, which had extended its decline to 5 points before mid-day. Call money renewed at 4 per cent.

Drop in Wheat Prices Due To Large Crops In Europe

CHICAGO, May 27 (Canadian Press).—An unexpected weakness of wheat quotations at Liverpool led to an early downturn in wheat prices today. The Liverpool decline was ascribed to favorable weather throughout Europe and to British estimates that the new European crop would be 192,000,000 bushels larger than last year, with the European rye crop 200,000,000 bushels larger. On the other hand domestic crop damage reports continued today, both from the spring and winter wheat territory. The opening prices in Chicago, ranging from 2 1-4 cents decline to 1-4 cent advance: May $1.72 to $1.72 1-4, and July $1.61 1-2 to $1.62, were followed by rallies, but then by a fresh set back with the market touching as low as $1.69 for May.

Corn and oats were easier, sympathizing with wheat. After opening 1-4 to 1 1-8 cents down, July $1.17 3-4 to $1.18, the corn market kept within narrow limits.

Oats started at 1-4 cent to 3-4 cent off, July 46 5-8 to 47 cents and then varied but little. Provisions responded to firmness of hog values.

GIRLS REMANDED ON MURDER CHARGE

Three Who Escaped From Jail Farm Were Charged in Court With Murder.

TORONTO, May 27.—(Canadian Press). — Bessie Carroll and Isabel Prouse, arrested yesterday in Oshawa in connection with the death of Mrs. Margaret A. Mick, matron at the Municipal Jail Farm for Women, were remanded for a week when they appeared in County Court to-day, charged with murder. A companion, Jeanette McVinn, was remanded for a similar period yesterday.

The three girls were inmates of the institution, and made their escape on Sunday night after overpowering the matron, who was found dead the following morning. The McVinn girl was taken into custody on Monday, but her companions evaded arrest until yesterday afternoon, when they were apprehended by the Oshawa police.

IS LONDON CURATE NEARLY 60 YEARS

Splendid Record of Grandson of Duke—Relative in Peterborough.

Fifty-eight years as a curate at the same church is the record of the Rev. E. F. Russell of St. Alban's, Brooke Street, London, England.

"I still officiate on Sundays but I really left the staff when I had been there for fifty years," he said to a "Daily Express" representative a few days back.

"Father" Russell as he is known to the parishioners, is eighty-two years old and grandson of a former Duke of Bedford. He was one of a remarkable band for "Fathers" Stanton and Hogge worked with him for nearly half a century under the late Alexander Herriott MacConachie who was the first vicar of St. Alban's Church.

Father Stanton used to give a weekly tea for the "undeserving poor," all of whom were always in and out of prison, he said. "It was a remarkable testimony to his character that for four months when he was dangerously ill before his death in 1913 not one of them went to prison."

Here it may be explained that St. Alban's which is a typical high church, was built through the munificence of a city of London merchant in one of the worst rookeries just on the edge of the city boundaries. The neighborhood was then infested by cut-throats, burglars, sneak thieves and robbers of all description. It was scarcely safe for any decently dressed person to venture into its purlieus. The Rev. A. H. McConachie, as first vicar, stuck to his task although violently opposed by the myrmidons of this slum—which is now a highly respectable business centre, almost entirely rebuilt. His sweet disposition, unvarying kindness of heart and untiring zeal, however, gradually won over this rough element until, bit by bit, they positively worshipped him and the scene at his funeral was unprecedented. "Father" Stanton succeeded Father Maconachie as vicar. All the clergy mentioned have reepeatedly offered high positions in the English Church but have consistently refused, feeling that their duty was to stand by St. Albans.

The Rev. E. F. Russell is a relative of Mr. Frank Russell of this city.

HARRY K. THAW IS NOW ON BROADWAY

Returns to Bright Lights 19 Years After Shooting Stanford White.

NEW YORK, May 27.—(United Press).—Harry Thaw is back among the bright lights of Broadway again.

Ending what had been virtually 19 years of exile from the White Way, since that fatal evening when he killed Stanford White, Thaw appeared at a cabaret in Broadway. As of old, a pretty dancer graced his table. She was fawn grey.

Thaw was in a gay humor, as of old, when he was known as a "well-to-do young man about town," but time and prison confinement had left their marks. He was recognized only by the oldest Broadway patrons, and to the younger merry-makers he was simply an elderly grey-haired man, with wrinkles in his face.

'GROVE' SERMON ON EMPIRE DAY

British Empire Founded on Justice, Rev. A. W. Mackenzie Declared.

LAKEFIELD, May 26.—On Sunday morning, Rev. T. J. O'Conor-Fenton of Norwood was in charge of the service in St. John's Church. Mr. O'Conor-Fenton preached a thoughful sermon on the manifold gifts of God to man, which are diverse, but to each of us is given the responsibility of developing our particular gift in service to God and out fellow man. Also, as the leader, Christ goes before us in all our undertakings and we can feel the inspiration of his presence which is a solace in difficulty and a great gift to us all.

Grove Chapel Service.

On Sunday evening, the service was, by kind invitation of Rev. A. W. Mackenzie, held at "The Grove" Chapel, and was attended by a number from the Parish Church. Rev. A. W. Mackenzie preached an excellent sermon on Empire Day, which in its earliest days was known as the Queen's Birthday, commemorating the natal day of that great good queen, Victoria, who reigned so long and saw so many wonderful things. The day has been popularly called the "24th" and any reference to the '24th" never fails to bring up the picture of the first of the summer holidays, and one which is always popular. The British Empire has grown in strength and extent until it is now safe to say it is the greatest of the world's great empires. In 1897 when Queen Victoria celebrated her diamond jubilee and the Empire appeared to be at the very peak of its greatness, Kipling, that great poet wrote his famous 'Recessional," warning the people against putting too much faith in earthly power. A few years later, the South African War was fought and many of us today believe this was an unjust war against a free people, but in its reverses we learned a useful lesson, namely, not to miscalculate the strength of our foe. When the Great War came, the spirit of Britain was very different and we met the great crises boldly, but not too boldly, with the hearts of the people prepared. The Briton has his weaknesses, but he has a realization of them, which is not usual in many races. He is inclined to depreciate his own doings, fearing often to be thought boastful. In the Great War, we all realized that the Germany army was much larger and more powerful than ours, but our faith was in the British navy, which was far superior in strength to any other. When the two great navies of Germany and Britain met at the Battle of Jutland, all the British ships and all the German ships were out, although they were not all engaged actively. The result of the battle was not the decisive victory hoped for, but the British ships drove the Germans back to the Kiel Cana. However, the Admiralty issued such a very cautious report of the great battle that many thought it was a British reverse. Fearing to mislead the people into thinking of it as a decisive victory, in their modesty, they gave the reverse impression.

A secret of the Englishman's power is his ability to play, he is always ready for games and sports and he never runs when he is beaten, and out of many defeats have come victories just because of this characteristic.

Founded on Justice.

Our great Empire has it foundation laid in truth and justice to all men, rich or poor, and this is one of the reasons why it has stood fast when other great Empires such as Russia, have become disintegrated. The latter was founded on despotism and force, and it has fallen to piece. The British Empire, democratic in government, with freedom for every man is bound together not by force of arms, but by a great enduring love for the Motherland.

The service closed by singing the National Anthem and was one which was very impressive, the more so by its simplicity which brings closer communion with God.

PREMIER KING EXPLAINS WHY ASCENSION DAY WAS HOLIDAY INSTEAD OF VICTORIA DAY

Pledge Given By Sir Robert Borden—Custom Since Confederation.

CHARGE ANSWERED.

Replies to Resolution Adopted By Orange Young Britons in Peterborough.

On the orders of the day:

Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King (Prime Minister): There is a Canadian Press despatch at present appearing pretty generally in the press and which is published in this morning's Citizen under the following title:

This item I think demands a word of explanation, if not of comment as well. It is dated Peterboro, Ont., May 26, and reads:

Whereas the House of Commons of Canada adjourned on Ascension Day, a Roman Catholic holiday, and on the direction of the Prime Minister of Canada, the same House of Commons sat yesterday, May 25, the day set apart for the commemoration of Her Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, be it resolved that this Grand Lodge of Orange Young Britons places itself on record as condemning the unpatriotic and unprotestant attitude of the Prime Minister of Canada in thus permitting the Roman Catholic hierarchy to control and dictate his actions which violate every principle of British imperialism and a free Canadian Government.

So far as the House not sitting on Ascension Day is concerned, Parliament on this occasion has but followed the practice which has been observed from the days of Confederation up to the present time, directly carrying out a pledge given in this House with respect to civil servants and indirectly with respect to the sitting of the House of Commons itself on that day. That pledge was given by the Right Hon. Sir Robert Borden when he stood in the position I occupy at the moment. If hon. members will refer to Hansard of June 26, 1920, at page 4,262, they will find an account of a discussion which took place in this House at that time with reference to the observance of certain religious holidays. Speaking particularly of Ascension Day as one of those holidays, the Right Hon. Sir Robert Borden is reported as follows:

I have said two or three times that so far as these days of religious observance and religious duty are concerned, the whole matter has rested on custom and convention.

A little further on he says:

I hope hon. gentlemen will accept the assurance on behalf of the government that this custom and convention which has prevailed in the past will continue in the future.

I think my right hon. friend opposite (Mr. Meighen) when he was Prime Minister followed the same practice in asking the House to refrain from sitting on Ascension Day, as one of these days of religious observance so far as a large number of members of the House are concerned, and in accordance with the custom which has prevailed, I understand, from the days of Confederation.

Mr. Speaker considered the incident closed.

Mr. Mackenzie King: But I am also referring to Victoria Day, Mr. Speaker; the article has reference to both. I would submit that

PROTEST FROM G.W.V.A.

Against Proposed Changes in Soldiers' Settlement Act.

WINNIPEG, Man., May 28.—(Canadian Press). — In protest against proposed changes in the Soldiers' Settlement Act, immediate representation will be made to the Dominion Government by the Manitoba Command of the Great War Veterans' Association, it was announced yesterday.

Officials of the organization maintain that the suggested amendments are not in keeping with the requests made by the G.W.V.A., and generally are unsatisfactory to the soldier settlers.

JUDGE AT RACE MISSED COURT

ONLY SECOND TIME

LONDON, May 28.—(Canadian Press Cable).—Derby day seemed to have an effect on the citizens who were not supposed to be paying attention to the fact that the great classic of the year's horse racing was being run at Epsom yesterday. Of course the usual number of workers in the city received leave of absence to attend their grandmothers' funerals, and of course the obsequies all happened in the neighborhood of Epsom.

Sir Thomas Granger, county court judge of Woolwich, failed to arrive at court yesterday. The officials waited for an hour for him and then adjourned the court.

"I clean forgot," the judge explained later. "However today's court list was very light. It is only the second time I have missed court in 34 years."

The judge did not explain, however, where he had been.

The privy council rarely sits on a Wednesday, but whether this practice arose out of Derby day or not history is silent.

The cabinet of Premier Baldwin postponed the usual Wednesday meeting. It was officially explained though that the Derby was not responsible for the postponement.

Ask Authorities to Despatch Machines to Spitzbergen to Begin Search.

OSLO, Norway, May 28 (Canadian Press).—Norwegian Minister of Defence, Rolf Jacobsen, in an interview published by the Shipping Gazette, expressed the opinion that steps ought to be taken soon to organize an expedition for the relief of Captain Roald Amundsen and his party, he believing that the naval authorities might be asked whether two airplanes could be sent to Spitzbergen to begin the search for the explorers.

BURNS FATAL TO CHILD

Montreal Girl Was Burned By Firecrackers.

MONTREAL, May 28.—(Canadian Press).—A verdict of accidental death was returned yesterday in the case of Jean Margaret Campbell five years of age, who died on Tuesday afternoon from burns suffered while playing with firecrackers.

This name of the victim was erroneously given originally as Jean Braceland.

Church Should Discourage Sunday Railway Traffic

LONDON, May 28.—(Canadian Press Cable).—William Whitelaw, chairman of the London and North-Eastern Railway company, and also a leading elder in the Church of Scotland, yesterday in Edinburgh told the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, which had registered disapproval of Sunday travelling, that it was the business of the church to see that there was no public demand for Sunday trains, otherwise the railway companies would be unable to accede to the church's desire to end Sunday travel.

A delegate to the General Assembly retorted that the railway companies had created the demand for Sunday railway services by instituting them.

BILINGUAL TEACHERS

Convention at Ottawa Attended by More Than 300.

OTTAWA, May 28. — (Canadian Press).—Problems concerning bilingual teaching in Eastern Ontario will be reviewed at the annual convention of the Bilingual Teachers' Association of Eastern Ontario, which opens in the University of Ottawa.

More than 300 teachers were expected to attend the two-day sessions which commenced to-day, during which time routine business will be alternated with special lectures.

NEW BRUNSWICK CONSERVATIVES ENTRUST FORTUNES OF PARTY TO BAXTER IN PROVINCIAL CAMPAIGN

Every County in the Province Represented at Big Rally in St. John.

POWER QUESTION

Leader, If Elected, Will Cancel Contracts for Grand Falls Scheme.

ST. JOHN, N.B., May 28.—(Canadian Press).—Declaring that extravagance in governmental circles must cease and that what the Province of New Brunswick needs today is a body of men in charge of its affairs who will give it safe and sane government, which, and only which can save the Province from going bankrupt, Hon. Dr. John B. M. Baxter, K.C., Federal member for St. John-Albert, formerly accepted the leadership of the opposition party at a large and enthusiastic gathering, representative of every county in New Brunswick, in the Seamen's Mission here yesterday afternoon.

In his speech of acceptance, which was punctuated repeatedly with applause, Hon. Dr. Baxter referred to the major issues of the coming provincial elections and speaking of the Grand Falls matter as of vital importance to this Province, he said that the small amount of information disclosed by Premier Veniot on this project, on which it was proposed to spend millions of dollars of the people's money, was not sufficient to enable any voter to exercise a business judgment on it. He served notice on all contractors throughout the Province that if returned to power as leader of the opposition party, he would cancel any contracts signed for the Grand Falls development on the eve of an election to provide assistance for the elections.

Dr. Baxter's name for the leadership was placed for nomination by Charles D. Richards, leader of the opposition house party for the last four years and was seconded by Hon. Dr. D. V. Landry, former provincial treasurer. It was put to the meeting by Harry A. Smith, Fredericton, chairman and was carried with a thunderous "aye." Speeches extolling Dr. Baxter's worth were made to the gathering by Hon. Dr. Landry, Mr. Richards, L.P.D. Tilley, J. D. Pinder and veteran member for York, J. D. Palmer, Fredericton, E. A. Reilly, K.C., Moncton, Mayor Potts, St. John.

G. Earle Logan acted as secretary for the meeting.

WON DERBY "POT."

LIVERPOOL, Eng., May 28. — (Canadian Press). — James Carew, an employee of a shipping firm here, won nearly £75,000 sterling by holding the coveted winning ticket of the Calcutta Sweepstake on the Derby, the world's greatest racing prize.

JOSHUA AND MARY ANDERSON MARRIED 70 YEARS ARE LIVING HAPPILY ON THEIR LITTLE ISLAND IN WATERS OF THE TRENT RIVER NEAR STIRLING

Mr. Anderson Was Born Over 99 Years Ago in Murray Township and His Wife is ten Years Younger — Faced Pioneer Life Together in 1855.

TWO CHILDREN DROWNED TOGETHER

Tragedy Entered Home When Boy and Girl Broke Through Ice Clasped in Each Other's Arms—Can't Count Grandchildren and Great-Grandchildren.

(By a Staff Reporter)

STIRLING, May 28—If Joshua Anderson and his wife, who reside on Anderson Island, about six miles from here, an island that is a small tract of land cut off from the mainland by the Trent River and one of its branches, live until October 29th next they will celebrate the seventieth anniversary of their marriage. The husband is 99 and Mrs. Anderson is only 10 years his junior. From present indications the chances for several years of life for both are altogether favorable. The story of their long years of wedded life is that of the average pioneer, a life of unwearied toil, of achievement and of an old age spent in contented and comfortable retirement.

Born in Murray Township

Mr. Anderson was born in Murray Township, Northumberland County, just across the river and not more than one mile from his present home which is in Hastings County. That important event in his career occurred on the 21st day of January, 1826, so that he is within about seven months of having rounded out a full century of years. No man has lived so long and who enjoys the evening of life in health and happiness as he does of whom it cannot be said that he has lived) well. In all those years he has had no worries, due either to mistakes or wanton misconduct, to sap the vitality of his existence. Neighbors who have known the aged couple for years pay them the tribute of saying that Mr. and Mrs. Anderson can turn back the pages of their lives and find the records clear.

Moved to Anderson Island

When Mr. Anderson was 11 years old his parents moved to Anderson Island, which was named for the family, taking possesion of the farm on which the son and his wife still live. That was in 1837, the year of the breaking out of the Mackenzie Rebellion.

One of the older boys in the family belonged to the militia and his company was called to Belleville. Joshua and another brother visited the soldier at the barracks in Belleville, walking the distance, 22 miles, through the woods, over a rough trail. They slept one night in the barracks with the soldiers, all of whom were anxious to get to the fighting line, but the trouble was settled without their aid. That was Joshua's first glimpse of the world outside his own neighborhood and it was, too, his first military experience.

Married 70 Years Ago.

Mrs. Anderson, whose maiden name was Mary Parcels, was born in Murray township, near the home of her future husband, on April 3, 1836. April 3 in that year fell on Easter Sunday and Mrs. Anderson says that in all her long life she has really had only four birthdays, as Easter Sunday has occurred that number of times on April 4 during the past 89 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson were married on October 29th, 1855, by Rev. William Black, who was pastor in charge of what was then a mission station of the Methodist denomination in Stirling. The officiating clergyman, who was advanced in years at that time, has long since passed away.

The young couple took up the hard life of the pioneers. They had to literally hew their home out of the wilderness, but they overcame all difficulties and obstacles and are now spending their declining years in peace and comfort. They raised a family of 10 children, seven of whom are still living.

Tragedy In Their Lives.

The married life of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson has been uneventful. They have seen little of the outside world and have had no ambition outside of the proper upbringing of their children. Still they kept pace with modern progress and adapted the various inventions that were introduced from time to time to make the lot of the pioneer easier.

But into a life so long, no matter how secluded, tragedy was sure to come. The first real sorrow that cast its shadow over the home was the drowning of two of the children, Angelina and Richard, aged 10 and 11 years, who broke through the ice on the river on their way from school. The aged eyes of the mother fill with tears as she tells of the recovery of the bodies, the little ones clasping in death each other's hands. Another

LIBERAL PARTY CENSURE VOTE WAS DEFEATED

LIBERAL OFFICER.

LONDON, May 28 (Canadian Press).—The House of Commons, by a vote of 306 to 27 today rejected the Liberal motion for a vote of censure on the Speaker, Right Hon. John Henry Whitley.

The motion to censure the Speaker, a very unusual proposal in the House of Commons, has the additional rarity from the fact that it was made by the Liberal Party of which the Speaker himself is a member. The expressed grievance of the Liberal Party against the Speaker was that "contrary to recent precedents," he granted closure of the first day's debate during the second reading of the finance bill, thereby preventing the Liberals from making as strong a case in the debate as they desired. The motion for censure maintained that this action of the Speaker did not accord the Liberals the protection that is due to minorities in the House.

In moving the proposal for censure, Captain Wedgwood Benn of the Liberals, said that the closure rule was never intended to be used for the suppression of relevant and reasonable parliamentary debate. He said there was no reflection intended upon the Speaker, but the motion was offered as a vindication of a great principle.

Lloyd George expressed regret at having to challenge the authority of the Chair, particularly with a Speaker who stood so well with all parties, but he said to propose a vote of censure was now the only way to raise the question of the principle of free debate.

CONTROVERSY IN CHURCH WHICH SHAKES EMPIRE

Three Divisions in Anglican Church Over Alliance With Others.

CANTERBURY OR ROME

"Which Shall the Church Be Ruled From?" Is Question.

LONDON, May 28. — (United Press).—While America is witnessing a fundamentalist - modernist church controversy, England to-day is engaged in a church war which one branch of the contestants claims may even shake the foundations of the Empire.

The Church of England, originating from the Catholic Church, is split into three groups.

One would maintain the church as it is; another, known as the Anglo-Catholic, would link with Rome; and a third wants an alliance between the Church and the so-called Free Churches: Presbyterian, Baptist Methodist and the like.

The issue boils down to whether Canterbury, the present seat of the Church of England, shall continue to rule, or Rome shall direct the Church.

Sir Thomas Inskip, Solicitor-General in the Baldwin Cabinet, an anti-Romanist, declared that directions must soon be taken and that these might perhaps even be so far-reaching to determine the fate of the Empire in the future. It is reported that delegates of the Church will meet Cardinal Mercier of Belgium soon with the approval of the Archbishop of Canterbury to discuss the proposed dome alliance. The Anglo-Catholics are said to have obtained a heavy following through their charity work in the slums.

FAMILY IN A HAT.

SAN ANTONIO, May 28.—The owner of a millinery store had visions of a most profitable day when he saw a large crowd in front of his store window. But few came inside, for they were all watching a new family of kittens in the window. The store cat had given birth to a litter of kittens during the night and placed them in a fashionable spring bonnet.

71 Miners Entombed. And Rescuers Find Six Dead

RALEIGH, N.C., May 28.—(Canadian Press). — Seventy-one men were shown by a check-up late yesterday to have been entombed by a gas explosion at the mine of the Carolina Coal Company, 8 miles from Sanford, shortly before noon Wednesday. Six hours later none of the men had been reached, but rescuers had penetrated the shaft, far enough to see five or six of the entombed men, all believed to be dead.

COLLISON TO PAY WITH LIFE

Cabinet Refuses to Interfere With Death Sentence of Slayer.

EXECUTION FRIDAY.

OTTAWA, May 28.—(Canadian Press.)—Thomas Collison will pay the death penalty for the murder of Beatrice Thorpe to-morrow morning at Cornwall. The Cabinet, having considered the case, has decided that there will be no interference with the sentence.

The murder was committed in Matilda township and the trial took place at Cornwall. Since his sentence Collison has been examined by alienists as to his sanity. He shot the girl through the window of her home after she had rejected his attentions.

This will be recommended to Council at its next meeting.

ARTILLERY OFFICER DIED THIS MORNING

General Sir Edward Morrison, Command the Canadian Artillery During the War.

OTTAWA, May 28.—(Canadian Press.)— Major General Sir Edward W. B. Morrison, K.C., M.G., late Adjutant General of National Defence Headquarters, veteran of the South African War and Officer Commanding the Canadian Artillery in France during the Great War, died this morning at 4.15 in his 60th year.

Sir Edward had been in failing health for some time. A few days ago he was taken with a seizure and was removed to the hospital from his home. Death came during his sleep.

Edward W. B. Morrison was born at London, Ontario, in 1867, his father being a Scotsman from Glasgow. For some years he was a journalist on the staff of the Hamilton Spectator. It was in Hamilton that he joined the militia and was launched upon his military career.

CANNOT DEAL WITH EXECUTIVE OF MINE UNION

General Manager of Coal Company Says Four Members Are Communists.

LOOK TO MEN.

New Contract May Be Discussed With Committee From Workers.

GLACE BAY, N.S., May 28 (Canadian Press).—"We will not do business with the executive of the United Mine Workers in Nova Scotia as it is at present constituted," said General Manager H. J. McCann of the Dominion Coal Company this morning, when asked if it was a fact that the corporation would not recognize the United Mine Workers in future negotiations. The official would not go so far as to say that the company or corporation would not do business with the United Mine Workers as an organization, but he did state that if any negotiations were to be carried on in future, the company would discuss them with officials other than the present executive, of with committees from the mines. The company was not out to "get" the United Mine Worokers, but it would refuse to do business with an executive, four of whom, he claimed, were Communists. The official intimated that the company was open to discuss a new contract with a committee from the miners at any time.

R. M. Wolvin, president of the British Empire Steel Corporation arrived yesterday at Sydney and today is conferring with Vice President J. E. McLurg and the upper officials of the corporation in regard to the coal strike which has now been in progress for almost three months at the corporation's mines in the province.

APRIL EARNINGS OF C.N.R. HIGHER

Operating Expenses Reduced 7.83 P.C. Below Same Month Year Ago.

NET EARNINGS LESS

MONTREAL, May 28—(Canadian Press).—Operating results for the month of April, 1925, issued Wednesday by the Canadian National Railways, show a decrease of $1,394,204, or 7.32 per cent. in gross earnings as compared with April, 1924. Operating expenses for the same period were reduced by $1,393,042, or 7.83 per cent., leaving net earnings of $1,254,532 as compared with $1,255,694 in April of last year.

The results of operatings for the first four months of 1925 show a decrease in gross revenues of $6,740,378, or 8.89 per cent., but that operating expenses during the same period were reduced by $6,704,024, or 9.31 per cent. Net earnings for the first four months of 1925 were $3,774,782, or $36,354 less than for the corresponding period of last year. As compared with a 8.89 per cent. decline in traffic receipts, the reductions in net was less than one per cent.

NICKLE BEER IS DENOUNCED BEFORE PROHIBITION UNON

Rev. Ben. Spence Denies That He Has Changed Opinion on 4.4 Beer.

STRONG RESOLUTION.

Call on Workers to Carry on Education and Prepare Organization.

WARKWORTH, May 28.— At the evening session of the East Northumberland branch of the Ontario Prohibition Union on Tuesday, the hall was crowded with spectators. The resolutions, read by Rev. S. C. Moore, were adopted without debate or dissent.

The Three Issues.

The chief address of the evening was given by Rev. Ben Spence, who started out by saying that there are three issues in the present campaign. The first prohibition, and the second is political honour—can or cannot the given word of our public men be trusted? Premier Ferguson had said he would stand by the decision of the people and yet what he finally did was decidedly the opposite.

The third issue is the question, "Have we a democratic country or have we a political autocracy that can do what it likes regardless of the people?"

Replies To Attorney-General.

Mr. Spence devoted the main portion of his address to a reply to Attorney General Nickle, who in a recent published statement accused the former of a change of front.

"Mr. Nickle is absolutely wrong," said Mr. Spence, in saying that I have changed my whole point of view and now realize that the beer is not intoxicating in the practical acceptance of the term. The Attorney General may set his opinion against fact if he choose, but I am not so presumptious. The 4.4 beer is intoxicating as a matter of demonstrated scientific fact. Neither Mr. Nickle's denial or my affirmation affect that fact.

"Let us draw the clear-cut distinction we should between drunkeness and intoxication. Drunkeness is the consummation of the process of intoxication. Whether 4.4 will or will not make a man drunk it surely will set him well on the road of intoxication.

"What nonsense for Mr. Nickle to make his own definition of what constitutes 'intoxication' and then declare that because 4.4 beer does not produce a condtion that comes within his definition it is not intoxicating; that because poison does not actually kill a man he is not poisoned.

Alcohol is the toxic element in what are called intoxicating liquors. A quart of 4.4 beer contains exactly 1 ounce of absolute alcohol or about the same as would be in two good stiff horns of 30 u.p. whiskey (1 1-4 oz. each). It is not a question of how much would make a man drunk, dead to the world, but how much would make him unsafely abnormal.

What Alcohol Does.

"When Mr. Nickle goes further in scientific study on this question, and I hope he will, he will discover the tremendous significance of the fact that alcohol, affecting, as it does, the nerve or control centres of the brain, affects first and most those centres that control the higher and finer and thus lets loose the baser, meaner and more animal part of man's being. This it is that makes alcoholism degrading, debasing, dehumanizing and therefore bad.

Mental and moral intoxication, from a human standpoint, and as a social danfer may be immensely more serious than the physical paralysis of drunkenness. Mr. Nickle knows,or should know, that beer may be intoxicating in that it may lower the grade of a man's mind, impair the powers of self control and render him capable of acts of passion brutality, coarseness and immorality long before he reaches that helplessly befuddled state of drunkenness which is the unwarranted and unscientific meaning that he gives to "intoxication simply to suit his own purposes.

Beer is Booze.

"The whole booze business is degrading and debauching. There may be degrees of course, but 4.4 beer is booze. It is an alcoholic beverage. It produces alcoholism which has been defined as "that poisoning of body, germ plasm, mind, conduct, society, produced by the consumption of alcoholic beverages."

You cannot feed humans alcohol without dulling their finer mental faculties and moral senses and therefore inviting evil of all kinds, to say nothing of that more serious aspect, the entail of degeneracy that inevitably follows to the succeeding generations.

"Let me repeat what I have said at many times and in many places, that to put the 4.4 booze beer bottle to the lips of the boys and girls, or young men and women of Ontario of from 18 to 25 years of age with an official declaration that it is pleasant, refreshing, palatable, healthful, and to surround them with an atmosphere of booze is a crime against humanity and cannot and must not be condoned. The only change that has come in my attitude is an even greater determination to fight to a finish booze in 4.4 beer and every other form."

J. M. Conner.

Another speaker was J. M. Conner of Toronto, who is on the working staff of the Dominion Alliance and who gave a history of the rise and decline of the liquor trade in Canada.

Albert E. Greenlaw, the well known singer of Detroit, rendered several solos during the afternoon and evening and his singing was heartily appreciated and liberally applauded. Miss Doxsee of Hastings, was the accompanist.

THE RESOLUTION

Resolved, That we the members of East Northumberland Prohibition Union, in special convention assembled, hereby place on record our most emphatic and unqualified disapproval of the recent action of the Ontario Government in so amending the Ontario Temperance Act as to permit of the sale of intoxicating beer in hotels, restaurants, shops and clubs, in defiance of the expressed will of of the people, which was sought by the Government itself.

We also re-affirm our firm belief in prohibition, as sound in in principle and effective in operation, and declare it to be our abiding conviction that the Legislature would be acting in the highest interests of the province by enacting temperance legislation that would be as fully restrictive as the constitutional powers of the province will permit.

And further, we reaffirm our determination to continue our temperance campaign until we have eventually reached our goal of complete national prohibition.

We earnestly commend to our people a systematic campaign of temperance education, through the medium of the public press, the pulpit, the day schools and Sunday schools. To this end we strongly recommend that an Educational Committee be appointed from the temperance workers of the riding, consisting of one representative from each municipality to urge upon school boards and school principals the importance of giving systematic instruction in the subject of temperance in the public schools of the riding. In this matter we commend co-operation with the representatixes of the Religious Educational Coucil of Ontario.

We also urge upon all our workers the necessity of a thorough organization in every polling subdivision in the riding with a view to devxeloping the temperance sentiment of the community, and securing the personal pledge of every possible eelctor to seek the nomination and election of only such candidates for municipal, legislative and parliamentray positions as are prepared to commit themselves to the support of the most advanced prohibitory legislation.

Carried unanimously without debate.

PETERBOROUGH PRESBYTERIAL COMES TO PARTING OF WAYS

CITY REPRESENTED.

Rev. M. C. Mackinnon Reports on C.G.I.T.—Many Peterborough Representatives.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

COBOURG, May 28. — The Peterboro Presbyterial Society has come to the parting of the ways, after 43 years of placid and successful history, and to-day the Unionists and non-concurring Presbyterians will take leave of each other, and go their several ways according to their various lights. As they worked together in amity and harmony for nearly half a century so will they part in peace with mutual expressions of well wishes for the future.

The annual meeting of the society which ranks so high among similar organizations of the church, was convened here on Wednesday morning with 59 official delegates and 77 visitors present. To-day it passes out of existence as a purely Presbyterian unit and two societies will be organized in the Presbytery where there was only one before. As an evidence of the good will that exists between the factions it is to be noted that non-concurring Presbyterians and Unionists bodies of Cobourg last night entertained the delegates at supper in the basement of St. Andrews church, in which edifice the annual meeting was held. Names may change and new conditions arise but the bonds of friendship that have held the members together so long in a Christian unity will remain unbroken.

It was fitting that on the eve of separation a sketch should be given of the history of the Presbyterial and the preparation of this devolved upon Miss Eleanor Roberts of Port Hope, who secured the most of her information from a historical paper that was read by Mrs. Jean K. Craick, when the 25th anniversary of the society was celebrated at a meeting held in Cobourg in 1907. Mrs Craick had been identified with the organization since its inception and no person was more familiar with every stage of its development.

It was in 1876 that the society was called into existence at the expressed desire of the Foreign Mission Committee of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, the object being to aid that committee in promoting its work among women and children in heathen lands, and especially to raise the necessary funds to maintain women as missionaries in India and elsewhere. In that year auxiliaries were organized in Port Hope and Lakefield. Another was started in Peterboro one year later, and these three carried on as separate units until 1882, when in February of that year they joined forces as the Presbyterial Society of Peterboro Presbytery. The work or rite of organizing was concluded by the late Mrs. Ewart, who was elected president.

Of the five officers elected two had died and two had left the Presbytery when the 25th anniversary was celebrated, Mrs. Craick being the only one remaining at that time.

Growth Was Steady.

In 1907 the society had 23 auxiliaries with an aggregate membership of 868 and contributions amounting to $2,446.85. On the eve of the separation, after 18 years of further history, the membership has more than doubled, and in the last 12 months the contributions totalled $8,939.46, a gain of $1,250 over the previous year and the best record made since the first auxiliary was formed.

Wednesday Morning's Session.

Mrs. D. Ewart of Cobourg, the president, called the meeting to order and the morning session, after the usual devotional exercises had been conducted by the Grafton auxiliary, was devoted to the hearing of two minute reports from the various missionary societies, every one of which showed marked progress.

Welcomed to Cobourg.

When the delegates met at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, dinner having been provided in the school room, they were welcomed to Cobourg by Mrs. William Burnet, who expressed the hope that they would enjoy their stay in the town and return home feeling that they had spent a profitable time.

In a brief address, Mrs. Ewart, the president, said that the members had come to the parting of the ways and though they would meet no more as they had done in the past still, she had no doubt, they would go steadily forward.

Greetings from Others.

The women's societies of the other evangelical churches in Cobourg extended greetings to the Presbyterial, Mrs. Stillman speaking for the Methodists, Mrs. Field for the Congregationalists, Mrs. Hindman for the Baptists, and Mrs. Craig for the Anglicans.

The report of the treasurer, Mrs. J. N. McDougall, of Lakeport, showed total receipts of $8,939.46, an increase of $1,230 over those of the previous 12 months, this making the society's year just closed the best in its history.

Mrs. G. F. Clark, of Brighton, financial secretary, submitted a detailed statement of the expenditures for the past 12 months.

The two honorary presidents of the society are Mrs. G. M. Roger and Mrs. John McPherson, both of Peterborough. They were in attendance yesterday and are still actively interested in the work in which they have been engaged since the beginning.

Mrs. William Hume, of Peterborough, gave a clear and detailed report of the work of the Mission Band, of which branch she is secretary.

Mrs. M. C. Mackinnon, of Peterborough, submitted a bright and interesting report of the C.G.I.T. and after devotional exercises and a duet by the Misses Pittick, of Cobourg, Mr. Duncan, the organist of the church playing the accompaniment, and a solo by Miss Ruth Bremner, the session adjourned and delegates and visitors were entertained at supper by the union and non-union ladies of St. Andrew's.

The Evening Session

There were more kindly greetings for the delegates at the evening session which was well attended by the general public, Rev. J. S. Ferguson of Baltimore, moderator of the Peterboro Presbytery, extending a welcome on behalf of that body. He tactfully alluded to the coming separation, saying that there are times when we are inclined to think things are going wrong.

"Do I hear," he said, "some one say that there is division among you, that the church is being wrecked and friendships severed? We can be friends still with those from whom we differ. We have one way, they have another, of doing things, but we are al striving for the same end. We will all be glad to hear that an effort is being made to restore harmony and to cooperate. The hope and prayer of the Presbytery is that nothing may be done to mar the efforts that are being put forth by both."

A Civic Welcome

Mayor McArthur extended a civic welcome to the delegates praising the work in which the society is engaged.

"Show me," he continued, "a church in which there is no missionary spirit and I will show you a church that is not truly Christian. Some one brought the Gospel to us and we should pass it on."

Report of Provincial

Mrs. McDougall submitted a report of the Provincial convention held recently in London which she was a delegate.

An interesting sketch of mission life in China was told by Miss Leah Dinwoody, now on furlough at her home in Toronto, but who has spent several years in church work in Honan, China. Miss Dinwoody says that the field is wide and that more missionaries are required.

The choir of St. Andrew's led the musical service at the evening session, which broke up at a late hour the delegates from outside points being extended the hospitality of the residents of Cobourg.

ACCIDENT CORNER.

The corner of George and McDonnel streets has been the scene of another serious motor accident.

No corner in Peterboro has been the locale of so many traffic mishaps, and there are few places in the city where there is greater need of careful driving.

Naturally there is a heavy north and south traffic on George street, and as McDonnel street is paved and is the logical route to the Chemong Road, the east and west traffic is also above the average.

The conditions are such as to call for the exercise of more than usual care on the part of drivers approaching this corner in any direction.

Yet observation of the traffic at this point shows that far too many motorists ignore safety first principles by not only driving too fast past this dangerous intersection, but in many cases by not sounding their horns when approaching the corner.

In the general interest, the Examiner calls the attention of all drivers to the fact that the corner of George and McDonnel streets is an accident trap in which carelessness is liable to catch the unwary.

Common sense should, therefore, suggest to every person who sits at the wheel of a car that the danger point should be approached with considerable caution, and that a rate of speed that may be completely safe on a rural road is fraught with peril under the conditions that exist at this intersection.

HOLIDAY FIREWORKS.

The list of casualties reported from various parts of Ontario as the result of Victoria Day fireworks suggests that the authorities will have to take this matter under their observation.

The Examiner has no desire to take any joy out of the life of the youngsters.

Fireworks when carefully handled are harmless enough, but there seems to be too careless a tendency on the part of parents to entrust young children with varieties that are dangerous.

The result was reflected in many serious accidents on Monday, and in several cases in fires, the Hamilton Fire Department having four calls in a few hours, and a tragic consequence of these alarms was that a pedestrian was run down and fatally injured by a fire truck, while a fireman was badly hurt when the apparatus turned over.

A few years ago firecrackers, popularly known as "dynamite" crackers, were much in vogue until so many accidents followed their use that they were made illegal.

Judging from the explosive force of some of the firecrackers discharged here on Victoria Day something very closely approaching the "dynamite" brand is again being placed on the market.

And the reckless abandon with which these explosives were flung about George street on Monday night was not exactly in line with the principle of a safe and sane holiday.

THE HEALTH ASSOCIATION.

The splendid showing that is being made by the ladies who are taking part in the ticket-selling campaign in connection with the Made-in-Peterboro Exhibition is an auspicious augury for the financial success of next week's mammoth event.

That is most welcome, for it must be remembered that the primary object is to provide the sinews of war for the Peterboro Health Association in its battle against disease and unhealthy conditions.

No organization in this city is making a greater contribution toward community welfare than the Health Association, which furnishes a clue to the unanimity with which manufacturers, societies and individual citizens have thrown themselves into the preparations for the Made-in-Peterboro Exhibition.

The Examiner knows full well that no citizen would want to see the Health Association's work dropped.

Without the services of the association's district nurse, without the camp at Jackson Park for children of substandard health, without the efforts made on behalf of victims of tuberculosis, Peterboro would be a full decade behind the times in health work.

The Examiner hopes that the figures will continue to grow until a record-breaking attendance for the week of the exhibition is guaranteed.

Every cent secured can be used to the best advantage, no matter how large the total may prove to be.

THE INCOME TAX.

The old argument as to why such a small proportion of the Federal income tax is paid by farmers has brought no more information than the statement of Mr. Robert Forke, Progressive leader, that it was because so few farmers were making enough to come within the levy.

However that may, the discussion is useful in the attention it attracts to the fact that the man who works for a salary or wages is given no chance to escape.

Employees, in fact, numbered 208,360 out of the 281,182 income tax payers in 1923, and they contributed $15,529,949, as compared with $5,474 256 paid by merchants, $2,663,900 paid by professional men, $870,261 by manufacturers and $473,049 by farmers.

That he and the others of his class have to pay about thirty times as much in income tax as do all the farmers in Canada is a condition of affairs he cannot understand.

He knows that he has to pay to the last dollar, for the income tax office has no trouble in finding the exact amount of his income—in fact, the law requires that his employer shall furnish the information.

So far as he is concerned the income tax is 100 per cent. efficient—no wonder when he reads of the comparatively small return from other classes he begins to ask himself if the levy is just as thoroughly administered among the rest.

The Edmonton Journal remarks that employees "have a right to complain when after being mulcted to the limit, they find that many whose incomes they have reason to believe are larger than their own are either going Scot-free or paying much less than they do themselves."

The Examiner is sure that the view of its Western contemporary will be echoed by many income tax payers in Peterboro.

LORD ALLENBY RESIGNS.

After many rumors of impending resignation, followed by as many official denials, Mr. Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons that Viscount Allenby had resigned his office as High Commissioner of Egypt and would be succeeded by Sir George Lloyd. There is something of mystery in the announcement which will set political tongues wagging and raise the suspicion that the deliverer of Palestine during the Great War has been jockeyed out of his post by the intrigues of his enemies. It will certainly not make the task of his successor any easier if the reasons for Allenby's going are not explained with satisfying conviction.

In the Great War, where so many fine reputations were punctured by the pricks of action, Viscount Allenby emerged with a fame that fired the imagination of the Allied and neutral world. There was something romantic in his triumph in rescuing the Holy City and the Holy Sepulchre from the Infidel—a task which the Knights of Chivalry failed to achieve seven centuries before. Lord Allenby was Commander-in-Chief of the Egyptian Expeditionary Force from 1917 to 1919, when he was named High Commissioner for Egypt. He carried out his military task with a thoroughness and a completeness of organization that ranked him with Lord Kitchener in this field of modern warfare. Nevertheless it is conceivable that the very excellence of his soldierly qualities has proved a handicap in the performance of the delicate work that the last six years have brought him.

It was natural that the Nationalists would not look with any special favor on the brilliant soldier who had reduced their revolt to impotency in the two years previous to his appointment, and Lord Allenby's direct methods in dealing with the reckless adventurings of the Moscow-inspired Egyptians did not serve as balm for the healing of a wound that the sword had slashed open.

Lord Allenby handled the difficult situation that sprang up in an hour following the murder of Sir Lee Stack with a firmness and a determination that won him the highest praise. It was a good thing for the Empire that Allenby was at Cairo during those threatening days. A man of the highest personal courage, he was hardly likely to show the white feather to a fanatical mob. Yet the fact remains that Zaghlul Pasha is the idol of a nation. His followers believe that Zaghlul will be their deliver and Lord Allenby has not been on friendly terms with the former Premier since the assassination of Sir Lee Stack. The High Commissioner has deliberately accused Zaghlul of being responsible for the attack and the Field-Marshal turned his back on the Premier when Zaghlul went trembling to the Residency to make his official apologies for the outrage and has not shaken hands with him since. Those who know Lord Allenby hardly think that he ever will do so again.

Sir George Lloyd, who is to succeed Lord Allenby, has won a great reputation as an administrator at a very difficult post. No one will accuse Sir George of Pacifist leanings. There was bitter opposition on the part of the Extremist members of the Bombay Municipal Council to the voting of the customary address to Sir George on his departure from Bombay after filling a term as Governor of the Presidency, the main ground of the attack being that Sir George Lloyd pressed with an insistence that was crowned with success for the arrest of Gandhi. Sir George saw service in the Great War in Egypt, Gallipoli, Mesopotamia and the Hedjaz, and before that time had travelled widely through the East. He is described as a man of masterly personality and an American observer in a book just published pays him the tribute of saying: "You would take his word if a kingdom was at stake." Great irrigation schemes, including the Lloyd dam and the making of a prosperous Sind, the rebuilding of Bombay and the establishment of the first Labor Bureau are the legacies of Sir George Lloyd's term in India. The croakers need have little fear of the safety of the Suez or the ultimate prosperity of Egypt with Sir George Lloyd at the helm in Cairo.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Dead language—"Give me a glass of that new beer."

The accident near the Smith cheese factory on Monday night when two Lindsay men were badly hurt, was caused by glaring headlights. In spite of the regulations, there are far too many blinding lights encountered on Ontario roads.

One good feature of the cold spell over Victoria Day was that the old fellows who like to boast about the days of yore were unable to declare that they remembered a colder 24th of May.

The Port Hope Guide says the Generaska River there flowed up stream for twenty minutes last Sunday. Perhaps the 4.4 has a "kick" after all.

It looks as if the ladies may yet be able to wear their Easter toggery by Dominion Day.

STERLING RATES

Sterling demand $4.85 5-8.

Sterling cables $4.86 1-8.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, May 27.—Owing a good deal to British estimates that the total European production of wheat and rye this season would be 392,000,000 bushels, more than last year, wheat prices here averaged lower today. Closing quotations on wheat were irregular, varying from 1 1-2 cents net decline to 3-4 cent advance, with corn 3-8 to 1 1-2 cents down; oats 1-8 to 1-2 cent off and provisions unchanged to 12 cents higher.

EGG PRICES

OTTAWA, May 27.—Immediate consumptive demand for eggs continues good and the market steady and unchanged. The Chicago market is declining but the New York market is half a cent up one day and down the next. Offerings from Prince Albert are extras 29 3-4, firsts 27 3-4, seconds 24 1-2 in new cases f.o.b. shipping point. The freight on these to Toronto is about 4 1-4 cents. Storage stocks are accumulating fast and the quality of the holdings is exceedingly good. The weather has been ideal for storing eggs.

Toronto and Montreal—Firm and unchanged.

Alberta—Jobbing, extras 30, firsts 28, seconds 25.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Prices for all grades of spring wheat flour were well maintained at the recent advances established, but there was no improvement in the volume of business in any direction owing to the fact that both domestic and foreign buyers were not disposed to respond to the higher prices, and in consequence the market was quiet.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for baled hay, prices being about steady with a moderate amount of business passing and supplies ample to meet all requirements. Sales of car lots of good No. 2 timothy hay were made at $14 to $15 per ton, No. 3 timothy hay at $11 to $12 per ton, and clover mixed hay at $10.50 to $11 per ton, f.o.b. cars here.

The trade in potatoes was slow owing to the fact that buyers seem to be well supplied for the time being, and in consequence the demand was limited and prices were unchanged, with car lots of No. 1 Green Mountain quoted at 65 cents per bag, and Quebec varieties at 55 cents per bag of 90 lbs. in bulk, ex-track.

The receipts of butter today were 711 packages, as compared with 95 for the same day last week, and 373 for the corresponding day a year ago. A steady feeling prevailed in the market under a moderate demand for supplies for domestic consumption and a fair volume of business was done in this respect, but the trade with outside sources continues to be of a limited character, however, as receipts do not show any marked increase there is little accumulation of supplies on spot, and the indications are that as soon as full grass made goods come forward the market will become more active.

The receipts of cheese were 11,265 boxes, as against 3,067 for the same day last week, and 5,172 for the corresponding day a year ago. It was reported that some further business was done with American buyers, and also that there was an improved demand between houses for supplies with a little buying for export account, consequently the market on the whole was rather more active, but there was practically no change in prices.

Beans were steady at $2.70 per bushel.

216 BEAVER PELTS.

Sold By Alberta Game Guardian's Department.

EDMONTON, Alta., May 28. — The largest beaver fur sale by the provincial game warden's department for some years was put through a few days ago, when 216 pelts were sold to local dealers.

The average price realized was $12.78, and the top price in the lot was $100 for three particularly fine skins.

All the furs disposed of at this sale had been taken under special permit granted by the game guardian.

INDIANS OPPOSED

To Granting Grazing Leases on Alberta Reserve.

OTTAWA, May 28. — (Canadian Press).—"We need it ourselves," chorussed some sixty-five Indian chiefs in their protest against a proposal to grant grazing leases on the Peigan (Alberta) Reserve. The petition against such leases, tabled yesterday in the House of Commons, is signed with such picturesque and odd names as "Eats Alone," "Hair on Body" and "Meat Face."

Signatures to the petition include the following:

FUR WORKERS' STRIKE CALLED.

MONTREAL, May 28—(Canadian Press).—A general strike of local fur workers has been called by their International Executive. Approximately 300 men are affected.

"Fate's Playthings"

To live with wife and little ones unprotected by Life Insurance is gambling with their future.

To leave a widow and children unprovided for as a result of such gambling makes them "Playthings of Fate."

The wise, loving and thoughtful husband and father does not take these chances. He takes insurance and is sure. When he selects The London Life he secures this protection at lowest net cost.

For example:—

Suppose you are 35 years of age and secure a London Life Jubilee Policy for $10,000 and take advantage of your right, 5 years later, to change it to a Twenty Payment Life Policy. Your average actual cost for the 20 years—entirely apart from dividends—will be only $2.79 per thousand dollars of insurance per year.

Secure the benefit of the experience and suggestions of The London Life representative. Delay may make you uninsurable.

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Barton

THE STORY SO FAR:

GLORIA GORDON, beautiful flapper, marries DICK GREGORY, a struggling lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes ....but no work or children.

Dick borrows his mother's maid, MAGGIE to teach Gloria to cook but she refuses to learn. Later Maggie leaves disgusted with Gloria's wild parties. Then Gloria hires RANGHILD SWANSON although Dick tells her they can't afford a maid. Her extravagance swamps Dick with debts. . . .

Gloria begins to see a great deal of STANLEY WAYBURN, an actor with whom she becomes infatuated. Her best friend MAY SEYMOUR, wife of DR. JOHN SEYMOUR, begs her not to see Wayburn. She tells her how she, herself, has been snubbed because of a foolish love affair with JIM CAREWE. MOTHER GREGORY also begs Gloria to mend her ways.

Dick becomes dangerously ill with pneumonia. While he is recovering, Wayburn tells Gloria he expected to leave town soon to get a job in New York. He needs money. Gloria gets $200 from Dick's secretary, MISS SUSAN BRIGGS, by telling her she wants it to have some gardening done as a surprise to Dick.

Wayburn promises to pay it back within three weeks. Gloria goes shopping to buy new dress, so as to appear attractive in Wayburn's eyes. She discovers, to her horror, that she is getting fat.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

That night Gloria ate no dinner. When Dick had finished his, and Ranghild had carried the tray downstairs, Gloria went into his room.

"Look at me, Rikky," she said. "Am I getting too fat?"

"You look just the same to me as you always have," he said at last. "I don't see any change in you. You are still the prettiest thing that ever lived!"

"Now, that just proves that you never really look at me! I've gained 10 pounds!" Gloria cried, tragically. "Ten pounds!"

Dick laughed at her woe-begone face.

"Well, what of it? That's not much. And, besides, a little plumpness is becoming to a woman," Dick answered. "And if you were as fat as the prize-winner in a Turkish beauty show, you'd still be the loveliest woman in the world to me."

Gloria curled her lip.

"Unfortunately there's other people besides you to look at me," she said. "People who really see me."

"I suppose I see you with my heart rather than with my eyes, Glory," Dick said quietly.

"That's a good line. Where did you get it? From a Valentine?" Gloria asked impudently.

The next morning she ate no breakfast.

By 9 o'clock she was on her way downtown.

And by 9:30 she was sitting in a steam-cabinet in a beauty shop trying to perspire away a pound or two before lunch.

Lunch, she decided, would be a cup of coffee without cream or sugar.

It would stimulate her, she figured, without adding an ounce of weight to her body. And Gloria needed something stimulating.

Her head swam, and there was a ringing in her ears, as she sat in the reducing cabinet.

It was terrible. Gloria felt as if she were being burned slowly at the stake.

Marie, the operator, kept putting towels wrung out of ice water on her forehead. But they didn't help much.

Gloria kept telling herself that she didn't care how much she suffered so long as it helped her to get thin.

But at last she could stand the heat no longer.

"Let me out, Marie!" she cried. "Let me out! I've changed my mind! I don't want to be thin if I have to go through this torture! Let me out this minute!"

Marie gave her an enormous turkish towel to wrap herself in, and told her to lie down on the wicker couch to rest.

"You're just like all my ladies," Marie said. "They all say they'll never get in the cabinet again. But next day they're back for another sweating! . . . Get on the scales, Mrs. Gregory, and we'll see how much you've lost.

"Well, isn't that wonderful! In just that short time!" she cried delighted. "I should say I will come back to-morrow, Marie! I should worry how much it hurts! It's worth it!"

"Now, there's just one hitch in this reducing stunt," Marie told her. "Sometimes when a woman loses flesh too quickly her face sags. Don't you think I'd better give you a facial treatment to tone up the muscles? I notice you are getting a double chin."

A double chin. Horrors!

Gloria snatched up a hand mirror and peered into it.

Yes. . . . Marie was right. There was no doubt that there was a creased fulness under her chin.

"Isn't that terrible?" she appealed to Marie. "Can you really massage it away?"

"Massage? Massage has gone out of style," Marie told her. "We put double chins and wrinkles away now with these little paddles."

She picked up two tiny ivory implements shaped like tennis rackets and showed them to Gloria.

"Japanese women have used them for centuries, and they have the smoothest skins of any women on earth," she went on.

Gloria lay back in the long leather chair before the mirror and closed her eyes.

She winced as Marie wrapped her face in steaming towels, lathered it with a sweet-smelling cream and began to smack it smartly with the little ivory paddles.

"I hope you're not ruining my looks. I have a heavy date at 2 o'clock," she said. She would hate to have Stanley Wayburn see her with her face red as a lobster from Marie's strenuous treatment!

"I'm not," Marie answered placidly. "You'll look like a million dollars when I finish with you. I'm against most beauty treatments, but this is really good for the skin."

"I used to say," she went on, "that there was nothing like good, cold water for the complexion. And that was all right back in the old days when there wasn't so much smoke and dirt in the world. But these days you've got to get right down into the pores with a good cream to get the grime out of them!"

Gloria didn't answer. She had gone to sleep—utterly exhausted.

She did not waken while Marie powdered and rouged her face, and brushed mascara along her brows and lashes.

"Please take all that stuff off my eyelashes," she said, when Marie had finally wakened her by shaking her briskly. "It makes me look like a clown."

"It does not. It makes you look like a great big wax doll," Marie said. "To my way of thinking you're a lot better looking with your eyes touched up a bit . . . Don't make the mistake of thinking you're one of the women who don't need make-up, Mrs. Gregory! Only one woman in a thousand is so pretty that she doesn't need it!"

Gloria stared at her crestfallen.

Then she looked into the mirror.

She had always thought that she was the one woman in a thousand who was so beautiful that she didn't need more than the lightest touch of rouge and powder to make her as ravishing as Helen of Troy!

Could it be that she was losing her looks?

No, she wasn't as pretty as she had been. There was a hard look in her eyes, and fat was certainly not becoming to her!

What had happened to her during these few months of marriage to make her look this way?

Gloria wondered if all the cocktails and the Cigarettes had had anything to do with it? Or her worry over Stanley Wayburn? . . . Well, he'd be gone soon, at anyrate.

And yet her heart soared like an early-rising lark as she went out into the street to meet him.

"What have you done to your face?" were Stan's first words of greeting as she drove up beside him.

"Oh, I didn't do it. It was done to me," Gloria laughed, rubbing a finger across her darkened eyebrows. "Marie, the beauty specialist, says I'm not pretty enough to suit her. So she fixed me up. How do you like me this way?"

"I don't," Wayburn answered bluntly. "I don't know where all you girls get this idea that we men like to see you all colored up like a barber's pole."

"They hate cheeks of sun-proof paint, too," Wayburn said sutbbornly.

"Oh, I know that. There's no pleasing you men!" Gloria answered. "If we're pale you want us rosy. And if we're rosy, you want us to be pale! Dick wants a home-making wife, so he marries me . . . and I'm a gadfly."

She stopped suddenly, struck by an arresting thought.

"Stan," she said, "what kind of a woman would you want for a wife?"

"None at all," Wayburn answered.

"Not even one with money? You always said you'd marry a woman if she had money enough, you remember," Gloria said.

"I know, but I've a hunch I'm going to make money myself from now on," the actor told her with one of his infrequent bursts of frankness. "This New York engagement looks pretty good to me. At least, Sonya Chotek says it is a good thing."

"Sonya Chotek!" Gloria exclaimed. "Do you mean to say she found this job for you?"

Wayburn nodded.

"She suggested to the manager of the show . . . Mangold, his name is . . . that I'd do for the leading man," he said easily. "So I'm going on for the try-out. Of course, I may be a blooming failure. You never can tell."

Gloria was silent. She would never have given Stan that $200 if she had known he was going down to New York to Sonya Chotek with it!

SENATE PASSES SECOND READING OF LEMIEUX ACT

Amendments Bring It Into Conformity With Privy Council's Judgment.

LABOR DISPUTES

OTTAWA, May 28. — (Canadian Press).—The bill amending the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 1907 (the Lemieux Act) to bring it in conformity with the decision of the Privy Council was before the Senate yesterday, passed through committee and stands for its third reading without amendment.

Senator Beaubien raised the point of the liability imposed on employer and employee for a strike or lockout not in conformity with the law. He pointed out that in practice, at least, the penalty could be imposed upon the employer and not on the employee. Senator Casgrain and Senator Reid also took the same position.

Senator Dandurand said the principle of equality of treatment of employer and employee was embodied in the bill. The Act had proven so valuable that he thought every effort should be made to continue it as a medium for the settlement of industrial disputes.

Detrimental to Mining.

Senator Casgrain read a letter from George T. McKenzie, secretary of the Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, protesting against the passing of this bill, claiming it would be detrimental to the mining industry, and offering to appear before a committee to explain the position of his associates. Senator Dandurand pointed out that the point at issue had been discussed and accepted by the Senate during the two previous sessions.

Senator Robertson said that the usual opposition to this bill was not interested since its application was restricted to public utilities. The decision of the Privy Council had settled that, and the amendment under discussion had been accepted previously.

Senator Casgrain referred to the effect of Clause "G," and the power granted the Federal Government to make any dispute amenable to this Act by Order-in-Council.

Senator Robertson, in reply, said he thought these clauses unnecessary and undesirable.

Power to Parliament.

Senator Dandurand also stated that they came from the House of Commons supported by the Minister of Justice and Department of Justice as being on all fours with the judgment of the Privy Council. He had his own fear as to the application of one of these clauses, and would not like to say the Privy Council would be wrong if it declared the Parliament of Canada had gone beyond its jurisdiction. He felt, however, it was wise to clothe Parliament with all the authority possible.

Senator Gordon referred to the serious effect this Act might have on the mining industry.

Senator Dandurand said it was impossible to reach an agreement in the Senate on the constituionality of the measure.

The bill stands for its third reading to-day.

CANADIAN CATTLE INDUSTRY IS RESTRICTED BY SHIPPING RATES, DR. GRISDALE TELLS COMMITTEE

PETERSEN NEXT

Only Three Witnesses Remain on Government's List for Rates Enquiry.

OTTAWA, May 28.—(Canadian Press).— Dr. J. H. Grisdale, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, advocated a $15 per head rate for cattle shipped from Canada to Great Britain, as compared with the prevailing rate of $20, before the special parliamentary committee on ocean rates, yesterday afternoon. He thought $15 for a matured steer, was a reasonable rate when prevailing prices were considered, and if lighter animals were carried five in a stall, the rate might be decreased.

"A reduction in the rate would open up a market the value of which is scarcely calculable," the witness said. He compared the $7.00 cattle rate of some years ago with the rate prevailing today, and said that the present rate was making it difficult to build up the Canadian cattle industry. Not only would the Canadian cattle shipper benefit from a lower rate, but the steamship companies would be assured of regular cargoes, because of the development of the industry. There was practically an unlimited market for Canadian cattle in Great Britain and, at present, space was inadequate.

Chilled Beef Trade.

Sir Henry Drayton mentioned the rate on chilled beef from the Argentine to Great Britain, which, he said, was $1.60 or $1.65 a hundred pounds. The rate from Canada was $1.50 per hundred pounds. The voyage from the Argentine occupied approximately thirty days and that from Canada fourteen. Dr. Grisdale agreed that there were possibilities in the chilled beef business.

H. J. Symington, K.C., informed the committee before adjournment that he had but three more witnesses to examine, one of whom was Sir William Petersen. It is probable that examination of Sir William will open today.

Dr. Grisdale said that shipments of Canadian chilled meat to Great Britain had amounted to approximately 6,000,000 pounds for each of the three years 1922, 1923 and 1924.

Sir Henry stated that Canadian chilled beef commanded a higher price in Great Britain than the Argentine product.

The witness said that he thought there were possibilities in the chilled beef business, but it was hard to work it up. It did seem unwise to let a competitor ship the finished meat and sell it in England, retaining all the offal for his own use, when Canada shipped the live cattle.

1000 Horses Wanted.

Dr. Grisdale said he was informed that there was a man on the way to Canada from overseas now who wanted to buy 1,000 horses. He didn't know whether this man would be able to get space to ship this number of horses.

In answer to G. H. Montgomery, steamship counsel, Dr. Grisdale admitted that a Russian buyer of horses had come to Canada in the past, and that a steamship line had fitted up a ship to carry the horses to Russia. Then the buyer had defaulted and the space had not been used. This was of course unprofitable to the steamship companies.

AMUNDSEN HAS MANY CHANCES

Knud Rasmussen Expresses Confidence That Explorer Will Come Through.

LIKELY TO LAND

COPENHAGEN, May 28.—(Canadian Press).—Knud Rasmussen, the Danish explorer, who has just returned from Canada, where he was in conversation with the Dominion Government regarding plans now under way for extending the influences of civilization in the Canadian Northland, expressed his opinion yesterday on the Amundsen Polar flight.

"Honestly, I believe," he said, "that nobody is able to say anything positively on this matter. We all hope for the best, and even if Amundsen has been unable to carry through with the airplanes many possibilities are left. There is especially the possibility of Amundsen going to Fort Conger or Cape Columbia, in which case nothing would be heard from him until the first mail from Thule about this time next year.

"Even if nothing is heard by then, he need not necessarily have been lost; he may have sought North-East Greenland, North Scoresbysund, Denmarkshaven, or other places where the East Greenland Company have depots. He will then probably winter at Scoresbysund. If so, nothing will be heard from him until autumn, 1926.

"If he wants real scientific results he must necessarily land, which is his greatest risk. But I have absolute confidence in Amundsen. He has proved himself able to carry through his plans on previous occasions."

CANADA ADOPTS AGREEMENTS ON OPIUM TRAFFIC

LIMIT PRODUCTION

Canada Was Prepared to Support Most Drastic Restrictive Measures.

OTTAWA, May 28 — A bill to bring the narcotic laws of Canada into conformity with agreements reached at the Opium Conference at Geneva, was given second reading in the House yesterday.

Canada is in the same position as the United States in regard to the traffic in narcotics, said Dr. Beland, Minister of Health. It did not produce opium or coca leaves, it did not manufacture the drug to any extent, and at the International Conference, Canada would have supported any measure however drastic, for the restriction of the traffic. It was impossible, however, to reconcile all the interests in the conference to complete supression of the opium traffic. Canada's representatives had therefore accepted the proposal of Lord Robert Cecil which was approximately that the production of opium and coca leaves should be limited strictly to medicinal and scientific requirements for ten years after the date on which the conference was prepared to declare that there was no danger of contraband drugs being sent out from China.

Door Thrown Open

Mr. Woodsworth complained that the addition of the word "legitimate" to the restrictive clause regarding medical and scientific requirements, had "thrown the door open wide." It meant that in countries where opium was legitimately chewed and smoked, that demand would have to be met.

So long as large and important colonies in the British Empire secured considerable proportions of their revenue from the growing of opium, it would be difficult for Canada to restrict the drug traffic, said Mr. Woodsworth. Whatever regulations we could make, would be very ineffective so long as we were not able to cope with the production.

No Revenue from Opium

Dr. Beland replied that the British government in India was not getting any revenue from the growing of opium, The cultivation of the poppy was under the control of local governments.. Moreover, not ten pounds of Indian opium was imported to United tSates or Canada in a year. If the cultivation in India were stopped, it would make no difference to the drug traffic in the United States or Canada.

The Minister of Health further pointed out that immense fortunes were accumulated by traffickers, and voiced the opinion that no mercy should be shown to persons of this calibre.

W. F. Carroll (Liberal, Cape Breton South and Richmond) complained that no appeal laid in all cases, under the act, to individuals convicted of trafficking in drugs. Sometimes, he pointed out, convictions were made on somewhat flimsy evidence.

The bill was approved in committee, without amendment.

200 Lbs. of Opium Seized

MONTREAL, May 28—Officers of the Customs Preventive Service, connected with the port of Montreal, have seized 200 pounds of opium which is said to have came by the way of the United States. The consignment was found in one of the houses of the red light district. No arrests have been made in connection with the case.

This is the largest opium seizure ever made here by officers of the service.

OBITUARY.

JOHN NAYLOR.

MARMORA, May 27. — Another highly respected resident passed away on Tuesday morning in the person of Mr. John Naylor. Deceased was born in the county of Surrey, England, 72 years ago, and at the age of 19 years came to this country. Surviving him are his widow, six sons and three daughters, besides many grandchildren. Two sons predeceased him.

He was a Methodist, being on the Trustee Board and the Quarterly Board and for many years was a member of the local Methodist church choir. His disposition was of the cheeriest and his demise will be very much felt. He died as a result of a paralytic seizure of ten days previous.

The funeral service will take place in the Methodist church on Thursday afternoon. His six sons will be bearers. Interment will be in Marmora cemetery.

FERGUSON BEER BACKWARD STEP

Rev. J. R. Bick, at Norham Church, Says Beverage is Intoxicating.

A FIERY FURNACE.

NORHAM, May 27. — A large congregation attended the services in the Methodist church Sunday evening and listened to Rev. John Rowland Bick, of Wooler, present the temperance situation of the present hour. The speaker expressed regret for the backward step taken in the return to the sale of intoxicating beer. This was the way to develop a habit that would lead to disastrous results. Mr. Bick urged his hearers to work harder than ever before in the interest of temperance. If four point four beer is not intoxicating, why surround it with a cage. The speaker stated that England's annual drink bill amounted to a sum equivalent to that necessary for the erection of 87,000 homes. The new beer legislation has created a fiery furnace for the people of Ontario.

Mission Band Picnic.

The Mission Band held their annual May picnic on Monday afternoon on the lawn of Mrs. Samuel Platt, which was beautifully decorated with Union Jacks. Some seventy-five members and visitors from Lindsay, Warkworth, Castleton, Toronto and Morganston enjoyed the occasion. The afternoon's entertainment took the form of an inspirational programme, after which all present took part in baseball, skipping, croquet and free for all races. At 4.30 a delicious lunch was served by the members of the band. The offering amounted to $3.41. A vote of appreciation moved by Mrs. Stanley Brenton and seconded by Miss Madge Cliffe was extended Mrs. Platt for her kindly and unstinted effort in making the event one of great success. The gathering was dismissed by singing the National Anthem.

The Campbellford District, according to the annual report, has this year an increase in missionary givings of $320; to Education an increase of $39, to Social Service an increase of $82. A decrease to the Work of Religious Education of $25. A membership increase of 117. $126 was raised for the Hay Bay church fund, a deficit of $9, while all charges paid their Church Union allotment excepting one.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Brenton and family spent Sunday with friends at Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Everson and family, of Lindsay, spent Sunday and Monday with his brother at the parsonage.

Miss Margaret Nelson, of Warkworth, spent Sunday and Monday with her grandmother, Mrs. Manuel Langford.

Several people from this vicinity attended the celebration held in Campbellford on May 25th.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Mitchell and family, of Toronto, formerly store keepers at Norham, arrived by motor and spent Sunday with his brother, Robert I. Mitchell and Monday with her brother, Benjamin Buchanan, of Warkworth, taking tea with his sister, Mrs. John Wesley Newman.

Miss Eva Platt, of Toronto, accompanied by her two girl friends, Miss Mary Dickson and Miss Florabelle McGill, spent the holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Platt.

Temperance Field Day.

Rev. John F. Everson conducted divine service at Wooler and Mount Zion last Sabbath, it being field day for the temperance workers of East Northumberland.

Mr. and Mrs. Lafonso Hogle, of Frankford, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Platt.

Mr. and Mrs. William Isaac, of Warkworth, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Oney Isaac.

Mrs. Mary Ferguson, of Castleton, was a recent visitor at the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gummer and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Platt.

Rev. John F. Everson and Mr. Fred H. Huycke attended a meeting held in the school room of the United church, Warkworth, on Friday evening to make arrangements for the Percy township Sunday school convention which is to be held in the Warkworth church on Tuesday afternoon and evening of June 16th, at which Rev. Roland B. Ferris, General Superintendent of the Ontario Religious Educational Council is to speak.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Foster, of Codrington, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Denike.

Mrs. Oswald Newton, of Trenton, was the guest on Sunday of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gummer.

J. Frank Cryderman, of Toronto, who for a number of years was Superintendent of the Norham Methodist Sunday school, has promised to address the school at its session next Sabbath morning.

The neighbors extend their sympathy to Allan Platt in the mysterious death of his canine companion which was now serving the third generation, having been raised by his grandparents.

A men's service is to be held in the Norham Methodist church on Sunday, May 31st, at 7.30. A male choir will provide special music for the occasion. The pastor's address will be particularly of interest to men.

TUG-OF-WAR TEAM HAS LONG HISTORY

Burnbrae Pullers Have Been Winning Decisions for Sixteen Years.

BURNBRAE, May 28. — Another Queen's birthday celebration has passed into history, and the banner of the Menie tug-of-war team still floats at the high end of the pole. The much-lauded Percy team failed to appear on the scene, to win the crown which they claimed last fall. This contest was looked forward to by both contestants and supporters from this district, and everyone regrets that it did not take place. The team, captained by Mayor Meyers, was not sufficiently trained to offer any strenuous opposition.

The team which pulled on Monday was made up of the following: W. W. Little, Bert Third, Harold Little, Fred Jones, Roy Walker, Victor Taylor, Wm. Bennett, Lindsay Watson, Wm. Hume, Bert Hay.

Of this number, only five were members of the original team which began pulling in 1909, under the auspices of the Campbellford Camp, Sons of Scotland. The history of the formation and early exploits of this now famous team is intensely interesting to the younger generation.

In 1907 a cup was offered for competition among tug-of-war teams from the various Sons of Scotland Camps in the Belleville, Madoc and Campbellford district. In 1907-08 this cup was won by the Madoc team so that by winning it in 1909 they were entitled to keep the trophy. In that year a team, composed mostly of boys, was formed at Menie among members of the Campbellford Camp in that district. They tried conclusions with the former Campbellford representatives in a trial pull and won so easily that they were asked to go to Madoc as representing the Campbellford Scotchmen. This team was composed of the following mem: W. W. Little (anchor), Bert Third Alex. Stewart, Jas. A. Stewart, Lindsay Watson, A. G. Watson, G. V. Taylor, Roy Walker. The late Wm. Doxsee was with the team in 1909 in place of Roy Walker). These men, with the exception of W. W. Little, their long-famous anchor-post, were all mere boys in years, being from seventeen to twenty-five years of age, but they experienced little difficulty in defeating the Madoc giants on their own grounds. In 1910, on the Campbellford field, they were again successful, and in 1911 they again visited Madoc, bringing home the cup, which held an honored place in Mr. F. W. Wood's show window for some time.

Tug-of-war was quiet for a number of years while the country was engaged in a more serious war, until in 1921-22 the sport began to be revived at the lawn socials, and the English Line heavyweights issued a challenge. The teams, which met and defeated the Line on two occasions, was of somewhat different formation. Some old faces were missing and new ones added. Alex. Stewart had moved to Guelph, while Jas. A. Stewart had unfortunately lost an arm, but was still the "man with the punch" as captain and coach. Wm. Bennett and Bert Hay, who were substitutes in 1909-11, became regulars. Frank and Harold Little also became members of the team. In 1922 A. G. Watson moved to town, and although Bert Third moved to West Seymour, he still pulls with the team. Fred. Jones, who pulled this year, is a newcomer to the district, and makes a very welcome addition to the team.

In the sixteen years since the contests were begun this team has not lost a decision. The one draw took place last fall in Warkworth, when the Percy team refused to try the third pull. Several members of the team have stated that they intend to stop pulling, but when Fair time comes again perhaps the lure of the contest will prove too much for them.

FORD LOSES SUIT.

Coal Company Wins Verdict On Contract.

DETROIT, Mich., May 28. — A jury in Judge Arthur Webster's court after deliberating an hour yesterday returned a verdict of $115,167.40 against the Ford Motor Company in favor of the Man Court Winters Coal Company. Breach of contract was the basis of the suit.

James O. Murfin, attorney for the coal company, showed that the Man Court Winters Company had a contract with the Ford Motor Company to deliver 25,000 tons of coal at $7.70 to the River Rouge plant during the year from August 1, 1920, to July 31, 1921.

The testimony showed that the Ford Company refused to take any more coal after [illegible] received 5,000 tons.

ANNUAL FIELD DAY WAS SUCCESSFUL

Royals of Peterboro Won Cup in Baseball Tournament.

KEENE, Ont., May 28—Despite the cold and threatening weather a large crowd attended the 5th Annual Field Day at Keene on Monday. A long list of races was run off and a splendid event was a treasure hunt in which at least fifty took part and caused a lot of excitement.

The ball game between Royals of Peterboro and Keene for the Merchants' Cup was won by the Royals in an extra inning. There was both good and bad baseball dished up. Although at times Keene played snappy ball and apparently had the game on ice in the fifth inning but in the sixth Keene interjected a comedy of errors and Royals chased over four runs. Keene again tied the score in their half only to have Royals chase over the winning counter in the extra innings. Nelson, the flashy Keene centre fielder, did some daring base runing, at one time turning an apparent single into a triple. H. Renwick also laced out a three bagger.

The line-up:

Keene—C. Nelson, c.f.; C. Robertson, c.; W. Fletcher, lf; A. E. Fletcher, 2b; M. McCarthy, ss; F. Whalen, 1b; M. Robertson, p; H. Renwick, 3b; R. Conrin, rf.

Royals—Brunton, 3b; Mahood, c; Corsey, 2b; Corbett, ss; McIntosh, p, cf; Wiese, 1b; Maudsbjy, cf, p; Hopkins, lf; French, rf.

Score by innings:

Royals.. .. .. ..2 0 0 0 0 0 4 2 1—9
Keene.. .. .. ..0 2 1 1 0 2 2 0—8

Umpire—Hugh Renwick.

Two cups, the Comin Cup and Chapman Cup were up for competition to the boy and girl winning the largest number of points.

In the girls' competition Zeta Wilson capture the silverware with a total of 13 points, while Harry Archibald took the boys' cup with a total of 15 points.

The day's programme ended up with a successful dance in the Town Hall in the evening.

SUE POOL MEMBER.

Defense Challenges Validity of Grain Act.

REGINA, Sask., May 28.—Leave to amend their reply to the defendant's claim that the Saskatchewan wheat pool was not licensed as a primary dealer under the grain act, by asserting that the grain act was ultra vires of the parliament of the Dominion, was accorded counsel for the pool in the court of King's Bench yesterday.

The wheat pool is suing Zuronski, a member on his contract, and asking for damages for breach of the same. In consequence of the statutory necessity of acquainting the Attorney-General for the Dominion of the intent to challenge the validity of the act, the case was not proceeded with after the leave to amend the reply had been given, and adjournment was made until the October sessions of the court.

COLD RECEPTION FOR HOLIDAY VISITORS

Cottagers Who Spent Week-end at Dunsford Struck Cool Weather.

DUNSFORD, May 28.—In spite of all the cold and disagreeable weather recently the holiday turned out not too bad, although rather cold to go on a picnic along the lake.

Quite a number of people from Lindsay and Toronto motored down to the parks to spend the holiday in their cottages. Some of them came Saturday evening just in time for the freeze-up. They didn't receive a very warm reception to begin the season with, awakening Sunday morning to find everything bitten by Jack Frost again. However, it didn't have the effect of chasing them home. Most of them stayed until Monday evening.

The frost on Saturday night did considerable damage to the seeding, especially that which was very far advanced. On Sunday morning it looked quite black so it will have to go back now and make another attempt to grow. Some of the fruit trees having attired themselves in their lovely coat of blossoms looked quite disappointing after the frost.

A number of the young people who belong to the A.Y.P.A. here motored to Bobcaygeon on Monday afternoon to fulfill the invitations extended them by the A.Y.P.A. there to attend a picnic which they held out at Boyd's Landing.

Several motored to Omemee to enjoy the big time there.

A play entitled "The Dust of the Earth" was given in the Anglican church hall on Friday evening of last week, under the auspices of the Methodist Sunday school.

A goodly number assembled and everyone enjoyed it. There were five acts with some splendid vocal numbers between.

METHODIST LADIES' AID HELD MEETING

Report Showed Substantial Balance in Treasury of Omemee Society.

OMEMEE, May 28.—The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church held its regular monthly meeting on Thursday afternoon, in the basement of the church, ten members being present. The president occupied the chair and opened the meeting with devotional exercises.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, after which the treasurer reported a balance of $57 in the treasury.

Two letters of appreciation were read from members of the Society for recognition of sympathy during bereavement.

Mrs. J. Widdis and Miss A. Doube were appointed a flower committee for the month of June.

A resolution was passed to pay $40 to the Quarterly Official Board.

The sum of $15.50 was received with thanks from the Ladies' Aid Society of Bethel, as their share of the improvements recently made at the memorial parsonage.

Several details were discussed regarding the dinner to be served July 12, after which the meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. Rowland.

The Methodist church was crowded to capacity on Sunday evening when Miss Reid of Bethel addressed the congregation on "our early missionaries, their life and adventures in India, Africa, China and other countries." The address was given in a clear voice and was intensely interesting to her many hearers. The hymns chosen were patriotic, in keeping with Victoria Day.

A solo entitled "He's Knocking At the Door", rendered by J. Day of Toronto, and a duet entitled "In Jesus" by Mrs. Harry Stinson, of Oshawa and Mr. Day added much to the tone of the services.

JOSHUA AND MARY ANDERSON MARRIED

Walking To Belleville.

Even in those early days there was a stage running from Stirling to Belleville, but Mr. Anderson never used this method of transportation when he had business in the lakeside town, but walked there and back. Once he was summoned for jury duty in Belleville and he made his way on foot, reaching his destination ahead of the stage. A case on which he was called was finished at 10 o'clock at night and he started for home on foot, arriving just as day was breaking, and he took up his daily duties just as he would had he been resting all night.

Marvels of Vitality.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are remarkably bright and vigorous for their years. Their sight is good and all their faculties are as keen as ever, save for a slight deafness on the part of the husband. They are free from the pains and aches which usually afflict the aged. The husband has always used tobacco in moderation, but never drank any liquor to speak of and only once—about ten years ago—has required medical attention. An ambition for public office never beset him. In politics he voted the Conservative ticket and let it go at that. He was raised an Anglican, but nearly all his life has attended the Methodist church.

A Mother of Heredity.

In the case of both Mr. and Mrs. Anderson longevity appears to be a matter of heredity. The former's mother died at the age of 95 and in the Stirling cemetery there is not a monument recording the age of any one older. All his brothers and sisters are dead, one brother reaching the age of 79 and a sister passing away at 85.

Mrs. Anderson's grandfather, the late John Parcels, attained the age of 100 years and 11 months. She tells, with evident family pride, that her grandfather a short time before his death, walked from what is now the town of Trenton, to Toronto, making the return trip in less than a week. Mr. Parcels fought in various engagements in the war of 1812.

Long List of Descendants.

The living children of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are: Mrs. Chester Hoard, their youngest daughter, who resides on the next farm to her parents, Mrs. William Reaume, of Wallaceburg, and Mrs. William Hannah, of Stirling. The sons are Walter, of Hoard's Station, George of Saskatchewan, Fred, who resides at home, and Frank, of Quebec. They have so many grand, great and great grandchildren that they have long since lost count of the number.

When strange young people call on them now and introduce themselves as descendants, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson accept the situation as a matter of course.

The only person now residing on Anderson Island who was there when the Andersons came to it, is Mrs. Henry Hammond, who is only a few months younger than Mrs. Anderson. Mrs. Hammond's father fought at Lundy's Lane. Her son George resides in Campbellford.

Mr. and Mrs. Hammond let the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding pass without a celebration, but their children and their grandchildren gathered in crowds 10 years later and the diamond wedding of the aged couple became an event in the family history. The celebration of the 70th anniversary will be an event almost wtihout precedent in matrimonial annals.

WEDDING BELLS.

RUTHERFORD—HARRIS.

COBOURG, May 27. (Special) — A very pretty marriage took place on Saturday, May 23rd, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Harris, King street east, when their oldest daughter, Marjorie Evelyn, was married to Mr. Adam Nelles Rutherford, son of Mrs. Adam Rutherford, Grimsby. Rev. R. F. Stillman conducted the ceremony. The bride was attended by Miss Elcanor Armstrong and Miss Helen Duthrie, Toronto; and Mr. Malcolm Nelles was grooms man.

Seventy-five guests, including relatives and intimate friends, were present from Toronto, Hamilton, Oakville, Burlington, Grimsby, Dundas and Buffalo.

After a short motor trip, Mr. and Mrs. Rutherford will take up residence at Grimsby.

FRECKLES

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckleface, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable concern that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from any drug or department store and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine, as this strength is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove your freckles.

GARTERS CARRY BEAU'S PICTURE

Knee Length Skirts Have Brought Vogue for Trick Garters.

TASSELS USED

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, May 28.—(United Press).—

"What sighed the salesgirl,
"Could be any smarter
Than a mans photograph'
Set right on one's garter?"

Knee length skirts have brought about a vogue for trick garters and hosiery. The latest garter is made with an attached frame covered with isinglass wherein reposes the photo of one's best beau.

Numerous other garters are chosen with reference to the gown with which they are to be worn. For evening wear there are gold garters with gathered gold lace framing either edge and clusters of rhinestones set here and there. There are colored satin garters matching the shade of the frock, with pompons of matching ostrich.

Black garters with a wide frill of black silk lace which falls over the leg, look for all the world like old-fashioned pantelette frills. Tassel-trimmed garters are favored with the fluffy dance frock and here two silk tassels matching the garter fall in pendant effect. Youthful lace garters with rosettes of narrow lace and centers of wee pastel silk flowers are pretty with the lace frock.

Stockings are also turning toward decorative effects. For instance, there are the very sheer stockings with red rose-buds embroidered below the knee, etc. In some cases the stocking itself is made with garter effect as where a band of contrasting color is placed just below the knee. Shaded stockings which are light in tone at the knee and deepen in color at the ankle are worn with matching satin slippers for evening wear. Recently women have been wearing hosiery to match the satin slipper rather than nude shades. Nude, however, is still worn with silver or brocade slippers.

FOR MORNING GOWNS

Chiffon frocks, very beautifully tailored, and without the frills and fluffs we usually associate with this material is actually used for morning gowns.

Joy untold awaits your letter

SEASON'S HERE FOR PRESERVES

Some Hints and Methods in Ways of Putting Up Strawberries.

COLD PACK ADVISED

There's no denying that preserves add much to warm biscuits on a cold winter's night and every woman wants a few glasses of "home-made" strawberry preserves on her emergency shelf for special occasions.

And strawberry jam is not to be despised. The taste is just the same as the preserve, but less choice fruit can be used to make it.

Plain canned strawberries are delicious in all sorts of puddings when the fresh fruit is out of season and are well worth the effort and time it takes to can them.

If you have always canned your strawberries by the open-kettle method, try the cold-pack this year and see if you don't like them better. For one thing there's no juice left over when you cold-pack. And while the juice is delicious and adds much to a fruit drink, it's something to take care of at the end of a more or less tiresome task.

Cold-Pack Method for Strawberries

Wash, hull and sort berries. Save the choicest berries for preserves and the small imperfect fruit for jam. The average fruit that requires no cutting away of seedy portions or soft spots is used for canning.

Pack berries tightly in sterilized jars. The berries should be packed as tightly as possible without crushing. Fill jars to within ½ inch from the top. Adjust rubbers.

Boil three cups of granulated sugar and two cups of water for about six minutes or until the sirup is thick and "piles up" over the edge of a spoon. Pour this sirup over berries in jars, filling the cans within ¼ inch from the top.

Half seal tops.

Place in boiler half full of boiling water. Add boiling water to cover cans by at least an inch and process sixteen minutes. Count the time from the minute the water begins to boil after the cans are put into it.

Remove from water, seal and turn upside down to cool.

Strawberries canned this way are not crushed and cooked "to pieces" as they are in the open kettle method.

Strawberry Preserves (Sunshine)

Wash and hull berries. Drain well and weigh. Use as many pounds of sugar as there are pounds of fruit. Put a layer of berries in preserving kettle, cover with a layer of sugar and continue layer for layer until all are used. Let stand for one or two hours. Put over a low fire and bring slowly to the boiling point. Let boil up once and skim. Simmer for five minutes. Turn out on large platters, cover with glass and let stand in the direct sunshine for twelve hours. It will be necessary to wipe the glass frequently. Turn into sterilized jelly glasses and cover with paraffin.

Strawberry Jam.

Wash and hull berries. Drain and weigh. Use ¾ pound of sugar to one pound of berries. Put a layer of fruit in preserving kettle and sprinkle with a layer of sugar. Crush with a potato masher. Add another layer of fruit and sugar and crush. Continue to add layer for layer of sugar and fruit without crushing. Put over a low fire and bring to the boiling point. Stir often to prevent sticking and to break the fruit. Simmer over a low fire until a spoonful tried on a cold saucer stiffens. It will take about 2 hours to cook the jam.

Let cool slightly. Pour into sterilized jelly glasses and cover with paraffin when cold. Store in a dry, dark, cool place.

REV. R. B. GROBB GIVEN WELCOME

MANY PRESENT.

All Saints' Parish Hall was well filled last night, when the congregation gathered to welcome the former rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, on his first visit to the parish since his departure for Chicago in January, 1924.

The meeting was called to order by the rector, Rev. J. D. Paterson, who asked W. H. Buller to take the chair, as Mr. Buller has been rector's warden for both Mr. Grobb and Mr. Paterson. A short musical programme was rendered, consisting of vocal solos by Miss Tucker, Mrs. Trotter, and Mr. Lucas, and violin solos by Mrs. Hooper.

After the programme, Mr. Paterson made a short address in which he reminded the congregation of the good old days and thanked them for the help they had given him in trying to make the new days as good.

Mr. Grobb was greeted with hearty applause when he ascended the platform. After expressing his pleasure in the gathering which had been arranged in his honor, he told some of his experiences with his new work. He said that he had not come to make a speech, and did not want to look at the people from the platform, but wished to talk to them individually.

Refreshments were served by the ladies and a pleasant social hour was spent, everybody seizing the opportunity to welcome Mr. Grobb back to his old parish, in which he had labored so successfully for twelve years.

BUSINESS COLLEGE COURSE IS OFFERED

Popularity Contest Proves Close as the Last Day Approaches.

There is often a home run hammered out in the last half of the ninth inning and there is many a dark horse that has come from behind and won the race. The standing of the various contestants in the contest to-day is no indication whatever of how they may stand when the clock strikes four next Monday afternoon and the contest is finished. There is more than one demure looking damsel who has quite a bunch of votes snugly tucked up her sleeve which she is holding back ready to put in at the last moment. The expensive thermos bottle donated by Mr. Kent of the Corner Drug Store will be awarded Friday to the one showing the largest gain between Wednesday morning and Friday morning, and the three grand prizes for the entire contest will be won or lost Monday afternoon. The first prize is $100.00 in cash, to which Mr. J. A. McKone has very generously donated a six months' course in the Peterborough Business College, worth another $100.00. This course can be taken by the winner or is transferable. It cannot, of course, be transferred to any one now attending the Business College or to any prospective pupil. Time is getting short. There are but very few days left, let everyone in the contest make the very most of it. All cannot win, but all can feel proud of the fact that they have been in the contest and have done their best to help the project of the Made-in-Peterboro Fair and the Health Association.

Cynthia Grey Says

This is the time of the year that every young girl should obey the railroad crossing warning—"Stop, Look and Listen."

For the month of June is near—the month of many marriages.

Far be it from me to discourage marriage, but this is a good time to be sure you are right before you go ahead.

Do you really love the man you expect to marry or is it merely a passing friendship or affection? Are you sure your dispositions are such that you will make a happy couple?

Should you marry at once or wait until he has made more progress in his chosen work?

Does he have a little money saved up to meet any emergency that may arise soon after your marriage?

A little thought on these questions now may have an important bearing on your future happiness.

BERLIN STARTS SUICIDE GROVE

Wave of Self Murder Creates Great Demand For Graves.

BLAME SPRING FEVER.

(By Guenther Tonn, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

BERLIN, May 28. — "Suicide Grove," a cemetery for Germans who commit "selbstmord" or self murder, is the latest novelty here. This peculiar institution resulted from a suicide wave which made the demand for graves exceed the supple. Dr. Willy Hellpach, psychiartrist, who recently ran for the presidency, says Spring fveer made the unusual number of suicides. Socialists blame overcrowing and poor working conditions. In Suicide Grove stands Suicide Cathedral, where services for the dead are held. The authorities ask that death candidats do not come directly to the cemetery to do their self murder, as sometime has been the case.

Special arangements are made for husbands and wives who jump off jointly.

At the entrance stands a notice to take care of the "tombstones" which love dedicated to the dead.

PREMIER KING EXPLAINS WHY

there is not a phrase in the explanation I have so far given the House that has not been essential to a proper statement of the Government's action in this matter. Now, with regard to the sitting of the House on Victoria Day, I took the trouble of communicating with the High Commissioner for Canada to ascertain what the practice of the British Government was with regard to the sitting of the British Parliament on that particular day. I was informed that the British Parliament would sit on Victoria Day, and I felt that if the British Parliament considered that a proper way to observe Victoria Day we should not be any less loyal if we observed the day in the same way. I should perhaps add that I had nothing to do with this House not sitting on Ascension Day; it was the House of Commons itself who, by unanimous resolution, agreed not to sit on that day. I merely brought before Parliament a resolution to the effect that when the House adjourned on Wednesday, May 20, it should stand adjourned until Friday, the 22nd instant. That resolution was adopted unanimously by the House, so that it was the House itself that decided not to sit on Ascension Day. With respect to Victoria Day, the hon. member for St. John (Mr. Baxter) asked:

"What is the intention of the Right Hon. the Prime Minister with regard to sitting on Monday, May 25?"

"The Government thought it would be meeting the wishes of the House generally if we sat on the 25th May in order to get through the business as soon as possible."

No exception was taken to that statement; no hon. member asked that Victoria Day should be observed in any other manner than that indicated. Had there been any exception in any particular I would have told the House then, what I have just said, about the practice in the British House, and left it to the House itself to discuss the matter further.

PRICE OF GASOLINE GOES UP CENT TODAY

TORONTO, May 28 (Canadian Press).—Gasoline in Toronto and throughout most of Ontario will cost another cent per gallon today. The price in Toronto will be 28 cents, plus the 3 cents provincial tax. At the same date last year gasoline shot up to even higher levels. Officials of the large oil companies stated last night that the increase was not due to the opening of the heavy motoring season, but to the sharp rise in the cost of crude oil.

STRONG NOTE TO GERMANY FROM ALLIED COUNCIL

Will Point Out Defaults in Treaty Provisions in Plain Language.

LARGE FORCES.

If Staff and Police Are Reduced, Cologne Will Be Evacuated.

LONDON, May 28.—(Canadian Press.)— Germany's defaults relative to disarmament as specified by the Treaty of Versailles, have been outlined for presentation to Berlin in a note that probably will be despatched next week by the Council of Ambassadors.

The note and the covering letter which have been agreed upon by France and Great Britain will point out that in view of the fact that the allied committee of control has concluded that Germany has not fulfilled all her disarmament obligations, allied experts have agreed upon a list of defaults which will be described in very plain language. This will be done so that there will be no chance of further misunderstanding in Berlin regarding what Germany has yet to accomplish before the evacuation of the Cologne area is considered.

Objection has been raised to the large German war staff, state police, and a number of other points of secondary importance. If the note is successful and its recommendations are carried out, it is considered probable that the British will withdraw from Cologne soon after the end of September.

HER FACE WAS COVERED WITH PIMPLES

She Got Rid of Them By Using Burdock Blood Bitters

Miss T. Hunter, R.R. No. 8, London, Ont., writes:—"I wish to recommend Burdock Blood Bitters to all women who are suffering from pimples or any facial blemishes. About two years ago I was greatly troubled with pimples and sores breaking out on my face, and could get no relief until, finally, a friend recommended me to take B.B.B. This I did, and I am now glad to say that your remedy has given me the desirable results, and I now have a nice smooth, clear skin as it eliminated all the impurities from my blood."

Get B.B.B. when you ask for it; it has been on the market for the past 46 years; put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NEW REGULATIONS ON RECEIPT STAMPS

Notation Sufficient on Statements If Separate Receipts Are Given.

OTTAWA, May 28 (Canadian Press)—The following regulation has been promulgated by the acting Minister of Customs and Excise, under the special war revenue act: "Credits on statements of accounts, when for amounts of $10.00 or over, are subject to the stamp tax on receipts except when such credits are covered by separate receipts to which the required excise tax stamps have been affixed. In such cases the statement is to bear the notation "stamp tax paid," initialed by the maker. This regulation is in effect on and after May 1, 1925."

STOCK SALESMAN WAS SUSPICIOUS

One of Samples From Bingo Mine Seemed Doubtful.

WINNIPEG, Man., May 28. — (Canadian Press).—Following an adjournment of more than two weeks, the preliminary trial of Joseph Myers, former managing director of the Bingo Mines, Limited, was resumed here yesterday.

Percy J. Perry, manager of the Mining Investment, Limited, who was the chief witness, testified relative to the sale of Bingo stock. He declared that buyers were general throughout the Dominion.

As what opportunities Myers had for tampering with the mine samples the witness stated that there had been ample opportunity for anyone who wanted to be dishonest. Myers, he added, kept six tubes of crushed ore, usually of a high grade, to show the gold more freely.

Mr. Perry confessed that he had seen nothing unusual during his connection with the Bingo interests. His suspicions, however, had been aroused by the size of a particular sample, just before Myers departed for New Zealand. Before the latter left for the Antipodes, witness stated that he had intimated no samples would be taken from the mine during his absence.

LARGEST JAM OF LOGS IN YEARS

Logs Piled 80 Feet High and 250 Feet Wide in Montreal River.

USING DYNAMITE.

MONTREAL, May 28.—(Special).—What is stated to be the biggest log jam in sixty years is now in effect on the Montreal River which flows into Lake Temiskaming in Northern Ontario, according to advices received at the Canadian Pacific Railway offices here yesterday afternoon. 300,000 logs are piled up to a height of eighty feet, with a width of 250 yards, choking the river for 300 yards down at the point where the jam occurred.

An army of a hundred men are working night and day with dynamite to break up the jam which occurred on Sunday last, and had not been moved up until yesterday afternoon.

NEW MEMBERS ON BOARD GOVERNORS

Four Appointed To Represent Graduates on Toronto University Board.

TORONTO, May 28 (Canadian Press).—The announcement yesterday by Premier Ferguson, as minister of education, of appointments of the board of governors of the University of Toronto shows Angus MacMurchy, K.C., Rt. Hon. Lyman P. Duff, J. J. Gibbon and Dr. Harry Bertram Anderson to have been selected as representatives of the graduates under the new system of nomination and appointment. F. Gordon Osler succeeds his father on the board and Dr. F. W. Merchant is an added appointment.

RED ROSE COFFEE "is good coffee"

A LINE-O-TYPE.

Street-car motormen, taxicab drivers and others are compelled to undergo an examination as to their qualifications as managers of the vehicles they drive. But the highways are full of private motorists who cannot see or hear signals; many are stupid, nervous, flighty or irresponsible; some are insane, or liable to drop dead of apoplexy or heart disease; many of them drink, some of them take drugs, and a lot of them just do not care.

Watch the Road.

Not one of these could get a job as street car motorman or as a licensed taxi driver. But because they have the price of a car, they are allowed to navigate the highways.

Think it over.

A politician in a recent speech, near Peterborough, declared his party had not been dead, but "just asleep." One is nearly as fatal as the other, when it comes to losing battles. Napoleon lost Waterloo for lack of a night's sleep. Many a politician has lost his seat through not being awake to a situation that he realized the next day after the election. And when parties, like people, awake suddenly, they are liable to be doubtful as to just what way they should go.

Waking Up.

Maybe the particular speaker referred to merely insinuated that his party had been resting up for some imminent contingency and so long as it has a breathing spell after awaking before being called into action all right.

When Gabriel sounds his trumpet will be a bad time to start laying the foundations of a platform from which to tell one's merits.

If there is one thing more certain than another it is the already outstanding success of the Made-in-Peterborough Exhibition. How can a thing be a success before it happens? Because from the preparations made and the progress apparent every day it cannot be a failure. The Motor Show in all its history never created so much interest as the Made-in-Peterborough Exhibition. Already more admissions have been sold than the Motor Show attracted.

Everybody Happy.

Which proves two things: The people recognizance a good thing when they are told about it, and the manufacturers have something worth while to show.

The young ladies are doing wonderful work in the advance sale of tickets, and if you can't be convinced of the fact that the best week's entertainment ever offered in Peterborough starts next Monday—well, you'll just have to come and see for yourself.

"GUTTA PERCHA" BALLOON LOW PRESSURE TIRES

Are creating new history in Tire Service

—from the first day on

"Gutta Percha" Balloon Tires are writing a new page in the annals of tire service, a history in terms of comfort, mileage, and economy that should be the personal experience of every car owner in Canada.

This is made possible because the men who build them and the Canadian institution that sponsors them are pioneers in the rubber industry on this continent.

More cushion effect. Great flexibility to side walls, sturdier, tougher, stronger and longer wearing. The perfect distribution of bending and flexing properties giving greater comfort and smoother performance—these are some advancements and refinements found exclusively in "Gutta Percha" Tires.

Over forty years of unexcelled specialization are built into every "Gutta Percha" Balloon Tire. This is the reason for both the flexibility and the toughness of the rubber in them; for the scientific road-gripping tread and the easy steering of this big, wear-resisting mileage-giving tire.

Canada is proud of a product that will pay tribute to your judgment—from the first day on.

Here is a new type of tire —The "Gutta Percha" Medium Pressure

This new G. P. tread masterpiece has the easy riding qualities of the balloon tire, with the easy steering of the high pressure type.

FARM NEWS AND PROBLEMS

BETTER BEEF CAN BE PRODUCED BUT PUBLIC IS NOT EDUCATED TO KNOW IT AND ASK FOR IT

Many Purchasers Would Refuse to Buy Nicely Marbled Meat.

QUICK PRODUCTION

Real good, juicy, well-bred and well-fed meat is so much of a scarcity at the present time that the vast majority of the meat-consuming public does not know what it looks like. Many purchasers, should they see nicely marbled meat, with a good outside covering of firm white fat, would likely refuse to buy it for that very reason. Should these misguided consumers of junk once taste prime meat, they would never again buy the yellow, leathery stuff furnished by the hat-rack variety of dairy cow, so it would seem that not only the producer but the consuming public needs educating before the butcher realizes that if he expects to stay in business he must handle a good quality of meat at reasonable prices. The purpose of this article, however, is not to educate the buying public, but rather to discuss with farmers, rangemen and stockmen, generally, the need of better cattle and better methods of producing them.

Before taking up production, it might be well to take a peep into the question of demand. It has frequently been stated nothing can upset the so-called inexorable law of supply and demand. It does not agree with this so-called law; it doesn't always work. If it did, we would now be buying gasoline for five cents a gallon or less, and innumerable other illustrations might be given. It is supposed by many that the consuming public is entirely responsible for styles in meat and other staples, as well as products that are not staple. This is true only in part. The consumer, as I will point out later, has considerable influence in the present demand for baby beef and other highly standardized food products, but the packer is also a vital force in determining the kind and quality of meat consumed. The packer says he is compelled to buy what the market demands. Let us see.

The universal demand is for meat of high quality. What has the packer done to improve the supply of such meat? Does he not at all times buy and distribute the article which he thinks will make him the most money? Often the light weight cuts so much in demand come from small, inferior animals, perhaps carrying age, and are palmed off to an uneducated public as baby beef. "All that glitters is not gold."

Early Maturity Necessary.

Economy is the watchword of the hour. Consequently economical production should mean highest efficiency. Highest efficiency in beef production means increased pounds of meat, of better quality, produced in less time; in short, two pounds where one pound grew before. When we approach this standard, it seems to be measured in terms of baby-beef. It then follows that, in order to make the growing and feeding of early maturing cattle profitable, certain things are necessary. Any experienced stockman knows that the scrub cannot possibly enter this competition. It does not possess the individuality, quality, or conformation to convert feed into meat at a profit. Its meagre frame, with tight draw hide, is incapable of expanding under the pressure of feed consumed; therefore it resembles a furnace whose duty is to absorb fuel which it is not capable of converting into anything but smoke and waste.

For some unexplained reason there still seems to exist in the minds of a number of stockmen and farmers, a misapprehension regarding the production of purebred stock. It is not unusual to hear the statement that breeding registered stock is a rich man's game, and not meant for the average farmer. There is possibly considerable truth in the latter statement. It might well be asked "Who is the average farmer?"

The recent and extensive depression which has affected all branches of agriculture indicates very plainly, it would seem, that livestock production in some form must become an integral part of all future agricultural operations if they are to succeed.

Day of Heavy Steer is Gone.

Unprofitable production and limited demand has rung the curtain down on the old and heavy steer. Notwithstanding this there yet remains a place for the well-bred matured two-year-old steer. It is not possible for everybody in every locality to conform their operations to a certain prescribed standard. Wise is the man who knows the conditions of his own locality, and knows enough to make the best use of it. On some farms and in some localities, a considerable quantity of roughage is available, which can be consumed by the older steer at a profit, whereas otherwise it might go to waste unless a breeding herd or stock cattle were maintained. Excepting local conditions of this kind, there can be little question that those who plan for early maturity in production are following the wisest and most profitable course. Suppose it does cost a trifle more at first to adapt one's business to the production of better cattle, which early maturity requires—the reward is manifold. Is it worth anything to find a ready sale for all that can be produced, at the highest prevailing prices, when the inferior not-wanted kind of cattle go begging at almost any price? Yet this is experienced almost daily in nearly all of our great livestock marts.

Should it be considered that the present demand for baby beef is a fad or fashion of the hour and likely to be reversed suddenly, let us analyze the change that has taken place in modes of living. The comfortable home and large family have given place to the two-by-four apartment with small family, or none at all. The big roast or steak which graced the table has been replaced by chop or small steak which can be quickly cooked over a gas jet, so that the two-by-four occupants can make a quick getaway in the auto to the movie or some other amusement, after which they will visit some place where food is served before returning to the two-by-four and spreading out the hammock for the night. Gone is the home and the old home life; gone also is the family joint and huge steak. Then why stick to the big, heavy steer, which has gone also, and cannot longer be produced except at a loss?

Figuring the Advantages.

There is little use in advocating something, or even discussing it, unless it is beneficial to the one who adopts the practice. Therefore, let us see, in a very brief and general way, the difference between the production of the three-year-old steer and the calf, both finding their way to the shambles, but at widely different ages.

In figuring the first, we will take as a basis a foundation herd of 300 cows. Figuring on a 75 per cent calfcrop, which is a reasonable average, at the end of the first year, there would be 525 head to winter. The second year there would be 750 head, the third year 975 head, and the fourth year up to selling time, when the calf crop dropped in the first year would be three-year-olds, the number would be 1200 head. Allowing a 3 per cent loss yearly would leave around 200 head of mature cattle or three-year-olds approximately half steers and half heifers. Figuring the weight of each steer at 1050 pounds at seven cents would be $73.50 or $7,350; and 100 heifers at 1000 pounds at six cents, would be $60 or $6,000, making an annual total receipt of $13,350, with 1200 cattle carried to obtain this income.

Now let us change this to 1000 head of cows, which have a 75 per cent calf crop. Allowing 3 per cent loss leaves 738 calves which are sold in the fall or early winter for fattening into baby beef. They weigh 450 pounds. The heifers selling for six cents and the steers for seven cents, amount to $27 and $31.50 respectively. The totals would be $9,963 and $11,623, or an annual total of $21,586, which is $8,236 in favor of the calves, with practically the same number of cattle carried. This shows the difference between the annula turnover and waiting three years for returns.

Fifty pounds in weight might easily be added to the calves and the price also increased with weight, quality and breeding. It is an established fact that the calf makes greater gains for the feed consumed than the mature animal, and since weight gained for feed consumed is the determining factor in profit or loss on feeding operations—and the same economic principle applies to grazing—why keep a steer until he is three years old to eat off three crops of grass?

No Mystery in the Business.

There is no mystery or hidden secret in the production of good livestock Observation, close attention to business and practical sense, unlock the door to success. Start right by selecting a bull of good type, quality, breeding and conformation. Cull the cow herd until it approaches the type desired, then persistently keep it culled, never permitting a poor animal to remain, no matter what the expense for so doing. Feed and take good care of the cattle in the winter, and arrange the breeding so that the majority of the calves are dropped in the same month. Nothing adds more to the sale and price received than evenness of size and quality, which are determined by breeding and age. It may require an extra bull, but the cost is insignificant when the results pay for it many times over.

In conclusion, let me impress upon the reader's mind that the cost of production is high today in every business Wasteful and extravagant methods cannot long survive. Every blade of grass represents value, whether it be on the public domain, national forest, or privately owned land, and unless this blade of grass, which is the real foundation of all profitable livestock production, is wisely conserved and used, a waste occurs somewhere, to someone.

Cattle Shortage Exists.

Perhaps there does not exist a perceptible shortage of cattle at this moment, but nevertheless an actual shortage does exist, and whenever the restocking process commences it will become evident, if not acute. We are on the upturn now, and while it is yet time, those who are able and wise will lose no time or opportunity to build up and replenish their herds. The cry of wolf has been heard in the land so long tha little attention is paid to it any more, but don't be in the position of the lamb when the wolf comes! Thousands of ranches, and countless acres in the western range states where cattle once roamed by the thousands, are now desolate! empty. We as a nation have passed from the greatest meat exporting nation on earth to a meat importing nation in a remarkably short period of time.

Can it be that we are going to permit this nation to pass from its once pastoral supremacy into decadence? History records that thruout time the enduring nations of the earth have been the meat producing and meat consuming nations, while on the other hand those nations and peoples who abandoned pastoral pursuits and resorted to other methods for maintenance have crumbled and decayed. Great is the nation whose foundations rest upon the products of the soil and that founds its institutions thereon.

Agriculture ist he basis of our national wealth and greatness. Livestock is the basis of all our agricultural prosperity. The print of the golden hoof leads to independence, permanence, wealth, for those who intelligently follow it.

Early Flowers Provide Color in Brown Gardens

LAKEFIELD, May 28.—Gardens are growing but rather slowly owing to the continued cold weather and the frosty nights but already the early vegetables are up; asparagus and rhubarb are in use from local gardens. Earlier flowers—tulips, daffodils and crocus blooms—are showing the delicate tints and provide a note of color in the brown and green lawns and gardens.

Feed Sow So She Will Give Maximum Of Milk

Developing a strong, thirfty, vigorous litter of pigs from farrowing to weaning time depends to a large extent upon the amount of milk a sow gives. A sow cannot make milk out of just any kind of feed. In fact, one can dry up a sow byfeeding her all she will eat of certain kinds of feed. To make sure that the sow will give a maximum amount of milk one must feed liberally those feeds that are rich in protein. Tankage is the richest and cheapest source of protein in this section of the country. Feed the sow one-half pound a day while suckling pigs even when she is out on good pasture.—C. W. McCampbell.

RAIN WELCOME TO OMEMEE FOLK

Wonderful Help to Crops of Grain and Vegetables.

MOVIE SHOW

OMEMEE, May 28.—The heavy rain which fell on Saturday was warmly welcomed by the farmers and gardeners who have almost completed seeding in this vicinity. Fall wheat and sweet clover are looking well, and while the growth has been slow owing to the cold weather, yet it is believed that the crop has become hardened and a few warm days should make a wonderful change in the appearance of same. Sunday night's frost was quite noticeable, but no damage is reported even to garden stuff which happens to be keeping through the ground.

The potato crop was so enormous last fall that there is no demand. If it were only possible to preserve them, some residents have enough to provide them for another year.

The asparagus geds are showing a rapid growth the past few days and a large bunch may now be bought for 10 cents.

Educational Moving Pictures

OMEMEE, May 28—On Thursday evening last the U.F.O. Hall was almost filled to capacity when Mr. A. A. Knight of Lindsay had consented to provide an evening's entertainment with moving pictures. The first series of pictures was the conservation of forests from fire, and a number of views were shown where much carelessness was enacted on the part of picnic parties, hunters, etc., failing to see that no trace of fire remained when they took their departure. In connection with this picture many interesting views followed showing the process by which the logs are converted into paper, from the forest until they appear in huge rolls ready for shipment.

Corn Borer Film.

The next film dealt with the European corn borer, and while not as enticing a picture to look at, much benefit was derived. For the last five years this nsect has worked great havoc in Western Ontario, having entered the counties which border Lake Ontario, making its first appearance in Elgin County in 1920. Many acres of corn were shown where it had been at work and fields of promise became fields of disappointment. Corn is third in importance of all farm crops. The annual value is $35,000,000. Not alone is it necessary to be preserved for ensilage but for the numerous household commodities which are always in demand.

The corn borer winters in the corn stalk or other refuse, and in order to destroy it all cobs and stubble should be ploughed under or destroyed before June 1st when the moth emerges.

The third series was a comic film entitled, "Max in Love Again," at the conclusion of which a hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Knight for the evening's helpful entertainment, by the chairman, Mr. R. H. Johnston, and heartily endorsed by the large gathering.

BUTTERFAT TEST NOT AFFECTED

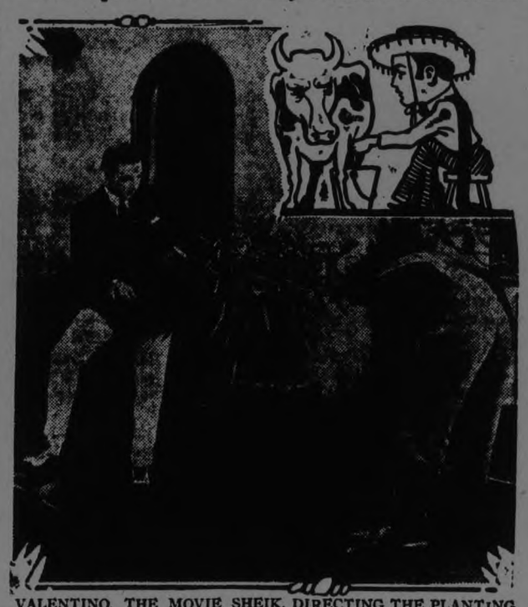
Richness of Cow's Milk is Not Directly Influenced by Diet.

That the richness of a cow's milk is not directly influenced by the kind of feed has repeatedly been demonstrated in experimental tests. It is pointed out that if a cow receives sufficient nutrients to maintain her body weight, the percentage of fat cannot materially change for any considerable period of time by greater or less liberality of feeding or by supplying any particular kind of feed. Cows that are greatly underfed may produce milk somewhat lower in fat percentage than normal. All experiments conducted up to the present time show that there is no positive evidence of any continued direct effect of a feed in stimulating milk production or increasing the percentage of fat. No kind of feed or care will cause a Holstein to give milk rich in fat like the Jersey. However, a cow may be fattened before freshening and caused to milk off this body fat in the first month of lactation, thereby raising the per cent of butterfat in her milk.

KEEP CHICKS BUSY

After chicks have experienced the joy of running about in the open they find confinement on rainy days irksome. In their craving for freedom and exercise they often get into the bad habits of toe picking and cannabalism. Whenever the weather is so bad that chicks have to be confined it is well to furnish exercise by giving them strips of cut up onions. Small strips of white paper also offer them amusement as will also pieces of sod.

Rudolph Valentino, Sheik Farmer.



VALENTINO, THE MOVIE SHEIK, DIRECTING THE PLANTING OF A TREE IN FRONT OF HIS BUNGALOW. BUT HE'S A SPECIALIST IN LIVESTOCK!

Valentino has a degree from the Italian Royal Academy of Agriculture to prove it. In fact, he was graduated with the highest honors in his class.

Furthermore, the star says when he etires from pictures he will buy a California ranch and manage it on a arge scale. Next to acting he likes arming best.

Valentino originally intended to enter the Royal Naval College, but on the day of the examination he was found to be one-half inch shy in his chest expansion. His heart was broken.

"Life was over for me," the star reminisces. "Here I was, 15 and a complete failure. Nothing mattered. No one loved me—no one. Even my mother must be tired of me by this time.

Mother's Advice

"She protested that she had never liked the idea of my becoming a naval officer. Better far that I go to the Royal Academy of Agriculture and study to be a scientific farmer.

"Once again I started forth to school, this time with a high and firm resolve. I would succeed, as my father had commanded. Although I was then entering the love-sick period of life, when a man is liable to play the fool, I feel some satisfaction in the success I really did achieve at the agricultural school from which I was graduated with the highest honors of my class. It gave my mother happiness."

Valentino has continued his love for farming. His particular interest is in cattle breeding and he hopes some day to have a great model farm and experimental station.

When Valentino first came to this country, and long before he ever acted in motion pictures, he worked as the superintendent of a large Long Island estate. At that time he expected to follow agriculture as his life work.

Fate played strange tricks with the young man, however, and he became the screen's premier favorite.

VEGETABLES ON SALE COBOURG

Products of This Spring's Gardens Are Making First Appearance.

GOOD QUALITY

COBOURG, May 28.—Vendors on Cobourg market were alive to the fact that it was gardening time. White beans for planting were 10 cents a pint and butter beans ran about the same. Golden Bantam corn put up in small packets sold for 10 cents. Cabbage plants, asters, balsams, zinnias, pansies, and other flowers, also lettuce and tomatoes sold at 20 cents for a box containing a dozen plants. Wild lilies, and cowslip made up into nosegays retailed at 5 cents a bunch. There were a few apples offered selling at a rate of 50 cents to 60 cents a peck. Potatoes are still a drug on the market, 75 cents a bag was the general price asked. Some of the stores are selling at a similar price in peck lots, and are offering two pecks for 25 cents. There were very few vegetables grown this year year offered and so far onions, rhubarb, are the only offerings from the local gardens. The stores, however, are offering the new vegetables in plenty. Carrots and beets by the bunch are 10 cents, and provide enough for a small family. Cabbage is 8 cents a pound, green beans are 25 cents a pound, lettuce sells from 10 cents a bunch for the leaf lettuce to 25 cents for a large head. New potatoes are selling at five pounds for 25 cents. Strawberries are becoming more plentiful and sell for 30 cents a basket. Pineapples are selling from 20 cents for the small ones to 40 cents for the very large ones, and everywhere one is reminded that this is pineapple week. Home-grown asparagus has made its appearance on the market and sells for 15 cents a bunch, but it is not plentiful. The season has been too cold to produce rapid growth of this edible spring product.

Many farmers were in town when the rain began to fall, but no person grumbled about having to ride home in the wet, for it was felt that rain was needed. A shower or so would satisfy the farmers along the front of the township where lands lie low, while others farther back on the plain lands and lighter soil, would like to see an all-night rain.

Most of the farmers got the crop in the ground this year fully ten days ahead of last year, and are now able to take their time getting the planting ground ready. Most of the grain is up, but is growing very slowly. Pastures, too, are slow coming on. A few have turned their cattle out to graze, but the majority of farmers are feeding them.

The opening of the cheese factories in this district has not influenced the price of butter much. It is still selling from 35 cents to 38 cents. Creamery butter is selling in the stores from 37 cents to 38 cents, and some stores are selling dairy butter for 35 cents, less than was asked on the market. Eggs firmed up a little, 37 cents and 38 cents was the general price, the latter figure is the price asked in the stores for strictly firsts.

It is impossible for healthy forty-eight-hour chicks to drink more sour milk than is good for them.

Spring eggs are best for storing. Waterglass or lime water may be used for storing eggs successfully. For every ten dozen eggs, a three-gallon stone jar and six quarts of preserving liquid will be needed.

BERRY BUSHES ARE IN BLOOM

APPEARANCE GOOD

WARSAW, May 28.—Saturday's rain was a great thing for the hay, and farmers were in hopes the frosts were over, as the rain was a nice, warm one, and there was great growth Friday and Saturday. However, Monday morning there was a heavy hoar frost, and the clover leaves looked more bent than at any previous time. Currants and gooseberries are in blossom, and there are some fears about their standing the frosts.

Not much garden stuff is in yet, though in some places there are onions and some other things up.

On the whole, the general appearance of the country points to good crops, though there has been, and still is, some uneasiness. Expenses of preparing soil and seeding are so heavy that failure means a heavy loss.

Trees are leafing out slowly, wild plum trees are in bloom. The little yellow and purple violets seemed to feel the cold. There are some beautiful wild gardens of white trillium.

Flowers for Farm Garden

ORNAMENTAL GRASSES.

There are few plants that make a better show in the garden than some of the ornamental grasses. The common species M. Senensis is striped, with blade of medium width. Another variety has a narrower blade with a definite white stripe. A third desirable variety, Zebrinces, has a wider blade which has whitish or yellow marks crossing them. All of these varieties are as hardy as orchard grass. They grow rapidly and early in the summer, make a splendid showing on the lawn or in front of a fence. By autumn they hade developed a fine plume like spike from the centre of each stalk. They may be dried and used in the house for winter decoration. The plant should be cut back close to the ground in November and manured plentifully around the plant, but not over the top. No plant in my garden claims more notice than these grasses from July to November. The best collection I have seen of these grasses is on the grounds of the Normal School at London, Ontario. There is also a fine showing of them on the private grounds of Miss Mary Havell, Walkerton, Ontario. They are well worth growing.

WEANING THE PIGS.

A carefully balanced and concentrated ration is necessary for pigs at weaning time. The best weaning age is about eight weeks.

Cotton and corn acreage in Brazil has decreased considerably this year. For cotton, 400,000 acres less. For corn, 2,284,000 acres.

GRAIN IN GOOD SHAPE IN CAVAN; ALFALFA SOWN

Both Spring and Fall Grain Looks Well Despite Frosts.

CATTLE OUT

Farmers Have Let Animals on Pasture Despite Shortness of Grass.

CAVAN, May 28.—In spite of the many heavy frosts the spring grain is looking well. Jas. Paul of the Eighth Line, Cavan, has a field of barley which was sowd before the snowfall. It is three or four inches high and is untouched by the frost.

The fall wheat has improved wonderfully in the last few days and the grass is now making a good growth.

Clover and alfalfa have wintered well. Mr. Richard Matchett, of the Eighth Line, has twelve acres of the latter which is looking well.

Much Alfalfa Sown.

There has been more alfalfa and sweet clover seed sown this spring than ever before, in Cavan.

The cattle are pretty much all turned out to pasture, even though it was short, because farmers were glad to get rid of the extra chores caused by stabling them.

A. J. Fallis, M.P.P., of the Fallis Line, is of the opinion that the hay will not be as long this year on account of the heavy frosts. He states that this has been noticed before, after similar cold weather, late in the spring.

Groundhogs Plentiful.

Groundhogs or woodchucks are unusually plentiful this spring, and unless an effort is made to exterminate them, there will be serious damage done to the crops. They eat the grain and clover as early as it appears, and burrow deeply into the ground, destroying grain in both ways. These holes are a menace to the horses; they are apt to step in them and sprain or hurt themselves when the crop is being harvested. They are also much afraid of these dens when ploughing often, making it a trouble to work a spirited horse in a field infested by them.

Young Pigs Scarce.

There are a number of people inquiring for young pigs to buy. They appear to be scarce.

F. C. Paterson, District Representative for Durham County, sends reports of the week's shipping of hogs and how they are graded to the junior farmers of Cavan. The report fro the week ending April 30 shows a considerably smaller number shipped than for several weeks past and May shows a still smaller number.

Caterpillars Busy.

Now is the season for the caterpilla rs to start their work of destruction on the trees. The tent caterpillars are already forming nests on the trees. Spraying is a good way to get rid of them, but if a man does not spray he can cut or pull them off and burn them.

CATTLE RAISING

A culture that will give cows immunity to contagious abortion has been developed by Dr. Huddleston of Michigan agricultural college. While all the tests of this vaccine have been favorable it is as yet too new to be generally accepted for practical use.

By limiting the time the cows are on pasture for the first few days the cows are turned out, one may reduce the grassy flavor of milk generally reported at this time of the year. A good practice is to take them off of pasture three hours before milking in the afternoon and not let them on at night, at least for the first week.

FREQUENCY OF MILKING

A cow milked three or four times a day gives more milk than if milked but twice, especially if her flow is large so that her udder would be too much distended if she went twelve hours without milking. Under ordinary conditions the usual practice of two milkings a day is sufficient. There are times when three milkings are justified even when the cows are not pushed under official test conditions, but where production of milk for market is the object.

Ordinarily Holsteins will not produce more than fifty or sixty pounds with a twice daily milking. Jerseys or Guernseys will not produce over thirty-five or forty pounds under similar conditions. Cattle capable of producing so much, will give to their full capacity with a third milking, and the amount of milk is held to a high level for alonger period. Experimental tests show that the third milking adds about 10 per cent to the production of cows ranging from forty to fifty pounds, and 20 per cent to those giving about sixty pounds. Where there are many heavy milking cows and other work is not too taxing, a third milking may pay well for the time it tkaes.

CARING FOR PIGS

Pigs which have been receiving grain in a self-feeder prior to weaning time are most easily weaned.

Hogs make slightly more rapid gains and slightly better use of corn when fed in the self-feeder than when fed by hand.

To guard against "bad" udders on brood sows, it is a good practice to allow the pigs to nurse once a day for two or three days following weaning time, and to reduce thebrood sow's feed for a few days at this time.

Pigs should have plenty of exercise and all the feed they will eat from the time they begin to eat until weaned. A good ration for pigs before they are weaned consists of ground corn 60 parts, shorts 30 parts, and tankage 10 parts. This should be mixed and fed dry in a self-feeder. If a self-feeder i snot available, feed all they will clean up three times a day and be sure that they get all the clean fresh water they will drink.

Gypsum Saves Nitrogen Lost From Manure Pits

Gypsum applied to stable floors, gutters back of cattle, or to manure as it is placed in concrete pits, will stop the waste of nitrogen and also prevent that disagreeable odor of ammonia in cow and horse barns. The preservation of nitrogen is brought about thru the property gypsum has of recombining ammonium-carbonate, which is very volatile, into a firmly fixed salt of ammonia (ammonium sulphate). In addition to saving nitrogen, which is worth 30 cents a pound, it improves the sanitary and living conditions of the liyestock, also those in charge, and prevents the odors from being absorbed into the milk. The amount to use ranges from three to five pounds an animal each day, or about 100 pounsd for each ton of manure.

Farm Reports

The following is a summary of reports made by the Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:—

The heavy showers of the week end have been greatly appreciated by farmers as practically all Ontario crops were in need of rain. The cool dry weather has been favorable for farm operations but growth has been retarded. Though frosts have been numerous, no serious damage has been reported. Root crops generally will be planted in well prepared soil as conditions have been excellent for cultivation and the killing of weeds, particularly grasses.

Hog grading and the educational work accompanying it have been responsible for an active interest in the improved type of bacon hog. Boars of approved type are in keen demand and breeding sows from strains which have produced high percentages of selects are being sought.

Sheep are receiving much more attention than formerly and hundreds of community dipping tanks will be added in Ontario Counties this year. The trimming of lambs is much more general this year.

Bruce—Some two or three hundred tons of alfalfa hay will be shipped out to New York State by a local dealer. Very little grain is moving out, owing to the large number of hogs which are being fed this season.

Frontenac—Both alfalfa and red clover look very promising and nearly every instance the ground is well covered. Orchards are just leafing out and promise plenty of bloom. Small fruits never came through the winter in better condition.

Hastings—Seeding is completed throughout the County and some potatoes have been planted. There has been an increase in the acreage of alfalfa and sweet clover sown this spring.

Lennox & Addington—Seeding of spring grains is practically finished and the condition of the soil is a good deal better than it was at the finish of seeding last year. Quite a few farmers are putting in mangels and the ground for these, as well as corn, is being prepared. The acreage of potatoes will be about the same as last year. The ground devoted to alfalfa is much more extensive than heretofore.

Very few farm hands have been available this season, and men that are floating around looking for work, have, as a rule, been so unsatisfactory, that farmers are looking more to Old Country immigrants, having been as a general rule well satisfied with this class of help. Men of this kind have not been coming forward in the usual numbers.

Middlesex—The weather has been very favorable for farm work and a large percentage of the land is ready for corn but most farmers are holding back until about the first of June, although some corn will be planted during the coming week. There is considerable activity in farm drainage. There is a desire among the farmers to sell hogs on grade. This is shown by the fact that three buyers recently signified their intention of buying on grade and also by the number of hogs that are being trucked to th Ingersoll Packing plant.

Oxford—Fall Wheat is turning yellow at root in some cases due to lack of moisture and cool nights. Rain badly needed. Very little growth during the past week.

Prescott & Russell—Bees are doing very well on the dandelion crop. They have wintered satisfactorily and the dry spring has been very favorable to early brooding.

North Simcoe—Alfalfa and Sweet Clover are looking exceedingly good but some catches of red clover are rather uneven. Seeding is practically completed. The spring crops are growing quite slowly although doing better than the grass. Practically all the mangels are now sown and the farmers are preparing their corn ground.

Temiskaming—The continuance of cool, windy weather which has prevailed for some weeks past, has been more or less injurious to bee-keepers, some bee-keepers are complaining of quite a heavy winter loss, and dwindling in the hives, since bees were put out in the yard. Systematic feeding has been necessary in some apiaries.

GARDENERS BUSY AROUND BONAR LAW

Many People Are Setting Out New Strawberry Plants.

BONAR LAW, May 28. — Spring seeding is finished and the planting ground is ready for the hoe crop. The rain of Saturday has greatly improved everything. Some report their strawberries in full bloom. There are a great many setting out strawberry plants this year on a small scale, just enough for home consumption. The gardens are mostly all in. One farmer's wife has sold a large quantity of tomato plants that she grew in window boxes. They were fully as nice as those grown in the hot houses.

LEGUME SILAGE IS BETTER IF IT HAS BEEN WILTED

Tests at Experimental Farm Show Benefit of Letting Stand.

FULL BLOOM ALFALFA

Better Silage Than Alfalfa Cut at Earlier Stage of Maturity.

Silage from legume crops or mixtures of legumes and cereals appears to be of a much more desirable quality if these crops are wilted for several hours before ensiling. The wilting of alfalfa, in particular, seems to be essential, if good silage is to be made.

Alfalfa, sweet clover and a mixture of oats, peas and vetches were stored at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, in small wooden silos during the summer of 1924. Each silo was 6 feet high, 3 feet in diameter and held approximately half a ton. The various trials with these crops, which occupied 21 silos, included cutting at different stages of maturity, ensiling before and after wilting and storing for periods of three, six and nine months. The silos were opened during the winter of 1924-25 and the silage was in every respect comparable to that which is produced in large farm silos.

The results of one year's work, though not conclusive, indicate that the stage of maturity and the amount of moisture in these crops at the time of ensiling have an important bearing on the silage produced, the reduction of the original moisture content of the crops by wilting showing the greatest benefit.

There seems to be a greater likelihood of securing a desirable silage from full bloom alfalfa than from this crop cut at an earlier stage of maturity. There is an advantage in cutting sweet clover when the flower buds are well formed but before the crop blooms because there is a greater probability of securing a second cutting if the crop is moved at this stage than if let go until the full bloom stage, although the silage from full bloom sweet clover was just as good as that from the crop cut in the bud stage. Silage of good quality was secured from oats, peas and vetches ensiled when the oats were in the milk and in the dough stages, but the later stage or just when the oats show the first signs of turning appears to be the most desirable time to cut this crop.

From alfalfa which had been mowed when one-tenth in bloom and wilted in the sun for at least five hours or for a relatively longer period if the sun was not shining, a fairly good silage was secured, while full bloom alfalfa wilted in a similar manner gave a silage of better quality and of considerably great palatability. Alfalfa ensiled immediately after cutting, no matter what was the stage of maturity, gave an undesirable and unpalatable silage. The wilting of sweet clover and oats, peas and vetches for several hours resulted too, in the production of a type of silage which was somewhat more palatable than that produced by the unwilted material.

The length of the period of storage appeared to have little effect upon the silage which was produced.

MIXED FARMING IS ON INCREASE

Western Farmers Are Developing Livestock Raising and Dairying.

C.N.R. SUMMARY

Livestock raising and dairying is on the increase in the three prairie provinces, according to a report issued by the Canadian National Railways which is based on replies to a brief questionnaire sent to all station agents on the Company's lines in the West. While some few points report fewer livestock being handled, the majority of districts report increases both in winter feeding and in dairying. Higher grain prices and good crops in Manitoba last year had a tendency to make farmers in some isolated districts sell their milking cows and also to sell their grain rather than to feed it to cattle during the winter, but districts where mixed farming is practised show increases in both winter feeding and dairying, the latter in some cases running as high as 100 per cent over a year ago. Feed supplies are reported good everywhere but warm weather and rain are needed to bring along the pastures for summer feed. Stock wintered in good shape with the exception of some Saskatchewan districts where feed was scarce. At almost all points, high grain prices are against any increase in hog raising this year.

The seeding of fodder crops is more general this year than last and in many cases grass seed attachments are being used on seed drills for the sowing of clover and other forage crops. Many districts report a notable increase in pure bred stock during the past year and the tendency would seem to be to get rid of scrubs, in many cases. One Saskatchewan agent reports eleven pure-bred bulls shipped to his station during the last two weeks for her improvement, while a number of shipments of dairy cows are also reported.

CANADA'S WOOL CLIP

Western Canada realized $631,000 from its wool clip last year. This from 2,690,000 pounds of wool.

PREVENT THE PESTS

Poultry owners should practice prevention, rather than cure, to keep their flocks free from lice and mites. Cleaning and spraying are essential. Infested birds should be treated and isolated for a while.

SWANSTON'S DOUBLE IN THE NINTH SCORED WINNING RUNS FOR PETES AFTER TRUNKS HAD NOSED AHEAD

Thrilling Finish to First Local Game of Season Opened by Mayor Turner.

HARRISON'S HOMER

(By F. D. C.)

Max Swanston's "Washington" double which bounded over shortstop Weir's head and rolled merrily out in left field while Red Legon and Ray Rose carried the tieing and winning runs over the plate, furnished a fitting ninth inning climax to last evening's Central Ontario League opener with Belleville, which the Petes won from their ancient foemen by 6 runs to 5.

It was the sort of finish that sends the home fans home happy.

There were really two ball games. The first was packed into the first seven innings which saw Frank Whitehouse, the Petes' youthful southpaw, hold the hard-hitting Railroaders to three singles and one unearned run, while Manager Johnston's home talent had nicked four clean counters off the slow and left-handed slants of Chuck Jeffrey.

The second started in the eighth when the fighting visitors, in one of those sudden onslaughts that have won so many ball games for them, broke through Whitehouse's delivery for four bunched hits, following his only charity of the game and added and abetted by a dropped fly ball by Red Legon, a very rare phemomentum, gathered in four runs and took the lead by 5 to 4.

Then came the Petes' quickly staged rally in the ninth, winding up as described by Swanston cutting a sharp grounder at Weir which hopped high over the short stop's thatch and with it hopped the ball game.

A Good Start.

Last night's game was a suitable introduction for what promises to be a most successful local season.

The fans got their money's worth.

In addition to seeing some excellent pitching by Whitehouse, a number of sparkling fielding plays by both teams, and the home team come from behind to win out in the ninth, they had the additional thrill of seeing "Hap" Harrison crack out the longest home run in the history of the local Central Ontario League games.

That ball was "hit"—and we don't mean perhaps.

The big first baseman, the first man to face Jeffrey in the fourth, took a vicious swing at the initial offering and missed.

There was no miss on the second ball, Harrison connecting cleanly and driving the Spalding ten feet over the top of Louis Yeotes' sign on the left field fence.

He started round the bases at top speed but slowed up when he realized the ball was out of the lot and galloped home amid wild acclaim.

It was a rap worthy of Babe Ruth or Long George Kelly.

Whitehouse's Debut.

The young left-hander held Belleville to seven singles, gave but one base on balls and retired ten of the visitors via the strike out route, Hagerman whiffing three times. Outside of the eighth innings when the Railroaders bunched four of their hits and the fourth when they scored their first counter Whitehouse had the enemy well in hand, showing nice control, plenty of speed and an effective curve.

Opposed to him was Jeffrey, another portsider, who has been on the Belleville staff for several seasons, but through Oulette's fondness for the limelight got little chance to go to the firing line. When the game opened Jeffrey had about as much speed as the first Ford car but he improved as he went along and made a good showing with the assistance of clean cut fielding by his teammates. In fact the southpaw was the only member of his team to make a boot, gumming up three plays.

Some Good Fielding.

While the Petes' error column does not indicate the fact that they did some excellent defensive work. Wolfe's fielding in right stood out. Rose had a pretty running stop that cut Weir out of a hit and Holyman contributed some nice fielding at short. Harry Mills for the visitors had several nice catches of high twisting flies while Ross, after nearly missing a high fly from Swanston, made a fine grab of a hard hit ball.

Mayor J. J. Turner and Ald. Mel Turner, chairman of the City's Park Committee, participated in the ceremonies that opened the season. The Mayor appeared in the capacity of batter while the Parks chairman acted as pitcher. With the count 3 and 2 on him His Worship took a fast ball in the slats—and the ceremonies were over.

Whitehouse got away to a great start by fanning Verne Weir and "Wicky" Ross while Peeney Mills was neatly tossed out by Holyman.

Scored in the First.

The Petes opened out on Jeffrey in business like fashion. Legon dropped a single into left, Rose sacrificed him to second and Swanston lined a single over second, scoring Legon and going to second on the throw to the plate. Harrison rolled to Weir and Helson fanned.

In round two Hagerman registered the first of his three strike outs. Harry Mills met one on the nose but Wolfe made a sparkling catch and Meagher died on a running catch of a foul fly to Helson.

The home talent also expired harmlessly, Wolfe being tossed out by Harris, Hall lining to Hagerman and Holyman lofting to Weir.

Whitehouse got out of a hole in the third. Casey, first up, was safe when Rose, after a fine stop, made a bad throw to Harrison. Harris bunted for a sacrifice but Whitehouse threw high to second and both runners were safe. Jeffrey, however, fanned. Rose went over fast and smothered Weir's grounder and Holyman tossed out Ross.

For the Petes Whitehouse got a life on Jeffrey's fumble. Legon was called out for being hit by a ball off his own bat. Rose fanned and Swanston flied to Hagerman.

Peeney Mills led off for Belleville in the fourth with a single through short, the first hit off Whitehouse. Hagerman fanned. Harry Mills boomed a fly to Hall and after Helson had lost Meagher's roller Casey hit to Hoylman, forcing Meagher at second.

Harrisons' Homer.

Harrison's mammoth homer opened the Petes' half. Helson flied to Harris, Wolfe was called out on strikes, Hall was hit and Holyman fanned.

The fifth saw Belleville break into the scoring column. Harris fanned but Jeffrey hit to Helson, whose throw to first was wide. Weir singled to left centre and Ross laid down a bunt intended for a sacrifice but which turned into a hit when Whitehouse went to make the play at third and then threw to first too late to get the runner. With the bases crowded W. Mills drove a long fly to Wolfe, Jeffrey scoring after the catch. Hagerman fanned for the third time in succession.

The homesters took that one back in their end of the frame. Whitehouse fouled to Harry Mills but Legon singled to left and Rose lined another single to centre on which Legon hustled round to third while Rose reached second on the throw to get "Red." Swanston's hard sacrifice fly to Ross scored Legon. Harrison was passed purposely but Rose was picked off third to end the party.

The visitors were harmless in the sixth. Harry Mills gave Wolfe another fly and Meagher and Casey fanned.

Harris opened the seventh with a pop fly to Whitehouse, Jeffrey fanned and Weir flied to Legon.

For the Petes Legon was thrown out by Meagher, Rose was hit and Swanston singled to center. Harrison lifted one to H. Mills which the first baseman went out into right field after, Rose going to third after the catch. Helson struck out.

Belleville's Big Rally.

Then came Belleville's big rally. Ross started things by working Whitehouse for a pass. Peeney Mills flied to Wolfe but Hagerman dropped a single into left and Harry Mills singled sharply to center, scoring Ross. Meagher singled on a slow roller to short, filling the bases. Holyman made a fine play on Casey's tap throwing Hagerman out at the plate, and with two out the fans breathed easier. Harris, however, sewed up the game with a timely single to left on which H. Mills and Meagher scored. Then Jeffrey cracked a drive to left which Legon dropped after a run and Casey went home with the run that put Belleville in the lead. Weir raised a high one to Legon.

Heckman batted for Wolfe in the Petes half and reached first when Jeffrey momentarily fumbled his tap. Hall sacrificed him to second but Holyman's drive to left was grabbed by Hagerman and Weir tossed out Whitehouse.

Ross, first up for Belleville in the ninth, was safe on Holyman's fumble and W. Mills sacrificed, nearly beating Helson's throw out for a hit. Hagerman hoisted to Rose and W. Mills flied to Legon.

A Fine Finish.

The Petes lost no time in winning out. Legon drew a walk. Rose bunted for a sacrifice but Jeffrey made a wild throw past Mills and Legon went to third and Rose to second. A moment later came Swanston's Harris-McNeely double and the game was over.

SPORT GOSSIP AND COMMENT.

Last night's exciting win puts the Petes in second place, a half game behind the Ponies, and Manager Johnston's crew can strengthen their hold on that position by beating Oshawa in the Motor Town on Saturday.

* * * * * * * * *

Swanston was the Petes' hitting hero last night, in spite of Harrison's spectacular homer. The backstop drove in four of the home talent's counters, while Harrison and Holyman supplied the punch for the other two.

* * * * * * * * *

The Mills brothers kept shelling the outfield all night, trying to find a weak spot. Harry hit two flies to Wolfe, one to Hall and one to Legon, while Peeney drove two to Wolfe.

* * * * * * * * *

You have to hand it to this Belleville crew. They never give up the ship, and no matter how the game looks are never beaten until the final out is registered. They looked to be sunk without a trace until the eighth inning last night.

* * * * * * * * *

Hap Harrison shares with Peeney Mills the honour of being the only Central Ontario Leaguers to put a homer over the left field fence. And Harrison's drive at that was longer by many feet than the homer Mills made here last season.

* * * * * * * * *

The Central Ontario League hitters are not exactly fattening their extra base records against the Petes' pitching staff. In three games but one extra base hit has been registered, Cherry of Kingston getting a double off Whitehouse in the first game at Kingston.

* * * * * * * * *

Max Swanston with a .500 average, Red Legon with .425, Hap Harrison with .400 and Herb Wolfe with .375 are setting the pace for the Petes in the club-swinging department. The first three have hit safely in all three games played.

* * * * * * * * *

* * * * * * * * *

Umpire Geo. Sullivan and Manager Johnston had a very animated debate over Legon being called out in the third inning. The argument of the Petes' pilot was audible, but His Umps did most of his repartee in pantomime, winding up by waving "Shiner" back to the coaching box.

* * * * * * * * *

In the early stages Jeffrey looked to be giving an imitation of a slow motion picture of a ball game. But the Belleville southpaw kept the Petes from staging any big innings at that.

* * * * * * * * *

Whadd'ye mean youth must be served? Here's Shiner Johnston scoring from second on an infield single and Ty Cobb breaking the lifetime record for extra base hits.

* * * * * * * * *

* * * * * * * * *

The Belleville Ontario declares that "Jakie" Solomon himself couldn't give any pointers to Shiner Johnston when it comes to crabbing. It is not quite clear whether this was intended for a knock or a boost.

* * * * * * * * *

They say this three-umpire system in the American League is working out well. Two burglars and a lookout, as it were.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

At the finish of the forward swing the right toe should have a hold on the ground at exactly the place it met the ground during the address and back swing — just as the left toe holds onto the ground in the back swing. Often the golfer lets his right foot come off the ground altogether in the forward swing. This indicates, usually, that he is pushing with his body instead of with the clubhead. Looseness in the right foot's action in the forward swing should be avoided. This foot pressing against the ground gives the shoulders and upper body a fulcrum against which they turn. Keep the right foot in place as you would if you were swinging a stone on a rope.

RAIN SPOILED DAY AT EPSOM

AN EASY TRIUMPH

EPSOM DOWNS, England, May 28.—(Canadian Press).—Manna, by Phalaris out of Waffles, and owned by H. E. Morriss, won the Derby yesterday. Steve Donoghue had the mount and passed the winning post full eight lengths in advance of a field of 28 runners winning for the sixth time this most highly coveted of English turf classics.

Donoghue pushed his mount in front from the start and kept him there, even rounding the difficult Tattenham Corner with such ease that he completed the mile and a half course pulling up, while those behind him were using whip and heels.

The much fancied Zionist of H. H. Aga Khan, was second, and two lengths further back in third place came The Sirdar, the entry of A. K. Macomber. The time for the distance was 2 minutes 40 3-5 seconds.

Lord Astor's Cross Bow which reigned favorite for the last week, and Lord Derbys' Conquistador, second favorite, and the French hope Ptolemy II, Runnymede and others fought for places, but the soft track kept them well in the rear.

A drenching rain had softened the course and the going was heavy. This favored Manna and the second and third horses, which had shown they were good on sticky ground. Dalmagarry was away first, but Manna joined him and they ran together for the first three furlongs. Then Manna got to the rail and took a good lead before the half mile. Conquistador, Warminster, Zionist and The Sirdar fought evenly up the hill at Tattenham but the soft turf was not to their liking and Conquistador and Warminster fell back. From then on the race was largely a procession.

The rains which fell overnight and all day upset the calculations of the experts and Manna suffered the early morning indignity of being reduced from second to third favorite.

Long before the start of the Derby stakes all points of vantage were taken up by thousands, who stood for hours in the downpour for a chancers to glimpse the horses flying past. Hundreds of hawkers and sideshows, which are always prominent on Epsom Downs on Derby Day, were absent because of the heavy rain, but good profits were forthcoming for those thus cheated of their usual labor, in pulling hundreds of motors out of the thick mud on Surrey Downs.

The King and Queen saw the race and watched the King's entry Runnymede go down to defeat. The pomp and display of the usual parade before the grandstands were lacking, as the parade was abandoned. The owner of Manna, Mr. Morriss, ran out of the grandstand at the finish and eagerly led his mount, with Donoghue up, through the crowds to the Royal stand, where the King offered congratula-

SKEETERS HELPED

Won Second Game of Double Header With Baltimore—Buffalo Move Up.

TORONTO, May 27.—Brilliant fielding behind the erratic pitching of "Hoot" Gibson saved the day for the Leafs and they defeated Rochester by 8 to 4, and ran their winning streak up to fifteen consecutive games. The Tribe gathered fourteen hits off Gibson but the Leafs' infield executed four double plays and killed the Tribe's chances of taking a commanding lead.

Gehringer was the batting hero, getting doubles in the fourth and fifth innings, when the Leafs scored one and five runs respectively. The score:

Rochester ....000200020—	4	14	0
Toronto.... ....00015020x—	8	11	1

Moore and Head; Gibson and Manion.

Birds Break Even.

JERSEY CITY, May 27.—By coming through with a victory in the second game of to-day's double header by a score of 4 to 3, after losing the opener to Baltimore, 10 to 6, the Jersey City Skeeters pulled the Orioles from the lead of the league, a position they had occupied even since the start of the season. The Toronto club now leads in the standing. Scores:

First Game:

Earnshaw and McCarthy; Keifer and Freitag.

Buffalo Win Two

BUFFALO, May 27. — Buffalo gathered in a double header at the expense of Syracuse, the scores being 5 to 3 in the first, and 3 to 1 in the second, an affair to seven innings. Both Fisher and Maley held the hits down to a few. Kelly hit a homer in the first half, Anderson in the last half, the latter with Spencer on second. Holm made five of this team's ten safe hits. The scores:

First Game:

Syracuse.. ....000000030—	3	5	0
Buffalo ....00030002x—	5	10	2

Reading Win Twice.

READING, Pa., May 27.—Reading won two tight pitching duels from Providence today by scores of 2 to 1, and 2 to 0. Hankins and Schroeder for Reading and Tomlin and Swaney for the visitors all pitched good ball. A high fly that was lost in the sun by Kane resulted in the winning run in the first game. Score:

First Game:

Providence .. ....000100000—	1	7	0

SCHOOL GAME WON BY CENTRAL

Beat Prince of Wales Boys 20-9 in Fine Game.

OTHER DEFAULTED.

On Wednesday afternoon the baseball team of the Prince of Wales Public school journeyed to Central Public school, where a hot battle took place. Some very good material was witnessed on both sides and the game was a treat from start to finish. Although both put up a good fight, Central school walked off with the honours with the score of 20-9. The line-ups were as follows:

Prince of Wales— c. Cotton; p, Holmes; 1b., Craig; 2b., Lucas; s.s., Holingsworth; 3b., Wilson; r.f., Rightmeyer; c.f., Golden; l.f., Cuthbertson.

No Umpire Available.

A game was scheduled for yesterday between Queen Mary and King George Public schools at the King George school grounds, but King George were unable to secure an umpire and Queen Mary took the game by default.

PETERSEN SAYS HE MADE MONEY CHARGING HALF COMBINE FARES

Says Frills on Steamers Increase Costs to Canadian Shipper.

TELLS OF CONTRACT.

Could Carry Immigrants Today For $40 or $45 With Profit.

OTTAWA, May 28 (Canadian Press).—Sir William Petersen gave evidence before the ocean rates committee of the House of Commons later today.

Last year, said Sir William, Mr. Preston came to him in the London and told him of the Canadian Government's desire to secure control of ocean rates. Four days later, Sir William said he met Hon. T. A. Low, Minister of Trade and Commerce. The witness outlined a possible contract. Mr. Low, Sir William said, asked to have the matter stand over until he could consult his colleagues. Sir William was called to Ottawa, he said, where the contract for subsidizing a fleet of ten ships was signed.

Mr. Preston had nothing whatever to do with the contract. Sir William said he had nothing to do with the writing of the Preston report. A. R. McMaster, chairman of the committee, asked Sir William to speak about the North Atlantic conference.

Sir William explained the present higher steamship rates of Canada on the ground of "frills." He gave, as an example, the Urania, which cost one million pounds and was launched last year. Such vessels, he said, with gymnasium and nurseries were bound to charge high rates.

"Who has to pay?"

"Why, of course, the Canadian shipper," he said.

If the service was confined to the idea of cargo ships with a fair immigrant accommodation, they "could beat them all."

Sir William said he had carried immigrants in 1907, 1908, and 1909 for three pounds ten shillings, while the conference rates were seven pounds, and at that rate he made money.

He could, he said, carry immigrants today for eight or nine pounds in good, clean reasonable accommodation.

CANADA BETTER THAN AUSTRALIA

W. J. Egan Says Cheaper Rate Would Bring Increased Immigration.

OTTAWA, May 28. — (Canadian Press).—W. J. Egan, Deputy-Minister of Immigration and Colonization, was called before the Ocean Rates Committee as a witness this morning and, under examination of H. J. Symington, Government counsel gave evidence as to regulations respecting accommodation for immigrants on ocean vessels. There had been no change in the Canadian regulations since 1906. Under examination, Mr. Egan said that Canada had always led Australia in matters of immigration. In 1924 more than 33,000 came to Canada, while 38,000 went to Australia. Those coming to Canada were domestics and farm laborers, while those going to Australia covered a variety of occupations. They too received an outright grant.

"In my opinion there is no doubt about it that a cheaper rate would bring an increased immigration," said the Deputy-Minister.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

HISTORIC MONUMENT

To The Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir.—It will be of interest to the readers of your most respected paper to read of the unveiling of a historic monument, to take place at Bewdley, Ontario, ten miles north of Port Hope on the Peterboro Highway, Sunday, June 7, at 2.30 p.m.

G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., Deputy Speaker at Ottawa, will officiate and unveil the stone. Other prominent men who will take part in the service are: Hon. J. Thompson, Speaker of the Ontario Legislature; Hon. H. A. Ward, of Port Hope; His Worship, the Mayor of Port Hope, Mr. T. B. Chalk; His Worship, M. J. J. Turner, Mayor of Peterboro, and Council; Reeve and Council of Township of Hamilton; Reeve and Council of the Township of Hope.

The Port Hope Citizens' Band, under the direction of Mr. L. F. Unit, assisted by Christian Workers' Orchestra, of Toronto, will furnish the music. Dinner will be served to those participating, at noon. Open air service, led by a leading clergyman, and special soloists at 1.30 p.m.

The monument is to perpetuate the name of one of Bewdley's residents, who did a kind and noble act for a certain family and whose name was changed by Common Law, Royal License and Private Act of Parliament given out from the Thron by Henry I., 1106. The stone also bears a well-known hymn: "In the Christian's Home in' Glory," modified by the late Joseph Scriven, author of "What a Friend We Have in Jesus."

An invitation is extended to all who can possibly attend. Come, bring the family and spend the afternoon, amid prayer, song and good music.

Yours very truly,
H. L. WHITE,
Private Secretary.
Christian Workers' Tabernacle.

Ottawa, May 27th, 1925.

Editor, The Examiner.
Peterborough, Ontario:

Dear Sir,—I observed in yesterday's Examiner the criticism by the Orange Young Britons of the Prime Minister for the House of Commons adjourning on Ascension Day, and sitting on Victoria Day.

During the Conservative regime under Sir John A. Macdonald, as well as in the time of other Governments, the House has adjourned Ascension Day always; and this year the House adjourned over Ascension Day with the unanimous consent of the members of the House, including the Conservative Opposition, and Mr. Meighen.

I might add that the British House of Commons sits regularly on Victoria Day, and frequently sits on the King's birthday, to transact its business; and one would really think that the Mother of Parliaments would be the most patriotic and loyal of all the Parliaments of the Empire.

Let me add that when it was intimated that the House would sit on Victoria Day this year, not one single Conservatve member objected to it, not even Mr. H. C. Hocken, M.P., and it was, without objection, agreed to sit on Victoria Day, in order to save the country many thousands of dollars in the transaction of the public business; and having the unanimous consent of the Conservative Opposition, the Government, of course, thought that sitting on Victoria Day would not be very seriously objected to by those anxious to save the country's money.

Yours truly,
G. N. GORDON.

ACROSS CANADA AND BACK

The wonder trip of the coming summer will be conducted by Dean Laird of Macdonald College, to Victoria, B.C. and back.

Inspired by the success of the trip to Victoria last year on the occasion of the Teachers' Federation meeting at that point, and filled with patriotic motives for everyone to see their own country, the Dean has arranged for a special train of standard sleeping cars to leave Toronto on July 20, visiting Port Arthur, Fort William, Winnipeg, Regina, Moose Jaw, Calgary, Banff, Lake Louise, Vancouver, thence steamer to Victoria.

Returning, the trip will be via the Okanagan Valley, Nelson, the Kootenay Lakes, Windermere Bungalow, Camp from which place the party will be motored to Banff, 104 miles over the newly completed Banff-Windermere Highway, the most charming, and awe inspiring trip it is possible to conceive, with stops at Radium Hot Springs, Vermilion River, the Storm Mountain Bungalow Camps—another day at Banff, then Edmonton, Saskatoon, Devil's Gap, Bungalow Camp, near Kenora on the Lake of the Woods steamer from Fort William, to Port McNicoll, thence rail to Toronto, where the trip will terminate on August 10.

Everything is included at the price of $325.00 from Toronto transportation, sleeping cars, accomodation in hotels and bungalow camps, meals in diners, hotels, and on steamers, sightseeing tours at points visited, and all gratuioies.

All will be wecome.

Fare from other points than Toronto will be named, and descriptive illustrated booklet sent on application to Dean Laird, Macdonald College, P.O., Que.

ANNUAL MEETING ST. JAMES' CHURCH

Reports of Organizations and Splendid Musical Programme Fill Evening.

The annual congregational meeting of St. James' Methodist Church was held last evening, with a splendid attendance. The pastor, Rev. J. D. Richardson, presided. Reports of various church organizations were given, all very optimistic in character and showing in every instance, an increase over the previous year. These included annual reports by the Mission Band, the Mission Circle, the Women's Missionary Society, the Young People's League, the Coghnawaga Young Men's Club, the Sunday School, the Ladies' Aid Society, the pastor, the treasurer of the church, and the envelope committee.

Reading of the reports was interspersed by an enjoyable musical programme, which included a violin solo by C. Rusaw, vocal solos by Mrs. E. Kitney, selections by a vocal male quartette, composed of Messrs. Williams, Pratt, T. Williams and Chenhall; pianoforte duetts by the Misses Florence Saunders and Mary Wood, Greta Welbourn and Amy Fairbrother, and a Glee chorus, entitled "Moonlight," by the choir.

Following the business session was a delightful social half hour, when refreshments were served by the men of the official board.

THEATRES

"THE HUNTED WOMAN" LIKENED TO STORY OF SAND CAVE INCIDENT.

If James Oliver Curwood had not written "The Hunted Woman" some time ago, people might readily believe that the scene in the mine, where Joanne Gray and John Aldous are imprisoned by a landslide of rock and earth was based on the recent account of Floyd Collins' entombment in Sand Cave, Kentucky. The occurrence of this event in actual life, in almost the same manner as Curwood had previously related it, serves to emphasize the visualizing power possessed by the author.

There is, however, one difference. In Kentucky, Collins' sweetheart was separated from him by the same obstruction that kept him captive on the day when they had planned to be married. The two characters in "The Hunted Woman," transposed to the screen by William Fox, are held together by falling tons of debris. Until that time no word of love had passed between them. Let's see what happens to them in the film.

The oxygen in the small chamber is slowly being used up; hope is fading as their candle dims; they are facing the end. It seems as if centuries are dragging heavily across their eyelids. The flickering light lessens and the darkness creeps in closer. Shadows grow deeper and an invisible force seems to be tightening its tentacles around their throats. They fall unconscious. Time goes on.

A thin beam of light — slowly it increases—then a patch of sunshine, lifegiving sunshine. The air is coming through in pleasant draughts; sweet, invigorating. Help had come at last. This is one of the biggest moments in the screen creation. Then follows their wedding — but the greatest obstacle enters their lives after the marriage. That furnishes the surprise of the story. To tell it here would spoil the enjoyment of those who intend to see "The Hunted Woman" at the Capitol Theatre to-day.

AT THE ROYAL.

AMATEUR NIGHT TO-NIGHT AT ROYAL.

The usual number of new faces and talent will make their bow before the footlights at the Royal to-night. Amateur night always means a big crowd, and patrons are advised to arrive early in order to secure the best seats.

"Young Ideas," guaranteed to be as sprightly as it sounds, is the film attraction at the Royal Theatre today, when Universal presents the third of the Laura La Plante starring features. The story is by Sophie Kerr, popular fictionist, and was scenarized by Hugh Hoffman and directed by Robert F. Hill, the men who made Miss La Plante's first two starring successes, "Excitement" and "The Dangerous Blonde."

The story concerns a young girl with old ideas, the mainstay of her family, who is so good natured she continues to support her relatives even after it is apparent they are simply "sponging" off her salary. She even does the work around the house. But a young man in love with her did wonders by the simple expedient of getting her into another house and then having the house quarantined, thus leaving the poor relatives to shift for themselves in the cold, hard world.

AT THE REGENT

"ON THIN ICE"

"Texas Kid," the well-known light-weight boxer, has a part in 'On Thin Ice," the powerful drama of the underworld, playing at the Regent Theatre.

This is a Warner Brothers "Classic of the Screen."

"On Thin Ice," the crook drama of San Francisco's underworld, now playing at the Regent Theatre, is said to be one of the pictures that keeps movie patrons in suspense as to the final outcome. This Warner 'Classic of the Screen" is a genuine thriller and mystifier.

Wilfred North, playing the banker "On Thin Ice," the Warner "Classic of the Screen," was selected from among thirty applicants.

The requirements were quite strict, the role calling for a man whose outward bearing would impress the banking public and who, at the same time, would be craftily arranging to steal their savings. Mr. North fulfilled these qualifications.

THREE HOUSES LOST IN FIRE

DAMAGE $25,000.

MONTREAL, May 28—(Canadian Press).—Fire which broke out last night and for a while threatened the village of St. Jacques Le Mineur, near St. John's, Que., destroyed three houses and a store, doing damage estimated at $25,000, partly covered by insurance. The flames were first noticed in the house of G. Hamel, and spread rapidly to his store, destroying both. The houses of P. Demars and R. Lussier were burned up before the fire was checked.

FINE PICTURES FOR CITY UNIT

WAR SCENES.

The Fifty-seventh Chapter of the Independent Order of Daughters of the Empire is presenting three very fine pictures to the officers' mess of the Peterboro Rangers.

Each of the three reproductions shows interesting phases of the Great War. One is called Canada's Grand Armada leaving Gaspe Bay, the original of which was painted by Frederick S. Challender, depicting a long line of battleships leaving the estuary of the St. Lawrence, accompanied by transports. Twenty-five ships may be seen depicted. The picture represents the sailing of Canada's first expeditionary force which departed for England in October, 1914, and which actually consisted of thirty-one transports, twenty battleships and carried 32,000 officers and men.

Another picture gives a wonderfully realistic conception of aerial warfare. It is titled "War in the Air," and originally painted by C. A. W. Nevinson.

Three German war doves are shown battling with one lone allied plane. One of the German planes is shown plunging to the earth below. The cloud effects are exceptionally well done.

In the background of the picture the Huns are outlined against the sky in preparation for a concerted attack.

The Canadians are shown, many of them wounded, and many stretched on the ground, while others bend over the rapid fire guns, determination and fortitude in evidence in each tense line.

Two of the pictures are framed in walnut with a dull oil finish, while that framing the Defence of Sanctuary Wood is contained in a mahogany frame of a dull finish.

Each has a brass title plate and the badge of the I.O.D.E. mounted on the frame.

FINANCIAL NEWS.

General Recession On Toronto Stock Market

TORONTO, May 28. — Trade was not so good on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning. B. C. Fish with approximately 325 shares changing hands closed 1-8 higher at 38. Dominion Canners suffered a loss of 1½ points at 99 3-4; Brazilian was active but cased off 1-8 at 53 1-2; Canada Bread also lost a point at 106. Sales book closed unchanged at 50 1-2. Twin City gained 3-8 at 69 7-8, while Winnipeg rails lost half at 47; C P R lost 1½ at 143 1-2.

Speculative Sentiment Chilled By Fluctuations

NEW YORK, May 28. — Erratic fluctuations in Maxwell B certificates which soared 9½ points to 113 1-2 and then broke precipitately to 103 1-2 in Wall street to-day, later chilled speculative sentiment, and caused general reactions of 1 to 2 points on hasty profit taking trading in Maxwell Junior shares which was suspended on the stock exchange because of the reduced supply of the stock, called for deposit under recapitalization plan, and transactions were confined to certificates. Constructive interests subsequently marshalled their forces and came to the support of public utilities, merchandizing and chain stores issues, and toward noon the entire market was again tending upward. Before mid-day gains of 2½ to 4 points had been registered by American Can-Nash Motors, Sears Roebuck, Shattuck stores and Robert Reis first preferred. Call money renewed at 4 points.

Chicago Wheat Market Declines and Advances

CHICAGO, May 28. — Although wheat showed early declines in prices here to-day the market soon rallied and scored something of an advance Lower quotations at Liverpool had a depressing effect at first and so too did the somewhat better conditions in the United States. Crop damage reports from Kansas led to renewed buying and took a general upturn in values. The opening, 3-8 to 1 3-4c lower. May 1.70 and July 1.62 to 1.52 3-4, was followed by an irregular rise to 1.71 7-8 for May and 1.63 3-4 for July.

Corn lacked aggressive support. After opening at 1-8 off to 1-4c up July 117 1-2 to 117 3-4, the market sagged all around and was slow to react.

Oats traders took their cue from wheat. Starting unchanged at 1-4c lower, July 45 5-8 to 45 3-4c. Oats later showed a moderate general gain Provisions went up-grade in line with higher quotations on hogs

Winnipeg Grain Jumps On Adverse U. S. Reports

WINNIPEG, May 28. — Reports of extensive crop deterioration throughout the United States coupled with a lack of export demand brought about a sharp advance in price of May delivery wheat on the Grain Exchange to-day. The present month closed at $1.98, reflecting a gain of 5 1-8c from the previous finish. The strength was imparted to all markets, with July up 3¼c at 1.81 1-4, and Oct. 3 3-4c higher at $1.52.

FRENCH FORCES NOT TO BE USED FOR CONQUEST

Premier Says No Person Has Greater Horror of War.

ALL FOR DEFENCE.

Sovereignty in North Africa is at Stake and Must be Defended.

PARIS, May 28 (Canadian Press) —Premier Painleve, replying to interpellations in the Chamber of Deputies today, said no persons in the world have more horror of war than do the members of his government.

"Not a sou and not one single soldier will be sacrificed for conquest, but all the forces of France will be used for her defence," he said. "French sovereignty in Northern Africa is at stake," declared the Premier. "That sovereignty, given by treaties, France will defend to the uttermost. It is a national question; it is the whole colonial tradition of France that is at stake."

Premier Painleve announced to the Chamber that the French losses in the Riffian war were 400 killed and 1,100 wounded and 35 missing, one third of the casualties being French and the remainder Senegalese. The figures cover the losses since the beginning of the recent operations.

TEACHER HONORED ON HER BIRTHDAY

Onward Class of George Street Held Social Evening for Mrs. J. Stubbs.

A most enjoyable evening was spent last night at the home of Mrs. Curvin, 747 Water Street, when about 30 young ladies of the Onward Bible Class of George Street Methodist Church gathered to do honor to their teacher, Mrs. Jas. Stubbs, on the occasion of her birthday. The young ladies assembled about 8 o'clock, and at 8.15 one of the ladies secured the services of a local automobile and Mrs. Stubbs was called for and asked to visit the above address, which she kindly consented to do, for a few minutes, but upon entering Mrs. Curvin's home, was surprised when surrounded by the ladies who so secretly planned the evening. A most beautiful table had been prepared, and Mrs. Stubbs, with four of her class, were seated around it. It contained a birthday cake, decorated with candles and flowers in honor of the occasion. The evening was spent in games and music, with many vocal numbers, after which a most dainty repast was served, and a most hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Curvin, who so kindly entertained her home to Mrs. Stubbs class. The evening was brought to a close by the singing of "For a Jolly Good Fellow" and the National Anthem.

NO HOPE TILL DENTISTS DIE

Doctor Tells of Danger of Retaining Root Filled Teeth.

BREEDING PLACES.

TORONTO, May 28.—(Canadian Press).—Addressing a clinic in connection with the Ontario Dental Association convention to-day on the danger of retaining root-filled, devitalized teeth and depending upon the X-ray to show infection, Dr. Weston A. Price, of Cleveland, declared: "I frankly tell you that I have about given up hope for the public in many communities until the present generation of dentists dies off." He stated that the retention of breeding place for streptococci organism in such teeth was responsible for many deaths from heart trouble.

Around The City.

In court this morning Hector Weaver and Arthur O'Halloran were charged before Magistrate Langley with taking a car from before 603 Armour Road.

They were remanded until Tuesday, June 2, and bail was fixed at $250.00 each and one surety of $250.00.

Magistrate O. A. Langley, accompanied by prominent Peterborough lawyers, Joseph Wearing and J. F. Strickland, left the city to-day for Norwood, where the trial of James Sampson will be held. Sampson is charged with the illegal possession of liquor.

James MacPherson and the two youths who were found in his truck in an intoxicated state on Wednesday morning at 6 o'clock by a police constable, were today remanded until Saturday morning by Magistrate Langley.

One of the youths pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication in a public place, while the other pleaded not guilty to the charge of driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor.

The game at Oshawa on Saturday will start at 2.30 instead of three o'clock. This will mean that fans must leave Peterborough early.

IN MEMORIAM.

FORBES. — In loving memory of my dear father, James H. Forbes, who died May 28, 1921:
Just a thought of sweet remembrance,
From a memory fond and true,
Just a token of affection,
And a longing still for you,
When the shades of night are falling
And I'm sitting all alone,
There always comes a longing—
If you only could come home.

Find More White Indians In South America Travel

NEW YORK, May 28.—(Canadian Press).—White Indians have been found by Dr. Alexander Hamilton Rice's jungle expedition in South America, according to a radio message picked up by a Philadelphia amateur and forwarded to the American Geographical Society here. "White Indians encountered and conciliated April 21," reads the message.

COUNTRIES ON RUSSIAN BORDER MAY BE EXEMPTED FROM PACT ON CONTROL OF TRADE IN MUNITIONS

Conference at Geneva Recognizes Fears of Smaller States While Russia Frowns.

BASIS OF TREATY

Leading Powers Must Ratify Agreement as Condition To Its Adoption.

GENEVA, May 29.—(Canadian Press).—Interest in the International conference on the control of trade in arms and munitions now is chiefly centered on the question of how many countries bordering on Russia will wish exemption from the arms control convention which is being drawn up until Russia adheres to the convention. All the frontier states have been asked to report their views by Saturday.

Opinion seems to be that it is reasonable and just that exemption be extended to Poland and Finland, and perhaps also to Esthonia, Latvia and Persia, but inclusion of any other states would be opposed as calculated to enfeeble the convention.

Japan does not seem desirous of being listed in the exemption group. The exempted countries would ask for suspension of the operation of the convention so far as concerns the shipment of arms to them. This reservation will not, however, prevent publication of statistics relating to general arms production and exports statisics which are authorized by the national laws of the signatory powers.

Basis Of Agreement.

By mutual coniliation, a conflict in the plenary session of the conference was prevented when the delegations agreed yesterday to a formula concerning the number of states which must ratify the arms control convention before it can be put into full force. It declares that ratification must be made by Belgium, Great Britain, France, Italy, Czecho-Slovakia, Japan and the United and seven other states of which at least one must be a Latin-American country.

The conference has already decided there should be no search of ships for arms in transit, and last night the military committee voted that the signatory powers should not have the right to visit, search or arrest native vessels in prohibited maritime zones, even if these vessels fly the flag of a non-contracting power. Great Britain has been contending for this right.

Soviet Triples Output Of Vodka And Adds Kick

MOSCOW, May 29—Russia's production of vodka tripled last year and yielded the Soviet Government the largest revenues in its history.

The Government now maintains 341 national distilleries working at full blast. Prohibition in Russia having been found a failure, it has been announced that the Goverment next October will increase the strength of vodka to an alcoholic content of 40 per cent., only 5 per cent. below its pre-war strength.

Vodka of an alcoholic content of 30 per cent. costs the equivalent of 8 7cents a quart. The Government is engaged in a constant battle against home brewers of vodka, who make a beverage of 60 to 90 per cent. strength. More than 300,000 illicit stills were confiscated and the owners fined, imprisoned or deported during the past year.

KILLS TINY TOTS IN FIT OF FURY

PITTSBURGH, May 29.—(Canadian Press).—Lying side by side in a small stream near Castle Shannon, Pennsylvania, the bodies of Alexander and Helen Sabo, aged 9 and 6, were found late yesterday after a search of 24 hours. Their heads had been crushed. Raymond Winters, 31, street car conductor, confessed, the police declare, that he had killed the children in a fit of fury. Physicians say Winters is suffering from paranoia.

REPEAL AMENDMENT.

Hon. J. A. Robb Intends to Bring Down Bill Respecting Income Tax.

OTTAWA, May 29. — (Canadian Prerss).—Hon. J. A. Robb, Acting Minister of Finance, intends to bring down a bill to repeal the amendment of the Income War Tax Act passed last session, creating a lien. This amendment provided that any assessed tax interest or penalty, unpaid after the date of mailing of the assessment should constitute a lien upon the assets of the taxpayer, notwithstanding lack of notice, registration or publication.

METHODIST IDEALS

Must Be Retained in the United Church of Canada.

WINNIPEG, May 29—Rev. J. A. Lousley of Brandon was elected president of the Manitoba Methodist Conference here Thursday.

Referring to Church Union Mr. Lousley in his speech of acceptance declared that while the Methodists would lose their identity with the consummation of church union, they must not forsake their ideals, or the "spirit of loyal, broad and intense brotherhood."

MEN DANCE WTH MEN

$2,500 In Pensions To War Widow Who Married Again

WINNIPEG, May 29.—(Canadian Press).—Lena Punton, war widow, whose husband was killed overseas in 1917, remarried four years ago, drew pensions totalling $2,500 to which she had no claim. Pensions Bureau officials charged in Provincial Police Court Thursday. Mrs. Punton was arraigned for defrauding the Government, and remanded for a week. She is alleged to have drawn a pension until last month. Under the Pensions Act she was automatically debarred from pension when she remarried.

FIRE REACHING KEG OF POWDER SANK SCHOONER

Captain Blown Into Air and May Lose Sight—Land at Canso.

WRECKED TUESDAY

Crew Took to Boats and Were Picked Up 24 Hours Later.

HALIFAX, N.S., May 29.—Captain George Lohnes of the La Have fishing schooner Margaret Zinck, and his crew, landed at Canso Thursday after losing their vessel by fire and explosion on Quero Bank, last Tuesday. Captain Lohnes was badly injured in a powder explosion on board the sinking schooner and may lose his eyesight.

The fire was discovered early on Tuesday morning and while the members of the crew fought to extinguish it the vessel was shaken from stem to stern by the explosion of a keg of powder that had been reached by the flames. Captain Lohnes was nearest the spot and was blown into the air. The vessel was abandoned and the crew took to small boats, later being picked up by the La Have schooner Cathleen Creaser, which landed them at Canso yesterday.

All the men lost everything they carried with them on the schooner. The injured captain and crew were adrift in their dories 24 hours before being picked up. Captain Lohnes was placed in the Marine Hospital at Canso.

CLASS ENJOYED MUSICAL NIGHT

MANY NUMBERS.

A well-attended musical evening was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Davis, 615 Union Street on Wednesday last, under the auspices of the Women's Friendly Bible Class of St. John's. Vocal numbers were rendered by Mrs. Deyman, Mrs. Pink, and Miss Barton. Instrumental numbers by Mrs. Fenwick and Miss Bacon. Mrs. R. Bugg and several members of her talented choir were present and gave several vocal and instrumental numbers which were greatly enjoyed by all. Little Miss Phyllis Pink was again to the fore, singing as usual in her dainty way. The guests were received by Mrs. Collis and Miss Pitchford.

Dainty refreshments were served and a hearty vote of thanks was extended to all those who added to the pleasure of the evening, and also to Mr. and Mrs. Davis for the use of their home. A very enjoyable evening was brought to a close about 10.30 by the singing of the National Anthem.

LINER STRUCK ROCKS.

Keewatin is Being Brought Into Port By Tug Rescuer.

PORT ARTHUR, May 29.—(Canadian Press.)—The C. P. R. lake liner Keewatin, en route from the Soo to Port Arthur and Fort William, struck the rocks off Passage Island in a fog at 3.45 this morning. A call was sent for a tug and the Whalen was despatched to the steamer's aid. Announcement is made that the extent of damage suffered by the Keewatin is the loss of her rudder and that she is now on her way into port with the assistance of the Whalen.

SIR WILLIAM PETERSEN AGREES TO CHANGES IN CONTRACT WITH GOVERNMENT FOR OCEAN SERVICE

EXPECTS BOYCOTT

Will Relinquish Subsidy if Government Provides Rates That Prove Profitable.

OTTAWA, May 29. — (Canadian Press).—Sir William Petersen, who has contracted with the Dominion Government for a steamship service of ten vessels, carrying cargo at rates to be controlled by the Government, agreed unreservedly yesterday to a number of suggested changes in the contract. The changes were suggested by H. J. Symington, K.C., Government counsel, in view of the fact that certain criticisms had been levelled against the contract.

In the first place, Sir William said he would agree, if the Government so desired, to make himself personally liable until the new ships were constructed and in operation. The terms of the contract permit him to assign the contract to a company, should he so desire. He had preferred the original drafting because in the event of one of his vessels injuring another ship, the company, rather than he personally, would be held liable. Also the company would be responsible for meeting debentures, etc. He had absolutely no objection, he added, to a proviso being inserted that the majority of the members of the company should be Britishers, and he would also agree that their names be approved by the Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Immigration Ships Too.

Sir William said that he would not object to a modification of the contract so that the ships engaged in the Canadian service should not be engaged in any other service. He would agree to accept freight as directed by the Minister of Trade and Commerce, and he would put immigration ships on the basis of this contract, into the service, if the Government so desired. This would, he said, involve the placing of a different type of steamship on the route. He said he would agree to a proviso that his service should be a continuous one.

Mr. Symington asked Sir William why he demanded a subsidy at all since his vessels now in operation appeared to be able to make a satisfactory profit in the Canadian trade.

Fears a Boycott.

"I couldn't think of going in for this trade without a guarantee," said Sir William. "I would be running up against the conference lines, and I feel sure I would be boycotted." He admitted that he was afraid of rate-cutting by the conference lines. He said he wanted cargo but he was not prepared to fight against a powerful steamship ring to obtain it. "I have had some experience with them, to my sorrow," he added. The

MONTREAL POLICE GAMES CANCELLED

Authorities Decide Energies and Time Needed by the City.

MONTREAL, May 29. — There will be no police sports in this city this year, according to information given out at the City Hall Thursday. The Executive committee of the City Council have decided that the police have too much on their hands in looking after the safety of the city without squandering their energies on training and the sale of tickets to the sports. The sale of these tickets helped in former years to fill the coffers of the Police Athletic Association and of the Affiliated Welfare Organization which cares for the widows and orphans of policemen and attends to their funeral expenses. It also takes care in part of pensions.

The police sports have been held in the city for the past 25 years and have brought together contestants from Montreal and all the principal cities of Canada.

WOMEN CONDEMN BEER

Methodist W. M. S. Alleges Government Broke Faith.

SARNIA, Ont., May 29.—A resolution condemning the legislation on 4.4 per cent beer, accusing the Government of broken faith and urging the exercise of the ballot by members on moral rather than political issues was passed by the London branch of the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church which concluded its session here Thursday.

Wife Shoots Husband Who Taught Her To Use Pistol

TACOMA, Wash., May 29. — Lone lessons in markmanship which he had given his wife to protect herself against intruders resulted fatally on Thursday morning for Hugh Delaney, a local boxer, when Mrs. Magdakene Delaney, 30, grabbed the instruction pistol and shot her husband through the heart during an altercation in their home at East Larchmont, just outside the city limits.

Her husband had threatened to kill her and was holding an army rifle pointed toward her when she fired the shots that ended Delaney's life, the woman told the police.

PUPILS WIN PART CASE BY STRIKE

Pupils Walk Out Again To Force the Board's Capitulation.

SMITH'S FALLS, Ont., May 29.—(Canadian Press). — The Board of Education at Smith's Falls, after four and a half hours behind closed doors, has finally decided to reinstate Miss M. H. Ryan, Miss Ruby Hubbell, H. M. Campbell and G. A. Coyne, but it confirms its action in dismissing Misses M. Burns, M. Ellis and C. S. Allin. The recent order of dismissal of all seven teachers caused the pupils of the Collegiate to strike.

Fully two-thirds of the students at Smith's Falls Collegiate again went on strike this morning shortly after assembly. They are demanding the resignation of Principal G. E. Evans.

CAMPBELL RELEASED.

"Jack Canuck" Editor Served Five of His Six Months' Sentence.

TORONTO, May 29 — David Campbell, former editor of "Jack Canuck" held at the jail farm here on an order for deportation, after the Ontario government had passed an order in council authorizing his release, was given his liberty this morning when deportation proceedings were withdrawn by the authorities at Ottawa.

Campbell was sentenced to six months at the farm by Mr. Justice Orde for contempt of court in connection with the alimony action brought by Mrs. Hilda Betty Cooke, against her husband, J. H. Cooke. He served five months of the sentence.

SUPPORTS GOVERNMENT.

PARIS, May 29. — The French Chamber of Deputies to-day gave the government a vote of confidence by 537 to 29.

The vote was obliged after it was reiterated that the Moroccan war was purely defensive and the French government was willing to entertain peace proposals if approached in a proper manner.

Socialists Help.

PARIS, May 29. — Reversing the decision of their party caucus of last evening the Socialists to-day decided to support the government and approve the ministerial declaration on the Moroccan question. Thus the threatened political crisis has been averted.

After a three hours' caucus today the Socialists adopted an order of the day which was being considered late this afternoon by the Cabinet council, with prospect of its acceptance.

The only qualification in the declaration for support for Premier Painleve was the phrase: "Socialists resolutely opposing the policy of colonial conquest and adventure."

The Premier declared yesterday that the government was not in favour of such a policy and was prepared to reiterate its declaration today.

SARNIA, Ont., May 29. — "I don't see how you could have become intoxicated on four-point-four when an act of the legislature says that it is non-intoxicating," said Magistrate Henry Gorman is the police court on Thursday. Walter Cartar, Randall Forren and Robert Kemp, placed their intoxication at the door of 4.4. The magistrate took the statements from the men under oath and imposed fines of $15 and costs in each case.

GAVE UP WEALTH FOR ADVENTURE WITH AMUNDSEN

Ellsworth, Immensely Wealthy, Opposed His Son's Adventure on Polar Flight.

NO REPORT YET

Norwegian Association Asks Government to Send Planes to Spitzbergen.

James W. Ellsworth has millions of dollars—some say as much as $200,000,000. Fifteen thousand tons of coal a day are the product of his mines.

He has art collections that are the envy of connoisseurs the world over. Every luxury money can buy is his. At least five magnificent estates are numbered among his homes. He has the Villa Parmieri, in Florence, Italy. Queen Victoria of England spent two seasons there. Bocacio wrote many of his tales there.

Ellsworth owns Schloss Lenzburg, a castle high up on one of the peaks of the Alps and overlooking the famous Black Forest. And he owns an entire block at No. 603 Park avenue, New York. He also has homes in Philadelphia and Chicago.

Wealth Means Nothing.

But all these mean nothing to him.

For he believes he has lost his son in the Amundsen expedition to the North Pole. Lincoln joined the expedition as one of the explorers and financial backers.

The day Lincoln Ellsworth, Amundsen and four others took off in two airplanes from Spitzbergen for the North Pole, Ellsworth senior gave his son up as lost.

It seems he has reason enough for that belief. He talked, through a friend, with the only man alive who ever reached the North Pole, Matt Hensen. And after Hensen's vivid picture of the Arctic under the most favorable conditions, the father became unalterably opposed to Lincoln's attempting a North Pole venture.

"I have talked to Matt Hensen. He was Peary's companion. He is the only man alive who ever reached the Pole. He lived through the terrible struggle. He knows what the obstacles are.

"These others are only theorists. Amundsen may have gone to the South Pole. He may have spent years in the Arctic. But he never has been to the North Pole. He doesn't realize the difficuties and hardships of such a venture.

Oslo Optimistic.

OSLO, Norway, May 29.—That there is no reason for supposing the Amundsen North Pole expedition has met with disaster is the view taken by the Norwegians Aeronautical Association which points out that Amundsen's instructions to the other members of the expedition aboard the vessels Farm and Hobby were that the polar flight might last a fortnight. He is also said to have instructed these ships to patrol along the ice edge in the event he did not return within a fortnight.

In order to make this patrol as efficient as possible, the association has asked the Ministry of De-

CHURCH OF SCOTLAND REJECTS ATTEMPT TO GET PROHIBITION LED BY FAMOUS JAMES BROWN

NO REPRESSION.

LONDON, May 29. — (Canadian Press).—A lively debate on the prohibition question was precipitated in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, Edinburgh, to-day, when James Brown, the miner who was Lord High Commissioner to the Church of Scotland, spoke in favor of what was regarded by many delegates as repressive legislation. Mr. Brown by no means carried the Assembly with him in his advocacy of prohibition.

Some of the members of the Assembly expressed surprise that Mr. Brown could appear before that body in support of a prohibition policy when the no-license system was class legislation of the worst kind. Other delegates declared that arguments in favor of prohibition had originated from a scientific, medical or economic viewpoint, but what the Church of Scotland should aim at was the advancement of a purely Christian argument on the question.

"Nobody can say that repression was the principle of our Lord's teaching," the delegates declared.

Rev. Dr. Alexander Maclean, of Paisley, deplored that anyone should quote Christ as justification for conditions under which hundreds of thousands of people were doomed to misery and destruction.

Woman Planting Flowers On Her Husband's Grave Comes On Another Body

MONTREAL, May 29.—(Canadian Press).—While digging in a cemetery plot containing her husband's grave at Sault Au Recollet for the purpose of planting flowers, Mrs. Joseph Guilbault noticed the earth in one corner recently disturbed. Investigation led to the discovery of the body of an infant in a cardboard box.

KIWANIS HEARS REV. R. B. GROBB

"American Impressions" Subject of Highly Interesting Address.

SPOKE AT CHICAGO.

"American Impressions" was the subject of the address given by Rev. R. B. Grobb, to the Kiwanis Club at noon today. Mr. Grobb, who was rector of All Saints' Church for twelve years, told the Kiwanians about new impressions he had gained and wrong ideas which had been altered.

The casual idea which Canadians get of the Americans who come up here in the summer, is far different from the impression gained by living among them. Chicago, which most Canadians think of as a centre of dirt and crime, is one of the most beautiful cities in the world, said Mr. Grobb, and has a wonderful park system. It is, however, one of the most cosmopolitan cities. In the city and state only 25 per cent. of the people are of American stock, 31 per cent. are foreign born and the remainder are American born of foreign parents. There are also thousands of negroes, many of whom are very wealthy and they have taken possession of one of the most beautiful residential districts.

One of the things which struck Mr. Grobb most on his arrival, was the great indifference of the people to foreign news. The Chicago Tribune, which calls itself "The World's Greatest Newspaper," carries hardly any Canadian or European news. To many Americans, Montreal is the capital of Canada, and it was not the war but American Prohibition, which put Canada on the map for them. The common impression of Canada is a huge waste of snow adjacent to Alaska.

A false impression that is soon dispelled, said Mr. Grobb, is that the Americans are mercenary. They are not anxious to get the dollar or to have it, but the exhilaration of getting it is what they like. Neither are they irreligious. They are not great church goers, but at heart they are sound, and the church is a going concern." America is not going to the dogs religiously," said Mr. Grobb. Divorce is the greatest evil of the day and the attitude of church-going people is surprising.

A desire for plain business administration and a period of quiet, resulted in the election of Calvin Coolidge last fall, and the sign of the Republican party, a small brass tack, expressed the wishes of the people.

Frank Dawson was the booster of the day. The prize-winning numbers were drawn by Mr. Grobb, who kindly drew first prize for his successor, Rev. J. D. Paterson. Solos by H. Rush were very much enjoyed.

MILKMAN FINDS BODY OF WOMAN

Left Theatre For Home and Was Found on Vacant Lot.

SKULL CRUSHED.

NEW YORK, May 29.—(Canadian Press)—The body of Florence Kane, 30 years old, with the clothing virtually torn off and the skull crushed, was found in a vacant lot half a block from her home in Brooklyn by a milkman early to-day. Two diamond rings remained on the girl's hands, indicating that robbery was not the motive of the killing.

Miss Kane had been to the theatre last night, and soon after midnight telephoned her mother she would be home in half an hour. Nothing further was heard of her until her body was found. A cotton gag was in her mouth and her hands were tied together behind her back with strips of her silk dress. A pair of heavy chauffeur's gloves were found nearby.

GIVING UP.

The Peterborough Tailoring Co., having decided to discontinue ready-made lines, are clearing their present stock at much less than cost of making the suits or overcoats.

As announced at the opening of their sale a few days ago, the price cuts are striking, almost down to half the regular selling value. The sale is continued while the stock lasts, and there is still a really fine selection of Blue Serges, Herringbones and Worsteds that are being sacrificed in order to clear them all out. See them at 161 Hunter street. 1d

ENGINEERS STRESS IMPROVED TRAFFIC

Tying Up Would Be Avoided By Adoption of New Plans.

NEW YORK, May 29.—The end of the international town, city and regional planning conference held here saw the adoption of the following suggestions for the improvement of traffic conditions:

1. Have a comprehensive traffic programme which recognizes that rail, electric and motor traffic are all engaged in the same job and must be considered jointly.

2. Route commercial vehicles away from avenues used chiefly by passenger cars.

3. Keep records on incoming and outgoing travel so that some of the burden can be lessened by routing along designated avenues.

4. Have by-pass thoroughfares so that transient traffic or others not desiring to go through the city can conveniently take a belt-line route.

Plan for Future.

5. Do away with draw bridges which tie up traffic at important points.

6. Plan for future growth of the city, providing adequate streets.

7. Decentralize. Through zoning and by street development the activities of a city can frequently be guided so as to reduce the travel needs.

8. Widen the bottle necks. Many through streets can be provided by clearing up a few blocks.

9. Plan for parking facilities.

10. Provide sufficient playgrounds.

Educate Public.

An additional point stressed at the conference was that of educating motorists and pedestrians for safety. A properly educated public, it was agreed, meant reduction of accidents and speedier traffic.

Then, with the city engineers working on the improvement of traffic conditions, with adequate funds and public support, the most serious traffic difficulties could be eliminated, as least for some years, in the larger cities. And in the smaller cities, it was pointed out, the engineers could probably prevent traffic faults altogether.

As a result of this conference, organizations and many cities have increased their efforts to bring about a more adequate solution of the traffic problem.

UNIONISTS AND NON-UNIONISTS ORGANIZE SEPARATE BRANCHES

Impressive Scene and Utmost Harmony at Last Presbyterial Meeting.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

Both Branches of Woman's Society Chose Leaders for the Year.

UNIONISTS AND—TAKE ONE
(By a Staff Reporter.)

COBOURG, May 29.—There was an impressive scene in St. Andrew's Church here Thursday afternoon, when the Union and non-Union delegates to the Peterboro Presbyterial Meeting formally and finally separated and organized separate branches of what was one of the strongest societies in the Presbyterian Church of Canada for the carrying on of mission work. There was no acrimony in the farewell words, the proceedings during the two days' convention had been marked by the utmost harmony. The different branches are similar in organization and in their aims, the members of each take up their new duties with hope for the future and each society will proceed as usual to carry on the work just as it has been prosecuted for the past 42 years. In both branches there are veteran members and others who are comparatively new in church work. Peterboro and Campbellford are well represented on the several staffs of officers.

Officers Elected.

The meetings had been held in the body of the church to accommodate the large number in attendance, but at 1.30 yesterday afternoon, Unionists and Continuing Presbyterians separated, and each branch met in one of the Sunday school rooms.

Mrs. F. W. Rorke of Norwood was elected to preside at the meeting of the non-Unionists, and she read a list of members who had been recommended for the various offices and these ladies were the ones chosen. The list was as follows:

Honorary President — Mrs. John McPherson, Peterboro.

President—Mrs. D. Ewart, Cobourg.

Vice-Presidents (in the order given)—Mrs. William Hume, Campbellford; Mrs. F. W. Rorke, Norwood; Mrs. R. M. McCullough, Colborne; Mrs. R. Roger, Cobourg.

Secretary—Miss G. Harvey, Cobourg.

Treasurer—Mrs. W. N. McDougall, Lakeport.

Supply Secretary—Mrs. J. R. Eakins, Millbrook.

Strangers' Secretary—Mrs. James Armstrong, Warkworth.

Library Secretary.—Mrs. A. Gameron, Peterboro.

Financial Secretary—Mrs. G. F. Clark, Brighton.

Home Helpers' Secretary—Mrs. Plant, Hastings.

Mission Band Secretary—Miss Belle Thomson, Hastings.

Press Secretary—Mrs. E. E. Cox.

Magazine Secretary—Mrs. James Weir, Norwood.

Mrs. Hume Commended

Several members expressed regret that Mrs. William Hume of Campbellford was taken from the Mission Band department but Mrs. Ewart, the president, explained that Mrs. Hume, on account of her long and efficient service, was entitled to promotion and she was now in line for the presidency.

Union Officers

The officers elected by the Unionists were as follows:

Honorary Presidents, Mrs. G. M. Roger, ,Peterboro,, Miss C. Dickson, Peterboro and Mrs. Ballagh, Cobourg; President, Mrs. A. R. Bremner, Cobourg; Vice Presidents, Mrs. Joseph John, Peterboro, Mrs. Andrew McKenize, Peterboro; Mrs. (Rev.) Moye, Grafton; Mrs. James Gordon, Peterboro; Mrs. Andrew Haig, Campbellford; Mrs. J. Weir Norwood. Corresponding Secretary, Miss M. Dickson, Peterboro; Recording Secretary, Mrs. T. Wickett, Port Hope; Assistant Recording Secretary, Mrs. A. Porteous, Peterboro; Treasurer, Mrs. D. F. Drummond, Peterboro; Financial Secretary, Mrs. Yale, Peterboro; Mission Band Secretary, Mrs. McKone, Peterboro; Y.W. and C.G.I.T. Secretary, Mrs. C. M. McKinnon, Peterboro; Messenger Secretary, Mrs. Alex Long, Peterboro; Literature Secretaries, Miss Eleanor Roberts and Miss Brodie, Port Hope. Home Helpers Secretary, Mrs. Jull, Lakefield; Press secretary, Mrs. C. M. MacKinnon, Peterboro; Strangers' Secretary, Mrs. J. H. Henry, Peterboro; Library Secretary, Mrs. McKinnon, Cobourg; Supply Secretary, Mrs. H. Robb, Norwood; Social Service Secretary, Mrs. Chant, Lakefield; General Interest Secretary, selection left in hands of the executive.

A Last Farewell

When both branches had finished with the election of their officers they met again in joint session in the church with Mrs. Ewart in the chair. Mrs. MacKinnon of Peterboro gave a brief report of the Sunday School Convention held recently in Washington. Then Mrs. Andrew Haig of Campbellford, convenor of the committee on resolutions, brought in a recommendation that the hearty thanks of the deelgates be extended to the citizens of Cobourg for their hospitality to the visiting delegates, to Rev. J. S. Ferguson who had welcomed them on behalf of the Presbytery, to Mayor McArthur for his address of welcome, to the church societies in Cobourg for their fraternal greetings, to Miss Leah Dinwoody for her address on mission work in China, to the officers of St. Andrews Church for the use of the building and to Mrs. Ewart for the able and kindly manner in which she had discharged her duties as secretary. This resolution was unanimously adopted by a standing vote.

Mrs. Andrew McKenzie of Peterboro delivered the valedictory address. They could, she said, never be just the same again but she believed that the delegates had been inspired by the gathering and each branch would go forward to do better work than eevr. The workers are having difficulties but are all carrying on for the sake of the Master.

If we are, she continued, finding difficuties, what are these compared to those that confronted Christ? We should heed His words spoke to the disciples, "Let not your hearts be troubled."

"We leave you non-concurring Presbyterians with the hope that God's blessing may rest on your work."

Morning Session

The morning session was devoted to the reading an ddiscussion of reports, the secretaries heard from being Mrs. J. John of Peterboro, literature secretary; Mrs. Robb, Norwood, supply secretary; Mrs. Long, Peterboro, Messenger secretary; Mrs. Chant, Lakefield, social service secretary.

Made-In-Peterborough Exhibition June 1 to 6.

CAMPBELLFORD PERSONALS

CAMPBELLFORD, May 29.—Mr. and Mrs. John Hunter, Master Frank Ian Roe and James Keith spent Sunday in Havelock at the home of Mrs. Hart.

Mrs. J. F. Maynard accompanied Dr. and Mrs. O. C. Watson on a motor trip to Toronto this week.

Messrs. J. F. Bailey, F. Chase and M. Cochrane, of Kitchener, spent the week-end as guests at the home of the former's brother, George Bailey, Centre Street.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Peeling, of Havelock, were in town on Wednesday.

J. M. Arnold spent a few days last week in Toronto.

Cemetery Beautified.

A large number of the members of St. Mary's Parish assembled on Wednesday at St. Mary's Cemetery, where they spent the day in beautifying their cemetery, which now presents a very creditable appearance.

Born—On Wednesday, May 27, to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott, Meyersburg, a son.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Merrill and baby Jack, accompanied by the former's mother, Mrs. M. Hart, of Toronto, spent the week-end in town as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rutherford and other friends.

Some of those who are in Cobourg this week attending the annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Peterboro Presbytery are: Mesdames A. Haig, J. A. Stewart, H. Free, B. P. Nelson, John Wallace, George Dickson, William Hume, N. N. Clark, Thos. Watkinshaw, Misses Jessie Neill, Lillian Hay.

Repeat Performance.

The Young People's Dramatic Society of St. Andrew's Church that so successfully presented the two-act comedy, "Excuse Me," here recently, and also in Hastings, were in Stirling Wednesday evening, and are also billed for Wooler to-night, where they will present their play. The members of the cast are to be congratulated upon the grand success of the play at each performance where it has been greeted by capacity houses.

War Memorial Chosen.

The committee of the I.O.D.E., Campbellford Chapter, composed of the Regent, Mrs. W. H. Ashton, Mrs. J. P. Archer, and Mrs. R. C. Weston, Miss Hazel Atkinson, Regent of Bemersyde Chapter, and Major J. M. Bygott and Mr. G. A. Kingston, met on Tuesday evening in the Library to meet with representatives of the firms submitting designs for the War Memorial. The Fallon Company and the McCallum Granite Company, both of Kingston, sent representatives showing various designs.

It was decided to accept a monument specially designed to meet the requirements of the people of Campbellford, which will cost approximately $5,000. This monument will be a very imposing looking and fitting tribute to the lives of our fallen heroes. It will have an 18-foot base, and will be 19 feet from base to top, showing three crosses of sacrifice in the design. A cut of same may be seen in the window of J. B. Ferris and Co.'s store.

The committee decided to interview the Seymour Township with a view to having the township unite with the town in erecting this memorial. The names of all those who from country or town paid the supreme sacrifice will then be inscribed.

ROBBER CAUGHT AFTER HOLD-UP

Woman Saw Him Rob Drug Store and Recognized Him Again.

TAKEN ON STREET CAR.

TORONTO, May 29.—(Canadian Press).—William Moran, aged 26, of Fort William, Ontario, was placed under arrest last night on a charge of robbery under arms after a woman had pointed him out as the man who had held up a North Toronto drug store. The woman, who would not give her name, told the police that she was about to enter Whiteman's drug store when she saw a man menacing the clerk with a revolver and inspecting the cash register. She hurried away and boarded the first Yonge car that came along. As she boarded the car a man came rushing up and also entered the car. She recognized him as the holdup man and told the motorman. On arriving at Yonge Street Police Station the motorman left the car and brought a detective out, who took the suspect into custody. A loaded revolver was found in his pocket.

ELEVEN BODIES ARE RECOVERED

HOPE ABANDONED.

COAL GLEN, N. C., May 29. — (Canadian Press).—With the bringing to the surface at 10.15 o'clock last night of 11 bodies, additional to the 16 that had already been brought out, virtually no hope is entertained here of rescuing alive any of the 50 or so miners entombed in yesterday's explosion. In the case of all the bodies recovered, death had resulted from the dread gas fumes which spread through the mine after three explosions.

ONTARIO'S CROP PROSPECT GOOD

Hon. John S. Martin Thinks This Side of the Line is Better.

BUMPER YIELD.

TORONTO, May 29.—(Canadian Press).—The opinion that Ontario's crop prospects are the brightest, despite the recent cold weather which has been experienced, was expressed yesterday at the Parliament Buildings by Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, who had just returned from a visit to the United States. Conditions in Ontario, the Minister stated, contrast notably with those in the Northern Staes, the outlook here being distinctly for a bumper yield, while the outlook across the border is not of the brightest.

SHOWER AT BAILIEBORO

Mrs. A. L. Russell Entertained for Miss Annie McConnachie, a June Bride.

Mrs. A. L. Russell recently entertained about thirty ladies at a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Annie McConnachie, whose marriage to Mr. Laurence Finnie takes place early in June.

Mrs. Russell's spacious home was decorated with white lilies and carnations. Burning candle also added a very pleasing touch.

The guests, who were from Millbrook, spent the evening in card playing, after which a dainty lunch was served by the hostess. After the lunch was over the prize-winner was announced, and Miss Annie McConnachie was presented with a beautifully decorated clothes basket full of useful and dainty articles for the bride-to-be. The good wishes of the Millbrook people were in evidence. Miss McConachie made a very graceful little speech, thanking her friends for their gifts and good wishes.

Music was provided by Miss Collins and Miss Elson.

A NEW FORD JOKE

LONDON, May 29.—The Passing Show says that Henry Ford was as much interested in the British empire exhibition at Wembley and asked a friend to write him an account of it. The account didn't satisfy Ford, the magazine says, and he cabled back: "Cut the cackle, I want to know if you'd notice the Wembley show in our main parking ground."

SIR WILLIAM PETERSON AGREES

subsidy would be an insurance policy for him.

The vessels called for in his contract were of a finer type than the Rio Dorado, the Petersen ship which left Montreal recently, Sir William said. They would have internal combustion engines, a larger space for cargo, and he thought more speed. They would be equipped with cold storage, and have capacity for 450 cattle. He said that the ships had been contracted for before the contract with the Government had been made, and two of them had actually been started before he ever met Mr. Preston. One of the ships would be completed in six weeks. They had been designed for another special trade, not the Canadian trade, he said.

"For what trade were they designed?" asked T. J. Shaw of Calgary.

"For some other colonial trade—I would rather not give any more particulars," Sir William replied.

Covers Fixed Charges.

He was asked by H. J. Symington, K.C., how the amount of £275,000 had been arrived at as the amount of the subsidy.

Sir William replied that this amount had been set because the Government was being given absolute control of rates and could make them anything it desired. Therefore, in order to cover his fixed charges, he had felt that a subsidy as large as £275,000 was necessary. If the Government did not fix unprofitable rates, he would be willing to do without the subsidy. If the Government fixed rates which would cause a deficit, he would be satisfied with a subsidy of sufficient size to cover the deficit.

Mr. Symington asked him if he would object to the figures which he had given as to the costs of operating his ships, etc., being tested by the committee.

"I would agree to your putting experts on my ships, and I'll sail them free and feed them free while they made any test you require," he said.

Sir William said he first came to Canada in 1893 and had been interested in the carrying of coal from Cape Breton to Montreal, where he had succeeded in cutting the rate in half, although he had no guarantee.

Various other ventures followed in the Canadian carrying trade.

In 1904 he entered into a contract with the Armstrong Whitworth Company whereby a line of passenger-freight vessels was to be inaugurated on the Atlantic.

"We had been promised by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Richard Cartwright," he testified, "a subsidy of £50,000.

"No sooner had I started the line than the Armstrong Whitworth people backed out. It is not true that I received notice from the secretary. They dropped the whole scheme without notice, rhyme or reason. I had a large number of immigrants assembled, but they had to cancel their passages.

"Must Have Seen Kaiser."

"It was told to me that great pressure had been brought to bear upon Armstrong Whitworth by the North Atlantic and the German conferences who declared that if the company went ahead with its part of the contract it would get no orders from any member of the conference and moreover that the German Government would place no orders for warship armament. They must have seen the Kaiser.

"In any case, they dropped me. I took my case to the court and won it with costs. That was the end of my project."

"What was the amount of your damages?" asked the chairman. "I think it was £48,000 and the law costs were £16,000."

"Lawyers are the same in all countries," remarked Mr. Rinfret.

In 1907, witness undertook with Sir William Mackenzie to establish a line between Hamburg and Canada. "I had a tremendous fight with the combine which always had a sweet eye upon me. I was chased out of Germany because the control stations would not allow passengers to get through on my tickets. I was compelled to divert my attention to Rotterdam and to pay the railway fares of my passengers round Germany from Central Europe, a matter of some 16 shillings."

Knows Conference.

"What do you know about conferences?" "A good deal. I have already given you some of my experiences. I know where their headquarters are. But unless you are a member of the conference you can't get in. You may, however, feel their bite."

"It has been claimed that these conferences are beneficial in their effect. What have you to say to that?" asked the chairman.

"Any organization of such a character is bound to take advantage of its position and power," replied Sir William. "I will confine my attention to Canada, which is in a peculiar position. We have all the liners combined in one man. Each individual ship can catch freight where it is able. But it can't cut rates, which are laid down in Montreal and New York.

"Why are these rates maintained at a high level? With the restriction on immigrants to the United States some of the big liners have become a drug on the market. Many of these big vessels are very expensive. They carry what they can get but, when they come to Canada, they are only able to carry half the cargo, that I can carry in my boats. The combine is bound to keep rates as high as it can to make both ends meet.

Big Liners Like Palaces.

"These ships of theirs are floating palaces, with gymnasium, swimming pools, kindergarteus, expensive menus and all sorts of extravagant frills. But they can only carry 6,000 tons dead weight back and get few immigrants westbound. They are bound to lose money. If they had not gone to the extravagant limit they have; if they had confined themselves to the ideal cargo boat, built on economical lines, it would have been different. He gave as an example the Urania, which cost one million pounds and was launched last year. Such vessels, he said, with gymnasiums and nurseries were bound to charge high rates.

"Who has to pay—why, of course, the Canadian shipper," he said.

"The intermediary boat will beat them all. Somebody has to pay for the frills and it is the Canadian shipper who pays. No sane man will deny that now my ships are designed particularly for economical traffic."

Witness stated that from 1907 to 1909 his line had charged £3-10 per immigrant as against the conference rate of £7. The £3-10 rate was a profitable service.

He declared that even in this present year cheap airy accommodation and wholesome food could be given to the immigrants at a rate of from £8 to £9.

OPPOSITION TO

the motion if the Government would give an undertaking to the House that the development of the Quebec Harbor would mean the removal of the higher differential in freight rates on grain to Quebec. He claimed that Canada had voted the money for the construction of a Transcontinental railway on the distinct understanding that that railway would bring about a reduction in grain rates. The present grain rates to Quebec were prohibitory, he said, and now that the Government owned a railway, it should be able to dictate rates.

Hon. Charles Stewart remarked that the Government was not able to prescribe what the rates should be. That was the function of the Board of Railway Commissioners.

Mr. Campbell was of the opinion that the Government in its function of railway operator, should itself take an application for lower freight rates to the Railway Commission. If the Railway Commission refused to entertain it, "the Government should appeal to itself" since it was itself the proper court of appeal from the Railway Commission.

ANNUAL SPORTS AT BAILIEBORO

BAILIEBORO, May 29. — The annual sports day was held here on Monday in the field owned by W. Thompson.

More than two hundred persons were present and a full line of athletic sports were indulged in, consisting of baseball games, races, tug of war, etc.

The villagers went to no little trouble to make the occasion a success and the grounds were appropriately decorated with flags and flying streamers.

The baseball organization had a splendid canteen on the grounds, and sold mostly everything that the crowd required, while the ladies of the Union church served supper on the grounds.

The members of the Guild of the Anglican church put on a humorous play in the evening entitled "Promoting Romeo." The play was presented to a large crowd in the basement of the Anglican church. The cast of characters were as follows:

Mr. Fenwick: Mr. Fred Wood.

Mrs. Fenwick: Miss Irene Johnston.

Robert Fenwick: Mr. Alf Jackson

Elsie Evans: Miss Louie Jackson.

Dorothy Stevens: Mrs. William Lunny.

Ben Craig: Mr. Gerald Armstrong

May Craig: Miss Edna Johnston.

Romeo Badger: Mr. Jas. Johnston.

Mrs. Amarilla Badger: Mrs. F. Wood.

Rosalie Jones: Mrs. Douglas Fisher.

Selma: Mrs. Reg. Armstrong.

A Policeman: Mr. John Willan.

A splendid musical programme was rendered between acts. Messrs Tom McCammus and Clare Winslow greatly amused the audience with their numerous comic duets.

At the conclusion of the play the village was illuminated for an hour or so with beautiful fireworks.

Damage by Frosts.

The recent frosts have done a great deal of harm to the crops throughout the countrysid The fall wheat and spring crops have rather gone back during the past week than they have grown any.

There has been very little real good weather so far this spring and the crops have gained very little headway .The twitch grass and thistles apparently are the only plants that can be noticed growing much as yet, and there is every indication of having a bumper crop of both of these nuisances this year.

WOMAN CHARGED.

Mrs. Robert Poole Harbored Fleeing Girls in Her Home.

TORONTO, May 29.—(Canadian Press).—The charge of aiding and abetting Jeanette McMinn, Bessie Carroll and Isabel Prouse in escaping from the women's jail farm on the night that Mrs. Margaret Mick, jail matron, was murdered, was laid against Mrs. Robert Poole, of Tecumseh Street, in County Police Court yesterday.

It was at Mrs. Poole's house that the girls stayed overnight after their escape.

COLLISON HANGS FOR HIS MURDER

Pays Penalty For Shooting Girl Whose Affections He Sought.

AT CORNWALL.

CORNWALL, May 29 (Canadian Press).—Thomas Collison, convicted of the murder of Beatrice Thorpe, the 18-year-old Boynton girl, who had discouraged his attentions, was hanged in Cornwall jail yard early this morning. The execution was carried out without a hitch.

Collison was rather shaky as he walked up the steps which led to the trap and needed the support of offices. Seven seconds after Arthur Ellis, the executioner, placed the black cap over his head the trap was sprung.

Captain Tidman of the Salvation Army spent the night with the condemned man in his cell. Accompanying him to the gallow, Captain Tidman began repeating the Lord's Prayer, but Collison dropped to his death before the first dozen words were spoken.

Visited by Mother.

Collison was yesterday visited by his aged mother who remained with him until noon. At two o'clock she returned to bid her son a final farewell and remained until 4.20, when she left for home. No other relatives saw him during his last few days on earth. Collison yesterday became more or less hysterical at times, and through the day kept uttering the words: "O, Jesus." He was heard repeating them during the walk to the gallows. Last evening at 10 o'clock Collison was visited by the jail physician and was given a hypodermic and immediately went to sleep and slept till 3.30.

Dr. Alguire pronounced Collison dead nine minutes after the trap was sprung.

Miss Thorpe was killed by a bullet fired through the window of her home. Collison, a local man, who had worked on farms in this district, and also in Western Canada, had sought to win Miss Thorpe's affections, but in this he was discouraged by the girl as well as her parents. Following his arrest, he was under examination as to his sanity.

FIND WATCHMAN KILLED BY AXE

Head Was Almost Severed From Body in Lumber Camp.

UNKNOWN MAN HELD.

HEARST, Ont., May 29. — With his head almost severed from the trunk by an axe, the body of the watchman at the Rossing plant of the Thompson Heyland Lumber Co., located on the C.N.R. nine miles west of this place, was found on the floor of the shack that he occupied near the mill.

Suspected of being implicated in the mystery a man is being held in the provincial jail here while the police make further investigations. The condition of the body indicated that he had first been struck on he head with an iron bar and then attacked with an axe.

The victim who was last seen alive about nine o'clock on Sunday evening was Wasyl Maxime, a Pole. An inquest has been opened.

FOUR DROWNED IN ST. LAWRENCE

Flat-Bottomed Boat, With Five Passengers, Capsized Near Cornwall.

ONLY ONE SAVED.

CORNWALL, May 29.—(Canadian Press).—Four persons were drowned and a fifth, a four-year-old child, was saved when the flat-bottomed boat in which they were rowing capsized in the St. Lawrence River off Cornwall late yesterday afternoon.

The victims are Mr. and Mrs. Aurel Lavigne, aged 21 and 18; Mrs. Romeo Pelosse, aged 19, and her 11-month-old baby, Romeo Pelosse, Jr. The fifth occupant of the boat, Aurore Gatien, aged four, a sister of Mrs. Pelosse, was saved. The baby was also rescued, but was already dead.

FIND SIGNS OF OLD CITY IN NEVADA

Two and a Half Miles of Hieroglyphics Chiselled in Obsidian Cliff.

PIOCHE, Nevada, May 29.—Signs of a buried city antedating anything found heretofore in this country, were yesterday being traced by field members of the National Cosmograph Society, 20 miles west of Pioche, near White Horse Springs.

Two and a half miles of hieroglyphics chiseled in an obsidian cliff resembling dark brown glass, have been discovered. Quantities of pottery have been found.

The pottery, unlike that found in ta[illegible] man without provocation.

Pueblo Grande de Nevada, has an unusually thick fire glaze and the decorations in black are declared to resemble closely Chinese characters.

The wild boar of India will attack a man without provocation.

Mrs. Carrie Peckham of 837 Var St., London, Ont., says: "I took Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription during my last expectancy to keep up my strength. I had no sick stomach, nor any other distressing ailment such as usually come to the prospective mother, and my baby has been just as fine and well as can be. He is now eight months old and has never known a sick day. I would never hesitate to recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a tonic and nervine in young motherhood, for I know that it helps in many ways, both the mother and the child."

Get this "Prescription" from your neighborhood druggist, in either liquid or tablet form, and write Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for free, confidential medical advice. Send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce's Laboratory, Bridgeburg, Ont., if you wish a trial package of tablets.

POLICE CONVENTIONS.

Objection to Chief of Police Newhall's expense being paid in connection with his attendance at the convention of the Dominion police chiefs to be held in Winnipeg are not justified.

It is well that the men in charge of municipal law enforcement should come together occasionally to discuss their experiences and to give each other the benefit of ideas developed from the problems encountered in the carrying out of their duties.

Farmers have their conventions, business men, doctors, dentists, nurses, fire chiefs all have their annual gatherings; why not the police chiefs?

There are those who say the same benefit could be secured by getting the reports of the convention afterward.

They are wrong—but even if they were right, how can any municipality save its self-respect and refuse to pay its fair share toward the expense of a convention that is of general benefit to all municipalities of any size, and therefore should be paid for by all municipalities?

No city can live to itself alone.

There are obligations that must be assumed equally by cities generally, and municipalities that attempt to sponge upon the others are not likely to gain an enviable reputation.

ARMOUR MEMORIAL PARK.

Mr. Edward Courtney does a good service in calling public attention to the fact that the Patriotic League of Ashburnham is handicapped through lack of funds in their plans for the development of the Armour Memorial Park, toward which considerable progress has already been made.

His letter to the Examiner points out that a driveway around the hill is required as well as a mater service, while, of course, it is hoped to extend the work year by year until the park is completed.

Many citizens and ex-citizens of Peterboro have helped the organization to secure the property, to set out thousands of trees and to bring the work to its present stage, and more financial assistance is required.

It seems a pity that the development of this beauty spot-to-be should have to be assumed by a little organization of public-spirited citizens.

The establishment of a memorial park on such a site as this should have been a community effort, but, unfortunately, the vision and foresight of the Patriotic League have not been matched by similar attributes among the citizens generally.

That so much has been accomplished in the face of municipal lack of warmth toward the scheme and the indifference of a large percentage of Peterboro's residents, speaks volumes for the determination and zeal and vision of the members of the league, whose contribution to the beautification of this city will be more fully appreciated in the days to come.

MAJOR-GENERAL MORRISON.

Intelligence of the death of Major-General Sir E. W. B. Morrison was received with regret in Peterboro, particularly by those veterans of the World War who served under him in France.

General Morrison was well known to Peterboro's artillery men, especially to the first quota that left Peterboro at the beginning of the war as representing the 24th Field Battery, C. F. A., and became part of the 4th Battery, C. E. F., inasmuch as he went to the front as Officer Commanding the brigade of which they formed a part.

The newspaperman-soldier had a distinguished career during the war, culminating in his appointment as Officer Commanding the whole Canadian artillery forces at the front, a position which he filled with an unruffled efficiency that astonished the professional soldiers of the Empire's forces.

He was one of those Canadian militia officers who took their soldiering in peace times as an important matter, and who were therefore ready when the emergency came to play a big part in military operations.

It was one of the surprises of the war that men could be taken from their desks, as General Morrison was from his newspaper office, and without the rigid training that professionals considered necessary, be set to match their wits against lifetime soldiers and come off victorious.

The officer commanding Canada's artillery in France was one of the Canadians who met such a test and emerged from it with colours flying.

His name should be held in grateful memory as one of the outstanding Canadian leaders in the Great War.

EMERGENCY SERVICE.

A new idea has been developed by the motor clubs of Essex, Kent and Middlesex Counties that should commend itself to Peterboro motorists in the preparation of plans for the institution of an emergency road service available for all members.

The man who develops engine trouble on the road will find aid quickly at hand, inasmuch as proprietors of service stations are to be members of the organization and under obligation to hurry to the assistance of any members who are having trouble.

No motorist allied with these clubs will in the district covered by them be outside the reach of speedy aid, and this community plan promises to be of great benefit to all members.

It should have the effect, too, of increasing the membership of the motor clubs, as this is one department of their activity that cannot be shared in by those who do not contribute to the maintenance of the organization.

Too many motorists have accepted the other benefits made possible by the efforts of motor leagues without feeling the least sense of personal obligation to associate themselves with the movement and pay their fair share of the expense involved.

This has been the experience of the Peterboro branch of the Ontario Motor League, and doubtless of similar clubs throughout the country where the work and the financial outlay have been assumed by only a percentage of motorists, the others simply availing themselves of the benefits effected without paying a cent toward the funds needed to bring these improvements about.

When it comes to a question of an emergency road service, however, the parasites will find themselves outside in the cold.

ALTERNATIVE VOTE.

The Dominion House is about to consider a matter of first public importance—the advisability of adopting the principle of the alternative vote in elections for single-member constituencies, says the Hamilton Spectator. Electors are proverbially indifferent to considerations which vitally affect their interest, but on a matter of this kind there should be the liveliest curiosity. It is possible that the apathetic voter would be aroused to assert himself if he knew that his vote could not under any circumstances be entirely thrown away, as it is under the present system in numerous instances. Every vote would count under the suggested plan, and for that reason it would seem certain that better representation would be secured. Strong partizans, bent on keeping all the advantages to themselves, are naturally not in favor of changing over to a system which introduces considerable uncertainty into the result. They revel in the fight between the "ins" and the "outs;" they are used to it and are genuinely alarmed by the possibility of filling the political field with dark horses which might easily upset all the "dope." A Government election, however, is not a sporting contest; it is the most serious business in the world, for those who take part in it either as candidates or as electors. As things are at present, elections are regarded with indifference by many and taken in a spirit of frivolity by others. The consequence is that the country is not getting the government it deserves and so badly needs. Eminently desirable candidates are deterred from offering themselves for election, and half the electorate remain inactive. Would the suggested change in the method of voting improve conditions? That is the test to apply to this alternative vote proposition.

The merit of the plan is that it secures, as far as human ingenuity can secure, a faithful expression of the popular will. It is to be applied only in single-member constituencies. The voter has the privilege of marking his ballot with first, second, third or fourth preferences—according to the number of candidates—and the process of elimination which is followed ensures that the person elected is absolutely the one most acceptable to the majority of the electorate. There may be a large number of entrants, but the final choice is bound to be the one which commends itself to the general approval of the community. It would appear to be a most desirable reform in the interest of representative administration. Objections are urged to it, on various grounds, and these will undoubtedly be given full expression to in the course of the Parliamentary debate. They deserve the thoughtful consideration of the public equally as much as the enthusiastic arguments of the supporters of the measure. The main thing is that the interest of the electorate should be awakened to the subject and that the deplorable apathy characteristic of electors at the present time should be counteracted by every possible means.

AT THE HEAD OF A COMMANDO.

Twenty-five years ago commandoes of Boer were harrassing the flower of the British Army amid the kloofs and stony kopjes of the Orange Free State. A commando would gather—each man with pony, rifle, bandolier and a supply of biltong. A swift descent would be made on some ill-guarded outpost or at a vulnerable point of some slow-moving transport train and almost before the astonished British troops had time to realize that they were under fire the commando had ridden off and dispersed under orders to assemble again at some stated point forty-eight hours later.

The extraordinary mobility of such commandoes made them a most dangerous weapon of offense in guerilla warfare. It took all the organizing ability of a Kitchener, with his "drives" and his gradually wearing down their resistance to subdue these forces. The Boers were clever horsemen and excellent shots. They knew the country in which they were operating down to the last bush and stone, and they were led by able and daring leaders. Some of the men who rode at the head of the larger commandoes have made history for South Africa since that time; others have retired quietly to the farms to the pleasures of the front stoep. There was a time when the names of Piet de Wet, Piet Retief, Otto Conroy, Phillip Grobbelaar, the two Viljoens, Christain de Wet and others were names to conjure with in South Africa, and to cause British generals a very unpleasant day or two when their owners were reported in the vicinity.

A quarter of a century has gone by and Conroy's commando is ordered out again. Instead of service bandoliers they carry yellow scarves and the man who rides at the head of the commando is a Prince of the House against which these same commandoes fought. Some of the men who rode into Bloemfontein yesterday must have ridden into Heibron and Senekal and Zuurfontein a quarter of a century ago. Some of the men with yellow sashes may have been with Grobbelaar when a commando waited at Kaal Spruit, within sight of Bosch Kop, and fought from their ambush so skillfully that one hundred more graves lie under the shadow of Thabanchu containing the bleached bones of British soldiers. There was fighting on the very ground over which the young Prince rode at the head of the Boers into Bloemfontein.

The whirligig of times brings in its revenge with amazing swiftness. Who would have predicted when peace was signed at Vereeniging a quarter of a century ago that a Prince of Wales would be talking in the "taal" to the Boers and riding into Bloemfontein at the head of a commando? Who could guess that this pleasant faced youth, with an engaging smile, would be astride a Boer pony racing into Bloemfontein at breakneck speed, there to be welcomed in royal state and with the honor due to a King's son by General Herzog, the Nationalist Premier, and the Mayor of Bloemfontein?

A Royal Prince rides at the head of a commando and in the two miles of that ride he does more to dissolve the bitterness between Briton and Boer than the wisest statesman could do in a decade. He smiles and a bond of Empire is knit; he shouts "allemachtig kerel" and he has won a new domain for his royal sire.—Montreal Star.

OBITUARY.

MRS. JOHN GOODFELLOW

NORHAM, May 28 — Mrs. John Goodfellow, a highly respected resident of Brighton, living near Codrington cheese factory, passed away at her home on Wednesday evening after a long and serious illness which spread itself over several years. Mrs. Goodfellow was in her 75th year having been born in Cramahe township 2½ miles east of Morganston on September 13th, 1850. She leaves to mourn her loss one brother David Dingwell, of Cramahe, and two sons, Grant of Mount Olivet, and David who resided with his mother.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, May 28.—Wednesday's sales of cattle at the Union Stock Yards were 2,319 head. This took care of practically all on offer, except about nine loads of stockers, mostly western, which were still on sale this morning. For today the receipts were 18 cars, 260 cattle, 116 calves, 554 hogs and 62 sheep and lambs. Any butcher's cattle in this morning were readily sold and two bunches of choice handyweights were disposed of at $8.25 a cwt.

The U.F.O. had three choice heavy steers which $8.50 was asked. The exporters bid $8.25 a cwt. and a compromise will likely close the deal. Good handyweight butchers sold at $7.25 a cwt. and some baby beeves from $8 to $9.50 a cwt. One load of coarse 1,000 lb. stockers sold at $6 a cwt. Butchers' cows were firm with one top at $6.50 a cwt. The buying of butchers' cattles was keen today and prices were again a little firmer.

Calves closed the week with a firmer undertone and tops are again making 11 cents; good calves 10 cents and mediums 7 to 8½ cents a pound.

The sheep and lamb market is just about steady. No choice sheep were on sale. Spring lambs made from $10 to $13 each, but this did not include any really choice.

Commission men were able to hold the price of hogs at $11.50 a cwt. f.o.b. on Wednesday and the price stands at this figure today.

STERLING RATES

Sterling demand $4.85 5-8.

Sterling cables $4.86 1-8.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, May 28.—New high price records for the season were reached in the wheat market today both by September and December deliveries. Crop damage reports, especially from Indiana, Ohio, and Kansas, together with complaint of dry weather northwest, led to much increased activity among speculative buyers. Closing quotations on wheat, though, were unsettled, ranging from 1 cent net decline to 4 1-4 cents rise. May 170 1-4 and July 165 1-4 to 165 1-2. Corn finished unchanged to 3 5-8 cents higher. Oats 3-4 to 1 5-8 up, and provisions at the same as yesterday's close to a rise of 17 cents.

EGG MARKETS

OTTAWA, May 28. — Reports from the West indicate a large percentage of seconds in the receipts. Storage stocks are also reported light in the Prairie Provinces. Canadian market conditions remain steady and the Chicago market has recovered a little.

Montreal—Jobbing, extras 34 to 35, firsts 32, seconds 28.

Hamilton—Jobbing, extras 32 to 33, firsts 29 to 31, seconds 25 to 27.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, May 28. — The trade in baled hay showed no improvement, the demand being chiefly for small lots to meet actual wants, but as the offerings were not excessive, the tone of the market was steady and prices were unchanged, with sales of good No. 2 timothy hay at $14 to $15 per ton, No. 3 timothy hay at $11 to $12 per ton, and clover mixed hay at $10.50 to $11 per ton, f.o.b. cars here.

The demand for potatoes showed no improvement and the market was quiet with an easier undertone, but there was no actual change in prices. No. 1 Green Mountain being quoted at 65 cents per bag, and Quebec varieties at 51 cents per bag of 90 lbs. in bulk, ex-track.

Egg Market Steady.

Owing to the activity that has prevailed in egg storing operation, stocks in Canada are accumulating fast and the quality of the holdings were probably never better on account of the very cool weather during the past two months. The tone of the local market remains firm under a good steady consumptive demand and a fairly active business was done in a wholesale jobbing way. The receipts were 1,893 cases, as against 2,266 for the same day last week, and 2,723 for the corresponding day a year ago.

The receipts of cheese were 3,492 boxes, as compared with 2,149 for the same day last week, and 3,037 for the corresponding day a year ago. There was no improvement in the demand from foreign buyers for supplies and the best bids received for Western white and colored were 86 shillings per cwt., which sellers were not disposed to accept, and the volume of business was small. The tone of the market on spot was about steady.

Beans were still selling at $2.70 per bushel.

A THOUGHT.

IN REPLY

I must admit,
Dear Sir, that when
You kiss me with such boldness,
It's hard to reason
Clearly, or
To act with proper coldness.

For when I feel
I ought to scold,
I find my lips tight sealed,
And in your dark
Disturbing eyes,
A new sweet world revealed.

Now if I thought
Your kiss would keep
Its magic charm forever,
I'd marry you
At once, dear, too,
Nor be regretful ever.

But I'm afraid
That things might change
Once I became your wife,
And so I think
I'd sooner, dear,
Just be engaged for life.

Ready To Help.

LIVERPOOL, May 28.— Grettir Algarsson, the British Columbian, who has been making plans for a North Pole flight in a dirigible type airship, believes that Captain Roald Amundsen has met with trouble in his flight to the North Pole, on which he started from Spitzbergen a week ago.

"It appears to us," Algarsson said, "that we must relinquish our flight to Alaska and concentrate on the rescue of Amundsen. I think Amundsen is in difficulty; it is clear his plans have been abandoned.

"I am negotiating for the purchase of an airplane which will be used if we go to the rescue."

OPPOSITION TO QUEBEC HARBOR $5,000,000 LOAN

Members of House Criticize Subvention—Not Warranted by Traffic.

HURT MONTREAL

Interest Unpaid on Other Advances by Dominion to Harbor Commission.

OTTAWA, May 29. — (Canadian Press) —The House of Commons, in committee Thursday afternoon, considered a resolution, preceding a measure to empower the advancement of five million dollars to the Quebec Harbor Commissioners for the completion of terminal facilities in Quebec Harbor. The resolution further provides that upon advances being made, debentures of the Corporation of the Quebec Harbor Commissioners equal in par value to the amount advanced, and repayable within 25 years from the date of issue, with interest, shall be deposited with the Minister of Finance.

Hon. P. D. A. Cardin, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, explained that the work under contemplation, included the building of a wharf 4,000 feet long, with sheds. These improvements in harbor facilities, in his opinion, were necessary not only to Quebec, but to the whole Dominion of Canada. There now existed keen competition in trade between countries, and it was the duty of the Government to do all it could towards providing proper harbor facilities.

Does Traffic Warrant It?

T. W. Caldwell (Progressive, Victoria, N.B.) said he believed in the Quebec Harbor, but wanted an assurance that the present harbor capacity would be fully utilized. Until sufficient traffic went over the Trans continental, to justify the present harbor capacity, he would be very reluctant to support further advances. Eastbound traffic was diverted at Montreal and much of it went to the United States, although Quebec was nearer Winnipeg than Montreal by rail, by 214 miles.

In answer to questions by J. A. Clark (Conservative, Durrard) Mr. Cardin stated that the total advances to date to the Quebec Harbor Commission were $12,612,995. None of the interest on these advances had been paid. The accrued interest unpaid was $6,000,000. Quebec Harbor Commission bonds had been sold to the public. On these, interest had been paid. The last payment made to the Dominion Government by the Quebec Harbor Commission was for loans between the years 1873 and 1887, when the total payment was $923,000.

R. A. Hoey (Progressive, Springfield) said that in view of the Panama development, Canada's harbor facilities were much in advance of present requirements. He felt that there was no excuse for spending more money along this line. He would like to know what would be the saving to Canada if the Quebec Harbor was developed, and whether it would not mean a great loss to the port of Montreal on which the Dominion had spent a good deal of money. Unless the Government could give him satisfactory assurance he would vote against this motion.

IMPERIAL POLICY HAS SPLIT LABOR

Close Relations With Dominions Favored by Clydeside Group.

LONDON, May 29. — Sharp differences have developed among the Labor members of Parliament on the question of Imperial policy according to the Star last night. The Clydeside representatives, along with George Lansbury and Guest, favor a specially close relationship between Great Britain and the Dominions, even to the extent of agreeing that there should be some partial preference given to the latter.

They take this stand because many people are emigrating from the United Kingdom to the dominions where labor conditions generally are better than on the European continent.

Conversely the free trade view is upheld by Ramsay MacDonald, J. H. Clynes, Philip Snowden, and other leaders in the labor party.

It is understood that the independent Labor party is appointing a commission to prepare a detailed Labor policy with regard to Empire problems with special reference to the feasibility of purchasing Dominion produce in bulk.

Mr. Arthur Blue is making good progress on Dr. Watson's new cottage, which will soon be ready for the roofing.

LAKEFIELD LIKED ST. LUKE'S ACTORS

Three-Act Comedy Best Amateur Seen in Village in Years.

LAKEFIELD, May 28.—The first appearance in Lakefield of St. Luke's A.Y.P.A. Dramatic Club of Peterboro in their three-act comedy, "The Troubles of Grandpa," scored a great success as this is, without exception the best play presented in the village in years. The characters were all well taken and kept the audience in roars of laughter from first to last. Owing to several other attractions, the audience was not as large as one could have wished, and certainly not as large as the performance merited, but those who were present were enthusiastic in their praise. The dialogue was sparkling, the situations clever and full of subtle humor.

Between the acts Messrs. Hope and Doyle contributed much appreciated solos, and Miss Queenie Hope gave a reading in which she impersonated a quaint little country woman describing her visit to her son in New York. The writer was Miss Hope's sister, and was a clever story, remarkably well told.

Personals.

Miss Loretta Gibson, of Campbellford, spent the week-end in the village with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. S. F. Gibson.

Magistrate Langley was in Havelock on Wednesday, presiding at the Sampson case.

BEHIND THE BAR.

As it was in the days of old. Bar tenders filling the glasses of 4.4 for the thirsty crowd of the opening da ys. The demand has fallen off this week.

They knew where to go and they went there. These people, mostly Americans, are walking down the main street of Windsor, Ont., to pull a few corks and sample the new 4.4 beer. This is only part of the crowd.

SUMMER ACTIVITY KEENE DISTRICT

Baseball Club to Put on Another Dance—Building Going On.

KEENE, May 29.—Mr. Wilfred Fletcher was unfortunate to have a very valuable pony kicked by another horse in pasture, breaking its leg, necessitating it being destroyed. Hundreds of people have always admired it, and Mr. Fletcher had repeatedly refused offers for it, being a lover of horses.

Curve Lake will play a league game with Keene here on the 3rd of June. The baseball club is putting on another dance on the evening of that date and another good crowd is looked for. The previous dance was a huge success, and it is to be hoped this one will be just as successful, to help the boys in their finances. A four-piece orchestra will be in attendance.

Mr. Stanley Taylor is building a new boathouse for his launch on the Keene River.

The Zion Methodist Church are holding their anniversary service next Sunday; Rev. Mr. Harris of Toronto will be the preacher for the day.

There has been good growth in Keene and vicinity during the last few days, and crops are looking very promising.

Mrs. Alice Browne is having some alterations done to her residence.

Miss Margaret Pennie, who has been seriously ill in Toronto, is improving slowly.

Mr. Frank Elmhurst has erected a fine verandah on his summer cottage at Rice Lake.

Pickerel fishing is still good in the river here, numerous good catches being reported.

Mr. Carson, Fish and Game Inspector, was in the village on Wednesday.

RULES EGYPT.

Sir George Lloyd, unionist member of the British Parliament, is the new high commissioner for Egypt. He succeeds Field Marshall Viscount Allenby, who had held that post since 1919.

DUCHESS OF YORK KEEN FOR CANADA

And the Duke Wishes to Visit Wales' Ranch.

LONDON, May 29. — "I would like to arrange with my brother-in-law, the Prince of Wales, for a stay at his ranch in Canada," was one of the many observations appreciative of the lure of Canada, made by the Duchess of York, who with the Duke of York yesterday paid a surprise visit to the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley, similar to that paid by the King and Queen last week. Most of the time of the Duke and Duchess of York at the Exhibition was spent at the Canadian pavilions. The Duchess was very much interested in the exhibits from Canada and told the Canadian officials that she was very anxious to visit the Dominion, never having been there.

Their Highnesses were not recognized in their unobtrusive tour of inspection and brought confusion to a party of boisterous schoolboys, who were also interested in the Canadian exhibits. The high-spirited youngsters had eluded the attendants who were pursuing them for creating a noise, and they almost collided with the Duchess entering the pavilion.

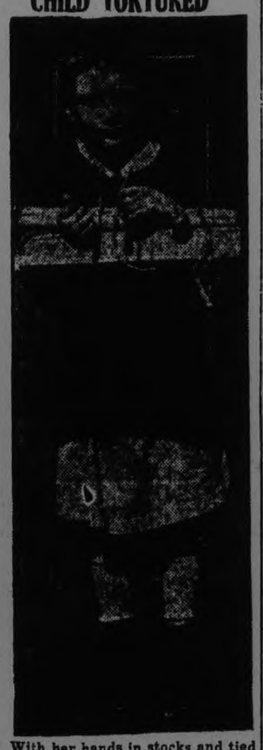
F. C. COLBECK RESIGNS.

Former Collegiate Teacher Here Retires From Toronto School.

The "City News Service" of the Toronto Globe carried a front page cut yesterday of F. C. Colbeck, principal of Humberside Collegiate, Toronto, who yesterday tendered his resignation, effective at the end of next month, from the teaching profession.

Mr. Colbeck, who has been forty years in the teaching profession, and thirty-one years principal of Humberside Collegiate Institute, was for some years a member of the staff of the old Collegiate Institute on Murray street here, and will be remembered by some of the older residents of the city.

CHILD TORTURED



With her hands in stocks and tied with a rope around her neck, Marjorie Elizabeth Neher, 6, was found in the attic of the home of her foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Neher, of Chicago. Screams of the child caused neighbors to call police.

COUNTY COMMITTEE DECIDES ON BRIDGE

To Be Built Over Eel's Creek at Depot Hill.

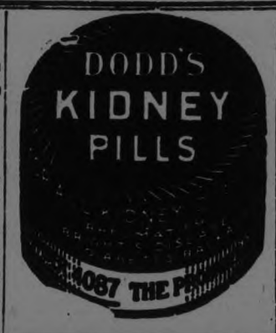
APSLEY, May 28. — Members of the County Council, comprising Warden Rye, Messrs. Middleton (Smith), Coughlin (Douro), Strickland, (Lakefield), Breckenridge (Belmont), and E. M. Elliott, County Treasurer, on Wednesday met Reeves Scott and Lean of Chandos and Anstruther at Burleigh, for the purpose of considering the building of a new bridge over Eel's creek at the Depot Hill. After viewing the present structure it was decided that a new bridge was necessary and the work will be proceeded with without delay, according to information given by Reeve Scott to the Examiner representative.

Leaves Frost Bitten.

The severity of Saturday night's frost is shown particularly in the appearance of the maple trees, the foliage which only last week had begun to unfold, now presenting a withered and blackened appearance. Crab apple trees which were just coming into blossom seem completely killed and even hardy lilac shrubs are wilted.

Some excitement was created in the village on Tuesday noon when telephone messages came in that the house occupied by Will Johnston, 3 miles away, was on fire. In a very short time a number of motor cars were on the scene. The roof was found to be alight caused by a spark from a chimney. The fire was speedily got under control and all damage averted.

The Boy Scout and Girl Guide movement came to life again on Wednesday, when in response to requests from the young people of Chandos, the Rev. C. Spence visited the district and organized a company of each. The Scouts meet each Wednesday at the school house, S. S. No. 8 Chandos at 4.30, and the Girl Guides at Mr. P. Tanner's house the same evening at seven o'clock. If the present enthusiasm is maintained both organizations will be a success.



GOSPEL HALL

Mr. Taylor Spoke Last Night on Sincerity in Religion.

At last night's special meeting in Gospel Hall there was an increased attendance and a big number of strange faces were seen. The audience appreciated greatly a duet by Mrs. Taylor and Miss Hartshorn.

Mr. Taylor, who has been conducting these special services, spoke on the people of Israel, who because of their insincerity were not trusted by Jesus. Nicodemus had the real thing and loved it. "All the religions in the world would not save a man," Mr. Taylor said. "There is one saviour, Jesus Christ."

Mr. Taylor spent part of the war period in service in Russia, and will to-night speak on "An Eastern Prisoo Scene." He has a splendid record for war service and has a lot to tell of war from the Russian point of view.

SINKS UNDER BRIDGE

BERLIN, May, 29.—To pass under low bridges on the River Spree, excursion steamers have been equipped with large water tanks, which when filled will lower the vessel just enough so that it can pass under the bridge.

Floglaze

The Finish that Endures

You Are Going to Paint!

Of course you are! Your pride in the appearance of your property, together with the enhanced value and saving through preservation from rot and decay, makes good painting a profitable investment.

In selecting your paint you have two choices: Floglaze a self-levelling paint, and others.

Diagram 1.

At the bottom of every brush mark there is a weak point in the paint film and also a lodging place for dirt.

It was considered good paint until our scientific research in the treatment of linseed oils and balancing our formulas revealed the wonderful possibilities of FLOGLAZE EXTERIOR PAINT, which produces a self-levelling, enamel-like surface, absolutely free from brush marks, like the diagram below—

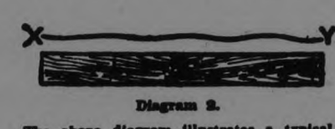

Diagram 2.

The above diagram illustrates a typical Floglaze Exterior Surface

If you could remove the two inches of brush-marked film illustrated in diagram 1 and stretch it out to a level surface, it would more than cover the 2¼" space, same as Floglaze. Just a plain fact with no argument against it.

This is why Floglaze covers 25% greater surface with an even film of weather-resisting paint, no weak points, that looks and wears 25% better than other paints.

Good brushes are essential for good painting, but with the poorest or coarsest brush, yes, even with a whisk, you cannot leave brush marks in Floglaze, it just naturally self-levels.

PAINT NOW, PAY LATER

You can have your painting done now and pay for it on the PARTIAL PAYMENT PLAN. Write us, giving the names of your hardware dealer and painter, and we will advise you how it can be done.

GOSPEL HALL

Forceful Address by Samuel Taylor on Sin and Repentance.

Mr. Sam Taylor, the Evangelist at Gospel Hall, spoke on Wednesday night to a good audience, from Luke 19. His address was full of crisp statements concerning sin.

All have gone astray like lost sheep! Human nature always goes contrary to the Divine order

Sin outraged God: drags God's moral glory in the dust!

No sinner can ever be happy.

Jerico mentioned in the text was a type of the world as to being under God's curse. Egypt was a type of the world as to resources. Babylon a type of the world as to religious. Sodom a type of the world as to wickedness.

The sinner must come down from his perch of self-righteousness!

Repentance draws out the moral corupture of the heart!

Repentance is self judgment, according to God's judgment!

Religion never saved a soul!

Mr. Taylor said I'm as sure of being in Heaven as if I were there, so could every sinner that simply trusted in Christ.

COMMONS UPHELD SPEAKER WHITLEY

Vote of Censure Sponsored by Liberals Defeated by 306 to 27.

LONDON, May 29.—The House of Commons adjourned last night for the Whitsun recess, untitl June 9. An unusual proceeding marked its final session. A vote of censure was moved againts tthe Speaker, Right Hon. J. H. Whitley by the Liberals, his own party, but was rejected by a vote of 306 to 27.

It was contended by Captain Wedgwood Benn, who moved the vote of censure, that the Speaker's action in granting closure on the debate on the second reading of the finance bill, was "contrary to recent precedents" and had prevented the Liberals from making as strong a case against the bill as they had desired. The motion was supported by Lloyd George and Sir John Simon. Not since 1902 has a vote of censure been asked against the Speaker.

In the coure of a statement on Bulgarian affairs Ronald McNeill, Under-Secretary of the Foreign Office that the Foreign Secretary, Austen Chamberlain, had very definitely refused consent to any extension of the time limit for the disbandment of the Bulgarian militia.

MEN OUTWORK WOMEN.

SYRACUSE, May 29.—Working women are absent from work three times as much time as men on account of sickness or other causes, an investigation by Harry W. Hepner of Syracuse University shows. Tests were made where men and women did exactly the same kind of work. The time loss by women in three months was 6 per cent., while that of the men was only 2 per cent.

SHOES AND TARIFF.

To the Editor, The Examiner,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—Our attention has been called to a letter from Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., which appeared in The Examiner of recent date and in which certain statements are made relative to the Canadian shoe manufacturing industry. The rapid increase in importations of boots and shoes under the low rates of the British Preferential Tariff has added to the difficulties of the shoe manufacturing industry in this country, at a time when trade conditions have been exceedingly trying. A considerable volume of shoe orders which have been needed urgently, and almost desperately, to keep Canadian plants operating on an efficient and low unit cost basis and to provide employment for Canadian shoe workers has been, and still is being, sent abroad to give employment to non-Canadian workers and to industries which are not contributing in any way to the development of this country. The import duty on boots and shoes from the United Kingdom has been reduced from 20 per cent in 1922 to 15¾ per cent, which is the lowest rate since 1874.

It is true that the value of total importations of boots and shoes is not as high at the present time as just before the war or even during the war or the immediate post-war period. But Mr. Gordon ought not to overlook the fact that export business in Canadian boots and shoes, which in 1919-20 reached the large total value of $5,679,720, has been almost completely cut off by exchange conditions, high tariffs of other countries against imported footwear and other factors.

Mr. Gordon suggests that the Canadian shoe manufacturers might find a profitable market in the United States, but there are apparently insuperable obstacles to the development of any extensive export business in boots and shoes from Canada to the Republic. In the first place, there is the fact that the United States customs regulations were devised with a view to discouraging importations to the greatest extent possible, where as Canada has done everying possible to make it easy to import. In this way, the United States gives an effective protection to the producers of that country, apart entirely from any consideration of tafiff rates. The tremendous overproduction of the shoe factories of the United States, where the present plants operating for seven months every year can produce all the sho required by the entire populatio also has created a situation whic makes the United States market most difficult one to cultivate.

Canadian shoe manufacturers have been able to develop some moderate business in the United States with hockey boots, but as soon as this business commenced to reach any considerable volume, United States importers have been warned that a duty may be imposed. As a matter of fact, we understand that one shipment of hockey boots was assessed for duty at 30 per cent as "sporting equipment", although such ruling was countermanded later. Reports are now in circulation in the United States that a tariff on hockey boots is to be imposed, despite the fact that total exports of Canadian boots and shoes to the United States during the last fiscal year were valued at only $110,660, whereas in the same period Canada imported from the United States boots and shoes (other than rubber footwear) to the value of $823,809. Also, there is an agitation in the United States, supported by the labor organiatzions, for a tariff on all imported boots and shoes. No Canadian manufacturer could afford to expend any considerable amount of money in an effort to build up a trade connection in that country, when that market is liable to be cut off overnight at the pleasure of the authorities at Washington. The United States is adhering to a policy of thorough-going protection, and any Canadian firms exporting manufactured goods to that country do so only under "suspended sentence."

The Canadian shoe factories are making boots and shoes of excellent quality, suited to all the requirements of the Canadian population, and this footwear is being offered at prices which leave little or no profit to the Canadian manufacturers. Since January 1, of this year, nine more shoe manufacturing firms in Canada have failed, discontinued business or been forced into reorganization. The manufacturers' selling prices of boots and shoes are less than 30 per cent higher than prices in 1913, although the general price level is 56½ per cent higher. More effective import safeguards would not add one cent to the price of any pair of shoes of Canadian manufacture, for the intense competition here fully protects every public interest. But the shoe business now going to England, if it were retained in Canada, would improve to an important extent employment conditions in those branches of the Canadian shoe manufacturing industry which are bearing the brunt of such competition.

Yours truly,
THE SHOE MANUACTURERS' ASSOCIATION OF CANADA.

PARLIAMENTARY HOLIDAYS.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir: In your issue of the Examiner of May 26th, I have seen that the O. Y. B who held a convention in the city, have sent a resolution to the Prime Minister of Canada, complaining that the House of Commons adjourned on Ascension Day, a Roman Catholic Church holiday, and condemning the unpatriotic and unprotestant attitude of the Prime Minister of Canada in thus permitting the Roman Catholic hierarchy to control and dictate his actions, etc. I could not suppress a smile when I was reading this resolution. I think it is a great joke. They as Protestants o[illegible]t to know that Ascension Day is not alone a [illegible] and Pentecost. This day always falls on a Thursday. I think it is very Protestant like and shows the Christian spirit of our Prime Minister by adjourning the House of Commons on such an important church holiday; so why all the fuss about it? Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space in your paper, I remain, yours truly.

Pyorrhea is a disease of the gums—not the teeth

You may take good care of your teeth and still get Pyorrhea. Once Pyorrhea secures a firm hold, pus pockets form, gums become weak and flabby, the teeth loosen and fall out no matter how white and sound they may be.

Forhan's means healthy gums

It contains the right proportion of Forhan's Astringent, as used by the dental profession in treating Pyorrhea. Forhan's protects the gums, keeps them in a firm, healthy condition, and leaves the mouth sweet, fresh and wholesome. If you don't care to discontinue your regular tooth paste, at least brush your teeth and gums once a day with Forhan's.

Forhan's is more than a tooth paste; it checks Pyorrhea. Thousands have found it beneficial for years. For your own sake ask for and get Forhan's For the Gums. At all druggists, 35c and 60c in tubes.

ASQUITH TAKES TITLE FROM DOMESDAY BOOK AND LINKS HIS NAME WITH THAT OF DE VERE

Newest Earl of Oxford Assumes Title of an Illustrious House—"The Longest and Most Illustrious Line of Nobles England Has Seen."

WITH A DIFFERENCE, GHOSTS MAY WALK.

Asquith Rewarded For His Long Public Service in England—Shades of the Oxford Blue Bloods Would Give History of the Country.

By H. I. BROCK.

HARDLY since the days of Queen Anne, when by the influence of the intriguing Mrs. Masham the same illustrious and ancient title was conferred upon the Queen's favorite and Minister, Robert Harley—hardly since then has any commoner been honored as Mr. Asquith has recently been honored in having conferred upon him the Earldom of Oxford.

Many commoners have been raised to the peerage in King George's ...e and before him under Edward and Victoria and William and ...he other Georges. They have been statesmen and soldiers and ... and even, sometimes, bankers or brewers. But they have ... the House of Lords tagged with nobiliary designations bor... from their own achievements or derived from some local ...at... or association. They have not been invested with a ...l seignory that goes back almost to the Domesday Book.

...israeli is Earl of Beaconsfield, ...ft is Earl of Birkenhead, ...wa... is Earl in his own name, ...D... Smith Lord Nelson of the ...Balfo...ner of Khartum, Rob...andahar and Pretoria, ...N... Ypres, Grey of Fal...urzon of Kedleston. But ...Asquith, barrister, and son ...seph Dixon Asquith of Mor...in Yorkshire, is Earl of ...ford. To be sure, an after...ought, invited by protests from descendants of ancient holders of the title, had added "and Asquith" to the new Earl's official designation.

None the less does this modern lawyer wear the title that the Empress Matilda conferred in 1142 upon Aubrey de Vere, whose forbear of the same name is set down in the Domesday Book in 1086, as the holder of a great fief in Essex, Cambridgeshire and Suffolk. Aubrey's father, hereditary Great Chamberlain of England under Henry I., built the noble tower of Castle Hedingham, which still stands as the finest example of a private Norman keep in all Britain.

A Long and Illistrious Line.

After this first Aubrey were nineteen other Earls of the House de Vere, running down through the reigns of all the Kings and Queens till the last male of the line, named Aubrey, like the first, died under William of Orange in 1703.

Macaulay called this house "the longest and most illustrious line of nobles that England has seen." Tennyson in his much-quoted poem about the high lady made the very name of de Vere synonymous with the most ancient and the bluest blood, and Chief Justice Crew wrote in 1626: "I suppose there is no man hath any apprehension of gentry or nobleness but his affections stand to the continuance of so noble a name and house."

It is true that the title of Earl of Oxford has also been borne by six persons of the comparatively obscure Harley family, having been bestowed, as already related, by Queene Anne upon the wily politician whose grandmother was the celebrated letter writer, Lady Brilliana Harley. Robert Harley shrewdly employed De Foe and Swift as pamphleteers in his service, and had a "silky female relative" about the court in the person of Abigail Hill, later Mrs. Masham, and of him it was well said that he had "grown by persecutions, turnings out and stabbings."

For Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough, did get him turned out at least once from the Queen's Ministry, and a French abbe did prick him with a penknife in the very presence of the Privy Council. For all that Harley was a somewhat able Minister and a useful, if unscrupulous, public servant. He was likewise the man who collected the famous Harleian Manuscripts now in the British Museum. But he belonged no more than Asquith does to the house of Vere de Vere, which came to England in William the Conqueror's time from the little Norman village of Ver, near Bayeux of the Tapestry. By the way, Harley ...d not seek a saving difference by ...cluding his own name. He double... ...ed the medieval color of his honors. ...k was also Earl of Mortimer.

Sits Now With the Lords.

Obviously as a badge of difference ...squith will do just as well. And ...ist as completely as to Harley in his ...me there is assured to the veteran ...iberal leader that seat in the Upper ...ouse of the British, Parliament, ...hich in the sad decline of his party ...n no longer be safely found for ...m in the Commons. Even so dif...nced, one of the oldest and most ...oric titles in all England may be ...co... not an inadequate reward even for a long life of public service culminating in an eight-year tenure as Prime Minister. Besides the man who sat for thirty-two years as member of Parliament for East Fife and who married as his second wife Emma Alice Margaret, sixth daughter of Sir Charles Tennant and sister of the first Lord Glenconner—this man was, at least, educated at Oxford, having been a Scholar and a Fellow of Balliol—which Harley never was.

In view of the Harley episode, the ghosts of all the dead de Veres may not rattle their ancient bones and clank their rusty armor around 10 Downing Street to the utter dispersion of Prime Minister Baldwin's slumbers. Yet if those ghosts chose to walk, their shadows, parade would furnish a processional of the history of England not easily to be matched by any house in all the present peerage. Let us invite the ghosts of so much Norman blue blood from Mr. Baldwin's bedside.

After the formidable apparition of the first Earl Aubrey, confirmed in his earldom and other honors by Henry Plantagenet, might come his younger son, Robert, who was one of the Twenty-five Executors of Magna Charta and whose marriage with an heiress of Bolebec added a barony to the family out of which was evolved the title of Viscount Bolebec, borne by the successive heirs to the Earldom. Earl John, seventh of the line, fought with Edward, the Black Prince, at Crecy and Poitiers and bore his part in all the wars of Edward III.

Robert, ninth Earl, was the particular favorite of the Black Prince's son, by the "Fair Maid of Kent," the unfortunate Richard II. Richard bestowed upon Robert the Order of the Garter and lands and castles in such profusion as to excite the jealousy of all the other Barons. He assigned him as Irish Viceroy and made him Marquess of Dublin and Duke of Ireland, but Earl Robert managed to avoid actually going overseas to his Irish dominions. He fought on Richard's behalf against Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, but at Radcote Bridge, in Oxfordshire, he was beaten by Gloucester's forces and had to flee to the Netherlands. He was attainted and condemned to death, but avoided the utter fulfillment of the penalty by remaining on the Continent and living mostly in Paris.

He died childless, this sometime Duke of Ireland in absentia, and the Earldom of Oxford, by consent of Parliament, was restored, in 1393, to the family and given to his uncle Aubrey. This Aubrey's son Richard was one of those who commanded at Agincourt, and it was Richard's successor, John, twelfth Earl, who, in 1462, was beheaded with his eldest son as a partisan of the House of Lancaster.

A younger son, John, the thirteenth Earl, was one of the allies of Warwick, the "King Maker." He shared Warwick's exile, he fought and lost at the battle of Barnet; he held St. Michael's Mount in Cornwall for four months against the men of York; he was imprisoned near Calais for ten years, ...e escaped and fought for Henry Tudor at Bosworth Field, where Richard III. lost his life and his crown. In due time he had the grim satisfaction as Constable of trying for his life John Tiptoft, Earl of Worcester, who had condemned his own father to death. Nine years earlier he carried on wars in Flanders, in the very year when Columbus was discovering America.

And after Henry VII. reigned as King, it was he who in 1498 entertained lavishly at his seat of Castle Hedingham that acquisitive monarch and paraded a great number of his retainers in livery—a vain glory which was by one of the sumptuary laws of the period forbidden. The King thanked his host urbanely and fined him 15,000 marks.

The Two "Fighting Veres."

This active and resplendent nobleman died in 1513 without issue and was succeeded by a nephew and then by a cousin, John, fifteenth Earl, who enjoyed the favor of that accomplished matrimonial adventurer and theologian, Henry VIII. Likewise this John was grandfather to the two famous brothers who were known as the "fighting Veres" and have a monument in Westminster Abbey. One of the two, Sir Francis, fought the Spaniards in Flanders so effectively and handled his English troops so skillfully that he is esteemed as the man who broke at last the prestige of the Spanish veterans and established that of the British. His camp became a sort of war college for aspiring young officers, among whom, to name only two, were Lord Fairfax, the Parliamentary General, and Miles Standish.

John, sixteenth Earl, was, it seems, kindly looked upon by these successive sovereigns — young Edward VI., Bloody Mary and Elizabeth. This fortunate nobleman contrived to get back the Great Chamberlainship enjoyed by the first Aubrey, but lost to the house of Vere during the shifts of the Wars of Roses. It was John's son, Edward, the seventeenth Earl, who gave the reputation of the family a new and picturesque turn.

Before him the Earls of Oxford of the line of de Vere had sometimes been courtiers, but they had usually been soldiers as well. This Edward was brought up by Elizabeth's Lord Chancellor Burghley and married to Burghley's daughter. His youthful desires for military or naval employment were discouraged because the old fox of a Chancellor "counted on his good looks and his skill in dancing and in feats of arms to give him a high position at court."

Scapegrace That Elizabeth Favored.

What happened was that the young Earl patronized players, poets and musicians, wrote poetry himself, dissipated his fortune in riotous living, and though for a time he delighted Elizabeth did not fail in the end to offend her by dsahing off to Flanders without her royal permission and fighting a duel with a gentleman named Knyvet. He also tried a jail delivery—that of his kinsman, Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, from the Tower—and insulted Sir Philip Sidney on the tennis court at Whitehall Palace by calling him a "puppy." A duel was arranged, but Elizabeth would not let Sidney fight Oxford on account of the Earl's superior rank. She even directed Sidney to apologize to Oxford, and when he refused sent him away in deep disfavor.

This scapegrace Oxford sat on the commission that tried Mary Queen of Scots and took part also in the trials of Arundel, Essex and Southampton. So that if his ghost goes haunting either the Prime Minister or the Asquiths he might very well trickle a horrid trail of blood. At one stage he was so reduced in fortune that he had to seek pecuniary help from the men of letters whom in his prosperous days he had patronized. But he partly retrieved his desperate plight by a second marriage to an heiress.

The scapegrace's son, Henry, eighteenth Earl, was twice imprisoned in the Tower for opposing the Duke of Buckingham. After his death on a military campaign in the Low Countries, succession to the earldom and the Great Chamberlainship got into the courts. Eventually the earldom went to a poor relative who was serving as an officer in the army in Holland. The hereditary office of Great Chamberlain was bestowed upon Lord Willoughby d'Eresby, son of the previous Earl's aunt, in whose descendants it is still vested. The nineteenth Earl, Robert, the ex-poor relative, was killed as became a soldier at Maestricht.

It was his son, Aubrey, who became the twentieth and last Earl of the de Vere line. He also married an heiress, and having loyally plotted against the Commonwealth in Cromwell's time was not unfavorably regarded by that long exiled monarch Charles II., when he came into his own again. Charles rewarded de Vere's devotion with the command of a regiment which, in right of its Colonel, was called the Oxford Blues.

That regiment is still ... called "... Blues." It is, in fact, the ... ment of Royal Horse Guards ...blue, troopers of which used to take turns with the Life Guards in being the muonted statues in armor, high boots and plumed helmets at the gates of what London knows as the Horse Guards in Whitehall.

The Horse Guards, by the way, is just around the corner from No. 10 Downing Street, with which the new Earl of Oxford and Asquith is more intimately identified than with matters feudal and military, though he held the office of Secretary for War in 1914. The garden of No. 10 Downing Street, indeed, abuts on the Horse Guards Parade, where stand the equestrian statues of Roberts and Wolseley, and where is held the impressive military ceremony known as the Trooping of the Colors.

This writer has seen the thing done, with the King, Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener all present on horseback. How much of historical perspective would have been added to the pageant if these two modern warriors, instead of their own modern names, had worn title also borrowed from England's historical tapestry! They might have staggered respectively under the heraldic mantles of Simon de Montfort's Earldom of Leicester and Thomas of Woodstock's Earldom of Gloucester.

A Mock Marr'age

By the way, what would have become of Marlborough and Wellington if they had got mixed wup ith the feudal peerage—not to mention Nelson and Collingwood and Jervis, Lord St. Vincent?

The last of the de Vere Earls of Oxford was deprived of his fancy regiment of horse by that ill-conditioned monarch, James II. It was restored by William of Orange, who was himself a considerable soldier. Under the merry Charles, Oxford also had been merry. There is a story that he celebrated a mock marriage with a stage lady who played Roxolana in "The Rival Queens" in Nell Gwyn's company, the pretended priest being one of my Lord's trumpeters, and the record says that there was a son of this irregular union.

Nevertheless, when the last Earl Aubrey de Vere died an old man in 1703, the legitimate male line died with him, and with the male line the earldom. But he had a daughter, who married Charles Beauclerk, first Duke of St. Albans, elder son of Nell Gwyn and Charles II. Their descendants are named de Vere Beauclerk, and the barony of Vere, which was not limited to male heirs, has followed that line. Thus there are still de Veres who are also of royal, if irregular, lineage.

There is no denying that a very unusual thing has been done, British custom and prejudices considered, in the selection of a title for Henry Herbert Asquith. The coupling of his name with that of the appropriated feudal seignory is a political and legal plea in avoidance and a confession of going beyond the expected in such cases in order to honor the respectable career of an aged parliamentarian without a constituency. But it cannot be said that Mr. Baldwin lacked precedent for what he has done. The precedent is exact and literal—except for the one article of the supplementary title. In one case it is Mortimer, in the other is is Asquith.

What really matters, perhaps, is that Margot Asquith is, after all, Countess of Oxford—with a difference.

Working too hard is about as bad in the long run as loafing too hard.

You can only make interesting friends by being interested.

WOMAN IS SLAVE OF MANY WHIMS

HELEN KELLER.

If you had never seen a real American flapper, with her bobbed hair, short skirts rouged cheeks, and painted lips from which a cigarette dangled, what would you think of her?

If you never had heard this same flapper chattering flippantly about many dances, wild auto rides and her many admirers, can you imagine what you would think of her?

There is one prominent American woman, who has lived in this country all her life, and yet never has seen or heard the American flapper—so easily seen and heard.

Has Mind Picture.

But in her "mind's eye" she has a picture of the modern American girl and she has very definite opinions regarding her.

"Woman once was the slave of ... now—she is the slave of flitting pleasure."

Those words sum up what Miss Helen Keller, blind and deaf since she was 19 months old, thinks of the modern girl she has never seen.

The picture this famous blind woman has of the flapper was obtained entirely from her "hand talks" with her teacher, Mrs. Anne Sullivan Macy, who "writes" words on Miss Keller's hand by certain movements of her own hand. With almost magic rapidity, Mrs. Macy translates long sentences to her "pupil" by deft touches of her fingers on the palm of Miss Keller's hand. Miss Keller replies to her hand questions in slow and sometimes indistinct English, because her articulation cannot be aided by hearing what she says.

"Although I have never seen a woman smoking a cigarette, of course I think it is a disgusting sight," Miss Keller says.

Can't Imagine Bobs.

"And bobbed hair and short skirts, I can't imagine that they would make a woman attractive. If I had my sight back, one of the last things I would want to see would be a girl of this type.

"She is only thinking of her own pleasure. She is constantly seeking frivolous happiness, and she never finds real happiness. She just flits about from one selfish pleasure to another. She is a slave of pleasure.

"Without my sight and hearing, I believe I am happier than she is."

THIRD WIFE FOR CHAPLIN, GUESS OF FIRST SPOUS.

By MILDRED HARRIS,
Screen Star and First Wife of Charlie Chaplin.

He is a true artist. He is brilliant, and has the usual restless mind peculiar to genius.

Only one type of mate is suitable to such a man. One who is equal to him in brilliance, and also is possessed of a mind ever seeking the new in life, the high lights and the deep shadows.

Such a mind, naturally, is not found in one of immature years.

I do not know the intimate circumstances of the Chaplins' present domestic life, but from my past knowledge of Chaplin I do not believe blame attaches to either of them.

It is just that he only can find find his happiness in marriage with one of his own years, with a mind developed into the spheres in which he thinks and lives.

A horoscope cast for Mr. Chaplin some time ago said he would marry three times.

Undoubtedly, to my mind, this horoscope is sure of fulfillment.

I do not say this because of my belief in the supernatural, but because I feel that love plays a very important part in his life.

More so even than in the lives of most persons, as he always is searching for an ideal, for one who will be his complete dream, come true.

And he will have to find it in one older than I was, 17, when I married him.

Mr. Chaplin loves children. Indeed, very, very much.

It may be that the birth of a baby to the Chaplins would heal any threatened breach between the two. But that is a matter more for conjecture than for prophecy.

All in all, if the Chaplins separate, I would judge it to be due merely to the fact that they were not real mates, probably neither to blame, but still recognizing that life apart would be better for each.

Otherwise the growing years would cause their realization that they are not happy together to grow.

My personal opinion is that in any case certainly a child should be well provided for and a girl permitted sufficient to care for herself. But no one should have ever thing taken away for which he h struggled for years.

'Member the days when an old pair of pants, an' a sweater were all that you wore? Wasn't it fun, just to loaf, when by chance, you were hurriedly sent to the store?

'Member how toughened your feet used to get, when you shed both your stockings and shoes? Wasn't it great, when the roadway was wet, and the mud 'round your ankles would ooze?

All of those mem'ries come back now and then, to a man in a sort of a haze Gee it's no wonder we wish, once again we were back in those barefooted days.

LIKE CHAIN LETTERS

CHARLES CITY, Ia., May 27.—For 22 years chain letters have been making the rounds of George Younker of Na[illegible], Ia., and his 11 brothers and sisters. Each member of the family writes a letter and then mails those of the others to another relative. In this way, each writes to all the others at one time.

RESTFUL SLEEP NEEDED

Strongest Nervous System Will Collapse Without Complete Rest.

Some folk can sleep in a boiler factory.

Others are driven to nervous frenzy by the barking of a dog, five blocks away.

Pathologists have agreed, however, that sharp and sudden noises are a cause for nervous disorders. One's muscles may rest in the midst of noise, but nerve centers continue to get the hammer blows through the auditory nerves.

And without complete rest the strongest nervous system will ultimately break down with nervous exhaustion or with some specific nerve disorder.

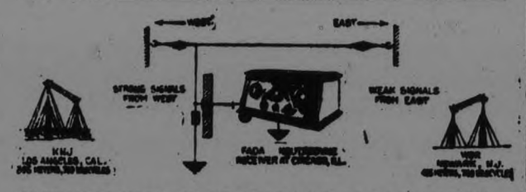
Sound restful sleep in the presence of noise is impossible. A person who lives in the midst of noise gets no really complete rest, day or night. Asleep or awake, the nerve centers are constantly receiving a torrent of irritating impulses.

No bedroom should face a street where there is auto or street car traffic all night.

It is much better to have a bedroom overlooking an alley, garages, and neighbors' back yards, providing there are no cats or dogs, than to have it looking out over the street lights and all-night traffic.

Everyday Radio

BY KIMBALL HOUTON STARR



INTERFERENCE FROM DISTANT BROADCASTING STATIONS ON THE SAME WAVE LENGTH TO WHICH THE RECEIVER IS TUNED

Very often broadcasting stations near in wave length to each other will produce heterodyne or "beat" notes. The ordinary radio receiver is not usually capable of differentiating between two broadcasting stations that are close enough to each other in wave length to produce this audible "beat" note.

FADA Neutrodyne receivers are possibly the most selective receivers on the market today. Under ordinary conditions it is possible to differentiate between two stations differing in wave length as close as five meters, which corresponds to about one or two degrees on the condenser dials. In some particular cases it is also possible to tune between distant stations of about the same intensity, differing only two or three meters in wave length, by carefully adjusting the tuning dials.

Additional selectivity can be obtained by means of the directional effects of the antenna. A single wire antenna with the receiving set connected to one end is capable of receiving signals more strongly in the direction away from the open end; in other words, if the open end of the antenna is towards the East, the reception will be much better from the West.

The drawing illustrates the interference that one may experience when either local or distant broadcasting stations are transmitting on the same wave length to which the receiver is tuned. The drawing also illustrates in a particularly clear way the directional antenna. The best results will be secured in this case in receiving broadcast signals from the West. With the receiver located in Chicago, as shown, Eastern stations will come in with good intensity. The stations in the West, including Southwest and Northwest will, however, come in with greater intensity than those from Easterly directions.

POSSIBILITIES OF NORTHERN ONTARIO GREAT

Good Chance For Immediate Development of Mixed Farming.

GOVERNMENT AID.

Province Will Co-operate and Assist Financially, Says Hon. Mr. Martin.

TORONTO, May 29.—(Canadian Press).—Encouragement to livestock breeders and shippers in Ontario and Canada generally was held out in the addresses delivered at the annual meeting of the Eastern Canada Livestock Union here yesterday afternoon by Hon. John H. Martin, Ontario Minister of Agriculture.

Touching on the development of Northern Ontario, Hon. Mr. Martin spoke most enthusiastically of the agricultural possibilities of that part of the Province, in which he sees a chance for the immediate and rapid progress of dairy farming. The shipment of butter as compared with other food commodities would go far to solve the transportation problems of the district, he declared. The Minister outlined the policy of the Provincial Government with regard to the assistance rendered the farmers of the north in co-operation in the production of dairy products, pointing out that the management of their undertakings must be looked after by the farmers themselves. Government assistance, well deserved in view of the pioneer work being done by farmers of the north, would be financial, mainly, but departmental employees would assist with advice, farmers coming to the older sections of the province to select breeding stock.

NOTES ABOUT BOOKS

The Catskill Mountains are about as well known to the world as any group of mountains in America. That is to say, people have become familiar with the name even if they have never had the pleasure of traversing its picturesque valley or summering at one or other of its spacious and beautiftul resorts.

Those of us who have read the popular story of Rip Van Winkle will be reminded at once that is was in the Catskills that Washington Irving laid the scene of his legendary hero's long sleep. Since his day the Catskills have become one of the most famous of American tourist resorts. Every year thousands turn their thoughts towards motor trips through the region and for such as these there can be no book so completely welcome as "The Catskills" by T. Morris Longstreth. It is filled with beautiful illustrations, one of which entitled Natty Bumppo's View, will bring to our minds Fenimore Cooper's Leather Stocking Tales, where under the names of Leatherstocking, Hawkeye, The Pathfinder, The Deer Slayer, Cooper brought Natty Bumppo into the front rank of wood ranging heroes.

Vermont Beautiful is a book of very much the same type as The Catskills and one has only to peep into its pages to recognize at once its value as a guide to that beautiful state. The illustrations are far better than one finds in most books of this character, and the artist, the naturalist and the traveller will find its pages filled with all sorts of interesting facts. The author, Wallace Nutting, has endeavoured to give an absolutely impartial picture of the State as it presented itself to his eyes and allowed no ulterior considerations whatever to weigh with him in his selection of pictures or his reading matter. Its quaintness and its beauty were his main consideration and the excellence of his judgment is shown in every page of the book. There are no less than 304 photographs, made within a year of publication and picturing in the most charming way possible the glories of rural New England.

Salisbury Plain, its stones, cathedral, city, villages and folk, by Ella Noyes, is, to one, who like myself, has lately trod its streets, and wandered through its cloisters and down the aisles of its glorious cathedral, a book of entrancing interest. But it is a book also that should appeal to anyone who contemplates a trip to the old land and also to those who feel a sympathetic interest in the cities of England. Salisbury is not the least interesting of English cities, and it has in its immeditae neighborhood places of abiding mystery. Stonehenge and Sidbury Hill and Avebury, famed for their Druidical remains, and Bemerton, where in his rural rectory George Herbert dreamed his dreams and penned many of his immortal poems. Legends of King Arthur and the knights of the Round Table linger around the neighborhood, for it was it not from Amesbury that Lancelot bore the remains of Queen Guinevere to Glastonbury?

POLA'S DOUBLE ADMITS PLOT.

Justine Valse, 24, movie actress, is under arrest in Los Angeles, having confessed that she was one of the principals in a plot to blackmail Pola Negri, movie star. The scheme hinged on a photograph which is said to reveal Miss Valse, who strikingly resembles Pola Negri, in a compromising position. She says the men involved in the plot kept her under influence of dope for several months.

RICHARD HALL & SON

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Burton

THE STORY SO FAR:

GLORIA GORDON, beautiful flapper, marries DICK GREGORY, a struggling lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes ....but no work or children.

Dick borrows his mother's maid, MAGGIE to teach Gloria to cook but she refuses to learn. Later Maggie leaves disgusted with Gloria's wild par. Then Gloria hires RANGHILD SWANSON although Dick tells her they can't afford a maid. Her extravagance swamps Dick with debts. . .

Gloria begins to see a great deal of STANLEY WAYBURN, an actor with whom she b comes infatuated. Her best friend MAY SEYMOUR, wife of DR. JOHN SEYMOUR, begs her not to see Wayburn. She tells her how she, herself, has been snubbed because of a foolish love affair with JIM CAREWE. MOTHER GREGO also begs Gloria to mend her ways.

Dick becomes dangerously ill with pneumonia. While he is recovering, Wayburn tells Gloria he expected to leave town soon to get a job in New York. He needs money. Gloria gets $200 from Dick's secretary, MISS SUSAN BRIGGS, by telling her she wants it to have some gardening done as a surprise to Dick.

Wayburn promises to pay it back within three weeks. Gloria goes shopping to buy new dress, so as to appear attractive in Wayburn's eyes. She discovers, to her horror, that she is getting fat.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

They were out in the open country now.

The day was perfect. Here and there the white sail of a cloud floated across the dark, blue sky.

There were dandelions in the tangle of wild grass that edged the red brick pavement.

And in the budding branches of the trees robins were singing that song of theirs that is as sweet and cold and gay as spring itself.

Gloria stopped her car at the edge of the road.

"What's the matter now?" Wayburn asked.

"Nothing," Gloria answered. "Only if you don't like my face this way I'm going to change it."

She took out a small handkerchief and began to rub the mascara from her eyes and the rouge from her cheeks.

Wayburn lifted the shadowy brim of her hat at one side and looked at her. He saw that she was crying.

"Well, what's the matter with you?" he asked.

Gloria went on crying quietly. Then, presently, she dried her tears on a little wet ball of a cambric handkerchief. She looked up at Wayburn with wet, red-rimmed eyes.

"How can I help crying?" she asked. "It's bad enough to think of your going away—but to think that you're going where that Chotek woman is . . .

Wayburn put his arm around her. There was a look of annoyance in his eyes. Nothing in the world bored him quite so much as a woman in tears. It robbed her of all the beauty that made her a thrilling companion.

"Oh, come, come, Russet!" he said impatiently. "Only a few days ago you were ready and willing never to see me again! How come you've changed your mind so soon? I never know where I stand with you!"

Gloria drew a long sobbing breath.

"If you had my mind you'd want to change it, too," she said. "It's driving me crazy. I try to put you out of it . . . but you keep coming back. I've done my best not to think of you for weeks. . . . Oh, what am I going to do when you're gone?"

Wayburn patted her shoulder comfortingly.

"Well, I'm not so happy about leaving you, little Russet," he said. "But let's forget it. This may be the last day we'll ever have together. Let's make the most of it!"

He opened Gloria's bag and took out her little vanity case. He powdered her nose and chin with the expertness of an actor who understands make-up perfectly.

Gloria could smell whisky on his breath. She leaned away from him and started the little car.

"That's right, step on her! A fast ride and a merry one, eh, what, Russet?" Wayburn asked. He lit a cigaret. "Want a puff, Baby?"

Gloria took a few puffs. Then she made a grimace of distaste and handed Wayburn the cigaret.

"You know, Dick's made me cut out cigarets around home," she said. "And I guess I'm losing my taste for them."

Wayburn laughed.

"If you're not careful Dick will make a good woman of you yet," he said. "Doesn't he let you take a drink any more, either?"

"I'll tell the cock-eyed world he doesn't. Not if he sees me first!" Gloria answered.

"Tough luck for you," Stan sympathized.

"No use my asking you to have a drink of this then," he said cheerfully. He winked at her and tilted the flask against his lips.

Gloria watched him through her eyelashes.

He was darkly flushed and there was a twisted smile on his mouth.

"Don't take any more for a while, Stan," Gloria begged. "You had quite a slant on when I met you today. Don't take any more, please!"

"You don't ever need a drink, really, anyway," Gloria went on nervously. "You have plenty of pep without it. I guess you were born 'hooched' . . . And you do drink too much! You'll wind up in the Old Soaks' home if you don't watch your step!"

"Alright, Carrie Nation, you take a drink, then, and help me get rid of the stuff," Stan suggested sullenly.

He was scowling.

"Now, Stan, don't tempt the driver. She's got to keep her wits about her," Gloria said soothingly.

"One little swig won't hurt you," Stan went on stubbornly. He offered her the flask. "Come on, be a sport!"

Gloria shook her head.

"I never drink when I'm driving," she said.

"Well, this is one time when you're going to!" Wayburn's voice was thick.

Abruptly he gripped her wrist. Gloria could feel his hot breath in her face.

Gloria got her arm between his chest and hers. She pushed him away from her.

"You poor sap!" she almost screamed. "Don't touch me when I'm driving! Do you want me to wreck the car? We're almost in the ditch this minute!"

She steered the car to the middle of the road. The sun had gone behind a cloud-bank, and a few slivers of rain gleamed on the windshield.

"April shower," Wayburn remarked carelessly. He had sunk into the corner of his seat. He was looking at her very hard and intensely. His jaw hardened.

Before Gloria knew what was happening, he had her in his arms again. He bent her head back and kissed the white lids of her eyes.

"Russet!" she heard him say between clenched teeth. "Russet, I want you! I'd give anything in the world this minute . . ."

Gloria forgot all about the car. All she wanted was to get Stan's face away from her. She was frightfully afraid of him suddenly. She raised both her hands from the steering wheel and caught him neatly under his right jaw bone.

There came a crash! The sound of splintering glass! A blinding glare as of a thousand lightnings! Then . . darkness!

There was a roar like Niagara in Gloria's ears. And above it she heard someone screaming like a wild animal caught in a trap. It was the sound of her own voice.

She was lying in the wet road. Above her towered the little blue car that Dick had given her for her birthday. Its wheels were in the air.

Gloria put out her hand to pick them up. But a sharp pain in her shoulder stopped her. She groaned and shut her eyes with the agony of it.

. . . Then she looked all around her. Where was Stan?

Could he be pinned under the wrecked car? . . . Gloria's breath almost stopped at the terrible thought.

"Stan!" she called; "Stan, where are you? Answer me!"

There was no reply . . . not even an echo.

With almost super-human effort she dragged herself up on one elbow. She looked down the wet road. Far in the distance was a man's figure. Gloria knew it was Stan.

"I suppose he's going for help," she groaned aloud. "And he'd better hurry! For I'm going to die if someone doesn't stop this pain pretty soon!"

She clenched her teeth. Her whole body was a mass of red-hot pain, that grew worse every minute. . . . Then the world seemed to spin away from her. She had fainted again.

The next time Gloria opened her eyes she thought the sun was shining. She seemed to be looking straight into it.

But after a while she saw that it wasn't the sun, after all, but a lamp burning on a table near her. It was an oil lamp with a yellow glass shade.

Beside it sat a little old lady with round red cheeks, wrinkled like winter apples. She was knitting.

"Where am I?" Gloria thought. Then, suddenly, she remembered.

She made a great effort to speak. And at last she did.

"Where's Stan?" she asked.

"Your husband? That's what we'd like to know!" the little old lady said. She pushed her spectacles up on her forehead and peered at Gloria.

"He came here and told me and the mister that his wife was lying dead under the wreck of his automobile up the road, jest as we was settin' down to supper," she said. "And while the mister was getting his coat on to go back there with him . . . didn't he disappear jest as slick as you please!"

Gloria groaned. That was just like Stan!

"The mister has telephoned to town for an ambulance. It ought to be here for you any minute now," the old lady went on.

As she spoke there came the sound of an automobile outside the house. Heavy footsteps came across the porch of the little farmhouse that sheltered Gloria.

The door of the room opened and an old farmer, followed by two men, came in. The two men carried a stretcher.

Gloria screamed with pain when they picked her up and laid her on it.

She whimpered like a hurt animal all the way to town as the ambulance jogged back over the road . . . the same road that she and Stan had travelled that afternoon.

When Gloria opened her eyes again she was lying in the bright white receiving-room of a hospital.

Two nurses were with her. One was gently taking off Gloria's mud-stained clothes. The other stood beside her with a pad and pencil.

"What's your name?" she asked.

Gloria hesitated.

"Gloria hesitated.

"Gloria Gregory," she said at last.

"Nearest relative?" asked the nurse.

Gloria gave her mother's name and address.

Then she began to cry.

"I want my mother!" she sobbed. "I want my mother. . . . And tell her for heaven's sake to find out what has happened to Stan!"

She hated to think of Stan in his wild, intoxicated state, wandering around the dark country roads.

"Who's Stan? Your hubby?" the nurse asked.

"No," Gloria said. She closed her eyes.

YOUR GARDEN

BUYING A HOSE AND ITS CARE

Watering time commences with the first dry spell and to be adequately equipped with good garden hose means a great saving in time and temper. Buy a good hose that will not kink easily and will last. The first cost will be greater but there will be the added satisfaction and lasting qualities.

There are two kinds of hose on the market, the wrapped or sheeting and the molded, signifying the way they are made. The former (wrapped) is made up of a seamless rubber tube, wrapped with a rubberized cotton sheeting, and may or may not have a covering coat of rubber. The various qualities depend on the number of piles of sheeting used and the grade of rubber. This is a lighter and less expensive hose but fairly satisfactory for general purposes about the home grounds. The moulded hose is heavier and stiffer and almost kink proof. It is composed of three separate tubes of rubber, fitting one over the other with braided cotton jackets between each tube.

To tell whether you are buying good hose or not try testing its elasticity. You should be able to stretch it and then it should resume its former shape. A good hose also should not look old and dead.

A garden hose is measured by the inside diameter and not the outside. Size is important and to get the full flow, the hose should be at least an eighth of an inch larger than the opening of the tap. Taps are usually about one half inch in diameter so a 5-8 or 3-4 inch hose would be a good choice. A larger size than you need only adds to the weight and the expense.

Having purchased a good hose, avoid practices that will lessen its life and take good care of it. Leaving it out in the sun when not in use and bending it sharply as when dragging it around the corners of the steps or buildings will soon cause it to deteriorate. Also hanging in up on one nail or peg will cause weak spots. It is best stored on a reel of wood or iron that is easily portable or on three pegs arranged at the right intervals on the wall. This will keep the hose coiled in true circles which are easiest on it. Therefore never ruin your hose by leaving it lying about in the hot sun but rather choose a cool dark place for its storage. Under the verandah on the north side, in a brick garage or a basement that is not too damp, are excellent places. If storing the hose in the garage, keep it away from oil as it has a rotting action on the rubber.

Rather than buy a long unwieldly length of hose, it is better to instal taps at convenient points and carry a shorter length of hose about.

MURDERED WOMAN KNOWN IN COBOURG

Mrs. Margaret Mick Was Formerly at Cobourg Military Hospital.

COBOURG, May 29.—Mrs. Margaret Mick, who was so cruelly choked to death at the Women's Municipal Farm at Concord, where she for seven years has held the position of night matron, was on the staff of the Ontario Military Hospital here after the building was first remodeled and extended by the Government for the care of returned soldiers. Mrs. Mick went from here to Toronto and later took a position as night matron at the Women's Municipal Farm, which is situated some little distance from the men's farm at Longstaff. On account of Mas. Mick having resided here more than ordinary interest centres locally around the horrible occurrence.

Isabel Prouse, one of the girls who escaped and was re-arrested, is stated to be a former Bowmanville girl.

Will go to Petewawa.

The Second Heavy Battery, which has its headquarters at Cobourg, has received word that it is to proceed to Petewawa to give the men six days' firing practice, following the equivalent of six days' local training. The curtailing of expenditure by the Department of Militia has cut out much of the training for all units for the past few years, and the news of the camp at Petewawa was gladly welcomed by the men of the Heavy Battery.

Coldsprings Voting on Union.

Although it was anticipated that Coldsprings Presbyterian Church would enter the United Church without taking a vote, the request, accompanied by a sufficient number of signatures, was made a week or ten days ago that a vote be taken, and an announcement to that effect was made the following Sunday. Voting is now in progress in the Coldsprings congregation. It was begun on Tuesday of last week and will not be completed until next Tuesday. St. Andrew's Church, Baltimore, the associate charge with Coldsprings, has decided to enter the Union without taking a vote. Rev. S. E. Ferguson is pastor of both churches.

Storehouse Burned.

A storehouse at the rear of C. G. Johns' drug store here caught fire in some unknown way on Tuesday forenoon and was burned down. A quantity of medicated oil and some other goods were stored in it.

LIBERALS OF NEW RIDING ORGANIZE

J. Marshal of Stirling Elected President at Marmora Meeting.

(Havelock Standard).

The Liberals for the new riding of Hastings-Peterboro gathered at Marmora on Wednesday afternoon of last week, when a new executive was formed to plan for the coming Federal election.

Some of the delegates noticed were D. H. Munroe of Warsaw, president of East Peterboro's Liberal Association; Ed. Hawthorne, also of Warsaw, ex-Warden and one-time Liberal candidate for East Peterboro, on on the banish-the-bar policy; Reeve J. Robb and W. Richarrdson of Norwood; Mr. Gilroy of Coe Hill, B. O. Sctt, John Marshall and W. H. Heath of Stirling; Mr. Alysworth of Madoc and F. Baptv of Deloro.

These, with the help of others, turned the meeting into a genuine "love feast" of Liberal sentiments, which was interspersed in a free and easy manner by many brand new stories which caused roars of laughter.

Officers Elected.

The officers elected were:
President: J. Marshall, Stirling.
Secretary: Jas. Legrow, Stirling.
Treasurer: F. Bapty, Deloro.

Two vice-presidents for each municipality were elected, of which only a partial list was secured, as follows:

Marmora, W. Flynn, Mrs. (Dr.) Thomson; Rawdon: W. W. Heath, Miss M. Heath; Norwood: Mrs. Lawlor; Delora: Mr. Paquet, Mr. Crawford; Marmora Township: H. Maloney, Mrs. Caverley; Dummer: Dr. Munroe; Madoc: Mr. Childs, Miss Lowe; Havelock, Mr. Curtis; Coe Hill, Mrs. Gilroy.

All the municipalities were well organized with a good staff of workers.

HELP HOME TOWN

Successful London, Ont., Men Would Finance Hotel.

LONDON, Ont., May 29—Al and Charlie Christie, former London boys who have won considerable fame and fortune in the comedy field at Hollywood, have offered to help finance a new hotel for London. In a letter to a friend in this city, the brothers declared they would like to do something for their home city and so offered to invest money and otherwise aid in financing a large hotel, which is one of London's greatest needs. The offer will be brought before the city council.

REWARD FOR FLYERS.

LONDON, May 27.—In the coat of every British aviator flying over Afghanistan is a letter saying that if he is returned unharmed to the British lines, his rescuers will receive 10,000 rupees or approximately $3,500.

REBEKAHS MAKE PRESENTATION

Silverware Given to Mrs. (Rev.) G. S. Gervan By Lodge Members.

MILLBROOK NEWS.

MILLBROOK, May 29.—"Golden Sheaf" Rebekah Lodge, No. 176, held its regular session on Tuesday evening, followed by a social gathering, the Noble Grand, Sister Irene Fallis, being in the chair.

Instead of a formal programme a number of contests were arranged, which provided activity and fun for all. A "peanut scramble" gave everyone lively exercise, and the two-minute speeches, slips with the subject for each speaker having been given out just before the surprised recipients were called upon to respond, created plenty of amusement for the listeners.

The musical numbers were much enjoyed, and among these the mouth-organ solos by Bro. C. C. Garside, with Sister H. Barnard accompanying on the piano, received special token of appreciation.

An unusually enjoyable feature of the evening was the presentation of a case containing half a dozen silver butter spreaders to Mrs. (Rev.) G. S. Gervan. Brother P. I. Bentley, P.G., captain of the degree team, presented the gift, accompanying it with a few well chosen words expressing the deep appreciation felt by the degree staff for the willing service Mrs. Gervan has repeatedly given when an initiatory occasion made augmented assistance with the degree work necessary.

Taken completely by surprise, Mrs. Gervan made brief but suitable reply, stating her personal pleasure in anything she had been able to do in connection with the Rebekah Lodge, and her regret that, unavoidably, the ties of fraternity here must soon be severed.

Unfortunately, Mr. Gervan was prevented by illness from being present.

Gathered round the supper tables in the dining hall, the guests had further opportunity of developing the social spirit, and a most enjoyable hour was spent before the evening was finally brought to a conclusion.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Gervan have been helpful members in connection with the local Rebekah Lodge, and will be missed particularly on social occasions when their assistance with the programme was always much appreciated.

Rev. Mr. Gervan's pastoral connection with the Presbyterian Church here will be severed after the United Church comes into being on June 10th, the congregation having voted non-concurrent.

Empire Day Talk.

The Young People's League held an unusually interesting meeting this week, Mr. Bruce B. Dawson giving an instructive talk on "Empire Day."

The difficulties of administration in the British Empire, with its mixture of peoples, differing in color, religions and racial characteristics, were pointed out. The dependencies which as yet have not been entrusted with self-government constitute the chief problem, and call for tact, patience and a delicacy of understanding that taxes wise leadership to the utmost in dealing with them.

An application of the law of love is necessary, since one nation has no more right to seek its own public interests exclusively, in opposition to the interests of other nations, than one member of the same family has to seek his own private interests exclusively, or in opposition to the private interests of the rest of the family.

Having practical experience of the responsibility resting upon the public school teachers during the impressionable years of the children's lives, Mr. Dawson was able to speak with authority of the formative influences which affect their development. The importance of these can hardly be overestimated, he said. The quality of the citizenship of the future rests largely in the hand of the teachers, the majority of whom measure up to the demands of their task.

The Devotional Committee is responsible for the next week's programme when the study book, "Facing the Crisis," by Sherwood Eddy, will again be taken up.

The "Wide Awakes" group will provide the programme for the second Monday in June, and some special numbers, including the pageant, "The Gateway of Womanhood," are being prepared for the occasion.

Church Improvements.

The men of the Methodist Church and a committee of the Ladies' Aid have several times lately held a "be" when a considerable number of workers has gathered and many needed improvements, both within and without the church, has been carried out.

The front steps have been given a fresh coat of paint, and the main entrance doors, with those on the east and west sides of the building, have been regrained, Messrs. W. Pendrie and I. E. Needham having this part of the work in charge.

Loads of gravel have been used to fill in the yard, and the hedge has had three or four feet trimmed from its top, adding much to its appearance. The cement at the west entrance, which was so badly heaved with the frost, has been replaced with a new stretch of some feet, and the walk along the east side has given place to a cinder path, which serves the purpose much better than the narrow boards that were unsafe because of frequent broken pieces.

All the carpets have been taken up and cleaned, and a new rug put on the vestry floor. The matting covering the entire basement floor, which had seen many years of service, was taken up and the best of it used to cover the primary department, and put strips along the front and back of the main auditorium, where most of the walking is done. The remainder of the floor will probably be painted.

A thorough cleaning out of cupboards and store-rooms was found necessary, and some plastering also had to be done. On Thursday of this week the men hope to complete the work of cleaning walls and ceilings, putting down matting, etc.

I.O.D.E. GAVE AWAY PICTURES

Colonel Gordon Hall and Major M. H. Park Thanked Members.

REGULAR MEETING.

The regular monthly meeting of the 57th Regimental Chapter I.O.D.E., was held yesterday afternoon in the armories, the regent, Mrs. E. B. Cegg, presiding. This will be the last meeting until September.

Presentation of the three War Memorial pictures, gifts of the Chapter to the officers' mess at the Armories, was made yesterday. They were received and acknowledged in appropriate terms, by Major M. H. Park and Colonel Gordon Rall.

The Chapter decided to take charge of the card room at the Made in Peterborough Fair on Friday afternoon of next week.

Reports were presented by Mrs. B. Cuffe, convenor of the Hospital Committee, and Mrs. B. H. Poole who reported on the decoration of soldiers' graves on Empire Day.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Daughter of Late Marquis Curzon to Marry Major E. Metcalfe.

LONDON, May 29. — (Canadian Press).—The announcement is made of the engagement of Lady Alexandria Curzon, youngest and only unmarried daughter of the late Marquis Curzon, to Major Edward Metcalfe, of the Indian Cavalry.

This is Your BIRTHDAY

FRIDAY, MAY 29—If born to-day, the chances are that you will live to that period described by the trite expression, "a ripe old age." Great sorrows will come into your long life, but these will be more than overbalanced by great joys. You will travel extensively, particularly in your later years. You will marry only once, because your marriage will be a very happy one.

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

Proposed Legislation May Be Referred to Conference, is Suggestion.

OTTAWA, May 29. — (Canadian Press).—The proposed legislation by the Federal Parliament respecting old-age pensions may be referred to a conference between representatives of the Dominion and Provincial Governments. This suggestion, which will be decided upon at a future date by a special committee of the House of Commons, was made to-day, following the reading of the opinion of the Department of Justice as to the power of Parliament to pass the legislation contemplated.

Weddings

DAVIS—MATTHEWS.

The marriage took place on Tuesday, May 19th, of Elva Dora, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Matthews, of Lakefield, to Gordon Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Davis, of Fowler's Corners. The ceremony was performed at the George Street Parsonage, Peterboro, by Rev. W. Harold Young, in the presence of the immediate friends of the young couple. The bride, who was unattended, looked very pretty in a peach colored silk embroidered crepe de chine with Gloria Swanson hat and shoes and stockings to match.

The young couple will reside in Lakefield, and are receiving the good wishes of many friends.

GETTING TIRED.

Four or Five Hours' Concentrated Work is Enough in Day.

Four or five hours of real hard, concentrated effort in work daily is sufficient for a normal person.

If it were possible one should stop reading, writing or working the moment fatigue is felt.

Fatigue not only produces headache, but it predisposes to dizziness, and causes a loss of mental balance so that accidents may happen.

Many railroad, trolley car, auto and jitney bus accidents that take place daily are due to fatigue.

Of course, there are but few wage earners that can live on the returns of five hours' labor.

However, this is a fault of an economic situation. Economists claim that if only those who are physically and mentally able to work would work, even four hours would be more than the human race needs to produce the necessities of life.

Work really shoud be an exercise instead of a burden, and not a fight for existence, as is largely the case today.

If adenoids or other nasal bostructions cause mouth-breathing, resulting in headaches, an operation is the cure.

Often, however, mouth breathing is an unconscious habit, and may be overcome with a little care.

HOME TOWN RECIPE.

1 Cup raisins are boiled in sufficient water to leave one cup of liquid when they are cooked. This is left to cool. Other ingredients are a piece of butter, the size of an egg, a pinch of salt, a cup of granulated sugar, one egg and one-half teaspoon mixed pastry spice, an even cup of flour and a small teaspoon of soda.

Cream butter, sugar and egg and put soda into the raisin liquid. Gradually mix these with the flour and liquid alternately, and then add spice. A butter icing may be used, or a cocoa top layer added.

MAIDA CONNER WINS A PRIZE

Thermos Bottle Donated By Mr. Kent For Friday Leader.

STILL A CHANCE.

The Thermos Bottle, donated by Mr. Kent, for the young lady turning in the largest number of votes between Wednesday and Friday morning, was won by Miss Maida Conner, who brought 53,000 votes. This is certainly a good showing and puts Miss Conner up among the leaders. Mr. J. A. McKone, the principal of the Peterboro Business College, has again shown his generosity by donating a Three Months' Course, worth $50.00, to the girl winning the second prize and a Two Months' Course, worth $35.00, to the girl winning the third prize. This gives an additional value to the second and third prizes, and makes them well worth working for. Remember that when the clock strikes four next Monday afternoon, no more votes will be accepted and the contest will be over.

Monday afternoon, however, is still some distance away and much can be done in that length of time

The official standing today is as follows:

Arleigh McKone	186,000
Trucie Pearson	142,000
Rose Noonan	139,000
Marjorie Evans	122,000
Elma Coons	104,000

BIRTH RATE DOWN.

Only Quebec Keeps Up, According to 1924 Statistics.

OTTAWA, May 29. — (Canadian Press).—The birth-rate in Canada (with the exception of Quebec) continues its downward trend, according to the Bureau of Statistics.

The rate for the registration area in 1924—which includes all provinces except Quebec—was 23.1 per thousand; in 1923 it was 23.7 per thousand; in 1922, 25.1. All provinces in the registration area but one showed a decrease in 1924.

Ontario remained unchanged at 27.2 per thousand.

SUIT YORSELF PICKING DRESS

Women Should Wear and Let Wear—Question of Viewpoint.

MEN TOLERANT

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, May 29 (United Press).—There's a tendency among women to put the woman who wears unusual clothes in her place. We won't stand for a woman who wears some'ng we don't approve of. This is the reason that we all belong, more or less, to the sisterhood of tabbycats!

Men are more lenient towards their sex. When a man sees another in a double-breasted dinner suit with velvet lapels, he admires the nerve of the person wearing such a getup. He may not know what it's all about, whether it's a new style or whether it's an effort at "high hated ness" but he wont go out of his way to shun the person wearing such a style.

But—watch the women on the street when some Miss walks past wearing a skirt an inch higher than their's. Or let some woman step into a card party in a purple gown matched by purple hosiery and wearing exotic earrings with a pulled-back hairdo! That woman may have ten children and be married to a minister, but women feel there must be something wrong with her because she is dressed like a vamp.

If women would only "wear and let wear' there'd be more individuality in the dressing of the female sex. Style should be a matter of becomingness to the wearer. Only the non-descript sort of woman can afford to wear each prevailing style as it is brought out. We should always dress in clothes that we ourselves believe are becoming. Never try to dress to please friends or to pass the censorship of other women. What seems a queer style today may be a "ford" tomorrow. Style is a matter of viewpoint and one should stick to one's own viewpoint. If one is a kittenish and fluffy blond, one should dress according to type, regardless of the style trend toward sheath gowns, flat hair does, etc.

Ten years ago a bride went to live in a small midwestern town. Her sleeves were short, whereas other women in the town wore long sleeves on the street. No one called on her. They laughed as she passed by. Today those women who laughed—some are grand-mothers now—are exposing their arms to the shoulders. Thus, if one wears a fashion long enough, it will come in style.

We don't need to be told what types of clothes we should wear. The woman who dooks in a looking glass at herself fifty times a day becomes pretty well acquainted. After she has tried on three or four dozen gowns in shops, she knows just which of these gowns is most becoming to her. She is her own best guide. She should not cramp her individuality nor be so narrow minded as to inflict her standards of dress upon others.

Cynthia Grey Says

QUESTIONS--ANSWERS.

Dear Miss Grey—A young man friend recently broke a date with me because he said he was "sleepy." Do you think that is a good excuse? —L. S.

It certainly is not. His attitude showed very little consideration for you. If you let him "get by" with excuses of this kind he will soon lose all respect for you.

Dear Miss Grey—I met a boy about three months ago and, after a frank talk, we discovered we cared for each other. On our last evening together he said that he would call me up in two weeks, but I have failed to get the call. He is still in town. I love him and I miss him dreadfully. What shall I do?—Margy D.

The best thing to do is to forget about him. If he has failed to call you in two or three weeks, the chances are that he doesn't care as much for you as he said in that "frank talk." You wouldn't want to marry a man who didn't love you with his whole heart. know of no sure formula to make a man love you if he doesn't want to.

Dear Miss Grey—Many of my friends argue that when a boy passes a girl on the street she should speak first. I am of the opinion that the boy should speak first. Please advise which is proper.—M. L.

When a boy and girl pass on the street it is proper for the girl to speak or nod recognition first. Of course the boy should almost immediately tip his hat.

"Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is the only thing that relieved me of constipation"

Constipation is dreaded, not only for its insidious self, but for the serious diseases which may be traced to it. Mr. Palludon tells us the helpful story of his relief:

Doing hard work while constipated brought on piles, from which I suffered for two years. I tried almost every remedy without success. Finally I tried Kellogg's ALL-BRAN and it has made me fit again. It is the only thing that helped me and I want everybody to know about it.

(Signed) JOHN PALLUDON.
(Address on request).

You can get sure, prompt, permanent relief from constipation. Simply eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly. Two tablespoonfuls daily, or in chronic cases, with every meal. Doctors recommend ALL-BRAN. It is nature's own way of cleaning the intestine. It is a bulk food which sweeps the system of constipation's poisons and stimulates normal, healthy action.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to be permanently effective, if eaten regularly, or your grocer returns the purchase price. Eat it with milk, cream, fruits, or try the recipes printed on the package. Made in London, Canada. Served in leading hotels and restaurants. Your grocer sells it.

WILL LOOK INTO GASOLINE PRICE

Ontario Government is Appointing Commissioner to Inquire Cost.

NOW 31 CENTS.

TORONTO, May 29.—(Canadian Press).—In an interview yesterday, Premier Ferguson stated that the Ontario Government would very shortly appoint a commissioner to inquire the cost of gasoline and the relation thereto of the present selling price. Eight prospective commissioners, it was stated had so far refused the task. Gasoline, meanwhile is rising in price, an advance of one cent per gallon taking place yesterday, and bringing the retail quotation up to 31 cents per gallon, this figure being inclusive of the government tax.

From Ox Team To Auto Truck

Yesterday and Today

The question of transportation and intercommunication is so vital to our growth as a nation that every Canadian is actively interested.

Way back in 1837 when Mr. Edward Chambers, Main Wire Chief of the Bell Telephone Co. Toronto, took up voice transportation as a life work, ox teams still held an important place.

Mr. Chambers in speaking of those days tells of walking from Bay Street to Toronto Junction, carrying as standard equipment, two telephone sets, one tool bag and one coil of wire. He installed the two instruments and arrived back at the starting point in time to call it a day.

Things are different now. The automobile truck and the auto trailer together with numerous other gasoline driven inventions some 400 in all, are making possible a greater amount of work in a shorter time.

It is thought that with this convenient crow's nest barred effectively much moneys will be diverted into city coffers.

It might also be suggested that a cordon of cops be employed to keep the rabid fans off the bridge.

COLLEGE TEST SEEKS GRADING MORE ACCURATE

New Type of Examination is Designed to Eliminate Chance.

NO MORE QUESTIONS

Student is Asked to Judge Accuracy of Written Statements Instead.

By LOUIS KALONYME.

The new type of examination in which, instead of answering questions, the student passes judgment upon the accuracy of written statements submitted to him, is destined to supersede the traditional quiz and to reduce the number of pupils who drop out of schools, in the opinion of Professor Ben D. Wood of Columbia University.

Professor Wood, who as director of the Achievement Test Research Department has made extensive experiments in his search of a better standard of grading, has concluded that the so-called "content" examination is a more objective test, since the statements are formulated by the teacher instead of by the student; that it makes possible a more extensive sampling of the pupil's knowledge by requiring little writing and increasing the number of points on which he is tested, and that the wider range of the topics reduces the element of chance, the student answering as many as 200 questions in a single examination in place of the conventional ten.

"The old school examinations," Professor Wood said, "have little value for educational administration because they are subjective, unreliable, incapable of standardization and of uncertain significance. They are subjective because the same paper will often be rated very differently by equally competent teachers. They are unreliable because two old type examinations given to the same students in the same subject matter, and rated by the same teacher, give two widely divergent series of marks.

Teachers' Standards Vary'

"They are incapable of standardization because teachers very rarely have the same standards of severity. The same teacher often changes his standard without knowing it, just as his standards of hotness and coldness vary with his own momentary bodily temperature.

"The old type is of uncertain significance because so many irrelevant considerations enter into the judgment of the teacher—his own temperamental mood of the moment, his reaction to the personality of the student, the handwriting of the student, the speed at which the student may compose English prose and write it, and the particular mood and efficiency of the student at the moment of taking the examination.

"The new type of examination is reliable and significant in the first place because it is objective and because it makes possible a very large sampling of the materials of the course of study and of the mental reactions of the student, and in the second place because most of the irrelevant activities and distractions of the old type are eliminated in the new type."

From the earliest grade in elementary school to the final collegiate grades, the current method of examination is a hit or miss system, according to Professor Wood. Students are passed who should fail and many fail who should pass. One teacher finds a student merits A grade after examining his paper in algebra, another teacher finds the same student worthy of a D or failing grade, on the basis of the same examination paper. There is a limited number of questions under the old method. In algebra, for example, the typical number of questions is ten, in geometry the average is six.

Part Played by Chance'

"Ten questions do not and cannot constitute an adequate sampling of the algebra field which the examination is supposed to cover," said Professor Wood. "Six questions cannot possibly constitute an adequate sampling of the whole of the materials and mental processes belonging to plane geometry, especially when three of those six are of the same type. Neither do six or ten questions give an adequate sampling of the candidate's performance."

Five of those ten algebra questions may be just the five that the student cannot answer, though he might be able to answer another group of five questions and perhaps an additional group of twenty-fifty or seventy-five questions.

"It is a fact," said Professor Wood, "upon which there is no disagreement among competent thinkers that pure chance may and frequently does account for the success or failure of a candidate upon a given question.

"Now if there were 300 questions, the maximum possible influence of chance on any one question would be only one-hundredth of the total possible score; if there were fifty questions the maximum influence would be one-fiftieth of the total possible score; where there are only ten questions, the possible influence of chance on any given question rises to one-tenth the total possible range. When the number of elements is reduced to six, as in the geometry examinations, the operation of chance on one single question may affect the total score by one-sixth the total possible range."

An even more fundamental objection to the essay examination, according to Professor Wood, is the inconvenient form of the questions and the fact that so much time is required in the actual recording of the answers. The student's whole mental process is wrong. He approaches the examination expecting to be outwitted. The time limit for the examination may hurry him into making careless answers, or may so agitate him, if he is slow in the actual writing down of the answers, as to befuddle his mind. The questions may be obscurely worded or trickily worded, so that a student who may actually know the answers required of him is misled into making false answers.

"So much time is required in the sheer recording of the responses that it is impossible to give more than from six to ten questions on each examination," explained Professor Wood.

Reliance on English Prose'

"The ideal examination is one which uses the whole of the examination period for pure cerebral activity in the field of thought in which the examinee is being measured. At the opposite pole in the scale of efficiency are those examinations which take a large part of the time, energy and attention of the examinee for purely recording processes and other less relevant activities.

"The attempt to measure ability or achievement in every branch of science or of the liberal arts through the sole medium of English prose is a notable case in point.

"It is a curious and inexplicable fact that even the most intelligent and otherwise cautious teachers attribute to English prose, produced under ordinary examination conditions, powers which Roman Senators used to attribute to astrologers, magicians and oracles. From the confidence with which teachers ordinarily believe that an essay examination reveals to them the mental powers-special achievement, literary appreciation and organizing ability of their students, one would easily conclude that English prose constituted a medium through which the examinee's very soul became as tangible and objective as a Euclidian proof.

"But this confidence, like so many current non-scientific beliefs, has no better basis than tradition." Investigation has disclosed, according to Professor Wood, that the passing mark of 60 per cent., a rating common throughout the country, is equally baseless. It an arbitrary rating and no more measures a student's knowledge or mental powers than do ten arbitrary questions.

"Why do we need examinations? Until recently examinations have been taken as a matter of course. It has been commonly assumed that any teacher is competent to give examinations and rate students not only with regard to their achievement in different subject matters, but also in regard to their native intelligence, character and general fitness to live in civilized society. At the present time, however, we admit that the most competent teachers are rarely, if ever, able to give accurate estimates of any of these qualities.

"Formerly the purpose of school marks was considered to be mainly, if not wholly, disciplinary and 'honorific,' and school marks therefore became a confusion of moral judgments and of personal idiosyncrasies of individual teachers. Nobody could understand the meaning of a given teacher's mark in any subject.

"A mark of 90 per cent. might stand for really superior achievement in plane geometry, or it might stand for the teacher's estimate of the student's faithfulness, perseverance and docility. These qualities are undoubtedly important in themselves, but why they should be called geometry is a question which probably never occurred to nine-tenths of the teachers in this country.

What Grades Represent.

"The present theory of school grades is that their purpose is wholly descriptive. The action or opinions that such marks may lead to are entirely independent of the main purpose of school marks.

"Let us consider a practical problem that arises at the beginning of every school session of every school in the United States.

"In Columbia College we receive students from every State in the Union. We receive annually about 300 students who have credit for three years' study of French. Because of the variable standards in the different schools in the country, many of these students really belong to our first-year class, and at least a few belong to our fifth-year class. But since they have the same apparent high school credit in French, we are forced to assign them to the same class, with the result that the good students are not only bored to death, but whatever love for learning they may have had is often killed, and the poor students are drowned by being put in over their depth.

"Under the old system of marks the proper classification of students is impossible, because in rating students every teacher uses a different language. There is no common denominator to the masses of marks given to students, even in the same school."

The solution, Professor Wood believes, is the new type test. The rating a student received in first-year algebra would then be of some service to his teacher in second-year algebra by virtue of a generally accepted standard. His measurement in algebra could be scientifically correlated to his measurement in geometry and his other subjects, so that any teacher might know, by merely looking at a student's measurement card (of his whole collegiate career), what his average intelligence has been.

"The new type or content examination test involves no unnecessary writing. It contains no unnecessary distractions. It contains no 'trick' or puzzle elements of an illegitimate character. It lends itself to objective scoring methods and allows rapid scoring—as compared to the involved labors of teachers with the essay method of examinations. Also, the new type test is designed not to be subject to chance influences of any kind."

A Sample of New Quiz.

The examination of freshman students in the course known as Contemporary Civilization is typical of the new type test. The opening directions to the students in this test for Part I. follow:

"Read these statements and mark each one at the left of its number with a plus sign if you think it is true, with a zero if you think it is false. Each statement marked correctly gives you a credit of one point; each incorrectly marked statement counts as a penalty against you, and is subtracted from your score; omitted statements count neither for you or against you. Your score will be based upon plus signs and zeros; don't waste time writing anything else. First, go through the list quickly and mark all that you know for certain at once; then go back and study out the harder ones. Do not guess. The chances are against you on guessing. A wrong response counts heavily against your score. Don't endanger your score by gambling on those questions about which you know nothing."

These are some of the questions:

"The civilization of the Phoenicians, Greeks and Romans centred about short river valleys.

"Irrigation is carried on more extensively on the eastern than on the western slopes.

"Education of the right sort increases the innate capacities of students.

"Among animals under conditions of domestication instinctive behavior tends largely to be displaced by habitual or acquired modes of behavior.

"One advantage of customary morality is that customs adapt easily and quickly to changed condition.

"Mercantalism was the result of the nationalistic commercial rivalry which had supplanted that of the Italian and German city-States.

"Voltaire admired experimental science and 'natural law,' and was an ardent critic of contemporary conditions.

"The Declaration of the Rights of Man declared in favor of private property."

Completing Given Statements.

The directions for Part II of this examination are: "Fill in the blank spaces so as to make sense and convey accurate and significant information. Each unbroken line stands for one word, but you may use more words if necessary." Some of the questions are:

"The uneven distribution of natural resources make South America largely dependent for its ——— on the United States; it makes the textile mills of Great Britain dependent for their cotton supply largely upon ——— and ———; it renders the German iron industry almost helpless without the mines of ———; it leads the ——— interests of the United States to be concerned about the Government of Mexico.

"The causes for physical fear are largely ——— under the normal conditions of civilized society. But fear commonly displays itself in many subtle forms. In the economic life for instance, we find that a ——— percentage of laborers are in more or less constant fear of ———; and even where conditions are more stable they are in fear of descending in their ———. In politics fear is responsible for much of our ———, and not only in politics but in our intellectual life in general we are prone to avoid the ——— as though it were dangerous."

The directions for Part III read: "Underline the one word or phrase in each line that will make the statement most sensible and true. You are not penalized for errors in this test unless your choice is obviously rpeposterous, so that it pays to take a chance where you are not quite sure." Some of the questions that follow are:

"Most of the inhabitants of the British Isles belong to the race known as the Alpine, British, Teutonic, Mediterranean, Basque, Celtic.

"Rural isolation is made unsatisfactory by the instinct of gregariousness, love, sumpathy, imitation, reflection.

"Miserliness and kleptomania are abnormal exaggeration of the instinct of hunger, love, acquisitiveness, fear.

"The commercial revolution by the eighteenth century had established the commercial supremacy of Spain, Venice, Portugal, England, Germany, Holland.

"The Tudors owed their power to the fact that their policies were in the interest of the working class, nobles, small freeholders, bourgeoisie, Church.

"Jefferson believed that the United States would continue to retain their democratic form of government so long as they promoted industrial development and the growth of city population; remained an agricultural people; upheld strong centralized government instead of petty subdivisions of wards, towns, &c.; prevented any tampering with the constitutions designed by the fathers."

"The basis of the grading," said Professor Wood, "is the student's knowledge of and ability to think in the material of the course as presented in the syllabus and in classroom meetings. The new examination, by reason of the large number of questions which may be included in it without crowding the examinee for time, reduces the factor of chance to a minimum; the student has two or three hundred chances, as against the old examination's ten, to pass or fail. To fail on ten questions out of a hundred is not the same as to fail on one out of ten."

Professor Wood said that these experiments in the collegiate field all indicate that the vocational guidance problem of the college can be solved only through the intimate and continuous co-operation of the lower schools.

Reliable Measurements.

"Experimental psychology during the last fifteen years," he said, "has shown that the measurement of individuals becomes progressively more difficult after the fourteenth year of chronological age. We have also learned that any single measurement of a student at any time in his school career, is subject to variations, which in individual cases may be large because of the momentary condition of health and mental attitude of the student at the time of taking the examination.

"Any program of scientific personnel engineering must therefore depend upon a series of measurements which are objective and reliable and comparable. Such a series of significant measures of achievement and capacities would be automatically inaugurated if all the grammar schools and the high schools of the country would use the same or comparable objective tests at the end of each school year.

"These measurements could then be kept on a permanent record card, together with all other relevant facts which might aid in helping the student to develop his fullest potentialities.

"By means of such cumulative record cards the intellectual resources of the country could be much more fully used than at present not only because creative minds would be less often lost in the shuffle, but also because of the fact that our colleges would assume a much higher character than they have now with their present hordes of heterogeneous students.

"If all students in all schools were rated on the same or on comparable scales of achievement, misplacements of students could be avoided and every student could be placed in a class in which he could be kept up to his maximum output or maximum rate of development."

The last paragraph gives an idea of what Professor Wood and his Columbia associates who made this work possible—Dean H. E. Hawkes and Professors J. J. Coss and E. L. Thorndike, as well as workers in the same pioneer field of education at Stanford, Iowa State and Minnesota State Universities—are doing with the intelligence test.

They are trying to solve the problem, in Professor Wood's words, "of the continuing high percentage of failures, semi-failures, withdrawals for unknown causes and transfers from one course of study to another in our colleges and professional schools, with all the waste of educational effort and sacrifice of human energy that these things imply."

It is Professor Wood's belief that because of the present educational organization's haphazard methods of measuring the intelligence, innate capabilities and aptitudes of the student, that so many students fail to derive any benefit from it.

"Whatever the college may do in this line," said Professor Wood, "is almost wholly dependent upon what the lower and secondary schools have done. The college never comes into contact with more than 10 per cent. of each generation, and all the identification of the student's powers and 90 per cent. of the specialization should have taken place before the college comes into contact with its 10 per cent. of each student generation.

"It is estimated that about 35 per cent. of those annually admitted to college fail to achieve the goal for which they entered college. If this estimate is correct it means that about a third of each college class is the victim of bad educational administration.

"When we consider the reflex influence which this predestined third has on the other two-thirds in dragging standards of scholarship downward, in diverting a disproportionately large fraction of the teaching energy from fertile soil to barren, but not otherwise irreclaimable, land, and the general lowering of the morale of the whole college community, the crucial character of the need of an immediate and comprehensive attack on the guidance problem is clear.

"College thus becomes a farce for both the good and the poor students and only the nodescript mediocre majority receive any considerable value from their school experience. The first duty of the educator is not to teach but to learn—to learn what the student can learn to discover what he should try to learn and how he may be most efficaciously helped to learn."

NEW CONNECTION IN RADIO SETS

London Invention Eliminates Fading and Ensures Privacy.

TRIED ON LINER.

LONDON, May 29.—(United Press).—A new combine in the transmitting and receiving radio set has been invented which eliminates the difficulty of atmosphere fading and insures privacy of communication by a socket, compound focus process, according to the Daily Mail.

The new apparatus, the Daily Mail says, was recently tested in communication between a large trans-Atlantic liner, a radio station in the United States, and the vessel's headquarters in England. It proved successful during the entire voyage.

So far, telegraphic signals have been used for the most part, but, according to the announcement, trans-Atlantic telephonic messages have been sent both in the daytime and at night.

ISOLATING PRINCE HAS BEEN APPROVED

Crown Council at Belgrade Ends Career of "The Wild Prince."

By Anthony Papayannakis
United Press Athens Correspondent.

ATHENS, May 29.—The Crown Council at Belgrade has approved measures for the "isolation" of the Prince, George of Jugo-Slavia.

With his removal to an institution, the Government definitely end the mad career of the "wild Prince" who is a brother of King Alexander, and eldest son of ex-King Peter of Serbia.

He was once placed under guardianship as a result of his escapades but subsequently upon becoming free he stirred up the Croatians, allied himself closely with the Serbian Fascisti, and was one of the ringleaders in the plot to seize Fiume after this had been made a part of Italy by the Versailles Peace Treaty.

INJURED DRIVER IS PROGRESSING

The condition of Thomas Dobson, driver for White Brothers' Cycles and Sport Goods truck, who was injured in the accident which happened on the corner of McDonnel and George Streets on Tuesday last, is progressing as favorably as could be expected. He has a very severe knee injury, which, in addition to other injuries received, will necessarily make his progress slow.

The accident was a peculiar one, inasmuch as it happened within a few feet of the south-west corner of George and McDonnel, and while the cars did not have a "head-on" collision, the car running on McDonnel Street side-swiped the White car, and the heads of the two cars collided sideways, but not in a head-on collision.

The damage done to the White car was extensive, but the engine of the car was not to a great extent damaged.

HEART TROUBLE OR INDIGESTION?

Heartburn, Pressure Around Heart Palpitation, A Feeling of Fullness Shortness of Breath.

THIS SIMPLE 3-MINUTE TEST TELLS WHAT'S WRONG.

While there are many people who really have Heart Trouble, there are many thousands more who are literally "scared to death" because they think they have it.

To live in constant fear of Heart Failure is a terrible handicap, especially when 90 per cent of the self-diagnosed Bad Heart symptoms—Palpitation, shortness or breath, difficult breathing, a feeling of fullness or pressure around the Heart—are mainly caused by a sour, gassy, upset stomach. To prove that this is true and that your past worries have been a sad mistake—simply make this three-minute test and watch results!

From any good druggist obtain a couple of ounces of pure Bisurated Magnesia (either powder or tablets) and beginning with tomorrow take a teaspoonful of the powder or four tablets immediately after each meal—and, if the usual distressing symptoms fail to appear, you may safely rest assured that you have found your trouble.

This is a pleasant, inexpensive test that seldom fails to relieve stomach distress, Gas, Sourness and Bloating—almost instantly, and a single trial proves its value! Be sure and ask for Bisurated Magnesia, not a laxative.

Last year was the healthiest ever known in the United States and Canada, according to public health records.

OLD LAW BOOK AND ITS WRITER TO BE COMMEMORATED IN FRANCE

Grotius Earned the Title of Father of International Law.

QUOTED IN WAR.

Next Month is 300 Anniversary of Noted Legal Effort.

Hugo Grotius and his book, "De Jure Belli et Pacis" (Concerning the Legal Rights of War and Peace), will be commemorated together in the capitals of the Netherlands and of France in June. It will be the 300th anniversary of the first appearance of the work which possibly beyond others gave Grotius the title of "Father of International Law." The Hague, where there will be an exhibition of pictures, books and manuscripts and even of household furniture associated with the life of the great Dutchman, possesses the original Latin text of the book. It was in Paris, however, where he will be honored at the Sorbonne and by some of the Academies of the institut, that his treatise was actually published in June, 1625.

Aside from having offered him his first publisher there may be other reasons why Paris will seek to surpass The Hague in perpetuating the authority of Grotius as the earliest international lawgiver. His family had been of the French nobility under the name de Cornet till his great-grandfather migrated to the Low Countries, married a Dutch heiress and assumed her name, Groot. About 1618 Grotius (name now Latinized) was thrown into prison by the Prince of Nassau of Holland in his campaign against Remonstrants; from that Grotius escaped, found asylum in Paris and while living on a pension provided by the French King wrote his code.

Was Quoted in the War'

Although there have been few international assemblies for the regulation of relations between nations in the last 300 years at which Grotius has not been cited, there is much in his writings that is out of date. Although he does not entirely disapprove of assassination as a means to a great public good, he takes much pains to draw a distinction between assassins and assassins and thereby somewhat complicates his reasoning. In his mind there are "assassins who violate express or tacit faith" and assassins "who are not bound by any such tie of good faith." His mind was not sufficiently free from the laws of nature which he was attempting to humanize to perceive that the assassin must per se be always faithless. Still, he absolutely condemns the use of poison as being an instrument of "treachery."

During the World War, and from time to time at the Peace Conference, there were echoes of Grotius, for modern jurists on international law have only two bases of argument; the expositions of their predecessors and the more recent acts tending to qualify or change them. In the first years of the war, Grotius's "Mare Liberum" of 3608 was cited as legal evidence against England's claimed right of search and confiscation; his "De Jure Praedae," written in 1604, although not known until after the American Civil War with its blockade runners had passed into history, was quoted as both a legal justification and a moral condemnation of Germany's intensive U-boat campaign.

Grotius lived in a cruel age, yet in one possibly not so cruel as the vaunted age of chivalry, when Edward III. of England landed in Normandy and burned, plundered and slaughtered to the very gates of Paris. Less than half a century before then Dante had condemned "all" war in his "De Monarchia" as a detriment to the advance and development of culture. Grotius writing three centuries later, did not do this. He recognized was as a necessary evil, and so attempted to legalize it. To-day the pendulum seems to be swinging back to Dante—whose views on the authority and power of princes, however, were very little different from those of the Dutchman who came later—yet last week Italy's Senators agreed with Premier Mussolini's statement that "the last was was not the last."

Grotius sometimes has been accused of plagiarism, a charge popular in England a century ago, although it was the English philosopher and historian, William Whewell, who then wrote in defense of Grotius:

"He claims to be the first who had reduced international law to the form of an art or science. Nor do I conceive that this claim goes beyond his due."

There still remained the charge that Albericus Gentilis, in his "De Jure Belli libri tres" (Concerning the Legal Rights of War in Three Books), published twenty-seven years before Grotius wrote his monumental work in Paris, supplied the model and the framework of the first and third books of Grotius. In our own day, however, Professor Holland has said:

"I am by no means concerned to place Gentilis on a level with his undoubtedly greater follower."

And Professor T. J. Lawrence of the University of Cambridge, writes in his "Principles of International Law":

"But after making all possible allowances for his debt to his predecessor, the fact remains that it was Grotius, and not Gentilis, who won the ear of the civilized world, altered its theory of international relations and made its warfare infinitely more merciful than before. It is one of the marvels of history that this was possible."

At least the success of his "De Jure Belli et Pacis" was emphatic from the very day of its Parisian publication. Gustavus Adolphus is said to have carried a copy about with him in his campaigns. Its principles are interwoven in the Peace of Westphalia. Toward the end of the seventeenth century the University of Heidelberg adopted it as a textbook. Since then few amendments to that illusive code, known as international law, to the decrees, the treatics, the pacts, the protocols which have inspired or devised them have been without convincing proofs of the book's existence.

All the questions which to-day absorb or dismay experts of international law will be found, in principle at least, defined, discussed and settled in some way or other in the works of the great Dutchman.

Before him there was only natural law. This law was immutable. What Grotius did was to attempt to explain it, to codify it. He rendered practicable the mere moralizations of the Oxford man Gentilis and the Jesuit casuist Francisco Suarez, and revealed a common ground where both Catholic and Protestant could meet and discuss the horrors of war without friction. Time has made antiquated certain of his ideas in regard to the power and authority of sovereigns, but his ideas in regard to the political and territorial entity of independent States, of neutrality, of the freedom of the seas, remain—at least to be debated.

He was the first to demonstrate the legality of war, the first to prove the advantage of establishing permanent embassies at foreign capitals. And all through the centuries his conceptions in regard to contraband either have prevailed or their failure to prevail has been open to severe censure. His division of commodities are well recognized if not always accepted, whenever a war breaks out. Things of direct and immediate use in war, things useless for war, things useful in both peace and war. The first are always contraband, the second never; the third, "res anticipitis usus," depend upon their intended employment. It was this last kind of commodities that so bothered the English when found on neutral ships consigned to Germans—or to their agents in Holland.

Hugo Grotius was a precocious boy; freed from his Latinized name, he was Hulg van Groot, born on Easter Day, April 10, at Delft, 1583 at 9 he wrote fluently Greek and Latin verse; at 12 he was ready for the University; at 15 he was editing the encyclopædia of Marcianus Capella and accompanied Count Justin of Nassau on an embassy to Paris, where he learned the language in a few weeks. He could at that time discuss theology and science with a number of famous Frenchmen, who could not understand his fluent Latin. At the age of 18 he took the degree of Doctor of Laws at the University of Leyden, and began to practice. Incidentally, he occupied his time, when not in court, in editing a series of classical Latin texts, and he wrote three plays in that language, "Christus Patiens," "Sophomphaneas" and "Adamus Exal," which have been translated into several languages, but not in so many languages as has the famous book he wrote during his exile in Paris.

Naturally, his learning and his manner of revealing it got him into trouble. Not only did he entertain formidable ideas on civil governments and the relations between them, on sovereigns and their relations, but also on theology—and preached tolerance. Besides, he was appointed by the States of Holland to head the Committee of Remonstrants to resist exchanging the local civic guards for the Prince's troops, and the Prince of Nassau arrested him and two other leaders, and Grotius was condemned to prison for life.

He escaped from Loevesteyn Castle after three years in a manner which has become a legend and the inspiration for artists and engravers. His wife Maria van Reygersbergen, used to send him books in great boxes. He emptied these boxes and placed therein the books he had read. One day he placed himself in a box instead of his thumbed books and it was taken away as usual and sent out of the country. The Grotius family maid helped in the escape. There is a street in Amsterdam named for her, the van Houweningen. Also one is named for the wife. The episode itself is a favorite one in local Dutch history.

Grotius then took up his abode in Paris, where he lived on an irregular pension granted by the King of France and wrote his great book. Later he travelled much until he accepted an invitation to the court of Sweden, on a mission very like that which took Voltaire to the court of Frederick the Great.

But neither the climate of Stockholm nor its culture appeared to agree with him, so he tried to steal away. He was caught and brought back. As neither the Chancellor Oxenstiern nor Queen Christina could induce him to change his mind, the latter gave him godspeed, the sum of 10,000 crowns and a lot of valuable plate. As he was going down the Baltic to Lubeck his vessel was wrecked, he caught a bad cold and was taken to Rostock, where he died, Aug. 8, 1645.

Even before his death he had attracted the attention of encyclopædists. His learning as well as his adventures have proved to be topics of narrative and discussion ever since.

It is doubtful whether any Grotius relics will be displayed in Paris next June. At The Hague there will be the exhibition of pictures, books, manuscripts and other things. W. L.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

FLAGS WERE FLYING.

Editor, The Examiner,
Peterboro, Ontario.

Dear Sir,—In The Examiner of the 27th instant I have noticed an editorial regarding Mr. Ladner being justified in bringing the matter to the attention of the House that flags were not flying from the Government buildings.

Let me say they were, and I saw them flying. What he complained about was that there are two empty flag poles, about twenty-five feet high, one in front of Sir John A. Macdonald's statue, and the other one at the west end, in front of the Cartier statue.

As Mr. Ladner was a very loyal Tory, and both Sir John A. Macdonald and George Etienne Cartier were of the same political stripe, this gentleman had a violent grievance.

Of course, it was simply a case of an attempt to play politics.

Yours truly,
G. N. GORDON.

HONORING THE CROSS.

To the Editor of the Examiner;

Sir: The sacred symbol of the Holy Cross which was struck by lightning off St. John's Church and thrown in fragments on the ground, was found to have had put upon it by some workmen, no doubt, the names of some who have been connected with that church.

It is of course very rare that any name is put upon a cross upon a church, except that of the Saviour a the simple letters I.H.S., meaning Jesu hominum Salvator Jesus the Saviour of men. In ever; case where a cross has been thrown down it was found that it had been used for the purpose of pe trating the names of others. No one would accuse any clergyman or layman in authority with having used the holiest symbol in the whole world for any other than its sacred purpose. Wherever it has happened it has met with disaster. In St. Cuthbert's, a fine modern church in the west of England, a cross which had been put upon the spire at great expense, was found at the last moment to have names on it. It was of course taken down and the names removed. There is no record of the architects and builders of the great cathedrals, and beautiful little churches of Europe and England erected during the middle ages "What is man that Thou art mindful of him?" I am informed that in Peterborough a great cross had to be taken down because of the names put upon it by builders It shows how necessary it is that close supervision of no doubt q ite unintentional sacrilege, should provide against it. There is I believe no other record of such a remarkable case in Canada. If there is any mistake in The Examiner's report of what appeared on the Cross, it would be well to state it so that this item may not go the rounds and convey a wrong impression. I hope that I am mistaken in reading the item but if not all Christians will hope that it will not occur again.

CHRISTIANUS.

In the report of the fall of St. John's Church cross, The Examiner did not say the names were inscribed on the Cross. The report, in the issue of May 23rd read:

"The names on the dedication manuscript are ....."

UNION OF CHURCHES

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir.—As I wrote you the other day concerning the overtures made by the Church of England for union with The Catholic Church, perhaps you will allow me to apprise your readers of the progress made so far.

Late last week it was announced that the Church of England in England had sent a delegation to confer with Catholic theologians under the chairmanship of Cardinal Mercier, in Brussels. The conference has required but four days it seems to arrive at a conclusion or agreement called a "proces verbal," which has been sent with Cardinal Mercier to the Pope, and by the English delegation to the Church of England in England. While the acceptance of the conclusion so quickly arrived at has not been made public and will not be until approved by the Pope, and the English archbishops, there can be no doubt that some understanding has been arrived at which will mark the most significant step taken in religious matters since the Reformation.

The fundamental difference between Catholicism and Protestantism has always centred in the question of Authority. Protestantism recognized no supreme earthly authority or power to settle the affairs of the churches and of the people outside the people of the various churches themselves. At least, that was the way of it till recently, when as in the case of the new United Church of Canada a desire was expresged for the union of Christendom and the final decision in placing ministers in their stations was taken away from congregations and put in the hands of the supreme council of conference. This was a tremendous step towards meeting the Catholic idea of Authority.

Then Prohibition, which is peculiarly a movement of the people themselves, asserts the Authority of those in power over those governed, to the extent of ordering even their daily lives and food and drink and even in their homes. This is much farther than ever the Church of Rome has gone and it shows that Protestants both clergy and people are very decidedly in favor of the rule of Authority, which always they had repudiated so strongly before.

It is manifest, therefore, that when Protestants have thus given up the great fundamental difference between Protestantism and Catholicism as above referred to, it would be no long time until other differences could be reconciled if so desired.

The agreement now arrived at, whatever it may be, between Rome and England is the first sign of the great change coming, and since Protestants of other denominations have not only now recognized the principle of Authority but have set it up themselves, as we see even in secular matters and have also expressed a desire for the "larger union," we may fully expect that the passing of Protestantism will be followed by something still more sensational, in a short time, in all the churches.

FLOG FATHER WHEN GIRL WEARS KNICKERS

JEWELL BARKER.

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 29.—Appearance of a girl wearing knickers and riding a bicycle is not considered appropriate for women in the little town of Cedar Grove.

So when Miss Jewell Barker, 15, appeared in mannish garb with her wheel, Puritanical neighbors immediately objected.

Which led to a flogging that is unequalled even in Puritanical days. The innocent victim of a mob's fury was the girl's father, John Barker, 53 years old.

Advised to Ride.

Miss Barker, frail and unhealthy, was advised by her doctor to try riding a bicycle. So she purchased a wheel and a pair of white knickers and started exercising each day. The neighborhood looked on astonished.

At first it was deep curiosity, then resentment that a father should permit his daughter to appear on highways and streets "dressed up like a man."

The men folk of the village were more concerned than the women. Mysterious warnings were received by the father.

"Keep that girl out of that rig," was one message, scrawled in a male hand.

The parent tried to explain that the family physician had advised bicycling as the exercise the girl needed. And that to be comfortable on the daily rides knickers were necessary.

Father Beaten.

One night, after repeated warnings had been sent to Barker, he was lured to a lonely spot in the country and given a severe beating.

He was warned that he would be flogged again if his daughter appeared any more in the knickers and further threatened with death if he disclosed the affair.

Recently the father became ill and it was with difficulty he was able to provide the necessities for his family.

This came to the attention of welfare workers, who thus by chance discovered the ill-health of the daughter, and the flogging.

Two men are under arrest in connection with the beating of Barker. Four others are under surveillance, suspected of complicity in the attack.

Jewell has given up her daily cycling for fear she will be molested.

A Splendid Investment Yielding 6.18%

We are pleased to recommend for sound conservative investment the First Mortgage Bonds of the Minnesota and Ontario Paper Company.

This Company is one of the world's largest manufacturers of newsprint paper—its present output is 500 tons a day—and upon completion of present extensions its output will total 700 tons a day.

It enjoys a splendid market for its product, supplying the chief newspapers in Western Canada as well as the Central and Southwestern States of the United States.

You will be able to gauge the quality of the security by the following facts:

1. Net tangible assets of $3,798 for every $1,000 bond.
2. Yield of 6.18% for a straight term of 20 years. These Bonds mature April 1, 1945.
3. Sinking fund sufficient to retire all bonds by maturity.
4. Average net earnings for past five years and eleven months of approximately three times the bond interest.
5. Earnings for 1925 estimated at over four times the bond interest, and further increases of earnings to result from additions now in progress.
6. Bonds payable in gold at Toronto, Montreal, St. John, Winnipeg, Vancouver, New York and Chicago.
7. As a result of their continent-wide distribution these bonds will always enjoy a very steady market throughout Canada and the United States.

Price: 98 and interest, yielding 6.18%

Denominations: $500 and $1,000

Orders should be sent directly to us.

Bonds may be paid for, if desired, by monthly instalments.

DAILY EXAMINER

POSTAGE POINTERS.

Post Office Receives a Hundred Under Paid Packets a Day.

There are on an average about one hundred pieces of mail matter received at the post office each day insufficiently prepaid. It is advisable before posting any mail matter to have it weighed and ascertain if the proper amount of postage has been placed thereon for if there is insufficient postage on it when received by the Postal officials, it will be carefully weighed and taxed double the deficiency.

Not only is the addressee inconvenienced by being called upon to pay the extra postage, but there is a grave possibility of your mail matter being delayed.

Parcels or newspapers received at the Post Office without any postage are forwarded to the Dead Letter Office, although letters received in such a manner may be taxed double the deficiency and forwarded to destination.

YOUR VACATION.

By HUGH S. CUMMING.
(Copyright, 1925, by United Press)

If you are camping out, you should take care to pitch your tent at the top of a low ridge or on the summit of a knoll, with gently sloping sides. If possible, you should select a place where the soil is mixed sand and gravel. A sandy, gravelly soil assures adequate drainage. Trees are highly desirable about camps, but all underbrush should be cleared away, because it is frequently a shelter for mosquitoes.

Canvas tents are the best for a camping party. You should carry sufficient tentage to provide 20 square feet of floor space for each person. You should dig a ditch all the way around the tent to drain off any water which might get under the flaps and flooring and make the place damp.

Wooden flooring raised a few inches above the earth is a great advantage, and if you contemplate remaining in your camping place for a considerable length of time, or are renting a permanent camp, however possible a camp with a wooden flooring should be secured.

You should beware of various insect pests. The farther your camp is removed from human dwellings, stables and hog pens, the freer it will be from flies. High ground, well drained, with no standing water anywhere near, will be found to be fairly free from mosquitoes. If the locality is not mosquito-free, cotton mosquito bars should be used.

A pure water supply is absolutely essential if you would reap any healthful benefit from camping out. Unless you know positively that the water is pure, you had better take no chances. Boil all water used for drinking purposes or purify it with chloride of lime.

The latter is inexpensive and may be conveniently carried with any camping outfit. Put one teaspoonful of the powder into a quart bottle of water and allow it to stand for several hours. After a time sediment will form in the bottom. Pour off one teaspoonful of the clear solution into two gallons of water and allow this to stand for fifteen minutes before using.

This teaspoonful of solution will purify the water excellently and is not injurious. A quart of this clear solution will be sufficient to purify a large amount of water, inasmuch as it is only necessary to use one teaspoonful of the solution to two gallons of water. Don't drink the solution.

The Kitchen and mess tents should be screened. Dishes should be washed in boiling water. All garbage should be placed in covered receptacles and promptly disposed of. The same should be done with human waste. The best method of disposing of these wastes is by burning. This may be easily accomplished by digging a fairly deep trench, placing numerous field stones in the bottom and building a fire on top of these. When the fire has gained good headway, pour in the material to be burned. The trench should be filled in with earth when it no longer is needed.

Great care must be used to dig the trenches where it is certain there can be no danger of polluting the water about the camp. Remember, proper disposal of waste is important to you that you may not pollute the water supply of your camp, important to those who may camp on the same site after you have left. You owe it to those who are to follow you on your outdoor camping site to keep the water supply free from pollution.

SHEPHERD ON TRIAL

YOUR GARDEN

THE SUMMER CARE AND USE OF HOUSE PLANTS

Now that the warmer weather is commencing we begin to think of summering the house plants and if given proper treatmen at this time they may be safely kept and will go into the winter season with renewed vigor.

This does not, of course, include the annuals, most of whose strength has been spent in forcing the bloom. They are rarely satisfactory for another season and should therefore be discarded. As they are easily raised from seed and cuttings, one should have no compunction about doing this. Bulbs, however, may be planted out of doors in the garden where they will bloom in a year or so and may again be used.

Shrubby flowering plants such as the lilacs and roses, which may have been received as presents and carried over, are best planted out in the garden where they will become acclimated. They will usually be too ungainly for pot use during the second season.

Having eliminated all but those plants that may be strictly termed house plants we will now consider their case. These should be repotted now as soon as possible and prepared for making their summer growth. Summer quarters must be chosen after repotting is completed and the various plants require different treatment. Some do well in full sun, as flowering plants which must form blossom buds; others, moderate shade ,as palms and most begonias; while many prefer dense shade, as the ferns. Moderate shade is produced by apple trees, dense shade by maples and evergreens, but the shade of the house is not natural and unfit for plants of this type. A sheltered spot where the leaves will not be whipped about by the winds is preferable and the pots should be sunk so that they will not be easily tipped over and will not dry out as readily. A piece of pot at the bottom of the hole in which the pot is sunk will aid the drainage and kee pout worms. It is also advisable to place them in a convenient spot where they will not be neglected and watering forgotten. The natural rain fall will not be sufficient and they will need strict attention by way of watering. Plants that are neglected during the summenr cannot be expected to do well the following winter. A warm situation in full sunlight should be avoided and one that is shaded throughout some part of the day should be chosen.

MENUS FOR A FAMILY

Breakfast—Grpaes, cornmeal mush and milk, broiled bacon, potato cakes, toasted bran muffins, apple butter, milk, coffee.

Luncheon — Cauliflower loaf, rye bread sandwiches with cottage chees, and currant jelly filling, celery salad, nutted cream, chocolate cake, milk tea.

Dinner—Cream of lima bean soup, toasted crackers, veal birds, scalloped potatoes, stewed tomatoes, date and nut salad, pumpkin pie, milk, coffee, whole wheat rolls.

This luncheon menu is suggested for guests as well as junior members in a family. Every woman likes to "ask somebody in" for luncheon occasionally, but it sometimes seemsimpossible to serve two meals, one for the children and a "party" one, too. If you want to elaborate this menu, consomme could be served first with toasted crackers and radishes and olives served with the sandwiches.

Cauliflower Loaf.

One medium sized head lcauiflower, 1 1-2 cups fine soft breadcrumbs, 1 cup thin cream, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 3 eggs.

Let cauliflower stand in cold water, head down, for one hour. Break into flowerettes and cook, head up, in slightly salted boiling water for half an hour. Press through a puree strainer. Combine milk, breadcrumbs, salt and pepper and cook, stirring constantly until thick and smooth. Slowly beat in the cauliflower; there should be two cups, and when well blended add the yolks of the eggs beaten until thick and lemon colored. Fold in the whites of the eggs beaten until stiff and dry and turn into a mold lined with waxed paper. Butter the paper well before putting in the mixture. Put mold in a larger pan and pour in boiling water to more than two-thirds cover it. Bake in a moderate oven until firm in the center, about 60 minutes. Do not let the water boil during the cooking. Unmold and serve with a rich cream sauce.

Nutted Cream.

Two cups whipping cream, 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin, 3-4 cup powdered sugar, 1-4 cup cold water, 1-2 cup boiling water, 1 cup chopped nuts, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Soften gelatin in cold water. Add boiling water and stir over hot water until gelatin is dissolved. Whip cream until stiff and add sugar, vanilla and half the nuts. Stir in dissolved gelatin and continue stirring, with the bowl containing the mixture placed in a pan of ice water, until the mixture begins to thicken. Turn into a mold and let stand on ice or in a very cold place until firm. Two or three hours will be necessary for the mixture to

FINANCIAL NEWS.

United States Expects A Poor Yield Of Wheat

WASHINGTON, May 29. — The favorable wheat situation last year may be reversed this season the Department of Agriculture declared today in its June report. Instead of a bumper crop in time of world shortage the report said, a poor yield appears in sight with the likelihood of better crops abroad. More than half the winter wheat acreage is abandoned in Washington, Montana, Oregon, New Mexico and Texas, it is added ,and nearly a quarter of the acreage in the whole country.

Prices Move Up In N.Y. In Spite Of Some Breaks

NEW YORK, May 29.—(Canadian Press).—Prices moved up vigorously throughout the morning on the New York markets despite a heavy unloading of Maxwell issues, the B stock breaking 5 3-8 points and B certificates four points before noon. Rails gathered strength as trading progressed. Reading and Southern Railway being run up sharply on rumors of special dividend distributions, while St. Paul Preferred was taken in large blocks at advancing prices.

Good buying also was noted in equipment, tobacco, leather and sugar issues, based on reports of trade improvement in those industries. Increased public interest in many issues led to rather active short covering by professional traders. Call money renewed at four per cent. desnite the increased demand for funds incidental to holiday and month-end requirements.

Winnipeg Wheat Again $2 But Quickly Drops 6 Cents

WINNIPEG, May 29.—(Canadian Press). — Higher Liverpool cables sent May wheat to the $2 a bushel mark at the opening of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange this morning, but the advance was not held.

Within a few minutes of the posting of the initial quotations, a recession of six cents was recorded. Deferred futures also opened higher, but declined sharply in sympathy with May.

Trade Good At Toronto With Leaders Gaining Some

TORONTO, May 29. — Trade on the Toronto stock exchange this morning was fairly good with a well balanced scale. The majority of the leaders were inclined to gain fractionally. British Columbia fish was the most active issue with aproximately 325 shares changing hands, with a gain of 1½ points closed at 39. Brazilian Smelters and Dominion Canners are closed 1-4 higher at 53½, 93 3-4 and 100 respectively. City Dairy was active but lost a point at 79. Winnipeg rails eased off ½ at 46, while Twin City also closed 3-8c lower at 69 3-8.

Wheat Down At Chicago: Corn and Oats Follow

CHICAGO, May 29. — Large deliveries on May contracts here led to an early downturn in wheat prices to-day. This was the last day for the month end settlement of accounts and the fact that deliveries were large was generally taken to indicate that chances were remote for any sharp bulge in values at the last. The knowledge that a double holiday was ahead tended also to induce much selling out to realize profits. Opening price 1-8c lower to 3-4 higher: May 170¼ to 171, and July 165½ to 166, were followed by a general set back that carried the market down to 167¼ for May and 163 1-4 for July.

Corn and oats were easy, sympathizing with wheat. After opening at 1-8 to 1¼c advance July 118 to 118 1-4, the corn market receded all around to well below yesterday's finish.

Oats started at 1c decline to 3-8c advance. July 48 5-8 to 48 3-4c. Later all months showed some loss. Provisions were responsive to lower quotations on hogs.

Minnesota and Ontario Co's Bonds Well Received

One of the largest pieces of Corporation financing done this year is the issue of the 6% First Mortgage Bonds of the Minnesota and Ontario Paper Company. This Company ranks as one of the largest manufacturers of newsprint paper in the world. Under completion of the additions to its Mills it will have an output of 700 tons a day. A Bulletin from McLeod, Young, Weir and Company of Toronto, a member of the Underwriting Syndicate, gives the following information concerning the Company:

The Minnesota and Ontario Paper Company operates in Northwestern Ontario and in Minnesota. It owns and operates great paper, pulp and lumber mills. Newsprint is the only one of its products. It owns vast areas of pulpwood—enough to keep its newsprint machines operating for fifty years. In Ontario alone it owns and is completing its own development of water powers, with a capacity of 95,000 horse power. Not only does it generate power for its own mills but it sells power to the Town of Kenora, and the Kenora mills of the Maple Leaf Milling Company and the Western Canada Flour Mills Company. Finally, it owns and operates over 170 miles of steam railway.

Assets are $3,798 for every $1,000 Bond. Earnings for many years past have averaged over three times bond interest requirements.

Bonds are payable in Toronto, Montreal, St. John, Winnipeg, Vancouver, New York and Chicago. The Bonds are offered to yield from 6.12% to 6.20% according to maturity.

EPSOM DOWNS, Eng., May 29.—(Canadian Press.)— Lord Astor's Saucy Sue to-day won the Oaks Stakes of two thousand pounds sterling. Miss Gadabout, also owned by Lord Astor, was second and Riding Light, owned by Anthony De Rothschild and ridden by Steve Donoghue, was third. Betting on the winner was a hundred to thirty on. Miss Gadabout 100 to 8 against and Riding Light 20 to 1 against.

BASEBALL SIMPLIFIED

By BILLY EVANS.

If an improper batsman hits safely and the team in the field discovers the mistake and appeals to the umpire, what action does he take in the matter?

If one remembers that the proper batsman is always out in the case where a batter bats in the wrong place in the line-up much of the confusion over batting-out-of-order-plays will be cleared up.

For instance, Smith, the third batter, should have started the inning, but Jones, the fourth batter, leads off and cracks out a double.

The team in the field, noticing the mistake, makes an immediate appeal to the umpire for a ruling. The official consults his batting order and verifies the slip.

Jones, who hit the double, is removed from second base. Smith, who should have been the proper batsman, is called out. This puts it up to Jones, who follows Smith in the batting order, to bat again in his proper place.

The batting order is then resumed in regular fashion. For years there has been the impression that after a player once bats out of order he cannot bat again in the same inning. This is, of course, erroneous. He must always bat in his regular order, regardless of any improper batting he may have done.

INSURANCE MEN IN EXAMINATION

Fundamentals of Business Are Subject of Test—Two in City.

DEGREE C.L.U.

May 29th marks a new era in the life insurance world. All over Canada salesmen of the various companies, totalling over three hundred, are sitting on an examination on insurance fundamentals, insurance law and methods of salesmanship, the successful completion of which will entitle them to the use of the degree "Chartered Life Underwriter of Canada."

The examinations have been set by the Educational Committee of the Life Underwriters Association of Canada which body sought and received incorporation from the Dominion Government in July 1924, empowering them to hold examinations and grant the degree of C.L.U. to those of its members who fulfilled certain requirements.

This action of the Association is part of a plan to standardize the educational qualification of all men in the business, to give them a high degree of knowledge of their business and thus protect the insurance public from the inefficient salesman.

The men who have completed the severe course of study prescribed and who pass the test, will have demonstrated that they are fully qualified to give reliable advice to their clients, and the public should experience a sense of security in discussion of the intricacies of life insurance with these accredited life underwriters.

Mr. J. B. Hall is acting as Presiding Officer for the examination in Peterboro which is being held in the Board Room of the Y.M.C.A. Two of the ePterboro men are trying and the results wil lbe published as soon as the Board of Examiners have completed the arduous task of marking some three hundred papers.

Boyce of Brighton was present April 5th and gave an excellent address; a library was started in February with sixty books in charge of Mrs. Vera Teal. First Sunday in each month is missionary day of which the missionary secretary is in charge. The average attendance for the year, 52 Sundays, was 122. The superintendent gave an excellent talk on "Ideals of School Staff."

The Home Department superintendent reported that members of the department were gradually uniting with the school classes, and membership was getting very small with a membership of seven. The Cradle Roll reported a membership of seventeen. The Missionary superintendent gave an excellent report for the year. The various classes contributed $115.00 for missions.

THEATRES

"THE HUNTED WOMAN."

James Oliver Curwood's story, "The Hunted Woman," is the feature picture at the Capitol Theatre for the week-end programme. Seena Owen, one of the few fair-haired actresses of the moving picture screen, has the stellar role, with Francis McDonald playing opposite her, Cyril Chadwick in a villain's part, and Diana Miller as a black-haired adventuress.

It is a picture that abounds in interesting backgrounds. There are some fine bits of scenic beauty, a snow scene with blue lighting that is especially good, and a thrilling portion in the landslide accident that engulfs the hero and heroine in one fell swoop. They are imprisoned together in a submerged house, but a gang of energetic diggers finally gets them out, to proceed with the story to a satisfactory ending.

A woman, Joanne Grey of Quebec, whose husband has placed his grave on a lone hillside and marked it with his name, while the casket contains only old clothes, is the central figure. When she thinks him dead, she falls in love with a young author, who has gone north looking for local color, and the two meet the husband under very dramatic circumstances. There is a somewhat of a melodramatic flavor to the scene in which several men battle for the woman, her husband, her lover and her brutal admirer. A "jumped" claim which belongs to the lover and his partner, old McDonald, adds to the interest of the picture. Just when things appear to be seething to a powerful ending, the producer appears to get tired and shuts up the whole thing with a bang. The interest that is sustained through a series of episodes has rather a flat finale, but this picture has enough heart interest and thrills to carry it along satisfactorily. One of the most amusing portions of the short-reel programme is a good comedy, "Big Business," by Hal Roach's Rascals, in which the little white and black mischief-makers do a lot of damage in an amateur barbershon which they set up.

"Fisherman's Luck," an Aesop Fable comedy, is another good bit, in an exceptionally clever bit of cartooning work, illustrating deep-sea dwellers, from the pen of the ink artist.—Jeannette.

GLORIA SEEKS ATMOSPHERE FOR "MME. SANS GENE" IN LAUNDRY

Just imagine — Gloria Swanson taking in washing!

Nevertheless, that's just what happened when the Paramount star went to "absorb" some of the real atmosphere of a French laundry for her role of "Madame Sans Gene" in her new picture by that name, which will be shown at the Capitol theatre next Monday.

It was just such a laundry that the character of the Sardou-Moreau stage place conducted in the Rue Sainte Anne during the Revolutionary period.

Just picture the gorgeously gowned Gloria of "Zaza" and "Her Love Story" bending over a steaming tub rubbing the soup stains out of some hard-boiled Frenchman's hard-boiled shirt.

True enough, our Gloria worked in one of New York's big department stores to get atmosphere for scenes in "Manhandled;" "but selling shirts and laundering them are two different things," says Gloria.

"Madame Sans Gene" was adapted for the screen by Forrest Halsey.

AT THE ROYAL

LAURA LA PLANTE AT HER MERRIEST IN "YOUNG IDEAS"

Anyone suffering from one of the numerous kinds of "complexes," otherwise grouches, which dull the eye, wrinkle the brow and give the disposition a bad twist, should go to the Royal Theatre and see the film feature which opened there yesterday, "Young Ideas." It's the third Universal production starring Laura La Plante.

Fans who saw those two features know what to expect in this one, for the star, director, Robert F. Hill, and scenario writer, Hugh Hoffman ,are the same. And the cast supporting Miss La Plante is an aggregation of popular favorites without being top-heavy. It is composed of T. Roy Barnes, Lucille Ricksen, Buddy Messinger, Lydia Yeamans Titus, James O. Barrows, Jennie Lee, Rolfe Sedan, Frances Raymond and Duke R. Lee.

The story, by Sophie Kerr, originally published as "Relative Values," is that of a young girl with old ideas and a man who goes to desperate lengths to instill "Young Ideas" into her mind.

She supports an uncle, aunt, grandmother, kid sister and kid brother, and does a heavy share of the housework. And on top of it, she's a first class nurse to a lot of sick cases— for the whole family has chronic illnesses, the chief of which is pure laziness.

"ON THIN ICE."

Mal St. Clair has created another fast-moving photoplay of thrills, suspense and dramatic action in the newest Warner picture, "On Thin Ice," which opened for a 3-day run at the Regent Theatre yesterday.

He has given movie-goers a strong, tense and highly flavored melodrama of crime, mystery, love and intrigue, which holds the audience spellbound in their seats from start to finish, and sends them away with the pleasant exhilaration of having participated in an adventure.

Mr. St. Clair has been particularly apt in casting "On Thin Ice," Edith Roberts, Tom Moore and William Russell giving skilful performances in their respective roles of a friendless, much bewildered little maid and two gangsters, who play a ruthless game to gain their ends. The balance of the cast is not a whit behind in their excellent portrayals, and includes Theodore Von Eltz, Gertrude Robinson and Wilfred North.

"On Thin Ice" was written and adapted for the screen by Darryl Francis Zanuck, the youngest scenario writer in Hollywood, whose reputation has been built on the red-blooded pep he puts into his stories.

All those who love detective stories and the rush of "something happening" every moment will have a delightful time watching "On Thin Ice," the new attraction at the Regent Theatre.

The spotlight

YOU'VE been in a theatre when the stage was dark, and a spotlight suddenly focused upon the thing you wanted most to see. Advertisements are like spotlights. They focus attention upon the goods that interest you most.

You could wander in and out a dozen stores and, in the confusion of many objects, overlook what would please you best. Yet by reading the advertisements, without leaving your home you can tell definitely where the desired wares are, their price, how they will serve you. You can know actual values long before you buy.

Advertisements throw light on new comforts and improvements, too, you might like to own. They let you see conveniences other folks are enjoying — bring them within easy reach.

Let these spotlights guide you to standard goods. They'll help you save. Read the advertisements regularly.

Advertisements light the way to wise buying.

TRIBE HURLERS FAILED TO STEM LEAFS' ADVANCE

Chased Two Rochester Pitchers With Fusilade of Hits in 16th Straight.

BIRDS LOSE AGAIN

Defeated by Jersey City — Buffalo's Third in Row From Syracuse.

TORONTO, May 28.—Rochester used three pitchers in an attempt to stop the Leafs' winning streak today, but the Leafs knocked both Karpp and Gressett from the mound and turned in their sixteenth consecutive victory. Gehringer, Toronto's brilliant second baseman hit safely in his fifteenth consecutive game getting a triple and a homer. Quellich of Rochester also hit a homer in the ninth.

Rochester	010000002	3	7 0
Toronto	21201320x	11	15 0

Jersey City 7; Baltimore 4.

JERSEY CITY, May 28.—Consistent hitting and effective pitching by Roberts gave Jersey City its second consecutive victory over Baltimore today 7 to 4. The Skeeters collected thirteen hits including three singles by Gaudette. Score:

Baltimore	010000201	4	10 1
Jersey City	01202020x	7	13 1

Jackson, Henderson, Mulligan, Harwood and McCarty; Roberts and Freitag.

Buffalo 10; Syracuse 3.

BUFFALO, May 28.—Buffalo won the third straight game from Syracuse, to-day's score being 10 to 3. Proffitt held the Star batters to five scattered hits, Frankhouse accounting for two tallies with his four bagger over the right field wall. Hallahan tried his hand at twirling but could not control the ball. He was hit hard, as was Frankhouse, who relieved him in the third inning when things were breaking badly. Anderson hit his thirteenth home run with two on. Miller's fielding featured. The score:

Buffalo	$$532000x	10	11 0

Hallahan, Frankhouse and Long; Proffitt and McAvoy.

Reading 7; Providence 2

READING, May 28.—Reading made it three straight over Providence today, winning 7 to 2. Wilson relieved McNamara in the third inning and helped win his own game with a home run in the sixth. The score:

Providence	001010000	2	11 2
Reading	01023100x	7	13 0

CHICAGO SCORE 12 IN SEVENTH

PIRATE VICTORY

CINCINNATI, May 28.—Chicago batted three Cincinnati pitchers out of the box in the seventh inning today and won the first game of the series 13 to 3. Luque allowed only three hits in the first six innings. The score:

Chicago	000000,12,10	13	12 2
Cincinnati	000010 101	3	8 4

Cooper and Hartnett; Luque, Biemiller, Benton, Brady and Bruggy.

Pirates 7; St. Louis 4.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 28.—Hard hitting at opportune time gave Pittsburgh a victory over St. Louis today, 7 to 4. The Pirates collected one double and four triples during the game. Meadows kept the St. Louis hits well scattered. Errors by Wright and Traynor gave St. Louis three runs in the second inning. The score:

St. Louis	030000001	4	8 1
Pittsburgh	41000200x	7	11 7

Haines, Day and O'Farrell; Meadows and Smith.

New York 8; Boston 6.

BOSTON, May 28.—New York won the final game of the series from Boston today, 8 to 6. Snyder's home run over the left field fence in the eight inning coming as the winning score. It was the first time a ball was hit over that barrier. Score:

OPENING GAME TO RAYBESTOS

SCORE WAS 5-0

"Stuffy" Mahood's clubmen from the West Ward broke into the East Peterborough Baseball League at Exhibition Park last evening and dropped their first game to Jimmie Coursey's brake-liners, the count being 5 to 0. Raybestos had "Lefty" Turner on the mound and the Westenders used 'Scotty" Maudsley on the hurling heap. Both portsiders performed well, Turner doing some good work in the pinches while Maudsley's wildness proved his undoing. His teammates, too, were a bit over-anxious with the willow. Nicholls in the middle garden for the winners stopped a couple of rallies by the Royals when he made several fine catches.

Manager Coursey had a smart-looking squad in uniform. Backing up Turner and Rogers were Harry Corrin, Moore, Batten and Grose on the infield jobs, supported by Shaughnessy, Nicholls and McIntyre in the garden. Against this formidable array of experienced players were included several graduates of the junior, juvenile and midget teams of last season's City League clubs. Manager Mahood turned in a good game with the big mit and Weese, Curry and Cameron were prominent in the play. The team will improve and will be a real contender for the championship of the city series.

Score by innings:

Raybestos	0202100—5
Royals	0000000—0

Batteries—Turner and Rogers; Maudsley and Mahood.

Umpires—Holyman and Ross.

CHIMNEYS ON AUTOS.

NEW HAVEN, May 28.—The exhaust pipes on automobiles should be on the top of the car, so as to send the engine gases up into the air instead of down toward the ground, Prof. Yandell Henderson of Yale believes. He says that a rather long chimney protruding above the top of the car would make the streets safer for pedestrians and drivers.

YANKS BREAK EVEN

Divided Pair of Games With Red Sox—Tygers Win in Tenth.

PHILADELPHIA, May 28.—Connie Mack's Athletics took both ends of today's double-header with Washington and thereby increased their lead on first place to three full games. The first game was won by an 1 1to 3 count, the second by a score of 9 to 4.

The Senator hurlers were punished severely in both games and proved wholly unable to halt the attack of the league leaders. The scores:

First Game:

Washington	200100000	3	10 0
Philadelphia	42010004x	11	12 1

Zachary, Russell, Kelly and Ruel; Walberg and Cochrane.

Second Game:

St. Louis 4; Cleveland 3.

ST. LOUIS, May 28.—The St. Louis Browns disposed of Benjamin Karr, a pitcher who had won five straight games, in defeating the Cleveland Indians today, 4 to 3. Bunched hits and skilful base running of the locals, aided by the visitors' two errors, gave the Browns the game. Score:

Cleveland	001010010	3	9 2
St. Louis	02200000x	4	4 0

Karr and Myatt; Bush and Dixon.

Detroit 7; Chicago 5

CHICAGO, May 28.—Red Faber weakened in the ninth inning when Manager Cobb of Detroit injected his pinch-hitter into the game and overtook Chicago after the locals had scored four runs on Kamm's home run with the bases full in the eighth inning. Chicago tied the count incount in their half of the ninth, but Ted Lyons who relieved Faber, was unsteady in the tenth inning and started the visitors to victory with a wild throw to second. Bunched hits followed this and Detroit won, 7 to 5. The score:

Detroit	10000001 32	7	17 1
Chicago	0000000410	5	8 3

KNIGHTS WON JUVENILE GAME

Kiwanis Boys Were Unable to Connect for Enough Hits to Win.

SCORE WAS 4-2

On Thursday evening at 6 o'clock, the Kiwanis and Knights of Columbus Juveniles staged a fast game in the Juvenile City League at Riverside Park, which ended with the score 4-2 for the K. of C.'s. The umpire was Jack McCarney who was as fair as could be expected behind the pitcher. Conners was in the box for the Kiwanis while Masterson did the throwing for the Knights of Columbus. From the time the play started until the end of the game, both teams were on their toes and issued up some fine ball. One very good hit was made, when McDonough smashed the pill for what seemed to be another "Hap" Harrison but it dropped just inside the fence not far away from "Hap's" homer in the Big Four on Wednesday. The Kiwanis made two double plays which were well figured. In the fourth, Graham picked a line drive which flew to Lebarr and to Marshall; and in the sixth Conners got a straight fly and threw it to Lebarr who again was watching his chance to cover second. The Knights of Columbus succeeded in getting five hits while Kiwanis took three, and the errors were four for each team. The runs were scored as follows:

Kiwanis—Allin in the fifth, and Conners also in the fifth; for Knights of Columbus—Bannon in the first, Kennealey in the second, and McDonough and Masterson in the fifth. The lineups were:

DEFENDS CROWN TONIGHT

NEW YORK, May 29.—Ever since it passed from the kinky dome of the black Battling Siki to the rusty locks of Mike McTigue, the world's light heavyweight crown has been regarded by the experts as the property of the first good fighter who could get the champion into the ring.

McTigue, who took the title on a decision in Dublin on a St. Patrick's Day, meets Paul Berlenbach, the former amateur wrestler and the hardest puncher in the ring, here tonight, in the first big outdoor show of the season.

Two weeks ago, through the general opinion that McTigue was a mark for a good fighter, smart bettors were laying eight to five that McTigue would lose the title and even money that Berlenbach would win by a knockout.

Yesterday, McTigue was a six to five favorite to win and some long shot money was being laid that the champion would stop the burly Berlenbach.

OPENING GAMES OF MERCANTILE LEAGUE SEASON

Examiner and C.G.E. Meet in First Game Tomorrow Afternoon.

AT RIVERSIDE PARK.

Lockworks and Bankers Will Pastime in Second Game on Saturday.

The Mercantile League will officially open its season on Saturday afternoon at Riverside Park, when a double-header will be staged. The opening game will be between the C.G.E. and Examiner and the second game between the Bankers and Lock Works.

The opening game will start at 2.30 and the second game at 4.00 o'clock. Both games should supply the fans with an afternoon of good ball.

The C.G.E.-Examiner clash should be a good one. Both teams are in good shape and will have a good list of players on their rosters. The C.G.E. have added several new men over their last year's championship team and they expect to win the league again this year. "Jeff" Hardill will likely do the heaving for the C.G.E. outfit. The Examiner team have strengthened considerably this year, the new rule allowing two outsiders helping them a lot. They are using Cameron and Marchen as the two extra men, while Bill Duggan, last year with the Raybestos, is another new member to the team.

In the Banker-Lock Works clash some good ball can be expected. Both teams are away ahead of last year, the Lock Works being well fortified with men. They have two or three good pitchers on the string, but have not decided which one will do duty Saturday.

The Bankers are stronger than last year, and are taking advantage of the new ruling allowing two outsiders. They have signed "Casey" Masterston for mound duty and he will dish them up against the Lock Works.

With no Central League game here Saturday the fans will have a chance to see the Mercantilers in action. It should afford them a good afternoon of ball.

The first game gets away at 2.30 sharp, and Edgar Lebarr will be umpire-in-chief. There will be no admission charge.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

The difference between good golf and poor golf often lies in the difference between drawing the and swinging it

Golfers without end drag their clubs and never suspect it. This results from a number of avoidable things. Lack of relaxation in the address and during the back swing causes rigidity in arms, wrists and shoulders, and when these muscles are rigid they can do nothing but drag the club. An effort to hit the ball with a body push means a dragged club. A left arm too stiff and straight in the back swing usually leads to rigidity and a resulting dragged club. The dragged club often hits a fairly good ball, but it will never hit a long one. The remedy is in taking a little more time with the turning of the club at the top. Let it turn easily, then throw it.

SPORT GOSSIP AND COMMENT.

Peeney Mills, Belleville's veteran catcher, made two interesting statements before Wednesday's game. One was that this year's Peterboro team is the strongest that has ever carried the Petes' hopes in the Central Ontario League race, and the other was that Al. Heckman pitched the best game against Belleville on Monday that he has turned in against the railroaders in two seasons. And the Belleville backstop is about right on both counts.

* * * * * * * * *

It is certainly true that the Petes were never so strong in reserve strength as they are at present. There is plenty of material in all departments—Whitehouse has strengthened the pitching staff; two seasoned catchers in Ross and Gartner are available to replace Swanston in case of need; this year's outfield is the best collection of ground-covering gardeners the Petes have ever had, and there is harmony and club spirit among the players.

* * * * * * * * *

The Kingston standard, however, after seeing the Johnston crew in action in the first game of the season at Kingston, says the will not do, and that only Legon, Hall, Swanston and Harrison are playing up to last year's form. While the Standard admittedly knows more about the Belleville, Oshawa and Peterboro teams than their own managers, yet in this case we prefer the verdict of the veteran Mills.

* * * * * * * * *

The Petes invade Oshawa tomorrow for their first clash of the season with the Motor Town club, and will find Dainty all primed up after a ten days' rest to take Manager Johnston's crew into camp. The jaunty Duke is Oshawa's mainstay in the twirling department, despite the addition of Breckenridge and Lennox to the staff, and Manager Reeves will undoubtedly call upon him to face the Petes. It is Heckman's turn to work for the homesters, but Shiner Johnston may trade upon Oshawa's widely recognized weakness against left-handed pitching and send Whitehouse in against the motorists.

* * * * * * * * *

Apparently Oshawa are no stronger than last season—if as strong. The departure of Micky Murray has left a gap that it has been impossible to fill, and the loss of the ex-Peterboro boy is hardly balanced by the addition of Dineen, a new left-handed first baseman from Chicago. Otherwise Oshawa is depending upon the same material as last season when the team finished last in the race.

* * * * * * * * *

Umpire Geo. Sullivan erred in calling Legon out when he was hit by a call from his own bat while standing in the batter's box the other night. It was a foul ball, and should have been called that and nothing more.

* * * * * * * * *

The fans are already talking about the Petes' next home game, which brings the chesty Kingston Ponies here a week from tomorrow. The leadership will likely depend upon the result of the clash, and it looms up as one of the big fixtures of the schedule. —F. D. C.

FIRST ROUND GORDON CUP JUNIOR LEAGUE GAMES

Fixture at Oval and Another on King Edward Park.

The cup tie proper—G. N. Gordon trophy—is again to the fore tomorrow afternoon whwen the Canadian Woollens and the Quaker Oats meet in the first round. In previous games the Woollens have been fortunate enough to gain the verdict over their opponents in two league tussels and were first-class soccer exhibitions.

Years gone past, the Canadian Woollens have endevaoured to gain possession of this cup but fate was against them when their opponents of tomorrow won the trophy in the cup final two seasons ago.

The Canadian Woollens team will be C. Griffin, goal; J. Cridland and J. Chambers, back; A. Read, H. Mann and Geo. Blowers, half-backs; A. Sayers, J. Gaskill, A. Mitchell, A. Wilson and A. Burgess, forward.

In all probability the Quaker Oats will show some changes from last Monday so as to obtain the right to go into the next round.

The following Quaker Oats players have been selected: W. Curtis, goal; F. Honour and S. Maker, backs; W. Logan, J. Scott and A. Maker, half backs; R. Willshaw, Smith or Mavette, Gardner, N. Maker and T. Williams, forwards. Reserves, R. Walker and W. Hepburn.

Junior Games

C.P.C. play Masseys in a league game at King Edward Park on Saturday, at 3 o'clock. C. Calladine, referee.

BRITISH GOLF FINALS TO-DAY

Robert Harris, of Dundee, and K. F. Fradgley Decide Title.

WESTWARD HO, England, May 29—The finale of the British Amateur Golf Championship will be played tomorrow between Robert Harris, a Scotsman from Dundee and K. F. Fradgley of Warren. The last hope of the Western Hemishpere, J. I. Cruickshank, Argentine champion, fell a victim to Noel Layton at the 19th hole in the sixth round.

Harris, who is the favorite for the title, was captain of the British team that played against the United Sates at St. Andrews, Scotland, in 1923.

The players left in the Westward Ho competition today again had to negotiate a flooded course and to face a stiff wind. Cruickshank, playing and putting well, held a one hole lead at the turn, but Layton succeeded in squaring the match at the 13th and again at the sixteenth. The seventeenth and eighteenth were halved and Cruickshank lost at the 19th, failing to hole a six foot putt for a half after Layton had holed out a longer one.

Harris easily disposed of H. F. Tubbs in the morning and after the match with Layton in the afternoon the weather was somewhat improved. Layton took the first hole with a beautiful four but lost the lead immediately and the match seesawed until Harris succeeded in sinking a long putt to win at the eighteenth.

Fradgley, playing his best golf of the championship, beat R. B. Harman by two holes.

RUTH DISCHARGED FROM HOSPITAL

At Least Another Week Before He Can Play Ball.

NEW YORK, May 27 — Babe Ruth is loose again. The invalid athlete of the New York Yankees was discharged officially from St. Vincent's Hospital Tuesday morning after having spent almost seven weeks here as a patient. The Babe celebrated by witnessing his first baseball games of the regular season, going to the Yankee Stadium and watching his team-mates break even in a double-header.

The Babe arrived early enough to take his customary workout, participating in the regular batting practice with the rest of the Yanks. He even went so far as to go out on patrol the outfield during the fielding session, hereby creating a minor storm of excitement among the spectators, who for a while thought that they would see the "mauling" mammouth get into the game. But Ruth did not play and will not play for some days, as Miller Huggins, manager of the team, said that he did not plan on taking Ruth to Philadelphia when the team departed on Friday.

The Babe has been classed as an invalid for so long that it will take at least a week more for him to get into strong enough condition to play. He plans to spend the rest of the time before he rejoins the team at his apartment and will take a short practice session at the Yankee Stadium each day, increasing the amount of exercise as his strength returns.

Ruth was carried to the hospital on April 7, when he returned from the Southern train trip, in a state of collapse after a severe attack of influenza, aided and abetted by indigestion, at Ashville, N.C. After a few days in the hospital an abscess developed and an operation was necessary, further retarding the Babe's convalescence. Just before the operation was performed Mrs. Ruth collapsed from a nervous breakdown and also became a patient at the hospital. Yesterday it was reported that she was recovering and would be able to leave the hospital in a few days.

Ruth is famous for making quick recoveries from the ailments with which he has been attacked, and with his release from the hospital it is probable that he will make rapid strides toward his old condition.

NURMI RETURNS HOME AMATEUR

Received Only $7.00 a Day During His Tour of the United States.

WILL COME BACK.

NEW YORK, May 29.—(Canadian Press).—Offers totalling approximately $250,000 to renounce his amateur status were made to Paavo Nurmi, the wonder runner from Finland, during his visit to Canada and United States, Frederick Rubien, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, said to-day shortly after Nurmi sailed for his home in Abo, Finland. All offers were refused, however, Rubien said, and Nurmi is particularly happy over the fact that his amateur standing remained undamaged. Rubien reiterated that Nurmi received only $7 a day as expenses. A crowd of several hundred persons was at the pier to wish Nurmi bon voyage.

Nurmi hopes to return again next year or in 1927.

A team was selected of the ten high men to shoot in the Dominion Rifle League: B. Q. Dench, Walter Trude, George Pearson, Dave Charlton, William Bickell, George Hendren and William Trude.

The club shoots will be held on June 18 and 25, and July 2, 9, Sept 2, 24 and Oct. 8.

BASEBALL SIMPLIFIED

When is it possible to score a run on a double play that retires the side?

It is always possible to score a run of any double play that retires the side, provided the third out is not a force out or a play in which the third man out be retired before reaching first base.

To illustrate: There are runners on first and third and one out. The batsman hits a difficult drive to right field that looks as if it would fall safe. The runner on third, playing good baseball, decides to hold that base on the theory that if the ball is caught he can beat the throw to the plate.

The runner on first, feeling sure the ball will not be caught, runs wild. The fielder makes the catch and the runner on third breaks for home. When the ball is caught the runner originally on first has reached second.

The fielder throws the ball to first before the runner can return, completing a double play and retiring the side.

On all double plays of this nature the runner can score from third, if he held his base until the ball was caught and crossed the plate before the double play which retired the side was completed.

There was no force about the third out. A force can only occur when the runner must vacate a base to make room for the batsman. The third out was made possible by bad base running.

Just remember, a run can always score on any double play in which the third out is not a force play or a play in which the batsman failed to reach first, provided the runner has crossed the plate in advance of the final out.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

ABOUT SOUTHPAWS

Left-handed pitching was expected to cut big capers in the majors this year. So far it has been more or less of a disappointment.

Prior to the opening of the 1925 campaign no less a distinguished leader than Connie Mack, figured that his southpaws would carry much of his pitching burden.

When I looked the Athletics over in spring training at Ft. Myers, Fla., Connie was grooming a quartet of "lefties" for a big season.

There was the veteran Fred Heimach, apparently just about ready to break out as a star, "Lefty" Groves, the $100,000 beauty, Big Walberg and Stan. Baumgartner, who had done well last year for the A's. In addition Meeker loomed up as a good prospect.

Of the first 20 victories scored by the Athletics, only three are credited to the southpaws of the staff, Groves, Walberg and Baumgartner each winning one game.

RIGHT-HANDERS STAR

Sam Gray, easily the sensation of the majors, has won his first seven starts. Gray is a sterling performer, destined to be a much talked about athlete before the close of the season.

The veteran Ed. Rommel is getting away to a great start. He has won six of his first seven games.

Perhaps even more pleasing to Mack is the early season showing of Bryan Harriss, otherwise known as "Slim." Mack figured Gray and Rommel to win, he was not so certain about Harriss.

Almost overnight he acquired poise, the one and only thing he lacked. If Harriss continues his fine showing, Mack is well fortified for right-handers. It give him three stars.

The work of Mack's three right-handers proves conclusively that right-handed pitching, backed by intelligence, is just as an effective weapon as curves and fast ones delivered from the portside.

Give the Athletics continued good pitching and the club is certain to be a most dangerous factor in the American League race. It has the punch and enthusiasm of a winner.

CASE OF GROVES

Mack's southpaws have done but little in the early stages of the race, but it is reasonably certain that before the close of the season, at least two of them, Groves and Baumgartner, should be most helpful.

While the much-touted Groves has disappointed as a consistent winner, simply because of lack of control, he has shown flashes of a great pitcher.

His best performance to date was his work as relief pitcher in a recent game against Detroit. Working four innings, he allowed no hits and retired six of the Tygers on strikes.

Groves has burning speed. I cannot recall a left-hander to break into the American League since the days of the late Rube Waddell that boasted more.

The fast ball delivered by Groves is good enough to get him by without the use of a curve, if he only had control. However, Groves has a tantalizing bender in addition to great speed.

Groves may be a trifle late in arriving, but he is going to land one of these days with a thud and when he does it will be in the select spot occupied by stardom.

MANAGER'S TASK.

What part does the manager play in the success of a ball club?

That question is often put to me when discussing the showing of certain teams which either surprise or disappoint.

I am inclined to think that it is about a 50-50 proposition. A pennant-winning club must have the talent and incidentally it must be properly handled.

No matter how wise the manager he cannot make base hits for the batters, pitch for the pitchers or field for the fielders. He can direct but he cannot execute.

However, a capable manager can get far more out of a team than the leader who lacks diplomacy as well as strategy.

The Sox, a distinct disappointment last season, a tailender, are the surprise of the 1925 American League race.

The difference in the team's showing is a compliment to the methods of Collins as a manager. It is the same team playing with a different spirit.

McGRAW'S STYLE.

For years the system as used by John McGraw of the New York Giants has been much press-agented.

McGraw dominates his ball club, even to the giving of signals from the bench as to what type ball should be pitched.

In every world series this fact has been apparent and has also been much commented upon. True, McGraw cannot pitch the ball, but he can determine what he believes will be the most effective style.

McGraw stands out as one of the greatest managers in the history of the game. His record is most imposing. His system is unique but there is no denying that it has produced results.

Recently a former member of the New York Giants told me that before a certain crucial series with Chicago, the first string catcher requested that he be permitted to do the thinking. McGraw agreed.

The Giants lost all four games. That was a break for McGraw. The team might have lost them had he been in charge. Such things have happened.

However, those four defeats with the catcher giving the signs, so the story goes, killed off all objections to the McGraw system of his dominating the play.

The Giants this year seem well on the way to a fifth straight pennant under McGraw's direction. That will be something for rival managers to shoot at.

LIVELY BALL.

In a sense, the lively ball has relieved the manager of certain details which required much consideration when a two-run lead was regarded as a healthy margin.

Incidentally, attendance records for the past five years refute any claim that the slam-bang game isn't popular.

The [illegible] loving public likes the athlete who packs the punch, no matter [illegible]

In golf the player who hits them high and far from the tee invariably has the largest gallery following him.

In baseball, Babe Ruth has long been an idol because of his ability to hit the ball just a little farther than any other human being.

In the fight game, it is the knock-erout who draws the crowd. In tennis, it's Bill Tilden's speedy service that commands attention.

The lively ball is here to stay, the baseball public has approved of it at the turnstiles.

BRITISH GOLF LINKS SOAKED

Extensive Sheets of Water and Heavy Turf Impede Players.

SHED REMOVED

WESTWARD HO, England, May 28.—Play in the 1925 British amateur golf championship yesterday reduced the field to eight players, of which the Argentine champion, J. I. Cruickshan, who brilliantly disposed of his opponent, H. H. Hodge, of the St. George's Hill Club, was regarded by the experts as likely to be the contended in the finals, probably against the Scotsman, Robert Harris, who is co-favorite.

Cruickshank has surmounted the difficulties of casual water and heavy greens, which were added to those already existing on the course, without faltering and has been picked to defeat Noel Layton, a sturdy and experienced match player, in the sixth round today, and then to enter the semi-finals.

Yesterday's matches were made most trying by all-night rains which continued through the morning, and caused the start to be postponed until shortly after noon. Only once before, at Hoylake in 1921, have the contenders had to play their matches under such flooded conditions, and then the final was only held up while the water was swept from a few holes. Yesterday in all the matches the players had to contend with extensive sheets of casual water and heavy turf. It was not until 9 o'clock in the evening that the programme was completed.

Thompson Disappoints.

In the fourth round of play Cruickshank lived up to the expectations of the gallery which followed him, by almost perfect play on the homeward half, winning by two holes on the home green after turning one down. F. Thompson of Wearside, who defeated Cyril Tolley Tuesday, was a disappointment and failed to produce anything like steady golf and went down before Lieutenant Boumphrey at the sixteenth.

In the fifth round Cruickshank, who was paired with Boumphrey won the first hole in four and then won the seventh and eighth, at the latter of which—192 yards—he had a two. He got into the rushes on the ninth losing the hole, then lost the tenth with a bad approach, and was stymied at the eleventh which made a trio of lost holes. He won the twelfth with a twelve yard putt and became dormie three, and halved the sixteenth, winning the match.

Ordered Shed Removed.

The match between H. S. T. Tubbs, Stinchcombe Hill, and the Hon. Michael Scott, Royal North Devon, was a continual sensation even to the extent of requiring a shed to be removed so that the ball could be played. Scott was dormie three, when Tubbs holed a twenty-yarder for two and took the next two holes. On the nineteenth Tubbs was stymied which robbed him of the chance of winning with a short putt. On his second stroke Tubbs sliced and his ball wetn under a shed, which the referee finally ordered removed and this enabled him to halve the hole. At the 21st both players had bad approaches, but Tubbs managed to hole another long one for the match.

CAN BOBBY JONES BRIDGE GOLF GAP?

Not Since 1913 Has a National Amateur Title-Holder Repeated.

BY JOE WILLIAMS

This year at Oakmont, in the Pittsburgh district, Bobby Jones, distinguished father and family man, will be defending his title as amateur golf champion for the first time.

It is fashionable, and probably altogether correct, to call the Atlanta athlete the greatest amateur golf has ever known.

What does the coming season hold in store for this genius of the links?

History proves that no ordinary mortal can hope to rule the elusive, intricate sport for more than 12 months hand-running.

Jerome Travers was the last amateur golf champion to repeat. He won in 1912, again in 1913, and was runnerup in 1914. This is the most remarkable demonstration of sustained championship form in the books.

Term Him Super-Star.

Is a super-star big enough to carry on from one year to another? Can Jones extend his championship reign from 1924 to 1925, and thereby bridge a gap in the records that has existed since 1913, a matter of 12 years?

Naturally the question must remain unanswered. Jones ought to have a better chance than any one who has held the title in recent years, for he is enormously gifted and is young and strong. But very often these details are not as important as dumb luck.

Jones has reason enough to remember Oakmont, where this year's battle will be decided.

It was at Oakmont in 1919 that he seemed a certainty to win his first title and, when he failed, many predicted he never would win, having passed up, as he had, such a glorious chance.

Jones Looked Certain.

Jones eliminated Jimmy Manion in the first round, took Bob Gardner over the embattled bunkers in the second, checked Ruddy Knepper out in the third and downed the venerable Bill Fownes in the semi-final.

And who was S. Davidson Herron?

Someone in the press tent learned he worked in one of the steel mills, and, judging by his Dempsey-like build, it appeared likely he might even be a puddler.

As a golfer few had ever heard of him apart from his local triumphs.

Every golfer Jones had eliminated in the preceding rounds, was considered more formidable, and naturally Bob was a heavy favorite to win. But he didn't. Herron trimmed him by the fairly decisive margin of 5 to 4.

IN BASEBALL PUZZLE PLAYS

The Play: The bases are filled, there are two men out and three balls and two strikes on the batsman. As the pitcher starts to deliver the ball all the baserunners get away to a good start, the thought being to advance as far as possible if the batsman hits safely.

The pitch was high and wide of the plate, making the fourth ball, entitling the batsman to first and forcing the runner from third over the plate.

The runner advancing from second to third on the play over-ran the base. A snap throw from the catcher retired him before he could get back to the bag. This was the third out, ending the inning.

The runner originally on third had not crossed the plate before the third out was made. The question is: Can a run score after the side has been retired?

The Answer: In this particular case the run scores, even though the third out was made prior to the runner from third legally crossing the plate.

With the bases filled and the batsman receiving a base on balls, each runner is forced to advance a base to make room for the batsman. The runner on third is entitled to score. It cannot be taken away by any act of a succeeding runner.

Actually the run was scored the moment the batsman received the base on balls. The touching of the plate was a mere formality.

LONDON, Ont., May 29.—(Canadian Press). — Thomas Hogan, of Smith's Falls, is in Victoria Hospital, suffering from injuries about the hip, head and face as the result of a crash on the Provincial highway east of London, near Thamesford, yesterday. Hogan fell asleep at the wheel and steered his car against a post.

FISH AND GAME

As a battler he is a veritable bear-cat. This heavy warrior is the most sought tackle-smasher in inland water.

The musky is a fish that you must go after—it seldom comes to you. As a rule this vicious fighter lives at home. In order to catch it you must troll or cast an interesting lure right up on the front porch.

The number of 'lunge to any given area is limited. You may find it necessary to cover a vast amount of water before your troll or casting bait passes by the exact spot in the right manner.

Unlike bass and other inland fish, muskellunge do not run in schools. Usually a mated pair commands a given locality. If both are at home, and you catch one, your chances of nabbing the other are good.

Muskellunge are seldom caught at night. The best time is from 4 p.m. until dark. The open season on these mighty fish breaks about the middle of June. For the next 15 days is an excellent time to fish for them.

The very best fishing time of all is from the first of September to the first of October. For then the fish are on the rocky shoals. However, the middle of June generally sees them off the spawning beds, hungry and full of fight.

An overcast sky and a light wind make an ideal condition. Up until the last year or so the lure most effective was a feathered trolling spoon.

It is still a splendid bait, but the pike-shaped plug and the under-water pork rind are now highly regarded. The phantom minnow also does the work.

The muskellunge strikes to kill. It is quickly on and quicker off. Hold your rod straight back when trolling. Once the hook is set try and keep slack out of the line. Keep him coming. Play him. Don't "hoss" him.

In June and July, you will find the muskellunge in the weeds. Troll or cast along the edges. Generally, August is a poor month for these fish. They suffer from inflamed mouths at that time.

Some folks say they lose their teeth then. Never saw any that lost their teeth but have caught them with inflamed mouth.

Four quarts of peanuts taken to China 35 years ago by a missionary are the "ancestors" of the present Chinese production, which now exceeds the American crop.

Cycling Far Easier than Walking

FRANK Jones used to complain about his feet getting so hot and achey from his long walks to and from work on the hard roads and pavements.

One day when he felt more tired, and his feet hurt him worse than usual, he happened to see a man go gliding by on a bicycle.

"Cycling is far easier than walking," said Frank to himself. And all day long while he was working that thought kept running through his mind.

That night, on the way home, he dropped into a C.C.M. dealer's and looked over the different C.C.M. models, choosing one that suited him in every way.

Since then Frank's feet have had a much easier time and he's quit complaining. In fact, he's boasting now about how fine and fresh he feels since he started Cycling.

He also tells how quickly and easily he Cycles to work and home again—how he saves the shoe leather he used to wear out on the hard cement walks—how he saves valuable time by Cycling instead of walking.

If you gave Frank a chance he would tell you all about the C.C.M. Triplex Crank Hanger—the wonderful power plant that responds to the slightest pressure on the pedals and makes the C.C.M. run so smoothly, quietly and easily.

He would show you the strong, powerful frames of English Seamless Tubing—the bright silvery nickeling that won't rust because it is done over copper—the sparkling enamel that is baked on over a coat of anti-rust so it will stand rain, snow and all kinds of weather—the new Gibson Pedal with its rust-proof aluminum frame—and the C.C.M. Hercules Coaster Brake that coasts so easily, has such braking power, and is ounces lighter than the old-style side-arm type.

The C.C.M. dealer will, also, be glad to tell you all about the C.C.M. and to show you the new models—the Standard, the Special, the Sport model, the C.C.M. Flyer, the Curved Bar model.

Prices have again been reduced. They're now $20 to $25 less than "peak" prices. Biggest values since pre-war days.

MANITOBA CHURCH VOTE CHALLENGED

Declared Against Union By 71 to 1—Some Say Vote Illegal.

WINNIPEG, May 29.—(Canadian Press).—Knox Presbyterian Church of Selkirk, Man., voted against entering the United Church, 71 to 1.

The date set for voting in Manitoba is June 21 and June 22, but at a meeting last night, at which the result of the voting was announced, S. H. Summerscalles, chairman, contended the action of the congregation was perfectly legal. Rev. J. A. Cormie, secretary of the United Church local committee, states voting on the Union question at this time is "entirely illegal." "There can be no voting under either the Provincial or the Federal Act until after June 10," states Mr. Cormie.

USES OF PRAYER.

Efficacy and Power Shown By Rev. Father McMahon at St. Peter's.

In connection with the Triduum which is being held at St. Peter's Cathedral this week for the young women of the parish, Rev. Father McMahon, S.J., of Montreal, preached last evening on Prayer. An eloquent sermon dealt mainly with the efficacy of prayer; its power over the souls of those who pray and those for whom they pray, and was interspersed with copious examples from the preacher's own experience.

Father McMahon spoke of the uselessness of prayer that was not directed to a right purpose, of the aimless praying practiced by many, and referred especially to the prayer of Moses who persevered in prayer, even against the Divine ordinance. Moses, coming down from the Mount and finding his people worshipping golden idols, was told by God that He would destroy the idolaters, but Moses refused to cease praying for his brethren, and finally they repented and the wrath of God was turned from them.

NEW BRUNSWICK HARBOR GRANT OF $50,000 KINDLES OLD EMBERS OF PARTY CONTROVERSY IN HOUSE

Hon. Dr. Manion Repeats Challenge of Election and Alleges Extravagance.

ITEM DEFENDED.

Harbor and Breakwater Affirmed as Necessity For Fishermen of the East.

OTTAWA, May 30. — (Canadian Press).—"I dare the Government to go to the country at this moment," challenged Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, Conservative member for Fort William and Rainy River, in the House of Commons Friday afternoon.

He had been criticising a vote of $50,000 for harbor works at Escuminac, N.B. The vote had been condemned as extravagant, and Government members had referred to public works expenditures by the former Government. Dr. Manion said that if the late Government spent too much on public works, that was all the more reason why the present Government should economize.

"If we committed sins are they going to copy us?" he asked. He was prophesying that the Conservative Government would win the next election, when a shout went up from the Liberal benches. Dr. Manion promptly issued his challenge to the Government to call an election. "And," he said, "I speak with the Conservative party behind me."

Dr. J. H. King, Minister of Public Works, had been drawing a comparison between expenditures on public works by the former Government and expenditures by the present one. There was heated controversy between the Minister and Right Hon. Arthur Meighen as to whether or not these expenditures had been made necessary by war conditions.

Expenditure Reduced.

Hon. James Murdock said the former Government had been afflicted with more chronic "spendonania" than the present Government. In the four years after "those hungry gentlemen," the Borden Government came into power, 1911 to 1915, $160,000,000 had been spent on public works, while the total spent on similar works in the previous eight years of Liberal administration had been $121,000,000.

Mr. Meighen returned that the public verdict on the record of the two Governments would be more interesting than the opinion of Mr. Murdock.

The Minister of Labor retorted that the public verdict had been given at West Hastings.

Mr. Meighen said the verdict of West Hastings had been "a purchased verdict," and Canada was now paying the purchase price. He defended public works expenditures of the former Government, and when Mr. King said that $47,000,000 had been spent by it for this purpose in the fiscal year, 1914-1915, "the year you should have gone to the country."

Mr. Meighen retorted that in that year Liberal members had declared an election would be 'a crime against humanity,' and every Liberal newspaper was "shrieking with rage for fear the Government would call an election."

Three Billions Spent.

E. J. Garland (Progressive, Bow River) interjected into the debate a statement to the effect that Canada was spending before the war, $26,000 a day more than it was raising by taxes. In the five years since the war, it had spent $2,909,000,000, or an amount sufficient to buy the C. P. R. and the stock of all the standard banks in Canada. The only justification for the vote under consideration was that it had been promised in 1882 and in 1911, and that the fishermen needed protection by the proposed works. The latter case had not been proven.

D. F. Kellner (Progressive, Edmonton East) then moved a reduction of $49,000 in the vote which stood in the estimates at $50,000.

Necessary For Fishermen.

Hon. A. B. Copp declared that the public works expenditures asked for the province of New Brunswick were absolutely essential, and this particular vote for harbor improvements at Escuminac, to the extent of $5,000, was necessary in the interests of the fishermen. He pointed out that the total estimates for public works in that province was

STILL OPERATOR FINED IN COURT

Charles English, of Galway, To Pay $225.00 and Costs.

INGENIOUS STILL.

In police court this morning Charles English appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley charged with an infraction of the Inland Revenue Act. He was fined $225.00 and costs.

Over forty milesn orth of Peterborough near Silver Lake Post Office in Galway township English was apprehended by Inspector D. Porter and Provincial oCnstables H. Storey and W. F. Maker, for having in his possession a still and seventy gallons of mash.

The still is an ingenious contrivance having an attachment for filling two forty gallon cans at the same time from the one worm which is of copper and over a foot in length.

English is a young man of 18 years and had nothing to say in his defense.

Should the stipulatory fine not be forthcoming the alternative will be two months of hard labour.

SEVEN PERSONS BURNED TO DEATH

Fire Destroyed House and Occupants in Missouri Town.

SULLIVAN, Mo., May 30.—(Canadian Press).—Seven persons were burned to death in their home here yesterday. The dead are Mrs. William Allen, three grand-daughters, a grandson and two great-grand-daughters. The residence was believed to have been ignited by the fire in the kitchen stove.

SKELETONS FROM STONE AGE FOUND

Dinosaur Eggs and Hand Polished Stones in Gobi Desert.

URGA, Mongolia, May 30.—(Canadian Press).—Roy Chapman Andrews, leader of the American Museum of Natural History expedition into Central Asia, announced upon his arrival here the discovery in the Gobi desert of many skeletons of human beings and animals of the stone age. Additional dinosaur eggs, charred human bones, ostrich eggs and thousands of hand-polished stones, the age of which Mr. Andrews estimates from ten to twenty thousand years, also have been found.

The United States is the second gold producing country in the world, the Transvaal being the first and Canada third.

SUNDAY GOLF PLAYING PARENTS GIVE BAD EXAMPLE TO CHILDREN OF CANADA

Lieutenant-Governor Cockshutt's Admonition Applauded at Ottawa—Duty to Preserve Old Canadian Ideals—Flood of Foreign Magazines.

OTTAWA, May 30—That the tendency to drift away from the old standards of religion and thrift in Canada should be discouraged by every agency for good in the country, and that the task of Canadianizing the people, which lies to a great extent at the door of the press of the country, should not be eliminated, were the strong points in the address of Colonel Cockshutt, Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, at the luncheon of the Ottawa Board of Trade, here Friday.

Colonel Cockshutt referred to the flood of newspapers and magazines which come into Canada, and which are intensely loyal to their own country and the building up of their ideals, manners and fashions, which are different to Canadian ideals and manners. He said the foreign circulation of periodicals and newspapers tends to cause a drifting away from Canadian ideals which is not for the good of the country.

Set Sunday Example

The gathering was largely attended and many citizens who are in the social, business and professional life of the city were present. Lieutenant Governor Cockshutt was applaused when in the course of his address he said, "We cannot expect that our children will grow up to be stalwart men and women of tomorrow if they are not thoroughly trained in sound principles of living. We cannot send our children to church on Sunday and expect them to receive any benefit from it, if we ourselves go out and play golf, or indulge in other mild forms of sport on Sunday."

Inspected Cadets

Lieut.-Governor Cockshutt later inspected 800 cadets, comprising the Collegiate Institutes and Technical School Corps, on Parliament Hill before a crowd of 4,000 people. The cadets acquitted themselves with considerable skill and won appreciative comments from His Honor.

QUEEN CABLES HER GREETINGS

ANNUAL MEETING.

OTTAWA, May 30. — (Canadian Press). — A message from Her Majesty Queen Mary, expressing appreciation of the services rendered to humanity by the Victorian Order of Nurses, was read at the opening of the twenty-seventh annual meeting of the Board of Governors of that organization here Friday afternoon. The message read:

"I am so interested in hearing of the continued good work which is being carried on by the Victorian Order of Nurses in Canada.

"I fully appreciate that the services which the Order renders must be of inestimable value, and I send my heartfelt good wishes to all who are engaged in this noble work.

"(Signed) Mary R."

Annual Report.

C. A. Magrath presided over the meeting, and Her Excellency Lady Byng of Vimy was among the members present. Representatives of the Local Councils all over the Dominion attended. The annual report of the chief superintendent, Miss E. E. Smellie, showed that the nurses of the Order paid 561,567 visits during the year. During 1924 there were 67 centres of the Order with 273 nurses engaged in the work of nursing in the cities and rural districts.

The work of the Order was carried on with striking success in every centre. The report of the superintendent showed that 13 scholarships were awarded by the Order to prospective public health nurses; during 1924 one district was closed by Westmount and Montreal amalgamating. Two new districts were opened in Ontario, one in New Brunswick and one in Nova Scotia.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, C. A. Magrath; Vice-Presidents: Sir George Perley, Hon. W. A. Charlton and Mrs. Arthur Drummond; Hon. Secretary, W. H. Herridge; Hon. Treasurer, E. S. Houston; Hon. Councillor O. M. Bigger, K.C. The Executive remains as last year.

DREAM SERVED AS A BURGLAR ALARM

Postmaster Wakened By Dream of Robbery and Shot Bandit.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(United Press).—Awakened by a dream that he was being robbed, Herbert H. Park, postmaster at Gibsonia, Pa., looking out of his window, saw some one moving about in his post office. He took a rifle and killed the bandit. Postmaster-General New awarded him $1,000 Friday for the yegg's scalp.

NEW BEER AIDS BORDER TRADE

But Drys Have Become Drier and More Determined to Fight It.

EFFECTS OF WEEK.

WINDSOR, May 30—What has one week of 4.4 beer done in Windsor? Inquiry shows it has made the drys dryer, the wets wetter—and business better through the infux of visitors.

The Moderation League of Ontario, through whose efforts, principally, the new "four by four" beer was legally put on sale last Thursday, and the Prohibition Union of Ontario, which fought against a modification of the Provincial Temperance Act, are determined today more than ever to carry out their respective programs—the one for a more liberal liquor law, and the other for legislation that shall be bone dry.

Windsor, which, from Thursday to Sunday night, was an oasis that drew thousands of Detroiters' bent on alleviating a long-standing thirst by quaffing of the new brew, has reverted virtually to a state of normalcy. While the 13 hotels licensed to sell the beer are doing more business than they have done in many years, the influx of Detroiters has dwindled to amost normal proportions.

What Merchants Say

Merchants in the "beer zone" stated yesterday that they have experienced a noticeable increase in business since a week ago.

"The more people there are in town," one said, "the more business we are bound to do. I can't say that we are rushed, but the advent of beer certainly has stimulated business in general."

Roscoe S. Rodd, president of the Border Cities branch of the Prohibition Union, said yesterday, that his organization was more determined than ever in its fight against liquor. The union, he said, would concede the opposition nothing, regardless of the fact that the sale of 4.4 beer, according to the police records, has resulted in no increase in drunkenness. The union's fight, he said, was not against drunkenness so much as against drinking.

The Dry Argument

"We never were more opposed than at the present time to any encroachment on the prohibition laws," he said. "Alcohol injures a person who takes it, whether in a diluted form or concentrated, whether in 4.4 beer or whisky. And a person can get enough alcohol from 4.4 beer to injure him.

"As a matter of fact, 4.4 beer is more dangerous because the government has spread the impression that it is a palatable and harmless drink. In 1923, statistics show, 51,000,000 gallons of alcohol were consumed in Great Britain. And of that amount, 80 per cent was in beer.

"While all prohibitionists depore drunkenness, we have to complain more of drinking than intoxication. Drunkenness, to us, is only a phase of drinking. Many persons can drink liquor steadily without growing drunk. The great gain of the Ontario Temperance Act lay not only in the fact that it decreased drunkenness by 40 per cent. but that it curtained drinking by 90 per cent. This 4.4 beer will be especially injurious to young persons, who are being taught that it is a harmless drink."

Wets' Contentions

Malcolm E. Campbell, president of the southwestern division of the Moderation League of Ontario, said yesterday his organization was well satisfied with the success, so far, of the new beer legislation.

"I believe," he said "those who are drinking 4.4 beer are satisfied with it. It is filling a long felt want. But we are not going to stop at that. We will fight for an even less strict liquor law. It is our hope to have legalized the sale of all liquors in Ontario under government control. Our answer to the prohibitionists is the suggestion that they go to Quebec and see for themselves how orderly things are where liquor is being sold under government control."

DIVINE HEALING IS A REALITY SAYS REV. DR. R. C. BLAGRAVE IN AN ADDRESS IN TORONTO

Tells Audience of Baby Dying Through Parents' Lack of Faith.

MEETING IN TORONTO.

Ven. Archdeacon J. C. Davidson Advises Church to Give Attention.

TORONTO, May 30. — "Divine healing is a reality," in the opinion of Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave, of Peterboro, who spoke at Church of the Messiah in connection with the second of a series of meetings dealing with the effort to promote a firmer belief in this form of healing, and who declared that the Church should take a stronger stand in the matter. Rev. Dr. Blagrave felt that one of the reasons the Church had not emphasized the force of Divine healing more strongly was the fear that those upon whom it was applied would not have sufficient faith. In that event, there would be no cures, and accordingly the effect would be that Divine healing would lose prestige, not through its failure, but through the failure of the patients to have sufficient faith. He himself had a discouraging experience earlier in he day before he came to Toronto. An infant was sick, so when he was called in to baptize it he told the parents there was nothing to worry about, that if they would but have faith the child would be cured. But their faith was not strong enough; so the child died. That might be regarded as a setback to the principle of Divine healing, but the fault did not lie in the method itself, but rather in the lack of faith.

Wrong Interpretation.

As a second reason why Divine healing had not made greater progress, Dr. Blagrave felt that too great emphasis was placed upon the Biblical quotation, "Whom the Lord loveth, He chasteneth." As a result of too firm belief in the present-day interpretation of that quotation, many sick people felt that they were suffering because they were beloved by the Lord; and accordingly their stand was that they should not appeal to Divine force for healing. That, they felt, would be contrary to the Scriptures. But, as Dr. Blagrave put it, the whole trouble was in the interpretation of the word "chasteneth." The original meaning, as taken from the Greek, did not imply any form of punishment, but, on the other hand, merely meant 'training.' That misunderstanding, Dr. Blagrave felt, had been a big stumbling-block in the direction of a firmer belief in Divine healing.

In dealing with a recent article by the Bishop of Durham, who pointed out that even the black heathen had been able to produce cures through faith, which could not be interpreted by any manner of means as Christian, Dr. Blagrave declared that faith was the first essential of Divine healing. There had been instances, he admitted, where faith alone had produced cures, without spiritual aid; so when spiritual aid was added to faith, the cures should be all the more certain.

The open meeting which followed Dr. Blagrave's address produced a general discussion of the intricacies of Divine healing, as it must be interpreted from the Scriptures. Ven. Archdeacon J. C. Davidson, convener of the meeting, pointed out that it was an admitted fact that cures had been produced without the aid of medical men, so he felt that it was well worth the effort of the Church to give the matter careful consideration and thorough study.

J. Hubbs, M.P., Asks About Sir Henry Thornton's Bath

OTTAWA, May 30 (Canadian Press)—John Hubbs, Conservative, Prince Edward, Ont., has given notice of motion to the house for answers to the following question: Is another suite of rooms being fitted up in the Chateau Laurier Hotel, or renovations being made in any suite by the Canadian National Railway for the use of Sir Henry Thornton? If so what has been or will be the cost of this work? Was the cost of refitting the bath $900? Is Sir Henry paying the expenses personally? If not who is?

36 BANKRUPTCIES

Liquor Blockade at Sea Increases Border Trade

ST. ALBANS, Vt., May 30.—(Canadian Press)—The Government's blockage along the Atlantic coast that has so effectively checked the activities of nautical smugglers of liquor has tremendously increased the activities of runners bringing their wares from Canada across the Vermont and New Hampshire borders, it was asserted on Friday by Harry C. Whitehill, United States Collector of Customs.

Despite the fact that it is spring and the opening of the highways usually means increased activity, the runners have displayed considerably more than their usual amount of energy and the Customs officers are making plans to reinforce their strength that they may halt the flow of contraband.

In addition to the highways the smugglers are using the railways.

CHANGE DATE OF SCHOOL GRANTS

Finance Committees of Board and Council Reached An Agreement Last Night.

MORE IN NOVEMBER.

Mrs. Kate Morris, W. R. Turner, junior, and G. Harry Thompson of the Board of Education met the finance committee of the City Council to discuss the payment of the grants to the board. The Council wished to pay the grants at the end of the month as the city pays 6 per cent on overdrafts while the Board only gets 4 per cent on credits. The board asked for payment at the first of the month as the ywould have an overdraft before the end of the month for which they had no provision. It was questioned whether the board had any legal right to contract an overdraft as they had no security to offer.

The suggestion was made that the board be paid in two installments each month. The suggestion of Mr. Thompson that the allotments for June, July and August be cut by $5,000 each and the sum of $15,000 be added to the November payment, which is made when the city has a credit balance, met with the approval of both committees and will be reported to the Board and Council at their regular June meetings.

The request of Charles Risher for re payment of part of his income tax which he had paid while waiting for the court of revision to cut the assessment, was granted.

A by-law will be presented to the Council on Monday night authorizing the borrowing of money to pay for the sewage disposal plant and another one will be prepared to permit of the immediate issuance of deebntures so that money could be borrowed at five per cent instead of six.

ONLY THREE JURORS.

Selected From 190 Talesmen in Shepherd Trial.

CHICAGO, May 30.—Two panels of 190 talesmen have passed through the jury box in the Shepherd trial. No progress was made and thus far only three have been accepted and sworn in as jurors. Inasmuch as not a juror has been obtained since Friday the proceedings in the court room have become perfunctory. Fixed opinions have disqualified nearly all the men who have been rejected, and it seems as if nearly every man in Chicago had made up his mind about the case.

LAST CALL.

WHEN THE PAPER COMES OUT MONDAY AFTERNOON THE TICKET SELLING CONTEST WILL HAVE PASSED INTO HISTORY. IT IS CERTAINLY TURNING OUT TO BE A GRAND SUCCESS AND ALL CONTESTANTS ARE TO BE CONGRATULATED UPON THE WORK THEY HAVE DONE. WORK THAT THEY KNEW WAS IN A GOOD CAUSE AND FOR WHICH WE THANK THEM. THE CONTEST CLOSES AT FOUR O'CLOCK MONDAY AFTERNOON. IT IS UP TO SOME OF THE LEADERS TO GET IN ALL THE VOTES THEY CAN BEFORE THAT TIME BECAUSE NO RACE IS WON UNTIL AFTER THE TAPE HAS BEEN BROKEN AND NO ONE KNOWS JUST HOW MANY VOTES ARE BEING HELD BACK TO GO IN AT THE LAST MOMENT. AGAIN WE THANK ALL CONTESTANTS FOR WHAT THEY HAVE DONE. 1d-127-869.

French Forces Withdrawn From the Ouerghue River

FEZ, Morocco, May 30—An official communique issued by Military Headquarters Friday says:

"The comparative calm of the Riffian warfare was punctuated by a series of minor engagements Wenesday night.

"Abd-El-Krim is continuing his concentrations and there have been scattered raids north of the Ouerghue River, from which the French have withdrawn. The Riffians left nine dead on the field after an attack on loyal Beni Bouyahi tribesmen whose defence was reinforced by French automobile rapid firers and artillery."

BASUTOS GREET BRITAIN'S HEIR

Paramount Prince Received Gold Mounted Cane From Prince of Wales.

SHORTAGE OF FOOD.

MASERU, Orange River Colony, May 30.—(Canadian Press).—Resplendent in full dress uniform, his breast arrayed with medals, the Prince of Wales made a deep impression upon the assembled natives of Basutoland at a council at Pitseng Friday. The Prince was escorted into a great semi-circle of horsemen dressed in as colorful garb as his own. Their tufted headdresses even outshone the Prince's severe military cap.

The native assembly was not as large as had been expected because Thursday's bitter cold and a temporary shortage of food caused many of the natives to start the long return trek to their homes.

The paramount chief of the Basutos welcomed the British heir, and after the Prince replied to the greeting, other prominent chieftains made lengthy speeches. When the Prince stood before the mass of natives, deep and sustained exclamations of awe arose and travelled around the great gathering of circled horsemen. At the conclusion of the Prince's speech there were shouts of "Peace! Peace!" The Prince presented a gold-mounted cane to the paramount chief and silver-mounted canes to six other chieftains.

LAST POST FOR GREAT SOLDIER

General Morrison Buried this Afternoon With Full Military Honors.

ARTILLERY SALUTE.

OTTAWA, May 30. — Canadian Press. — "The last post" was sounded over the grave of one of Canada's greatest soldiers this afternoon when the remains of Major-General Sir Edward W. B. Morrison were buried in Beechwood cemetery, while thirteen guns of the 1st Brigade, Canadian field artillery, fired a salute in the vicinity of the cemetery.

The funeral procession from the General's late residence to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and from the church to the cemetery, was one of the most impressive ever held in the Canadian capital.

The body was conveyed on a gun carriage and was draped with the Union Jack. The Governor-General's Foot Guards and the 38th Royal Ottawa Highlanders, provided the escort.

LITTLE RED CAR HAS ANSWERED ITS LAST ALARM

No More Repairs Will Be Made on Veteran of Eight Years' Service.

STATEMENT READ.

Alderman Crowe Vindicates Committee of Charge of False Economy.

Whether a new car should be bought for Chief Gimblett, or the little red Ford be repaired, was the subject before the Fire, Water and Light Committee last night. The car which belongs to the department has been in service for eight years, and estimates on the repairs ranged around $125. Prices were received from several garages for new cars at varying prices.

The old car was first disposed of. White and Ackford agreed to repair it for $225; Reid & Son wanted $130, and the G. Walter Green Company quoted $60 plus the value of the parts used. The motion of Ald. Phelan that no repairs should be made, was passed.

A quotation was received from C. Brewer for the car which the chief is driving now at a rental of $3 per day. This car which has been driven several thousand miles, is a McLaughlin 6, and is quoted at $1450. A new McLaughlin "6" was priced by Andrew Brown at $1785. Dodge fours from V. M. Eastwood, would cost $1450 for a new car or $1250 for one which had served as a demonstrator. A Durant "4" from Selkirk & Elliott would cost $1395 with an allowance of $200 on the old car.

Alderman R. N. Jones, Chief Gimblett and the mechanic of the Fire Brigade were instructed to view these cars and report back.

A suggestion of Alderman Hancock that a Ford be obtained and turned in every year or so, did not meet with approval as the Chief thought that it would be too light for high speed.

Statement Read.

At the close of the meeting a statement was read by Alderman Joseph Crowe, as follows:

Mr. Chairman: While we were discussing in council at the last regular meeting the purchase of a new chassis to take the place of the one that was damaged and put out of commission, His Worship the Mayor made a few emphatic remarks that I took exception to as I considered that he was not justified in criticizing the council that made the purchase, and calling it very poor economy on their part.

Now, I consider it only right to all concerned that the public should know the facts. I therefore take the liberty of placing a statement before you as correct, hoping that in so doing you will agree with me that we were justified in making that purchase.

This chassis was only bought as a makeshift and an experiment at a cost of $275. It was in use twenty-three months, and cost for gasoline and oil $87.04; answered 350 alarms, and travelled 514 miles, at an average cost of 17c per mile.

The large motor truck for same period cost for gasoline and oil $138.32, answered 212 alarms, travelled 394 miles, at an average cost of 35c per mile.

Therefore first cost	$275.00
Allowed for it	225.00
	$50.00

We have had the use of it for two years for $50.00, and saved $92.52 in gasoline and oil.

WEATHER

Temperature yesterday went up to 75 degrees, with one exception, the highest this spring. Last night's low point, 46 degrees. The Maples are now in full leaf, but some of the other varieties have not as yet donned their summer dress. The cool weather of May has retarded growth. A gentleman who has been along many of the concession lines the last few days, told me this morning that in some places the prospects were not as bright as they might be. That growth was at least two weeks late and that warmer weather was required. However, there was no occasion for gloom.—W.P.

Cavan Women Apply For Another From the Government.

CAVAN, May 30. — Mrs. Keegan is going to Rochester on Saturday to visit her daughter, Ruth, who is a nurse-in-training in that city, motoring to Cobourg and going by boat.

A meeting of the trustee board of Cavan church was held in the church on Thursday evening.

The Cavan Women's Institute have returned their third travelling library to the department and have applied for another. There is a great deal of good reading in these libraries. There are books on history, domestic science, poultry and nature study, as well as fiction.

Mr. James Paul has turned in his used car and got a new one.

On Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. Paul motored to Belleville.

A great many baby chicks have been placed on Cavan farms this spring. This method of raising chickens seems to be growing in favour.

The Rev. Mr. Totten, Shannonville, has been given and has accepted a call to Cavan circuit.

Rev. R. T. Richards, the present pastor has accepted a call to Mark street church, Peterboro.

Mr. A. Tinney on Monday sold three cars, and one on Saturday.

Mr. Roy Hutchison and family are moving to Cobourg, where he will be warden of the county jail. His furniture was sent by motor truck on Friday.

Made-In-Peterborough Exhibition June 1 to 6.

CAMPBELLFORD PERSONALS

CAMPBELLFORD, May 30. — Mrs. W. H. Ashton was in Stockdale on Friday attending the Women's Missionary Society convention of the Methodist church for Brighton district.

Mr. F. W. Wilsher of Granby, Quebec, recently of Campbellford, was in town this week on business.

Misses Ferris and Helen Riendeau were in Belleville on Thursday attending the funeral of the former's aunt, Miss McCrudden, whose death occurred in Ottawa on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Diamond returned home on Wednesday after spending several days at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Glen Vandewater of Toronto.

Rebekah Birth Day Party.

Loch Lamond Rebekah Lodge No. 248 held a very pleasant celebration in their lodge rooms on Thursday evening, this being the second anniversary of the lodge.

After the usual business was concluded an excellent programme was rendered as follows: Vocal duet, Mrs. Victor Hay and Miss Gladys Plumpton; reading, Mr. S. A. Maguire; vocal solo, Mr. George Lucy; reading, Mrs. D. A. Montgomery; piano solo, Mr. George Lucy.

Following the programme all repaired to the dining room, where a sumptuous banquet was served. The tables were centred by a beautiftully decorated birthday cake with two candles.

Toast to the King was responded to by all singing the National Anthem. Toast to the Rebekah Assembly was proposed by Miss Olive Hay and responded to by Mrs. Robert Moore. Toast to Loch Lomond Lodge, proposed by Mrs. D. A. Montgomery and responded to by Miss A. M. Arnold. The toast to the Visitors was proposed by Miss Lena Duncalfe and was responded to by Messrs. Lorne O. Pearce and George Lucy.

Brief addresses were also given by Messrs. D. A. Montgomery, Thos. J. Craighead, A. Hatfield and Mrs. Vermilyea. Mr. S. A. Maguire in his usual genial manner, acted as toast master.

Community singing was then indulged in, and the evening closed by singing of Auld Lang Syne.

Measles Prevalent.

Measles have again visited Campbellford and quite a number of homes are under quarantine, as a result the attendance at the schools is depleted.

"AN EVENING IN HAWAII."

Something quite out of the ordinary in the way of concerts will be the "Evening in Hawaii" to be presented at the Conservatory of Music Hall on Wednesday evening of next week, under the direction of Harry Wagner of Toronto, visiting teacher of Hawaiian music at the local Conservatory. Mr. Wagner expects a large contingent of his pupils from Toronto, Oshawa and other outside points, who will join wit pupils here in an evening of music from Hawaiian guitars, ukuleles and tiples. They will be assisted by violin,vocal and elocution numbers. The concert will be followed by a dance in the Conservatory Hall with music by Ken Blood's orchestr . Advt.

How the Allcast Moisture System saves money

Tests have proved important savings in fuel where the warm air from the furnace is properly moistened—the saving has reached upwards of 20 per cent.

The Hygienic Vapor Pan in the Allcast is designed to supply the correct amount of natural moisture required for health and comfort — atmosphere that protects the family from winter ills.

Hygienic Vapor Pan

Other exclusive, fuel saving features of the Allcast are the free-draught Shell-bar Grates which insure perfect combustion, and the fuel-saving air-blast which burns the smoke and gases.

The All-cast is easily operated. It burns soft coal and all other fuels equally well. It is reasonably priced. Come in and let us show you its many important features or write for complete details.

INVITATION TO ENGINEERS FOR JUNE MEETING

Members of Peterboro Association Expected in Campbellford on June 27.

NEW ATTRACTIONS.

Campbellford Man Travels From Quebec For Court of Revision Case.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 30.—A session of the Court of Revision was held here to consider the case of Fred. W. Wilsher, formerly C.N.R. express and downtown ticket agent but who some time ago removed to Granby, Que. While here, Mr. Wilsher worked for the railway company on a commission basis, renting his own premises.

The town charged him with a business tax of $43.05 and $5.76 for oiling the street in front of his office. He refused to pay the former on the ground that he had really occupied premises belonged to the Government and that for that reason no such tax could be charged.

Mr. Wilsher came all the way from his home in Quebec to appear before the court of revision. The end of the dispute was reached when Mr. Wilsher was forgiven the business tax, he agreed to pay the charge for oiling the street.

The members of the court who sat on the case were: Deputy Reeve Palliser, and Councillors Kingston and Abernethy. Town Solicitor D. J. Lynch was in attendance and looked after the interests of the municipality.

Elected Three Trustees.

At a meeting of the congregation of St. Andrew's Church, C. L. Owen, Allan G. Watson and Andrew Govan were elected members of the Board of Trustees.

Word was received from Rev. James Grier of Montreal, who recently was given a unanimous call to the vacant pulpit of St. Andrew's, that he could not give a definite answer until June 7, on which date it is expected that the Montreal Presbytery will finally deal with the affair.

No Quorum

The May meeting of the Board of Education was not held for lack of a quorum, only five of the 14 members of the Board being present at the appointed hour.

Engineers Expected.

The engineers of Peterboro have been invited to held their annual outing here in June, and they are expected about June 27. It is two years since they visited this town in a body and when they come again they will find a number of new attractions to arouse their professional interest. Two new power houses have been built in the interval and are now in operation.

The most interesting novelty, however, is likely to be the automatic electrical regulator at the Campbellford dam, the only one of its kind in existence. It was installed a year ago and is working satisfactory, keeping the water in the canal below the danger point of flooding the town or the country along its banks and above the dam.

Sometimes the water in the canal rises to within six inches of the top of the core wall. Then the regulator automatically opens permitting the surplus water to flow into the river and in less than half an hour the surface of the canal has dropped two feet or more. All this happens without the services of an attendant.

Want His Photo.

Thomas McAvoy, who for some years has conducted a soft-drink business on Front Street, applied for a permit to sell the new 4.4 beer. Yesterday morning his application was returned to him, with a statement from the officials that before the permit could be issued it would be necessary for him to send a photograph of himself with his application, as well as pictures of the interior and exterior of the building in which he proposes to do business. Mr. McAvoy had the required pictures taken during the day.

The Late Mrs. Grills.

Mrs. Richard M. Grills died yesterday morning at her home on Front Street from the effects of a stroke of paralysis which she suffered a week ago last Monday. She was 78 years old.

The late Mrs. Grills, whose maiden name was Selina Ficks, was a resident of Brighton Township until the death of her husband, the late Richard M. Grills, who passed away one year ago last November. Soon after that date she moved to Campbellford, where she has resided ever since. Her only child, Mrs. David Railton, resides in Saskatchewan, but she is survived by three step-children, David and Fred Grills, and Mrs. Charles Pettifer of Percey Township.

The funeral was held at 10.30 this morning from the Salvation Army Citadel to Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

TREASURER ON TRIAL.

Accused of Defrauding Rural Municipality.

SASKATOON, Sask., May 30.—Harry A. McGinnis, of Langham, Sask., former secretary-treasurer of the rural municipality of park, was yesterday committed for trial on a charge of defrauding the municipality of $5,828 through failure to make certain entries in his cash book. He gave $10,000 bail in three sureites and was given his liberty.

SOME LINES OF TRADE ACTIVE

Hardware Business Stimulated by Liveliness in Building Industry in the East.

OPTIMISM IN WEST.

WINNIPEG, May 30. — The weekly trade report of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association Limited says:

Halifax: Business generally quiet with occasional spurts of activity.

St. John: Wholesale trade reported to be fairly good and retail trade holding its own for this time of the year. Collections satisfactory.

MONTREAL: Boots and shoes, sales continue about the same as previously reported, very little improvement and collections only fair. Hardware: Considerable activity is being shown in the building industry, and as a result the hardware trade shows a very good increase in sales. Collections are fair. Groceries: Sales steady, a little improvement over last report, with the collections fairly good. Dry goods: Sales for the past week have shown some improvement, collections fair.

Toronto: Wholesale trade continues to be spotty, some lines being fairly active and others quite slow. Retail trade: Grocers and druggists in competition with grain stores and finding it difficult. Retail trade on the whole is standing up fairly well. Farming: Retarded somewhat by a week's cold weather. Slight damage from frost in some localities. On the whole farming conditions are quite good in Ontario.

Winnipeg: General business unchanged. Groceries, boots and shoes and dry goods normal, paints and building materials showing considerable activity. Retail business fairly satisfactory. Collections fair.

Regina: Wholesale trade fair and steady. Retail trade reported to be fair to good. Collections fair to slow.

Saskatoon: Wholesale and retail trade reported not very brisk for this time of the year. Collections fair.

Calgary: Business generally in all seasonable lines continues very satisfactory with future prospects exceedingly good.

Vancouver: Not much change reported in wholesale and retail trade conditions since last week.

GIVE CONFIDENCE TO YOUNG MOTHERS

A simple and safe remedy for the common ills of childhood should be kept in every home where there is a baby or young child. Often it is necessary to give the little one something to break up a cold, allay fever, correct sour stomach and banish the irritability that accompanies the cutting of teeth. Experienced mothers keep Baby's Own Tablets on hand for such purposes and young mothers can feel safe with a box of the Tablets ready for emergencies. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative that act without griping and they are guaranteed to be absolutely free from opiates or other harmful drugs. They are sold by all druggists or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

only at the rate of 50 cents per head for every man, woman and child.

L. J. Ladner (Conservative, Vancouver Centre) stated that he viewed the amendment as a request from the members for "a declaration for or against national economy." The public debt of the country had been increased $262,000,000 since the Government had come into power, and there was also a large deficit in respect to our Canadian National Railways. The real issue was whether the Government was going to stop extravagance and live within its revenue.

Provide a Breakwater.

Dr. King suggested that Mr. Kelner withdraw his motion to reduce the vote by $49,000. The vote under consideration was to provide for a breakwater which would shelter more than 130 fishing vessels. He pointed out that the entire estimates for harbors and rivers this year was $700,000 less than last.

Mr. Kelner said he still thought it advisable to bring the matter to a vote in order that those in favor of such expenditure should be able to declare themselves.

Hance Logan (Liberal, Cumberland) gave as an instance of the national outlook of the maritimes, the building of the transcontinental, which, though it did not touch the maritimes, was supported by eighteen members from those provinces. It was that national outlook which was needed. If the members from the prairies understood the hardships of the fishing industry, they would be more sympathetic to such a vote. Mr. Logan challenged Dr. Manion to move for a reduction in the public works estimates for Fort William and Port Arthur when they came before the House.

W. J. Ward (Progressive, Dauphin) said that though there were more fish produced in his constituency than in any constituency in the maritimes, the fishermen there built their own wharves and were not asking for $50,000 harbors. In the maritimes, it was hereditary to demand these expenditures.

Dr. Manian declared that he opposed needless extravagance, and he was ready, in the interests of economy, to have the same treatment accorded at the head of the lakes, as the rest of Canada received.

A. J. Doucet (Conservative, Kent) stated he would vote for the item in the interests of the fishing industry of the maritime provinces.

NEXT WEEK'S EXHIBITION.

The Made-in-Peterboro Exhibition will be opened on Monday and will continue throughout the week.

On the eve of this outstanding community event the Examiner once more urges the people of Peterboro generally to visit the Armouries as often as possible during the week—in the first place, because the wonderful work of the Health Association has earned the united support of the citizens, and secondly, because we feel that pride in one's home city should lead to a general desire to learn more about Peterboro's factories and the things manufactured therein.

Never before in the history of Peterboro has there been such a display of made-at-home products as is being arranged in the Armouries.

From the largest industry down to the smallest, the list of exhibits runs, and the educational value of the event cannot fail to be great.

It will be necessary to visit the Exhibition more than once, of course, if the full benefit of thoroughly viewing all the exhibits is to be obtained, while, in addition, there are many entertainment features that will add variety to the programme.

The various committees have done their part—now the responsibility for success or the blame for failure must be passed on to the public.

For the acid test, seeing that the proceeds are to be turned over to the Peterboro Health Association, is to be found in the gate receipts.

They must be large enough to finance the association's activities during the year, or better, large enough to enable those activities to be extended.

It is a great show on behalf of a great cause, and should register a great financial success.

FLYING THE FLAG.

The Examiner, in its reference to Mr. Ladner and the flag incident, was not concerned in the least with any political significance there may hava been attached to the matter, but merely used the incident to point a moral—that is, that Canadians should be less diffident about flying the flag on national holidays, the anniversary of important events in the World War and other similar occasions.

Mr. Gordon assures us that the flags were flying on the Government buildings on Empire Day, but that Mr. Ladner referred to other flag-poles being left unadorned.

It is a comfort to know that the Government at least set the example, even if that example was not enthusiastically followed.

What the Examiner sought to convey, however, was that it seems too bad that bare flag-poles, rather than the Union Jack snapping in the breeze, should confront people on holidays and historic anniversaries.

The anniversary of Vimy Ridge was allowed to go by in Peterboro with scarcely a flag displayed; April 22nd, the anniversary of the Second Battle of Ypres, was similarly disregarded.

Let us hope for a better showing when Dominion Day arrives.

MUNICIPAL STATISTICS.

Municipal statistics just issued by the Bureau of Municipal Affairs throw a somewhat different light upon the statement so often heard that the rural districts are being rapidly depopulated.

The figure given for the rural population of Ontario for 1924 is 1,060,490, which is reported as an increase of 4,456 as compared with the previous year.

At the same time the population of the towns and villages increased from 559,720 in 1923 to 563,086 last year, a gain of 3,366 people.

In the cities the increase for 1924 over 1923 was 31,860, the population of Ontario's cities last year being given as 1,234,005.

The assessment figures contained in the statement are for 1923, and show that the assessment in the townships in that year was $764,138,286, an increase of $11,951,443 in a year, while towns and villages showed an increase of $5,723,856 in assessment, the total being stated at $332,279,305.

The assessment in Ontario's cities in 1923 reach- an increase of over ed a total of $1,541,486,210, seventy-two millions over 1922.

The report leaves no doubt of the fact that the cost of municipal government, as indicated by the municipal and school taxes, is steadily on the increase.

The total municipal taxes imposed for the Province in 1923 showed an increase of $1,530,480 as compared with 1922, and an increase of $4,218,820 over 1921, while school taxes for 1923 were $1,428,885 higher than in the preceeding year.

TEMPERANCE EDUCATION.

The Northumberland branch of the Ontario Prohibition Union in advocating a campaign of education on temperance lines is getting back to first principles and suggesting a policy that should get results.

The prohibition forces have during the last few years been content to pin their case on the law enforcement officers, rather than depend upon the old methods—and it cannot be said that the result has been satisfactory.

The fact that everywhere that the new beer was put on sale there was an opening day rush to sample the beverage showed unmistakably that years of prohibition had not succeeded in killing the appetite of thousands.

During those years prohibitionists rested on their oars; there was little or nothing done to educate the new generation against the folly of intemperance.

The law was expected to do the work that had been previously done by educational methods.

And the law didn't do the work, because there were too many citizens, rigid in their adherence to other regulations, who thought nothing of violating the Ontario Temperance Act.

It was ignored by many in high places, who patronized bootleggers and those doctors and druggists who found the Ontario Temperance Act a new source of revenue.

These things could not be hid from the young people who saw their elders calmly disregarding the law of the land, and the result was the example thus set has been followed by young Ontario in many cases.

There is need of education to counteract the influence of some of the consequences of the Ontario Temperance Act, and the Northumberland prohibitionists showed sound judgment in their resolution to that effect.

CANADA'S WONDERS.

Canada is under the spell of the Florida boom. Much money has been made there. But the warnings are coming thick and fast that the thing is getting top heavy. Millions will be lost by the credulous as usual. The candle and the moth.

What is Canada's greatest need?

Undoubtedly to get her eyes fixed on herself. When one small Florida city jauntily sets aside $75,000 to advertise itself—it is a level waste of sand on the seashore—we begin to understand the rush of the heedless. And when this is but one of many advertising campaigns, Canadians cannot be lamed for joining in the crowd.

But nothing is said of the alligators, rattle snakes and poisonous insects, of the danger to northern people wintering in a land to which they are not acclimatized. All that they see in the papers are scantily clad women and palm trees. It looks good at a distance. When a girl reaches Florida her legs hurt her if she can't show them to the public.

Yes, indeed, it's a nice place. But the whole thing is managed by astute advertising men—even to the flood of pictures of naked women. They deserve credit for the way they have hung romance around desert wastes. There isn't a hill in the place.

What Canada needs is to concentrate her gaze on herself. If we would do that there would be an end to the country losing millions of dollars a year through these over-advertised American resorts.

And does Canada offer anything to compare with them?

Have you ever gone across this favored land? Have you ridden for a day on the rockbound shores of Lake Superior, a sight probably not paralelled in the world? Or the vast plains of the West? Or the mountains of British Columbia? Have you visited old Quebec, that city of dreams? Or Montreal, of quaint ways where French and English customs jostle each other? Or the numerous palaces built for the public across Canada? Florida is cheap and tawdry beside the wonders of Canada.

Can't we at least get Old Ontario to come up just this one year and take its vacation among the mountains of New Ontario to see our thousands of unmapped waters, our Agawa Canyon, the long reaches of our great rivers, to experience the joys of canoeing down miles of rapids in the hands of wonderful canoemen, to see beaver dams, and glorious towering trees and Indians and voyageurs and prospectors, and see the rest of the northern panorama?

If a Toronto man will do that he will neither go back broke, nor with a bad taste in his mouth. And he will realize that the welcome he gets will be from his own folks who are not after his money, but who only wish his sympathetic support in developing his own back yard.—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

TRADE FAILURES.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has just issued its report on the commercial failures in Canada for the month of March, 1925. The surest indication of the state of prosperity, or the reverse, is to be found in statistics of this kind, and it is therefore gratifying to read that the month shows a decrease in the number of failures as compared with March last year, says the Hamilton Spectator, though there is an increase over the immediately preceding month of February. It is usual, however, for March figures to make a worse showing than February figures in tables of business mortality, and it is satisfactory to observe that the tendency is, judging from the experience of past years, for the situation to show considerable improvement after the month of March has been past. Perhaps the best way of estimating the actual position is to make a comparison of the first quarter of each year, in order to ascertain if there is an advance or retrogression. From this standpoint, the first quarter of 1925 is very much better, from the business point of view and taking Canada as a whole, than any other during the last four years. In 1922 the total number of failures throughout Canada for the first three months of the year amounted to 1,054; in 1923, for the same period, 1,110; in 1924, 774, and in the present year, 630. Taking the figures for Ontario, we find that in 1922 there were 281 failures in the first quarter; in 1923, 309; in 1924, 270, and this year, 217.

Reviewing the figures for the month of March alone, it is seen that only in the case of the Maritime Provinces has there been any increase in the number of commercial failures in March of this year as compared with the corresponding month last year, the figures being 13 assignments in 1925, and 11 in 1924. Ontario had 71 assignments in March last and 84 last year. In the Prairie Provinces the number of failures in March of this year was 38, as compared with 50 for March, 1924. In British Columbia the number was the same, nine, for both years. Of the kind of business affected, it is stated that, among others, 18 general stores failed in March, 13 grocery stores, ten fish and meat stores and nine clothing stores. The number of manufacturing establishments making assignments was 31 in March of this year, as against 34 in March, 1924. Of the 31, eight concerns were engaged in the manufacture of clothing and five were connected with lumbering and its manufactured products. There was an increase in the number of agriculturists resigning in March of this year, as compared with last year, 18 making assignments this year, as compared with 12 last year. It will be seen, therefore, that, though the situation is very far from being satisfactory, it reveals an improvement in most cases over that existing a year ago on the corresponding date. There has been a progressive improvement, moreover, in the annual figures for the last few years. It is not, of course, possible to predict what the figures for 1925 will be, but there was a drop in the number of failures in 1924 over those in 1923, while 1923 showed an improvement over 1922; the actual figures for all Canada being: 1922, 3,925; 1923, 3,408; 1924, 2,319.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Suggestions are being heard at Queen's Park for a realignment of county roads, but, as the Globe points out, a realignment will not eliminate the old trouble known as detour.

Mayor Turner's performance at the ball game the other night reminds the citizens that His Worship has always shown a tendency to strike out for himself.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, May 29. — With Monday a holiday less than 6,500 cattle were received at the Union Stock Yards this week, or around 3,500 less than each of the previous two weeks. Rogers & Maybee were the only export buyers and did not purchase over 500 for the week. Prices for export were a little better than steady, but in the butcher class the change was as much as 35 cents a cwt. higher in spots and ranged from that down to 15 cents a cwt. above last week. Export steers did not average $8 a cwt., but a couple of extra good loads cost $8.25, and on Thursday for a trio of choice steers the price reached was $8.35 a cwt.

There was no change in heavy heifers and the top of these was $7.50, and short keeps for Scotland mostly sold at the same figure. Prime export bulls were not too plentiful and held firm with one top at $5.75 a cwt. There was a steady all-round demand for the light butchers' cattle and these were strong all week. Choice handyweights made $7.75 to $8.25, good handyweights $7.25 to $7.50 and medium $6.75 to $7 a cwt. There are mighty few cattle leaving the stable that will not come within the latter class.

Butchers' cows dropped about 25 cents a cwt. the previous two weeks, but this week the prices recovered and choice cows sold up to $6.50, good cows $6, mediums $5 and common cows $4 a cwt. up. Springers were better taken, with one Montreal operator buying, but the movement in stockers was slow at a little easier prices. Next week and for some time the exporters will have a good supply of space and this ought to guarantee a steady market for the heavy cattle. There will also be a good outlet for any finished nice butchers and many expect higher prices before grass cattle come in.

Calves slipped down 25 to 50 cents a cwt. on Tuesday, but got back again on Wednesday and Thursday. The supply is running in lighter and this is helping sellers. Choice calves are 10 1-2 to 11 cents; good calves, 9 1-2 to 10 cents; mediums, 7 to 9 cents, and common, 4 1-2 to 6 1-2 cents a pound.

Sheep and spring lambs are just steady and tops for the former are now around 9 cents a pound. For weighty spring lambs, $14 each is the average price and light, thin lambs sell as low as $8 each.

Packers endeavored to get hogs down to $11.25 a cwt. f.o.b. this week, but the supply was too light to permit of this and the low spot touched was $11.50 a cwt., which was the week-end figure. The American markets are all firmer this week.

ONTARIO CHEESE AUCTION

MONTREAL, May 29.—At the United Dairymen Co-operative auction sale of Ontario cheese held here today there were 2,318 boxes offered of which 581 boxes No. 1A white sold at 17 13-16 cents per lb., 592 boxes No. 1B white at 17 13-16 cents per lb., 551 boxes No. 1A colored at 17 13-16 cents per lb., and 594 boxes No. 1B colored at 17 13-16 cents per lb. These prices show an advance of 3-16 to 5-16 cent per lb. as compared with the previous sale.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, May 29.—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here today as follows:

Sterling demand $4.85 1-2.

Sterling cables $4.86.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, May 29.—May wheat contracts that on a wild market just four months ago commanded $2.05 7-8 a bushel expired today in humdrum fashion. Plenty of wheat was on hand here to settle all outstanding accounts, and just before the day was ended, the price of May delivery dropped to $1.65. This was an overnight loss of 5 1-4 cents, and a setback of 40 7-8 cents as compared with the season's high price record, made when talk was rife of world scarcity of breadstuffs possible.

Closing quotations on wheat were irregular, 3-4 to 4 7-8 cents net lower; May 1.65 3-8 to 1.66 and July 1.63 1-4 to 1.63 1-2, with corn unchanged to 1 7-8 cents higher, oats at 1-4 cent off to 3-4 cent up, and provisions varying from the same as yesterday's finish to 35 cents advance.

EGG MARKETS

OTTAWA, May 29.—Markets generally very firm. Offerings from Brandon are extras 31, firsts 29, seconds 25, in new cases f.o.b. The freight on these to Toronto is about 5 cents a dozen. Owing to the very cool weather during the past two months the quality of the storage holdings is exceedingly good.

Toronto—Jobbing extras 34 to 35, firsts 31 to 32, seconds 26 to 28.

Montreal — Markets unchanged.

Quebec—Jobbing, extras 34 to 35, firsts 32 to 33, seconds 30 to 31.

Ottawa—Production good, but being absorbed for storing purposes. Jobbing, extras, 33, first 30, seconds 27.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, May 29.—The foreign demand for Canadian grain on the Montreal market today showed quite an improvement and as the prices bid were in many cases in line with exporters' views a fair amount of business resulted, including sales of No. 2 and No. 3 northern wheat, and No. 4 and No. 5 wheat, besides a number of loads of No. 2 feed oats, feed barley and No. 4 barley, the latter grade being sold to Bristol at 36s. 6d. per quarter. The market on the whole was more active than it has been for some days past. There was also an increased demand from local exporters for ocean grain room and an increased volume of business was done.

Owing to the foregoing there was an improved enquiry from exporters for grain in the domestic market, and sales of some round lots of No. 2 feed oats were made at 2 1-4 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg July option, c.i.f. Montreal, while large sales of No. 3 barley were made at c.i.f. prices Bay ports, and No. 4 grade at c.i.f. prices Montreal. There was also some trading in Duluth No. 1 Northern Spring wheat, and sales of Manitoba No. 1 Northern Spring wheat were put through with New York houses at 17 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg July option, f.o.b. Montreal. A cargo of Australian corn has arrived and it is selling at 12 cents per bushel over the Chicago July option. The spot market for car lots of oats was firm.

A steady feeling continues to prevail in the market for baled hay, but the movement was reported small and business quiet with car lots of good No. 2 timothy hay selling at $14 to $15 per ton; No. 3 timothy hay at $11 to $12 per ton, and clover mixed hay at $10.50 to $11 per ton, f.o.b. cars here.

Egg Market Firm.

A feature of the egg trade was the demand from foreign buyers for storage supplies and it was reported that some business was done for future shipment. There was no change in the condition of the local market, prices for all grades being maintained under a steady demand and a fair volume of business was done in a wholesale jobbing way.

The receipts today were 2,151 cases, as compared with 1,852 for the same day last week, and 3,083 for the corresponding day a year ago.

A THOUGHT.

OPTIMISM TO ORDER.

It isn't very easy to be forever breezy—
Forever full of peppiness and zest.
In times of stress and rigor the heart of greatest vigor
Will often times be heavy and depressed.
You can't be always breezy, a fact that's plain to scan,
But—try to be as breezy as you can.

It isn't easy, very, to be forever merry,
And there are mighty few of us who are;
The lightest hearted mortal will often fail to chortle
When he has had a wallop and a jar.
But, everything considered, it's a reasonable plan
To try to be as merry as you can.

You can't be always happy or breezy, bright and snappy;
You can't be always tender, patient, kind,
For every man and woman is pretty largely human (That seems to be the way that we're designed)—
I had a little moral for this optimistic lay,
But I've gone and lost it somewhere on the way!

The Groom's Gift to the Bride

GEORGE ANDERSON had the reputation of being a practical young man without much sentiment.

Consequently, when it transpired that the groom's gift to the bride was a Mutual Life Insurance policy on his own life for $5,000, some of her friends laughed and said, "I told you so."

But Nellie didn't laugh. She looked at the policy and a mist came into her eyes. She knew that the sentiment George felt was deeper than that which is expressed by trinkets of gold, silver and precious stones.

"He has dedicated his life to me," she whispered. "What more could I ask?"

A policy in the Mutual Life of Canada is an asset which makes for happiness and peace of mind. No young man who marries should neglect to establish such an asset. Mutuality reduces the cost. Write to-day for the Mutual Book.

3,631 ACCIDENTS ENDED FATALLY

TOTAL 98,215.

In the calendar year 1924 there were 3,631 fatal road accidents in the United Kingdom, and 94,584 non-fatal accidents, or a total of 98,215 accidents in all, according to official figures just received by the Bankers' Trust Company of New York from its British Information Service. Accidents in 1923 amounted to 83,101, of which 2,979 resulted fatally and 80,122 were not fatal. These accidents are those known by the police to have been caused by vehicles in streets, roads, or public places in Great Britain. Of the fatal accidents in 1924, 258 were chargeable to horse-drawn vehicles, 241 to pedal cycles and 3,132 to mechanically-propelled vehicles. Of the non-fatal accidents, 6,288 were caused by horse-drawn vehicles, 18,363 by pedal cycles, and 69,033 by mechanically-propelled vehicles.

MOROCCAN POLICY OF PAINLEVE SUSTAINED BY FRENCH CHAMBER CLOSING DEBATE OF THREE DAYS

Premier Announces Government's Readiness to Consider Overtures for Peace.

VOTE WAS 537 TO 29.

Military Operations Under Control of Government Mission—Will Hold Territory.

PARIS, May 30. — The government of Premier Painleve was sustained in the Chamber of Deputies by one of the biggest votes ever given to a French ministry; 537 to 29. The vote came as a climax to three days of debate on the governments Morroccan policy, which in effect, as explained by Premi Painleve, is that the French government seeks not a single inch of additional Moroccan territory, but is pre, ared to defend to the bitter end every inch which France holds under the treaties.

The Premier declared that his government was willing to consider any peace overtures accompani by sufficient guarantees presented by responsible representatives of Abd-El-rim, leader of the Riffian ibesmen who have invaded the French zone in Morocco.

Blow at Socialists.

Both Premier Painleve and Foreign Minister Briand sought hard to raise the debate to a question of national interest, but during the three days of discussion necessary for the government to set forth its policy the shadow of party politics lurked continually behind the patriotic utterances of the majority of the orators.

The vote is regarded more as a defeat for the Socialist party in the French Chamber than as a victory for the Painleve government's viewpoint The Right and Centre parties supported M. Painleve without qualification. The Socialists facing exclusion from the ruling majority, were manoeuvred into supporting the government at the last moment, having changed their decision, taken at a party caucus Thursday night, to abstain from voting. The Communists, whose opposition to all Bourgeoise governments cannot be changed under any circumstances, alone voted against the government.

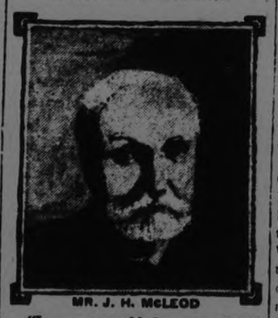
Accord with Spain.

That any negotiations concerning the future status of the Riff protectorate must be conducted with the full collaboration of Spain, was made plain by M. Briand, who said delimitation of the respective zones of influence and the status of the de facto government of Abd-El-Krim must be discussed jointly.

The military operations of the French troops it was declared, will henceforth come under the observation of a special mission of control under parliamentary instructions and responsible to the Chamber. The mission probably will be appointed in the next few days leaving for Morocco by airplane. It will be unable to interfere with t actual condition of the operations, but will report to parliament any movement not strictly in keeping with the policy outlined by the government.

A FREEMASON'S SUFFERING

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" WORLD'S BEST REMEDY FOR CONSTIPATION



MR. J. H. McLEOD

"I was troubled very badly with Rheumatism and Constipation and tried a great many remedies without relief, until a friend of mine recommended "Fruit-a-tives". I took several boxes and was very soon completely relieved and am very grateful to "Fruit-a-tives". I think that "Fruit-a-tives" is the best remedy in the world, and have recommended it to a great number of friends who have benefited by it".—J. H. McLeod, Nova Scotia Freemason's Home, Windsor, Nova Scotia.

Constipation is the great curse of old age. Yet day by day, more and more elderly people are enjoying vigorous health through "Fruit-a-tives". This natural medicine—made from intensified fruit juices—ensures the complete natural digestion of food for people of all ages. At your dealers, 25c and 50c.

MARMORA SEEKS SOLDIERS' CAMP

Will Have 1,500 Men For Week if Invitation is Accepted.

COLONEL GAZETTED.

MARMORA, May 30. — Major D. Green has been officially gazetted as Lieutenant-Colonel and placed in command of his regiment in succession to Lieut.-Col. Bowaters. Col. Green, with Major A. V. Mills and Lieuts. R. Hunter, P. Gray and H. R. Pearce, attended a meeting of the militia officers in Trenton on Wednesday. The invitation to hold the summer camp at Marmora received favorable attention. It only needs the engineering survey before the final decision is given in the matter. If this is favorable it will mean that about 1,500 soldiers will be under canvas here for a week.

Funeral of John Nayler.

Amid tokens of deepest respect, the mortal remains of the late John Nayler were laid to rest on Thursday afternoon. At the service conducted by the pastor in the Methodist Church, Mrs. F. Wells and Mrs. Short rendered as a duet "Will your anchor hold in the storms of life?" one of the deceased's favorite solos when he was a chorister of the church. His favorite hymns were also sung. The Rev. D. R. Clare based his sermon on Acts vii. 59, 60. There were many beautiful wreaths. Interment took place in Marmora Cemetery.

Young People's League.

The Young People's League wound up the season on Wednesday with an excellent programme submitted by the literary department. Miss Edith Phillips and Miss Florence Clare gave interesting talks on the life and poetry of Longfellow. Misses Berenice Bonter, Margaret Bonter and Marjorie Colster, assisted by Mr. W. J. Cottrell, gave a musical selection, and Miss Louise Connor recited "The Old Wood Box."

Helen Wiggins Hurt.

It was with deep regret that this community learned of the serious injuries sustained by Miss Helen Wiggins, daughter of the Bursar of the Ontario School for the Deaf, Belleville. Helen was a general favorite in the town of her birth, and the alarming accident which befell her on the Trent Road when she was knocked down by a car has awakened widespread sympathy.

On Monday evening, June 1, R. Worshipful Bro. W. W. Fitzgerald, D.D.G.M., of Prince Edward District No. 14, A.F. and A.M., is making his official visit to Marmora Lodge No. 222. The banquet to be tendered him will be served by the ladies of St. Paul's Guild.

TO-NIGHT IS THE NIGHT

If you do not feel well there is some reason for it. In nine cases out of ten it is due to your liver. So start tonight and take two Tanol Calomel Tablets or take one before meals and a glass of hot water in the morning to wash all poisons from the system. Calomel, as you know, is the only drug known that acts upon the liver and that is why there has been such wonderful results from the use of it in the new form called Tanol Calomel. Just get a few of these sample tablets from F. C. Webber's Drug Store, Peterborough, and you will be surprised how effective they are. m-w-s

NEW DISEASE HAS KILLED FIVE

"Radium Necrosis" Is Contracted by Workers in Watch Factory.

LUMINOUS DIALS.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.Y., May 30. —(United Press.)—A new disease, called "radium necrosis," from which five persons have already died, was described by Dr. F. L. Hoffman, of New York, in an address before the American Medical Association's conference here. All the known victims of the disease, Dr. Hoffman said, were women employes of a factory in East Orange, N.J., who became infected while painting watch dials with a radium preparation. The disease was contracted in every case, according to the speaker, through the worker's habit of moistening the radium brushes by putting it into her mouth.

PUPILS DEMAND THAT PRINCIPAL BE DISCHARGED

Insubordination In Smith's Falls Collegiate Breaks Out a Third Time.

STRIKE CALLED.

Declare They Will Remain Out Until Resignation of Principal is Asked.

SMITHS FALLS, May 30. —For the third time in ten days Smiths Falls Collegiate Institute have declared a strike. At 10 o'clock Friday morning, after hearing from the chairman and other members of the local Board of Education their decision to re-engage only four of the seven teachers formerly ordered discharged, the students refused to go to their class rooms, and marched from the premises.

They demand the dismissal of Principal G. E. Evans. The fact that three of the teaching staff are not to be re-engaged does not now affect the situation. One of them, Mr. G. S. Allin, has already obtained another position. Miss M. Burns, a first year teacher, has decided to give up teaching altogether, and Miss Margaret Ellis, the third teacher affected, is known to be engaged to be married.

Will Continue Strike.

The pupils declare that they will strike until the present principal resigns or is asked to resign. At the assembly, Dr. Wickware, chairman of the board, read the organization's finding and asked the students to abide by it, and Mr. G. G. Graham, another member of the board, also added his plea to that of Dr. Wickware, but to no avail.

About three-quarters of the Collegiate students, both boys and girls, left the school, Teachers carried on classes with those who remained, but over 300 children are still on strike.

TEACHERS OPPOSED TO REGULATION 17

Bilinguai Teachers' Association Concludes Convention at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, May 30.— The two-day convention of the Eastern Ontario Bilingual Teachers' Association came to a conclusion this afternoon with the election of officers. Miss Beatrice Renoit, President of the local Bilingual Teachers' Association, was elected president of the parent body. Other officers are: Vice-President, Miss Brigitte Seguni; secretary, Miss Irene Barrette; treasurer, Miss Robertine Lalonde; councillors, Aurelian Selanger, M.L.A., Miss Appolline Seguin and Roger St. Denis, who presided as clerk of the elections.

In drawing the convention to a close a resolution was adopted whereby there will be a standardization of the bilingual teaching programme for all the schools of the province, and printed programmes will be sent in the course to all the principals of these schools, for their guidance.

Another resolution strongly affirmed the stand of the Association, as being opposed to regulation seventeen, as a measure opposed to the best interests of the French speaking school children of the primary classes.

MINISTERS MOVE TO NEW CHARGES

Transfer Committee Announces Departure of Rev. W. Harold Young.

TORONTO, May 29.—Exchange of thirty-three occupants of Methodist pulpits was facilitated by the action of the Transfer Committee of the Methodist Church, with final sanction of the new pastorates waiting upon the action of the forthcoming annual conference through their stationing committees.

Many eastern pastors go west in exchange with western pastors who will be heard for the next few years in older sections of the Dominion. The benefit of so considerable an interchange of personnel is in interpreting the life of the various portions of Canada to each other. Newfoundland will also make its contribution, for Rev. R. E. Fairbairn, well-known as a writer, enters the Hamilton Conference.

One of Saskatchewan's best-known leaders, Rev. M. M. Bennett, of Yorkton, returns to his native Ontario.

Rev. Robert Milliken, D.D., after occupying most of the leading pulpits of the West, goes to Montreal Conference, probably to the new St. Paul's Church, Ottawa.

A veteran superintendent of Western missions, Rev. Oliver Darwin, D.D., moves officially from his old ranges in Saskatchewan to British Columbia, where his duties now lie.

From Port Arthur to Saskatoon is the change made by Rev. W. S. Reid, while Rev. H. D. Marr, of New Brunswick, will be heard in Alberta.

Other transfers have been made within the Province of Ontario. Changes among the younger men bring Rev. J. E. Todd, B.A., and Rev. W. H. Young, M.A., to leading pulpits in Peterboro and Toronto respectively.

Most of the men transferred have been invited by congregations which will anxiously await the decisions of conference.

MISS HILDA COWELL HONOR GRADUATE

CAMPBELLFORD, May 30.—One of the graduates of Prospect Heights Hospital is Miss Hilda Cowell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Cowell, Queen Street. Miss Cowell is one of the most popular young ladies of Campbellford, and has made a host of friends here since coming to Campbellford with her parents nearly five years ago, when Mr. Cowell accepted the position of organist and choir leader of the Methodist Church. Miss Cowell's friends are tendering her congratulations upon her signal success.

"Each of the eight students who were graduated last night from the New York State Hospital for Nurses of the Prospect Heights Hospital and Brooklyn Maternity received a prize for excellent of scholarship.

"Never before in the history of the hospital, it was announced by Dr. J. Hubley Schall, who presented the prizes, has there been so uniformly perfect a set of examination papers, no student receiving a mark of less than 99 per cent."

RATES CONTROL TO GOVERNMENT PETERSON SAYS

Also the Right to Direct His Ships to Any Ports Desired.

80 TRIPS A YEAR.

Expects to Meet Operation and Capital Costs in Ten Years.

OTTAWA, May 30.—Canadian Press. — That he thought he would be able to meet all expenses but those resulting from operation and pay the capital cost of his ten ships in ten years out of the Government subsidy of 275,000 pounds annually, was admitted by Sir William Petersen before the special parliamentary committee on ocean rates, Friday afternoon. G. H. Montgomery, K. C., steamship counsel examined Sir William in regard to the subsidy, and the witness gave the committee particulars of the various items which went to make up the total amount. The yearly charges were based on an investment of 1,500,000 pounds sterling for cost of ships and 300,000 pounds for working capital.

Sir William stated that in return for the subsidy the government would receive absolute control of the rates and the right to direct the ships to whatever port was considered desirable. He estimated that if the ships were put into the Canada-United Kingdom trade they would be able to make 80 voyages a year when the full compliment of ten were in operation. He reviewed the negotiations which eventually resulted in the conclusion of the contract, and stated that he had thought of purchasing the merchant marine to use in a contemplated service between the United Kingdom and Russia.

Petersen's Figures.

"How did you arrive at the amount of the subsidy?" Mr. Montgomery asked Sir William. "Why was it set at 275,000 pounds, instead of 175,000 pounds or 375-000 pounds?"

Sir William submitted a brief statement giving the particulars of the amount as follows:

Cost of ships, 1,500,000 pounds; expenses of organization and working capital, 300,000 pounds; total 1,800,000 pounds.

The yearly charges: First debentures, 750,000 at 6 per cent., 45,000 pounds; redemption at ' - cent, 30,000 pounds; second debentures 400,000 at 7 per cent., 28,000 pounds; redemption at 4 per cent., 16,000 pounds preferred shares, 650,000 pounds at 8 per cent., 52,000 pounds; depreciation at 4 per cent. on cost of ships, 60,000 pounds; upkeep, repairs, contingencies, 44-000 pounds; total 275,000 pounds.

Sir William placed the average cost of a voyage carrying general cargo between Montreal and United Kingdom ports over a period of 10 years at about 5,800 pounds.

After some figuring, Mr. Montgomery remarked that on figures supplied by Sir William, he could pay the capital cost of his ships, the 8 per cent. interest on preferred shares and have a satisfactory profit over, in ten years.

CHURCH UNION COMMITTEE WILL GIVE FINAL REPORT

Last Meeting of General Assembly Including Unionists June 3.

ALL BODIES MEET.

Now Separate Churches to Set Houses in Order For Coming Union.

TORONTO, May 30.—(Canadian Press). — Preparatory to the consummation of Church Union and the first meeting on June 10 of the General Council of the United Church of Canada, governing bodies of the three denominations entering the new church are to hold their final meetings in Toronto in the early days of next month. Unionist and anti-Unionist Presbyterians meet together for the last time as an official body from June 2 to June 9, and then the continuing Presbyterian Church will proceed to organize itself in General Assembly along traditional lines.

On June there meet also representatives of the Methodist Church who are delegates to the United Council, augmented by 150 others prominent in the denomination; and on June 8 and 9, the Congregational Union of Canada. On Wednesday, June 10, all of the participants in these historic meetings with the exception of the anti-Unionist Presbyterians gather together to march to Massey Hall, where the new Church will be born and consecrated and, for probably the two ensuing weeks, the united body of 350 delegates will labor with multitudinous and formidable problems of organization. Leaders of the churches will witness in this June the realization hopes of years and the fruition of mighty effort; but the stalwart company of anti-Unionist Presbyterians will go on broken in numbers but full of confidence and determination.

The General Assembly.

The Presbyterian General Assembly meets in College Street Church on the morning of June 3, and it is expected there will be present about 600 commissioners, of whom not more than 60 or 65 will be anti-Unionists. Special significance attaches to this assembly as it marks the completion of fifty years since the union of four Presbyterian Churches in 1875, and is the last assembly before the Presbyterian Church in Canada becomes part of the United Church of Canada. It is expected that several ministers will be present who have served for practically the entire fifty years, and that special reference will be made to the achievements of the church in that period.

At the opening session a sermon will be preached by Principal Clarence Mackinnon, retiring Moderator. From reports in different parts of the Church it would seem that the new Moderator will be Rev. Dr. George C. Pidgeon, minister of Bloor Street Church, Toronto, who has been for the past four years convener of the Church Union Committee.

Church Union Reports.

An outstanding feature of the Assembly's programme will be the report of the committee on Church Union. This committee has been in existance since 1904, and will now present its final report. This will contain an account of the last steps taken in the completion of Union, the securing of appropriate legislation in the Parliament of Canada, and in all the Provincial Legislature and a statement of the results of the voting which has taken place.

The greater part of the time of the Assembly will be devoted to hearing reports from the missionary, educational and benevolent agencies of the Church, and to setting its house in order prior to the consummation of Union. It is probable that distinguished representatives from overseas to the first General Council of the United Church of Canada will arrive in time to be present and address the General Assembly. Among these will be Professor W. M. MacGregor, D.D., Glasgow, former Moderator of the United Free Church of Scotland; Rev. P. L. Thomson, D.D., Glasgow; Rev. Joseph Rorke, London, ex-Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in England; Rev. R. K. Hanna, Dublin, representing the Irish Presbyterian Church.

Non-Concurrents Meets.

In St. Andrew's Church on June 8 there will open a congress of non-concurring Presbyterians to continue three days. It will be composed of three delegates from each congregation which voted against Union and an equal number from each organization minority, and Rev. J. W. MacNamara, secretary of the Presbyterian Church Association, estimated that there will be between 1,500 and 2,000 men and women present representing every province. There will be reports from key men in each section of the country, and inspirational addresses from prominent men and women. On June 11, when the original General Assembly will have been absorbed into the United Church, the non-concurrents will proceed to organize their own Assembly. Their commissioners in the old body will be augmented by ministers and elders who have been in attendance at the Congress, and for three or four days they will wrestle with their own problems of organization. Reports will be ready from provisional committees who have been working on details of organization, of mission work, education and other items of religious activity. It is the expectation that Rev. Dr. E. S. Scott, of Montreal, will be the first Moderator of the continuing Church.

Methodists and Congregationalists.

The Methodists who will meet morning and afternoon in Sherbourne Street Church on June 9 have no official authority, strictly speaking, but for all that they will be thoroughly representative of the denomination. The body will be composed of the 150 Methodist members of the General Council of the United Church, who were elected by the 1922 General Conference, and in addition an equal number of delegates chosen by the twelve annual conferences. On the general theme of "Consummation of Union," the delegates will hear reports on the events of recent years and outlines of plans for the future.

About eighty delegates will be present at Bond Street Church for the annual meeting of the Congregational Union of Canada on June 8 and 9. The programme includes addresses by any men prominent in the denomination and the transaction of the regular business.

General Council Session.

The General Council itself, when it meets on June 10 in circumstances of dramatic and historic interest, will consist of 150 Methodists, 150 Presbyterians, 40 Congregationalists and ten representatives of the Council of local Union churches mostly from Western Canada. Meeting for the last time as Congregationalists, Methodists and Presbyterians, the representatives of those denominations will gather at a central place and march to Massey Hall, undoubtedly eslorted by many hundreds of non-delegates eager to have a part in the ceremony.

There will be a solemn service of dedication and consecration, on a form already laid down, in which important parts will be taken by the heads of the three churches: Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown, general superintendent of the Methodist Church; Rev. Dr. Pidgeon, if he is the new Moderator of the present General Assembly, and Rev. Dr. W. T. Gunn, the chief negotiator for the Congregational Church in the Union proceedings. The first Communion service of the United Church will follow. In the afternoon and evening there will be great mass meetings devoted to praise and inspiration, and the following day, at the Metropolitan Church, the 350 delegates assemble to carry on the business of the united denominations.

While decisions rest with the Council itself, it is believed that Dr. Pidgeon, Dr. Chown and Dr. Gunn will preside in turn over the sessions. An executive head for the Church must be appointed. The Council will be faced with a great variety of business making provision for the merging of duplicating machinery of many sorts, co-ordinating presbyteries and conferences, hearing reports and taking action on matters affecting missions, education, church publications and a hundred and one things. Committees which have been at work for months will have their recommendations ready, and hundreds of thousands of Canadians will follow with the keenest interest the work of the delegates making history by the creation of a new Church.

The Publishers' Distributing Organization

Dept. 32-B Toronto, Ont

OBSERVE THESE RULES.

1—Any one except ing our employees and their relatives may enter this contest. There is no entrance fee of any kind.

2—All word lists must be received through the mail by The Publishers Distributing Organization, and envelopes must be postmarked by post office closing time, June 30, 1925.

3—Contestants who have sent lists or orders before June 30th will be qualified for the higher prizes provided orders for books are received through the mail, postmarked on or before July 15th.

4—Only English words will be counted. Obsolete words will not be counted. Only the singular or the plural will count. Each article or object can be given only one name. Single words made up of two separate words or objects, such as teaspoon, teapot, or teatime will count as one word. Webster's International Dictionary will be the final authority. Where several synonyms are equally applicable to an object shown in the picture, a person submitting any one of each synonyms will be given credit for one word only.

5—The largest list of words which correctly name visible objects beginning with the letter "B" will receive first prize, and so on down the list of 50 prizes. The winning list will be made up from among the words submitted by the contestants, and not controlled by any predetermined list of words selected by the judges as being the "correct" or "master" list.

6—For each wrong word a percentage will be deducted from the total number of correct words.

7—Two or more people may co-operate in answering the puzzle. However, only one prize will be given to any one household or any one group.

8—If a contestant sends us more than one list under an assumed name or pre-married name, then all lists of such contestant will be disqualified.

9—You must use only one side of paper. You must number each page and order in a consecutive rotation. Your full name and address must be written on each page in the upper right hand corner.

10—The final decision will be made by three judges entirely independent of and having no connection whatever with the Publishers Distributing Organization. They will judge the answers submitted and award the prizes at the end of the contest. Each participant entering this contest agrees to accept the decision of the judges as final and conclusive, without argument or question. All answers will receive full consideration, whether or not merchandise is purchased.

11—An additional prize of $300.00 for promptness, as specified above, will be awarded.

12—In case of tie for any prize offered, the prize will be divided pro rata.

BOY CRUSHED BY TRUCK.

Crossing Street After His Mother Called Him.

LONDON, ONT., May 30.—Allan Braden, 6 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Braden, 803 Waterloo street, was struck and run over by an automombile driven by F. C. Adams, 416 Grosvenor street, at 2.30 yesterday afternoon, the machine passing over his abdomen and he is so badly hurt that his recovery is not expected. The lad was playing across the street from his home and responding to his mother's call ran in front of the machine.

Mr. Braden, the boy's father, is a well-known barrister.

Brother and Sister Die on the Same Day

TWEED, May 29 — A very sad death occurred at Stoco on Tuesday when Miss E. Levick, aged seventy-one died of pneumonia. About noon her brother, John Levick, sr., aged sixty-eight, died at the same home of pneumonia. A double funeral was held at Stoco on Friday morning.

Mrs. Wm. Kincaid is progressing nicely after a very critical operation in Kingston General hospital.

Mr. Hugh Stewart, Toronto, spent the week-end at his home.

Wednesday afternoons during June, July and August the merchants will close their places of business for the half holiday.

Talking machine records of the voices of the Prince of Wales and Lloyd George are to be preserved in the British museum.

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Burton

THE STORY SO FAR: GLORIA GORDON, beautiful flapper, marries DICK GREGORY, a struggling lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes ....but no work or children.

Dick borrows his mother's maid, MAGGIE to teach Gloria to cook but she refuses to learn.

Later Maggie leaves disgusted with Gloria's wild par. . . Then Gloria hires RANGHILD SWANSON although Dick tells her they can't afford a maid. Her extravagance swamps Dick with debts. . . .

Gloria begins to see a great deal of STANLEY WAYBURN, an actor with whom she becomes infatuated. Her best friend MAY SEYMOUR, wife of DR. JOHN SEYMOUR, begs her not to see Wayburn. She tells her how she, herself, has been snubbed because of a foolish love affair with JIM CAREWE. MOTHER GREGORY also begs Gloria to mend her ways.

Dick becomes dangerously ill with pneumonia. While he is recovering Wayburn tells Gloria he expected to leave town soon to get a job in New York. He needs money. Gloria gets $200 from Dick's secretary, MISS SUSAN BRIGGS, by telling her she wants it to have some gardening done as a surprise to Dick.

Wayburn promises to pay it back within three weeks. Gloria goes shopping to buy new dress, so as to appear attractive in Wayburn's eyes. She discovers, to her horror, that she is getting fat.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Gloria was asleep when her mother arrived at the hospital.

Mrs. Gordon and the floor nurse sat at the foot of her bed talking in low tones.

"She won't wake up for a while," the nurse said. "We gave her a sleeping powder."

Gloria's mother clasped her hands tightly together.

"You're sure she's not seriously hurt?" she asked for the third time.

"Well, her collar bone's broken and she's pretty well bruised," the nurse answered, for the third time also. "But she's not going to die, of course."

"Who is Stan?" she asked, after a moment's silence. "She kept asking about 'Stan' before she went to sleep."

Gloria's mother didn't answer.

She knew at once who 'Stan' was. That had been what Gloria had always called that good-for-nothing Wayburn!

Mrs. Gordon wondered if Gloria had been seeing Wayburn all during her married life. She wondered if Wayburn had been with her when the car had been wrecked that afternoon.

She stood up and looked at Gloria's face.

A year ago Gloria, in her sleep, had looked as innocent and sweet as a baby. Mrs. Gordon had often told herself so when she had gone into her daughter's room to tuck her up for the night.

Now that look of child-like innocence had gone. There was a new and hard expression around the beautiful mouth.

What had brought it there, Mrs. Gordon wondered.

And as if in answer to her question, Gloria stirred in her sleep and murmured "Stan."

* * *

An hour later she stirred again and opened her eyes. She smiled as she saw her mother, who was sitting beside her.

"Car?" Gloria asked, after a few minutes. Her voice was drowsy.

"I guess it's pretty badly wrecked. Your dad's going to see about it in the morning," Mrs. Gordon answered. She took the fingers of Gloria's bandaged hand in hers.

The girl winced and drew them away.

"Stan?" she asked, after another long pause.

Mrs. Gordon shook her head.

"Was it Wayburn who was with you in the car this afternoon?" she asked.

Gloria closed her eyes. She pretended that she was asleep so that she would not have to answer her mother's question.

But her pale lips quivered and a tear slid down her cheek from under her shadowy lashes . . . then another.

"She's been seeing that Wayburn again. I'm sure of it!" Mrs. Gordon said to Gloria's father that night, as they walked home. "The nurse says she's been calling for him ever since she came into the hospital!"

"Do you think he was with her in the car when it turned over?" Mr. Gordon asked.

His little Gloria! His baby girl! . . . Ah, no! She wasn't the kind of woman who ran around with men after she was married!

Not the little daughter that he and mother had raised so carefully! . . . The little daughter who had learned her prayers at his knee! Not his Glory! There couldn't be anything bad in her!

"Mother, you don't think Wayburn was with our Glory to-day, do you?" he asked again.

"I'm afraid I do," Mrs. Gordon answered firmly. "I'm afraid I do! She wouldn't answer me when I asked her about him."

Two weeks later Gloria was able to sit up and have visitors. The first of them was May Seymour.

The minute Gloria laid eyes on May she saw that she was bursting with bad news.

"Well, I must hand it to you for giving the gossips the best nine-day wonder of the year, Glory!" she said, after she had kissed her on both cheeks.

Gloria started.

"What do you mean, May?" she asked. There was a queer, sinking feeling at her heart.

"Well," May went on cheerfully, "that cat, Mrs. Wing, saw you pick Wayburn up in your car the afternoon of the wreck. She said that Wayburn was three sheets to the wind. . . . And the story's going 'round that you were too squiffy to drive straight. . . ."

"It's not true!" Gloria burst out angrily. "I hadn't had a thing to drink! Not a thing!"

May smiled sweetly.

"You can tell me the truth, dearie! You know I'll never breathe it to a soul," she said.

"I don't care whether you do or not! I tell you I didn't have a thing to drink! It was raining and the car skidded into the ditch, that's all," Gloria said.

"But Stan was with you, wasn't he?" May asked.

"Yes, he was," Gloria answered defiantly. "But how did you know he was?"

"Oh, doctor's wives hear things, you know. Things that happen in hospitals!" May answered mysteriously.

"I'll tell you how I found out about it!" she added a moment later. "Mrs. O'Hara is a friend of one of the nurses who took care of you here at the hospital the night of the wreck. And this nurse told her about your calling for someone named 'Stan' all the time!"

Gloria stared at May without speaking.

"Mrs. O'Hara asked John who 'Stan' was," May went on. "And it never occurred to John who 'Stan' was. . . . But the minute he told me about it I knew you'd been calling for Wayburn! I guess I'm some little Sherlock Holmes!"

"I hope Dick hasn't heard about my calling 'Stan'," Gloria said. "But I suppose he has!"

May took out her vanity case and powdered her prominent nose.

"By the way, Dick's much better, John says," she remarked. "He thinks he'll be able to come here to see you in a day or two."

And the next afternoon Dick came to the hospital.

Gloria wakened from a cat-nap to find him standing beside her bed, looking down at her. She smiled up at him in welcome.

"Well, Dick Gregory!" she cried, "it certainly seems fine to see you standing on your own feet again! Do you feel really well now?"

"Not well, but a lot better," Dick answered. He drew up a chair to the side of the bed and sat down.

"Your car's still in the shop," he said, without smiling. "The man I sent out to tow it back to town said it was pretty badly smashed. . . . Tell me, Gloria, how did you happen to run off the road that day?"

Gloria swallowed hard.

"Well, it was raining, you know," she began, "and the car skidded . . . and that's all. The next thing I knew I was lying in the road with the car on top of me!"

"What were you doing out in the country, 15 miles from home?" Dick went on.

"Oh, don't ask me any more questions!" Gloria cried impatiently. "Haven't I been through enough, lying here flat on my back for two weeks. Give me a little peace!"

"Was anybody with you?" Dick asked relentlessly.

Gloria closed her eyes.

"I'm tired," she said. "Go away."

"Not until you tell me if anyone was with you in your car that day," Dick said in a low monotone.

Gloria opened her eyes. She smiled at Dick, showing the two tiny dimples that were tucked in at the corner of her mouth.

"You haven't kissed me yet, Rikky-Tikky-Tavy," she said.

"I'm not going to kiss you," Dick answered calmly.

"Never again?"

"Perhaps . . . but not right now," Dick replied. "Right now I'm interested in just one thing. I want to know who was with you 'way out in the country that day of the wreck! And, by Jove, I'm going to find out, too!"

Gloria burst out laughing.

"Not if I don't choose to tell you," she said. "After all, nobody knows who was along but me! And I'm not going to tell!"

Dick whitened. Suddenly Gloria was sorry for him.

"I was all alone, Dick," she said. "There wasn't anyone with me. Cross my heart!"

Dick looked at her quietly for a minute. Then he put his hand into his coat pocket and pulled out a little mud-stained flask, covered with cheap leather.

"How did you happen to have this along with you?" he asked. "Have you taken to solitary drinking, Gloria?"

His wife widened her eyes that were the color of brown pansies.

"Where in the world did you get that thing?" she asked. "I never saw it before in my life!"

She shuddered as she looked at the flask. She seemed still to see it in Stan's hand as he tried to make her drink from it!

"You mean to tell me, upon your word of honor, that you never have seen this whisky flask before in your life?" Dick asked her.

Gloria answered him gravely. "I mean just that?" she said.

She watched him put the flask back into his pocket.

She drew a long breath of relief.

Then, fascinated, she saw him draw from his coat another shining object . . . a silver cigaret case. It, too, was caked with yellow mud.

"Did you ever see this before, Gloria?" he asked.

Gloria shook her head.

"Never!" Dick asked. "Think before you speak."

"Never!"

Dick smiled scornfully.

"What kind of a woman are you, anyway?" he asked. "You know as well as I do whose cigaret case this is!"

He turned it over so that Gloria could see the initials that were engraved upon it. . . . "S. W."

STIRLING FAIR BOARD MEETING

Superintendents of Various Departments Appointed—Will Hold Baby Show.

NEW ADVERTISING.

STIRLING, May 29—At a recent meeting of the Agricultural Society the committee on the prize list reported the following as superintendents of the different classes: Heavy Horses, Ernest Carlisle and Thos. Montgomery; Light Horses, C. M. Sine and George Megarnson; Cattle, S. Holden and Wilson Harlow; Sheep and Swine, George Weaver and Wm. Carlisle; Poultry, Clinton McGee and A. B. Fargey; Dairy Products, C. F. Linn and C. W. Thompson; Orchard, Roy Atkin and Thos. Solmes; Garden Roots, J. E. O'Donnell and Ernest Sailes; Grain and Seeds, M. Shea and W. H. Heath; Domestic Manufactures, Miss Emily Parker; Art Work, S. A. Murphy.

It was decided to have a Baby Show in connection with the fair this year and Mrs. R. P. Coulter was appointed superintendent of it. It is the intention to offer prizes that will make this new feature an attraction to the fair. The directors also decided to rent the refreshment and other booth rights this year. The society have been managing this department within themselves during the past few years and thought a change would be beneficial. A committee composed of the following: Messrs. Tucker, McGee, Thompson, Morton, Sine, Buckingham and Solmes, was appointed to arrange an entertainment of some kind between now and Fair date. It was also decided to have a Floral exhibit independent of the Horticultural Society open to all who become members of the Agricultural Society.

New schemes of advertising were discussed and some of them adopted.

The Women's Institute tea held recently was a decided success in every way, net proceeds being $73.00.

Political Activity

A few from here attended the Liberal convention in Belleville held for the purpose of organizing an Association for the new riding of South Hastings as now constituted for Federal purposes. There were several also attended the Liberal meeting in Marmora held for the purpose of organizing in connection with the new riding of Hastings-Peterboro. Mr. J. S. Marshall was elected President and Mr. Jas. Lagrow, secretary, both of this village. Great enthusiasm was manifested at both of these meetings. All were very optimistic as to the results of the next general election.

A large number of Presbyterians from Stirling attended the Presbyterial meeting of the Women's Missionary Society held in John Street Presbyterian Church, Belleville.

The auction sale of the effects of the late Robert N. Morton was largely attended and prices obtained by Auctioneer Wallace were good. The reserve bid for the real estate was not reached in the bidding so it remains unsold.

The comedy given by members of St. Andrews Guild, Campbellford, in the Opera House under the auspices of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church choir was a complete success in every way.

The sewing meeting of St. Andrew's Ladies' Aid held at Mrs. Joseph Reid's' was a great success in every respect, counted the best held this spring.

Mrs. C. Christie Dead

Mrs. Charlotte Christie passed away on Wednesday evening after a brief illness. She had resided in and near Stirling for over 20 years, and had reached the age of nearly 85 years. Her husband pre-deceased her several years ago. Three sons and two daughters are left to mourn the loss of a devoted mother. The funeral takes place this afternoon to Stirling cemetery.

Mrs. Reuben Lansing was taken seriously ill while visiting at her son Clifford's but was slightly improved at last account.

Mr. Charles Allen of the staff of the Montreal Bank of London, Ontario, spent the holiday with his aunt, Mrs. R. W. Meiklejohn. He presided at the organ in St. Andrew's Church at both service on Sunday, which was agreat pleasure to the large audience.

Mrs. James Tulloch of Oshawa is visiting relatives here.

Mrs. J. M. McGee left on Monday to spend three weeks with friends in Toronto and Oshawa.

Miss Florence Marshall spent the week end in Bancroft.

Mrs. Roger Meiklejohn was the guest of her sister in Campbellford on Monday.

Master Caleb Marshall is recovering from an attack of appendicitis.

Mrs. Sills and two grandsons of Plainfield were recent visitors at the home of Mrs. Harper Rollins.

Rev. W. R. Archer of Fenelon Falls occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church at both services on Sunday to the delight of his many friends.

The many friends of Mr. R. A. Elliott are sorry to hear that he is quite ill from an injury to one of his feet.

Miss Mary Chambers of Crookston is in town today.

Mrs. A. Donnell left yesterday to visit her father and aunt at Fergus, Ont.

PREDICTS PAYMENT OF ONTARIO DEBTS

American Wet Leader Says Tourists Will Leave Enough Money.

WASHINGTON, May 30 (Canadian Press).—Declaring that the citizens of this country are spending large sums of money abroad in vacations because of the Volstead law, Captain W. H. Stayton, head of the association against the prohibition amendment, predicted yesterday, that Ontario would "make long strides towards paying off its public debt this summer with the money that United States citizens spend there."

He said they spent $200,000 in Ontario the first few days of the 4.4 beer there.

STEAMER RAN ON ROCKS IN LAKE

C.P.R. Boat Keewatin Went Aground in Lake Superior.

TOWED TO PORT.

PORT ARTHUR, May 30.—(Canadian Press). — The steamer Keewatin, of the Canadian Pacific Railway's Great Lakes Service, which went on the rocks at Passage Island, 42 miles from Port Arthur, during a dense fog at 3.45 yesterday morning, reached port at six o'clock yesterday afternoon in tow of the tugs Whalen and Bowman, and will go into dry dock.

The steamer had a narrow escape, passengers say, and disaster was probably averted by the fact that the reef on which the big steamer struck was so far submerged as to pevent the stoving in of the bow.

REACH ACCORD ON PEACE PACT

French and British Have Come to Agreement on Security.

NEGOTIATIONS SOON.

PARIS, May 30 (Canadian Press) —The French and British Governments have reached an accord on all essential points concerning the Western European security pact, proposed by Germany, it was stated in official circles today. The British note to the French Government detailing the British attitude, delivered yesterday by Lord Crewe, British ambassador, marks great progress toward the point where actual negotiations of the pact itself may begin, officials believe.

HEART WAS WEAK NERVES ALL GONE

Mrs. J. H. Hallenbeck, 117½ Welland Avenue, St. Catharines, Ont., writes:—"I was in a gas explosion; it left me with a weak heart, and my nerves were all gone. I suffered everything; couldn't sleep, or endure any excitement, and when left alone I felt as if I could scream. I took dizzy spells, often falling and bruising myself. My mother read about your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and bought me a box, but having taken so many different kinds of medicine it just seemed that I did not have any confidence in any of them. I took one box of H. & N. Pills, and felt so much better I continued with them until I had used five boxes, and after I had taken them I did not need any more. I cannot praise, or recommend, Milburns Heart and Nerve Pills too highly after all they have done for me."

AIR FLIVVER MADE LONG TRIAL FLIGHT

Averaged 82 Miles Per Hour From London to Zurich.

LONDON, May 30. — (Canadian Press).—Alan Cobham, famous civilian aviator, yesterday made a nonstop flight from the Croydon airport here to Zurish, a distance of 500 miles, in six hours and fifteen minutes in a "baby" airplane, as a demonstration of the capabilities of this type of machine.

Cobham averaged just 82 miles an hour in the air "flivver," which was propelled by a 27 horse power engine. It was a standard machine except for an extra gasoline tank giving total fuel capacity of 35 gallons. Only about 25 gallons, however, were consumed during the flight.

The receipts of cheese were 8.380 boxes, as against 5,772 for the same day last week, and 7.485 for the corresponding day a year ago. The export trade was reported quiet owing to the fact that English importers show little disposition at present to meet the prices ruling here, but it was reported that American buyers continued to operate for speculative account and that a fair amount of business was being done for that purpose. Trading between houses was quieter, but the tone of the market was steady.

Beans ruled steady at $2.70 per bushel.

OBITUARY.

JOHN ALBERT O'DONOHUE.

The funeral of the late John Albert O'Donohue, B.A., which took place on Friday morning to St. Mary's R.C. church and cemetery, from the residence of his father, Mr. Michael O'Donohue was attended by a large concourse of friends who had assembled to pay their last tributes of respect to the deceased. Requiem mass was sung by Rev. Father Phelan, who based his remarks on words found in Hebrews, chap. 9, verse 37, "It is appointed unto man once to die and after that the judgment." In referring to the death of the deceased, the speaker said a life of culture and usefulness was ended, one who had spent his life in instructing the youth, was gone and eternity alone would reveal the results of his labors. To live well, to die well and the salvation of the immortal soul is the most important thing in life.

The pallbearers were all close friends of the deceased, Messrs. George O'Sullivan, D. J. Lynch, Charles Black, Richard Cook, Matthew Mulhearn, Frank Lee.

Beautiful floral tributes were sent from Mr. and Mrs. Charles Haig, and Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Frederick. There were also a very large number of mass cards sent.

The deceased's mother was unable to attend the funeral due to illness and much sympathy is extended to the members of the family in their bereavement.

Some of those from a distance who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fitzpatrick (the deceased's sister), Mrs. Fitzpatrick, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Black, Mr. Frank Deacon, all of Belleville.

BREATHLESS LANGUID GIRLS MADE STRONG BY

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

They Give New Vitality---and more

When girls become breathless, languid and pale, parents should take prompt steps, for delay means danger. The girl in her "teens" cannot develop into robust happy womanhood without abundant, rich red blood in her veins, and it is the lack of this that is the great trouble with most girls. They grow anaemic depressed and weak, with no appetite, and no interest in life.

Every anaemic girl who is struggling to womanhood in a poor state of health, can find splendid, vigorous health, with glowing cheeks and sparkling eyes, in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. For these pills not only increase the supply of rich, red blood; they create appetite, relieve the weary back and limbs, restore full womanly health and charm, and so transform pale, anaemic girls into robust, happy women.

So if you are anaemic, let Dr. Williams' Pink Pills help you as they did Miss Clara Cheslock, High Falls, Que., who says:—"Before I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was pale, bloodless and badly run down. The least exertion would tire me and my appetite was fickle. A short treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills has changed all this and I am now enjoying the best of health, for which you have my sincere thanks."

Always Tired in the Mornings

MISS M. BECKER, 113 David St., Kitchener, Ont., writes:—"My system became generally run down. I was nervous, tired and subject to headaches. After using nine boxes of DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD I felt like a new person, could sleep and eat well and was relieved of all the old symptoms".

"NERVOUS bankruptcy is being courted by the young women of today," says Dr. Mosher, widely known authority on women's health.

"In her desire to not miss anything she burns the candle at both ends, cutting short her sleep, hurrying or omitting meals.

"This disregard of periods of rest and sleep must necessarily lead to a breakdown of the nervous system, a condition which is the despair of the physician".

Among the early indications of trouble are irritability, restlessness, indigestion, headaches and sleeplessness.

The rational treatment is DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD to revitalize the wasted nerve cells. This medicine is so natural and gentle in action and so wonderfully potent as a restorative that you will soon see the benefits derived from its use.

METHODIST CHURCH SUMMER ACTIVITIES

Conferences and Summer Schools Scheduled From Coast to Coast.

TORONTO, May 30. — The month is capturing Summer, with or without mosquitoes, and is utilizing the outing instinct for religious education.

Six Summer schools or conferences and eight summer camps for young people are announced to be held this year in the area of the Toronto Methodist Conference, four schools and four camps in the London Conference, two schools and three camps in Bay of Quinte Conference, two schools and eight camps in Montreal Conference, two schools and five camps in Hamilton Conference, besides others east and west.

Many thousands of leaders, young people, and boys and girls will attend these gatherings which are for religious instruction, featuring the study of the Bible and missions.

The popularity of such institutions in an age of "beach dolls" and "cake eaters" should silence many critics of youth.

Ninety-nine gatherings of the school, conference or camp type are being held in Canada with Methodist organizations for young people participating. Four camps for leaders of girls and eight camps for girls are scheduled, and an even larger number for boys of 'teen age.

Follow the Congregation.

In John Wesley's day the Methodists went to the fields for congregations. Now they seek the forests and streams, wherever the young people like to go.

The annual summer school of the Young People's Leagues of Toronto Conference, attended by hundreds, will be held this year at Elgin House, Muskoka, begining June 25. Union schools will be held for the same area at Owen Sound, Couchiching, Timagami and Bruce Mines.

In Manitoba Conference twenty-two boys' camps are being arranged this summer, and that province will lead the Dominion in providing these religious facilities for her sons. In Ontaro thirteen boys' camps are scheduled, three in each of four conferences, Toronto, London, Hamilton and Bay of Quinte, and one in Ottawa district of Montreal Conference.

Alma College, Goderich, and Kingsville will be centres of summer schools in London Conference for young Methodists. At Normandale on Lake Erie and Port Elgin on Lake Huron, the Hamilton Conference will hold summer schools early in July. Bay of Quinte schools are scheduled for Whitby and Bobcaygeon, and Montreal schools are to be at Point Iroquois, Ontario, and Knowlton, Quebec.

The summer training movement covers Methodism thoroughly from Newfoundland to British Columbia, with Lumsden Beach and Sylvan Lakes as centres for Saskatchewan and Alberta. Ten gatherings are to be held in Nova Scotia, six in New Brunswick, and two in Prince Edward Island. Three in Newfoundland bring the total up to 102. In each of them the keynote this year is to be preparation for service and responsibility in the Unittd Church of Canada.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

The good golf swing meets nothing that will upset it so quickly as the old enemy, pressing. The desire to hit hard is instinctive and the desire to hit too hard in golf usually is fatal to good shots. One of the solid rules of the game, and one that always serves the player well, is this: Always feel that in your swing you have a degree of reserve. Give little thought to the player who appears to swing as hard as he can, but let his effort serve as a reminder that you will swing just a little under your utmost effort of hitting hard, and you will discover it along the route I have just suggested.

DOES EVERY MEAL CAUSE YOU DISTRESS?

If It Does You Should Take Burdock Blood Bitters

Mr. M. P. Eldrige, Beaver Harbor, N.B., writes:—"I was troubled with my stomach for some time, and everything I ate seemed to distress me. I tried many different medicines, but without any results. Finally I was advised to try B.B.B., and after having taken several bottles I was completely relieved of my trouble. I can now eat anything I wish, thanks to B.B.B."

Burdock Blood Bitters puts the stomach into perfect shape by promoting proper digestion; and during the past 46 years it has been on the market has made a reputation, second to none, for relieving all stomach troubles.

SIX IN COURT STEALING 4.4 BEER

Detective W. H. Howard Made Clean-up and Earned Magistrate's Praise.

Yesterday, Detective W. H. Howard of the C.N.R. made a clean up at Kinmount, when he arrested Frank Detman, 24 years of Age; Archie Detman, 19 years of age; Clifford Bain, 24 years of age; James Bain, 26 years of age; James Allen, 21 years of age, and Dominick McGrath, 23 years of age, on a charge of breaking into a freight car and stealing a quantity of 4.4 beer therefrom.

The officer brought all these men out from the north country and landed them in the Lindsay lockup. They appeared before Magistrate Bradford later in the evening and all pleaded guilty.

Crown Attorney Anderson laid stress on the seriousness of the offence, pointing out that they could each be sentenced to a term of 14 years.

The accused men were supported by several of the prominent business men of Kinmount as well as their spiritual advisor, who gave them good character evidence and as this was the first time that any of them had ever been before the court, Magistrate Bradford concurred with Detective Howard and Crown Attorney Anderson and dealt very leniently with them, sentencing each to two years' suspended sentence upon payment of all costs and placing each one under his own recognizance of the sum of $200 for a period of two years.

Credit is due to the officer in this case for the manner in which he rounded up this gang, who, having nothing in the nature of a clue to work upon, travelled many miles into this rugged part of the country, and apprehended these men within 48 hours after his arrival.

HIRE CARETAKERS FOR BATHING POOLS

Parks Committee Accepted Messrs. Bannon and Henry For Posts.

The Parks Committee met yesterday afternoon to let the positions at the bathing beaches. Two applications were received for each place, and the following appointments were made: At Lake Street, J. Bannon will guard the swimmers, using a boat to be provided by himself, at a remuneration of $15.00 a week. At Inverlea, W. Henry will perform the duties at the same salary. The question of keeping the bathing houses open on Sundays will be settled by the Council on Monday.

John Crane informed the committee that the wall at Inverlea Park had been lowered by the Hydraulic Power Company and they wished to cover it with soil. The members of the committee will view the wall.

The tender of T. H. Hooper for refreshment privileges at James Stevenson Park was accepted.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR KIDNEY TROUBLE

Quebec Lady Recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills To All Sufferers With Bad Kidneys.

Madame G. Boudart was almost unable to work and found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Val Barrette, Que., May 29. — (Special).—"I have suffered so much from bad kidneys," states Madame G. Boudart, a well-known resident of this place, "I was almost unable to work any more and it was necessary that I walked every day. I have taken several boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and am now quite well. I always keep them in the house. I take a box from time to time and that keeps me well. I advise all those who suffer with bad kidneys to do the same as I have done."

The sooner any person who perceives symptoms of these horrible and painful disorders brought about by bad kidneys, takes a reliable remedy, the better for their future welfare and happiness. Don't wait for relief to come of its own accord. See to it at once. Take Dodd's Kidney Pills. But, do it now!

MALE VOICE CHOIR.

Peterborough Musical Organization Gave Program at Fenelon Falls.

The Peterborough Male Voice Choir made a trip to Fenelon Falls last night, the members going by motor, and presented one of their successful concerts in the Methodist Church there. A feature of the programme was the dedication of the chimes recently presented to this church, and the playing for the concert numbers of the new organ installed last year.

The choir had an audience of about four hundred people and received hearty appreciation for a programme of choral numbers, interspersed by an octette, a male quartette, and a duett by Miss Gretta LeBarr and Mr. C. B. Adair. Miss LeBarr also sang several solos. Miss Isabel Donnelly acted as accompanist for the evening.

Russia Improving.

The Russian Government has set aside 9,000,000 rubles for road improvement this year. Another 3,500,000 rubles have been appropriated for the purchase of automobiles and trucks.

YOUR GARDEN

REPOTTING PLANTS.

In repotting house plants use a good made soil and avoid the ordinary garden soil alone, as it will usually not be sufficiently rich and, lacking in humus, will not be open and springy. Consequently it will pack and bake as hard as a brick after being watered and the plant will not do at all well. Black muck also, though containing plenty of humus, really lacks fertility and is a poor potting soil.

A splendid general potting soil may be made by mixing 4 parts of loam, 1½ parts of humus and 1½ parts of sand. Add 3-4 of a pound of bone meal to a bushel of the mixture. The quantity of sand and humus may vary a little, according to the quality of the loam. Should it be sandy then a little extra humus as decayed manure or leaves may be added to give it body. If the loam is inclined to be stiff and clayey, then more sand may be added to make it more open.

In the actual repotting operation, plenty of drainage should be provided by pieces of pot and rougher material at the bottom of the pot. After the plant is removed from the old pot shake out most of the soil and disentangle the roots. Partially fill the pot and place the plant in the pot at the same depth it was growing, spread the roots out well and after filling in more soil, firm it with the fingers and gradually complete the filling until the soil reaches to about ½ to 1 inch below the rim of the pot, depending on its size, then water thoroughly to settle the soil. Ferns, aspidistras and palms require to be extra firmly set and for this purpose a stick about a foot long, 2 inches wide and ¼ to ½ in thickness should be used as a pounder. At the time of potting very old fronds or leaves may be removed and the plant renovated somewhat. A certain amount of shortening back of the roots is advisable also to start new root growth. Unless the plant is decidedly pot bound it will not be necessary to replant to a larger size pot.

Old geraniums and begonias that are spreading and leggy are seldom worth repotting and must be heavily cut back. They then require some time to recover, so it is usually better to take slips and grow vigorous new stock.

OF RED FLANNEL AND BLACK CATS

NEW YORK, May 30.—(United Press).—Are you afraid to look at a new moon through the trees, believing that it will bring bad luck? Probably not.

Have you superstitions about black cats or gray horses? Maybe, but you know they have no basis in fact.

Do you believe that if you kill a toad the family cow will go dry? Undoubtedly not.

And yet you may be one of the thousands who still believe in the old saying that one should "stuff a cold and starve a fever," even though medical science has proved that the opposite is the case.

"Medical superstitions and saws, even when ridiculous on the face, die harder than any others," says Dr. J. Allen Patten, medical director of the Prudential Insurance Company of Newark N.J. "A man who wouldnt think of carrying a buckeye in his pocket as a charm, or the left hind foot of a graveyard rabbit will insist that his wife tie a piece of asafoetida on a string around the baby's back to keep it from catching whooping cough or other contagious diseases.

"The same is true of red flannel underwear" says Dr. Patten. "Despite the fact that it has become the subject of jest nationally it is still widely worn, because it has ing been the belief that red flannel would keep off lumbago, rheumatism, pneumonia and the like. As a matter of fact flannel as an undergarment has its value in that it is an effective means of keeping the body warm, but red flannel has no more virtue than white, or powder blue.

"It is a surprising thing, but in cetrain sections it is generally believed that tuberculosis can be cured with Indian turnips soaked in whiskey. In this instance the wish may be father to the thought, but it is nevertheless erroneous."

Motor Notes

LONDON, May 30.—Artichokes, potatoes and other starchy vegetables may be the salvation of the motor world, when—and if—the gasoline supply runs out.

For from these tuber it has been found, can be extracted alcohol for use as a power fuel. This discovery has been made by the fuel research board of the British Empire.

The most profitable of the tubers, the board finds, would be the Jerusalem artichoke, which, in addition to its tuber below ground, has a plant some eight or ten feet above ground.

The profit in the extraction of power alcohol from the artichoke is seen in the plant's ease of growth in any well-drained soil and under the most difficult conditions. Little labor is needed to cultivate it, and it propagates itself for a number of years.

Experiments are still being conducted on this source to find the best conditions under which the fuel can be extracted.

Potatoes and mangolds are two other sources from which power alcohol has been taken, but at a commercial loss. Germany had been furnishing 95 per cent of its alcohol from potatoes before the war. Now this production has fallen to 15 per cent of its output because of the general opinion that a greater use can be had of potatoes as food rather than as a source for alcohol.

At present wholesale prices for potatoes in Great Birtain, they would bring the price of its alcohol to about 7 shillings, or $1.68 a gallon. This puts the potato far out of reach for alcohol production.

This is also true of mangolds, although the extraction process is less costly.

The closest to a profitable basis is the artichoke. Experiments are still going on with this plant.

An easy way to wash the car is to place the sponge against the hose nozzle, turn on the water and run over the surface of the car. Never direct the stream directly at the surface.

Paint the under side of your engine hood with aluminum paint. This will reduce the amount of heat coming from the engine and tending to mar the finish on the outside of the hood. Use aluminum paint, also, for the under side of the auto top to reduce the heat from the sun and reradiated into the car.

Carry a Tow Rope.

A tow rope should find room in every motorist's equipment. This is especially necessary when you go on a journey through country that is strange to you.

Side for Old Tires.

For city driving, put old tires on the right side of the car. In the country, use the old tires on the left side. In the city, these will get the bad bumps, like hitting against the curb, turning corners, etc. On the highways, the left side of the car has the easier path.

Hand Gas Feed.

Feed gas with the hand control when going over bad bumps. This will ease the shock by keeping the speed of the car constant.

ANNUAL GATHERING OF MANUFACTURERS

Twenty-fifth Anniversary of Re-organization to be Specially Celebrated.

TORONTO, May 30. — (Canadian Press.)—As this year marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of re-organization of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association on a national basis, special effort has been made to secure attendance at the annual meeting which opens in Hamilton, Ont., on Monday of as many as possible of those manufacturers who have been members for quarter of a century. The attendance at the convention will be representative of all parts of Canada.

PLAN ASSASSINATION.

Soviet Charge d'Affaires is Threatened in London, Says Report.

LONDON, May 30. — Canadian Press. — A plan to assassinate Christian Rakovsky, Soviet charge d'affaires here has been discovered by the Scotland Yard detectives, it was announced to-day. According to details understood to be in the possession of Scotland Yard the plot originated among anti-bolshevists in Holland, who selected an agent to kill Rakovisky. This man is believed to have entered England. He is known to the police and is being sought energetically, it was announced.

BLUE FOX FARM.

Fifty Pairs to Start Business But Expansion is Expected.

VANCOUVER, B. C., May 30. — (Canadian Press.) — Frank Buckley (well known lumberman) has secured a lease on Mary Island, containing 2000 acres of logged off land and will establish a blue fox farm there. As a starter 50 pairs of foxes will be placed on the land, but it is the ultimate intention to go into the business on a large scale, selling foxes for breeding purposes, as well as supplying the world's markets for pelts.

Mary Island, which is 130 miles north of Vancouver, was logged over 25 years ago, and has a net work of trails and wagon roads all ready for the fur producing colony.

FUR WORKERS' STRIKE.

Six Hundred Members of Union on Strike in Montreal.

MONTREAL, May 30 (Canadian Press)—About 600 Montreal members of the International Fur Workers Union are on strike here today. Police are guarding the fur manufacturers' premises on St. Paul St. and other thoroughfares in the wholesale fur district. So far there has been no disorder.

LOCAL MARKET LANGUID TO-DAY

Butter Was 35 To 40 Cents —Eggs 27 and 28—Chickens 28 Cents.

POTATOES 60 CENTS.

"The point is that most of us have an ordinary amount of intelligence and that is all that is required to learn how to sharpen scissors," was one of the illuminating remarks broadcast to the world on the farmers' market this morning. The cries of the hawkers who are engaged in diverting the attention of the crowd to their own particular wares are interesting. Over the hum of the trading, above the auctioneers' "What am I offered for this?" come the shrill oratory of those who have novelties to sell. One of the auctioneers is disposing of faucets and taps and the other is delving into the recesses of one of those old saddle-backed trunks that theatrical people cherish a superstition about, and bringing up odds and ends of household draperies and furnishings.

"Ladies and gentlemen, it is an act of inhumanity to refuse to buy this little tool," asserts the vendor of a self-threading needle.

"Right over this way for pineapples and oranges. Very cheap this morning," floats out of the entry where the fruit man has his stand, and upstairs there are two little boys yelling, "Buy your rhubarb here," over their bunches of red and green.

A bit of human interest material is the old Scotchman, with the Gaelic burr to his tongue, just six months out from the Old Country. His daughter, "a wee body," was "stolen away from her home by a Canadian soldier, like mair o' the romantic youngsters that fell in love and got married in war time" and came out here to live. Her father, a cook for twenty-five years on the high seas, first on the old windjammers and then on some of the floating palaces of the ocean, and her mother, "his sweetheart," followed her out here. The father is looking for a steady job at his trade as cook, but steady jobs are hard to get, in a new country.

The buying public was rather languid this morning, and the upper basket section was emptied of patrons at an earlier hour than usual. Dairy supplies were fairly plentiful, with butter selling anywhere from 35 to 40 cents a pound, and eggs at 27 and 28 cents a dozen. Chickens were 28 cents a pound, hens 27 cents. Cream was 30 cents a pint.

Downstairs, on the open market green growing things had the sale. Plants in boxes were on most of the carts. Fifteen or twenty cents would buy a box of phlox, carnations, zinnias, petunias, balsam, cosmos, or asters, and there were Canterbury bells and iris at ten cents a box and foxglove at fifteen.

Two little boys with a big clothes' basket were selling purple lilacs at ten and fifteen cents a bunch.

Potatoes were 60 cents a bag this morning, and the vendor of Spy apples still had some of his good samples on hand, at 80 cents and $1 a peck. Little Rhode Island chicks were 20 cents a piece, and small white pigs $14 a pair.

Dry Agents Took Vanderbilt To Court As Rum Runner

MERIDIAN, Miss., May 30. —(United News.)— Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., wasn't occupying his spare moments Friday with rum running, but it took some little time to convince Meridian dry agents of that fact.

Officers, following a tip, chased and overhauled a fleet automobile, supposedly being used by a bootleg ring to transport a rich liquor store.

"Pull up and crawl out," yelled an agent. "Haulin' any liquor?"

"Hardly," answered the millionaire editor and publisher. "I'm Cornelius Vanderbilt."

"Yeah," retorted the officer, "I'm Rockefeller."

He took Vanderbilt along to court where a thorough search served only to prove the agent's mistake.

"Awfully sorry, Mr. Vanderbilt," amended the agent after the search.

"Perfectly all right, Mr. Rockefeller," said the publisher, smiling. "Have a cigar."

CANADIAN TROOPS MARCH IN NEW YORK

Detachment of Montreal Royal Highlanders in Decoration Day Parade.

NEW YORK, May 30 (Canadian Press)—A detachment of six officers and 84 men of the Fifth Regiment (Royal Highlanders of Canada) of Montreal ,popularly known as "The Black Watch," under the command of Major W. J. MacFarlane, M.C., took part in the annual Decoration Day parade here today, in company with units representative of the United States forces, the Grand Army of the Republic, and the British Great War Veterans Association of America. The detachment paraded in khaki service tunics and black plaid kilts, presenting an unusual feature which aroused much popular interest.

WOMEN'S INTERESTS

BATHING SUITS LIKE DRESSES

Made of Taffeta With Skirts To Near the Knee.

QUITE MODEST

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, May 30 (United Press).—There is little difference between this season's bathing suit and the extremely short-skirted street dress which we see so much of. Since bathing frocks are made of taneta with skirts extending almost to the knee, they are quit as modest as many afternoon frocks.

At recent fashion shows held in New York, the one-piece suit of knit material was entirely unrepresented. Suits that looked like little girl's frocks predominated. Taffetas, cretonnes and silk crepes were materials chosen. Such shades as purple, violet, Madonna blue, black and reds were numerous. Several suits had semi-fitted bodices with skirts of petal-shaped ruffles. Some had circular insets or self-material or constrasting color adding hem fullness.

A violet taffeta suit was piped in turquoise blue with bloomers and slippers also of this blue. Bloomers usually extended an inch or so below the skirt being trimmed in tiny ruffles. Necklines were V-shaped in front and rounded in the rear as a rule and occasionally a model had a scarf attachment of self material which draped about the neck.

Very few long sleeves were shown.

Cretonne frocks are veritable children's frocks with their short ruffled skirts and tiny bloomers. Cretonne capes lined in solid, brilliant colors accompanied these suits. A cherry red taffeta suit had a cape of black cretonne figured in red and yellow. The lining of the cape was cherry red.

Bathing caps matched rather than contrasted with the suits. Capes of rubberized silk in batik designs also carried out the color scheme of the suit.

Whether silk suits will be worn for bathing purposes is yet to be seen. New Yorkers of late years have shown a great preference for one-piece affairs of extreme shortness and snug fit. However, since our street frocks make us look like young flappers, we might accept the child's frock as a bathing costume.

BEAUTIFY IT WITH "DIAMOND DYES"

Perfect home dyeing and tinting is guaranteed with Diamond Dyes. Just dip in cold water to tint soft, delicate shades, or boil to dye rich, permanent colors. Each 15-cent package contains directions so simple any woman can dye or tint lingerie, silks, ribbons, skirts, waists, dresses, coats, stockings, sweaters, draperies, coverings, hangings, everything new.

Buy "Diamond Dyes"—no other kind—and tell your druggist whether the material you wish to color is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton, or mixed goods.

SO CAKE WON'T STICK

When you remove a cake from the oven put the tin on a folded cloth saturated with cold water. This will prevent its sticking.

It is well to soak lace in soapy water to which ammonia or borax has been added before washing it. This loosens the dirt so less handling is required and hence less wear on the mesh.

Love Lines

Love may wreck a woman's life, but a man is more afraid of being becalmed.

When a man finds that he cannot tell the world what he thinks of it he gets himself a wife.

Men seldom reflect much on matrimony; they are too busy adjusting their neckties.

The game of falling in love is much like a football game—just about the time you thing you are safely parked you find that the game's over.

A woman wants a man to be a little jealous and show it; a man wants a woman to be very jealous and never show it.

A woman throws a scarf about her shoulders while a man merely puts himself in an attractive light.

Yest, love makes a woman go round in circles; men in triangles.

PRESENTATION TO MISS S. HAMILTON

Mark Street Ladies' Aid Anticipates Her Approaching Marriage.

The regular monthly meeting of Mark Street Ladies' Aid was held recently in the home of Mrs. A. J. Throop, at the close of which a very pleasant social time was spent, and Miss Sara Hamilton, whose marriage takes place shortly, was presented with a beautiful rug and an address. Miss Hamilton responded in appropriate terms. The address follows:

Miss S. Hamilton.

Dear Miss Hamilton,—It is with regret that we, the members of Mark Street Ladies' Aid, realize that the ties which bound you to our church are about to be severed by your removal to Uxbridge. You have so long been associated with Mark Street Church that we shall miss you very much.

Your presence in the homes of the sick has cheered many a one in the past few years, and we cannot forget your kind services in our recent concerts as well as in the past.

We could not think of allowing you to leave us, without expressing our feelings of good-will toward you, and ask you to accept this little gift as a memento of our friendship and love.

Permit us to indulge the hope that you may find in your new surroundings, warm friends and pleasant social and church relationships, but we feel sure you will not altogether forget the little congregation in whose worship and deliberations you have so often taken a part.

Signed on behalf of the Mark Street Ladies' Aid,

Mrs. A. J. Throop, Pres.
Mrs. Mounce, Sec.
Miss E. Whattam, Treas.

SKIRTS AND SHOES

By HEDDA HOYT
(Women's Editor of the United Press)

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, May 30.—(United Press).—Although many women are wearing extremely short skirts, the average length is 14 inches from the ground.

An unusual afternoon gown seen recently was made of black satin in jumper effect. The blouse portion which extended just below the hips was of black satin fringed with narrow black satin ribbons which fell to the hem. Under the riboon fringe appeared a skirt of black silk material figured in red and yellow.

A charming wrap made in Mandarin coat effect with up-standing collar and long loose sleeves used as its material red and gold brocade. The garment was lined in gold and trimmed about up-standing collar fronts and sleeves with narrow gold banding.

Wedding gowns and veils of flesh shade have been worn by several brides who are getting away from the all white idea.

Shoes combining two contrasting leathers are popular. Women with long feet find that the shoe that is cut in half, as it were, with the front of the shoe made of black patent and the heel of tan or gray calf, has a tendency to shorten the appearance of the foot. Shoes that have piping and inset effects in contrasting color on both heel and toe make the foot appear larger than necessary.

The little men one sees accompanying fair ladies are five-year-old boys dressed exactly like their fathers in long trousers, waistcoats, double-breasted coats, fedoras, canes, etc. On Sundays proud fathers in short knickers parade hand-in-hand with long-trousered sons who are scarcely out of their toddling clothes.

Yes, this is Your BIRTHDAY

SUNDAY, MAY 31—If today is your birthday, you will be a born gambler. You will want to take a chance on everything. As a result your success in life will not be very great. You are born under the zodiacal sign of Gemini, the twins. This double influence will have an important bearing on your life, for some years you will be very successful. Luck will be with you. Then luck will turn against you and the gambler's instinct will cause you to risk and lose that which you gained the previous years. You also will gamble in love and probably will marry more than once.

HOME TOWN RECIPE.

Everyone likes lemon pie. Here is a recipe for lemon sponge pie, from Mrs. J. S. Donley 623 Aylmer street:

- 1 lemon.
- 1 cup sugar.
- 1 cup milk
- 2 eggs.
- 1 tablespoon butter.
- 2 teaspoons flour.
- Pinch of salt.
- Cream butter and sugar. Mix yolks of eggs with rind of lemon add butter and sugar, juice of lemon and well-whipped whites of eggs, also cup of milk last. Bake in pie paste.

OVERSEAS TRADE WAS DISAPPOINTING

Drop in Imports of Over Ten Million Dollars.

LONDON, May 30 (Canadian Press).—The British overseas trade for April was most disappointing, says the report of the American Chamber of Commerce in London. Imports shrank by more than ten million dollars and exports by about nine million dollars.

The April production of pig iron was 569,800 tons and of steel 597,600 tons, against 607,900 and 684,700 respectively in March, and the exports of iron and steel were 301,027 tons against 341,292 tons last year.

The number of unemployed in the country is placed at 1,185,000 or 163,900 more than a year ago.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir.—The widow of the late Mr. John Crompton, who met his death while in the employ of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, wishes the public to know that she is not receiving Mr. Crompton's pay up to June, the 15th, as previously published in The Examiner of April 14th.

It is also a well-known fact that the Utilities Commission carry insurance on all their employes, but evidently this was not done in Mr. Crompton's case, from what reason I do not know. Therefore Mrs. Crompton is not receiving any insurance. The general rumor goes around the city.

THE SABBATH DAY.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir: In Saturday's issue of your excellent paper, Mr. M. T. Butcher makes the statement that God never commanded anyone except Israel to keep the Sabbath.

Now, in the second chapter of Genesis, verse 3, we read that God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it long before Israel was on the earth, and when the law was given to Israel, God said, Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy. It was not a new commandment. Mankind was to have six days as their own, but they must not infring on the seventh, for it was the Sabbath of the Lord.

God in His infinite wisdom knew that both body and spirit of the being which he had created needed one day in seven for rest and worship, and as human nature is the same today as it was at the beginning do we not need the Sabbath as much as the Jews did? The Lord's Day has not been abolished. When St. John was in the Isle of Patmos he speaks of being in the spirit on the Lord's Day, so the day that the Lord blessed and sanctified is not just a legal holiday, but the Lord's own day.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am sincerely, LOVER OF TRUTH.

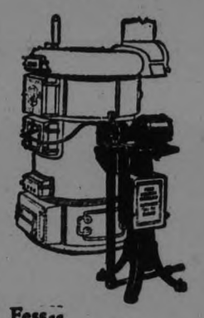
Fess-Holden Morgan Automatic Oil Burning Favored by Women

WOMEN favor and understand Fess Automatic Oil Burning Equipment. They like it because it is so downright simple and free of complications and troubles. In the living room or hall there is a little thermostat (heat regulating thermometer). When more, or less, heat is required a simple adjustment of the thermostat does the work.

They like Fess equipment because it goes right along with its job of keeping the home cosy and warm, doing its work thoroughly, quietly, reliably! Women don't have to worry about it, fuss over it—in fact, they do not have to think of it at all. To them, it is as simple and logical as electric light.



Fess-Holden Morgan Automatic

Men Folk Like Their New Freedom

As for the men of households heated by Fess or Fess-Holden Morgan Oil Burners! The men boast to their coal-burning neighbors how much better their houses are heated the Fess way.

Men luxuriate in their freedom from having to shovel coal, carry heavy cans of ashes, sweep and scrape; they like the idea of going to the cellar only once a month perhaps, instead of three or four times a day in the wearying years of coal heating. Owners of larger Fess-Heated homes do not have to employ a furnace man!

Children's Health is Better Now

In Fess-Heated homes children have fewer colds, coughs and other little illnesses. The secret of this is that no matter how viciously cold or mild it is outside you can keep your home uniformly, evenly heated, the Fess way. Grandma and Grandad like the nice, even warmth. And because oil is so wonderfully clean it doesn't create any dust or grime; this means far less cleaning to do.

And that is the whole family!

SAFETY! All Fess equipments have been approved by the Hydro Electric Commission and accepted by the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association. The entire line of Fess equipment, which is the largest and most complete manufactured, has been tried out under severest conditions and has proved its worth for all cases, both in homes and commercial institutions.

Don't order coal! Obtain from us the Fess-Holden Morgan list of 2,000 Canadian homes oil heated the Fess Way. We will gladly give you a demonstration with no obligation to you whatsoever.

THRILLING 18 INNING 1-1 BATTLE WITH ROCHESTER THE CLIMAX TO TORONTO STRING OF 16 STRAIGHT Final of Series Called to Allow the Tribe to Catch Train.

SMITH THE STAR.

Leafs' Pitcher Hit Home Run —Rochester Tied It In Ninth.

TORONTO, May 29. — Herb Thormahlen, former major leaguer, engaged George Smith, youthful Toronto star, in the most sensational hurling duel ever witnessed here this afternoon when the team deadlocked at 1 to 1 in eighteen thrilling innings. Thormahlen struck out twelve of the pennant seeking Leafs and allowed but ten hits. Smith was the hero of the game, however, as he hit a home run in the grounds in the eighth inning. The Colts got their only marker in the ninth when they bunched three singles and Menoskey scored on Thormahlen's sacrifice fly.

The Colts filled the bases in the seventeenth, but Fred Merkle hit into a lightning double-play, Miller to Gehringer to Heath to retire the side. The score:

Shaughnessy's Last

BUFFALO, May 29.—Syracuse won the fourth and last game of the series with Buffalo, the score being 9 to 5. Meine was strong in the pinches and kept Buffalo's heavy sluggers under control, winning despite the six errors by his teammates. Manager Webb tried four hurlers and three pinch-hitters. Swansboro pushed the ball over the right field wall with Holmes on. Swansboro and Taggert made four hits for as many chances. It was the last day for Frank Shaughnessy as manager of the Stars.

LINE DRIVE HIT TYGER PITCHER HOSPITAL CASE

Detroit Won Slugging Match With White Sox—Victories By Leaders.

CLEVELAND LOSE.

Senators' Inner Defense Backed Up Mogridge With Five Double Plays.

CHICAGO, May 29. — Detroit defeated Chicago 13 to 9 in a slugging match here today. Cobb's strategy almost cost him the services of one of his pitchers, when he removed Dauss in favor of a pinch-hitter and then sent Johnson to the mound. Johnson was hit hard and before he retired the side in the ninth inning was knocked out by a line drive off Falk's bat. He was removed to a hospital. Barrett's home run with two on base was a feature. Score:

KINGSTON WON SLUGGING BEE FROM TRUNKS

Final Score Was 14-8—Starting Pitchers Didn't Last One Inning.

MANY ERRORS.

Six Contributed By Belleville While Ponies Made Five Misplays.

KINGSTON, Ont., May 30. — (Special).—Heavy hitting and weak pitching marked the game here last evening at the Fair Grounds between the Belleville C.N.R. team and the Kingston team, which was won by the latter by the score of 14 to 8. It was a long-drawn out affair, the first inning alone requiring well over half an hour. The first inning was disastrous for the two starting pitchers, Cairns for Kingston and Koen for Belleville. Both were forced to retire from the game before the first frame had far advanced on either side. The first six Belleville men up landed out safe hits, two of them being three-baggers, one by W. Mills and the other by Hagerman. Vern Weir made two safe hits in the first chapter. Belleville gathered in six runs in this stanza, and looked like sure winners, but the Kingston crew were not to be daunted, and slammed back good and hard. In their half of the first inning Kingston opened fire with the willow, and Teepell, the first man up, slammed out a triple. Halbert went out to H. Mills, but the next two men up, Batstone and Somerville put out three baggers also. The next three men, Cherry, Purvis and Walker, put out beautiful singles, and Koen left the mound for Goyer, who did very well but was given rank sunport. Cairns faced five men in all, and they slammed him good and hard.

Most of the nine innings was ragged baseball, but in spots the teams showed signs of life. The Belleville team did not show nearly the form that they did last year, and the third sack corner was woefully weak. Hagerman was away off color, and allowed an easy one to drop through his hands, resulting in runs being scored. There were eleven errors in all, Kingston having five and Belleville six. Kingston secured sixteen hits and Belleville eleven.

The score by inning was as follows:
Belleville .. .. .60010010— 8 11 6
Kingston .. .. .41602100x—14 16 5

The batteries: For Kingston: Cairns, Young and Quinn. Belleville: Koen, Goyer and Mills.

Umpires: Kay and Dell.

LAKEFIELD WON LEAGUE OPENER

Renwick's Home Run Not Enough to Give Keene Victory.

SCORE 6 TO 5

LAKEFIELD, May 30.—Keene and Lakefield played the opening game of the season in the East Peterborough League, rural section, at Lakefield last night, the home team winning by 6 to 5.

The game was very even, the outstanding play being a home run by Renwick for Keene in the 6th inning.

Fielding was not up to the mark being distracted by a high wind.

There was a good attendance and the spectators enjoyed the game a lot. A few carloads of fans accompanied the Keene team.

SPORT GOSSIP AND COMMENT.

Nothing succeeds like success, they say. Yet the Baltimore Orioles have won so many pennants that the home fans have grown tired of it all, and only a hundred people saw them play one game this week.

ONE-SIDED GAME SCHOOL LEAGUE

Prince of Wales Beat Queen Alexandra School By 21-1 Score.

When the adding machine operators had finished their calculations last night at the Oval, they announced that the score of the six-inning game between the Prince of Wales and Queen Alexandra Schools was 21-1 for the west-end team. The heavier boys from the Prince of Wales' School were too heavy with the bat for the north ward pitchers, who pitched nice ball for little fellows. Holmes of the Prince of Wales was too good for the Queen Alexandra batters, who were able to get very few hits out of the infield, where Holmes was given air-tight support. The teams:

Queen Alexandra: Pullyblank lf, Sturgeon p, 1b, Kingdon c, Clark rf, Smith ss, Outram cf, Whitnell 1b, p, Tedford 3b, Johnston 2b.

C.G.E. DROPS OUT; LOCKWORKS IS IN Mercantile League Meeting Last Night Puts Through Changes.

At a special meeting of the Mercantile League held last evening in Cressman's Store, it was decided that the withdrawal of the C.G.E. team from the League, be accepted. It was also decided that the Lock Works Victorias take the place of the C.G.E. team and accept their playing dates. They will play the Examiner at 2.30 this afternoon.

Mr. H. W. Cressman, president of the League, was in the chair, and in accepting the entry of the Victorias, said that the League was very fortunate in securing this team. He stated that the Victorias had agreed to enter and to field a team with only two days notice.

The League is now composed of four teams, namely: Lock Works All Stars, Bankers, Lock Works Victorias and Examiner.

LADIES' LEAGUE STARTS TUESDAY

C.G.E. and Otonabee Ladies Clash in First Game of Season.

GAME WEDNESDAY.

The event that all the fans have been waiting for is scheduled for Tuesday evening at 6.30 o'clock, when the first game of the Peterboro Ladies' Softball League will be played at Central Park. Last year's champions, the C.G.E. Ladies will meet the team from the Otonabee Mills. There are a number of strong players lined up with the Otonabee team, and they are confident of taking a fall out of the champions, while the champs are just as confident that they can start the season right with a win.

On Wednesday evening, Thistles and Woollens, last year's runners-up, will play the second game of the League schedule. These teams are very evenly matched, and a hard struggle should result.

DOURO SOFTBALL.

HARRIS WINNER OF GOLF TITLE

Scottish Player in British Finals Found Luck in Third Attempt.

FRADGLEY WAS OFF.

WESTWARD HO, England, May 30.—The British amateur golf championship was won in sensational fashion Friday afternoon, when Robert Harris, of Dundee, Scotland, overwhelmed his opposing finalist, Kenneth Fradgley of Warren through the course of the entire play and wound up a steady exhibition of fine golf three and one to the good.

Fradgley played poorly and nervously, his strokes lacked confidence and in every way he revealed himself to be suffering badly from "stage fright." Harris, on the other hand, quickly settled down to a steady game and kept it up for the whole of the final encounter. Unprecedented in the history of the championship final was the fact that the end of the first 18 holes Harris was 9 up on his opponent. Fradgley was able to divide the honors on an occasional hole, but otherwise he was indifferent. There could be no doubt as to his being absolutely off his game.

This was the third time that Harris had reached the finals and for him the third time was the "lucky" one, although there appeared to be no element of luck in his game, unless it be the distinctly bad showing of Fradgley. Harris is a veteran golfer and a rugged, determined player.

The course today was flooded and a strong wind militated against accuracy in shooting.

DELORO TEAM IN QUINTE LEAGUE

W. R. Regan Managing the Miners This Year—Have Stiff Opposition.

MARMORA, May 29.—Deloro baseball team are about to commence the most strenuous season in their career. They have been admitted into the Bay of Quinte League, where they will strive for honors with such formidable teams as Picton, Napanee, Point Anne and Belleville. Mr. W. R. Regan, last year's captain, takes the management of the team this year. The choice of captain is to be decided within the next day or so. The team has a most energetic secretary-treasurer in the person of Mr. H. A. McNally. Practically all last year's players will be available so that a strong team should be put into the feild on all occasions. The team has secured smart new uniforms. Interest centres in their opening league game at Napanee on June 3.

Hundreds of thousands of women, every spring and fall, must face the drudgery of house-cleaning.

They know that heating stoves and pipe furnaces fill their homes with dirt, and smoke up the curtains and wall paper, and they want to get rid of these out-of-date methods.

The patented CaloriC Pipeless Furnace keeps the fuel, kindling and ashes in the basement—and thereby largely eliminates house-cleaning.

We sell the CaloriC on the basis of "Satisfaction or money back." A splendid time to get a CaloriC is just before you clean house. The next best time is just after you clean house so that your house may stay clean.

See us at once and learn why more than 125,000 users in Canada, Alaska and the United States prefer the CaloriC to any other method of heating.

The CaloriC costs less than ashes normally to heat some places. Saves ½ to ⅓ your fuel. Made and guaranteed by the largest manufacturer of warm air furnaces in the world.

DERBY WINNERS COUNTING GAINS

Manna's Victory Took Second Place in Popular Interest.

A WIDOW'S LUCK.

LONDON, May 30—Manna's easy victory in the Derby was sidetracked in the discussion of race followers for some of the caprices of Lady Luck as exemplified in the outcome of the various sweepstakes.

Most of the talk centred on the winnigs of James Carew the employe of a Liverpool shipping firm, who won first money in the Calcutta Sweepstakes. Although he had sold two quarter interests in his ticket for $10,000, he is today richer by about $180,000 net.

H. E. Morriss, owner of Manna, in addition to taking the Derby stakes at Epsom Downs, is credited by The Daily Mail with having the good fortune to share in the London Stock Exchange Sweepstakes, worth about $242,500. The winning ticket was held by Drummer Graves, an insurance manager ,and G. R. Bateson a clerk, but, according to The Mail, they parted with a half share to Mr. Morriss for £2,900, or, roughly, $14,000.

None of the other winnings was on such a scale as these two big sweeps, the next figures known being that of R. C. Parr, a member of the Royal Automobile Club, whose ticket brought him £3,000, while other members of the club drew prizes of £1,100 and £700.

There were two sweeps in the automobile club, Sir Charles Hyde drawing Manna in the second with a prize of £1,000.

Sweepstakes are illegal and have been frequent grounds for prosecutions. It is recalled that the Labor Government declared its intention last year of suppressing them and that later the Otley Conservative Club was successfully prosecuted for conducting an "illegal lottery."

In consequence of this movement the Stock Exchange people decided upon great secrecy this year, and entirely altered the form of their tickets, calling the sweep a "mutual subscription fund." The tickets made no mention of the horse race, and it was stated that the trustees of the fund were empowered to use the money for some undefined object.

The mystery as to this object was still a mystery today, and the public was left to guess whether the winners announced by the Daily Mail would keep the money or be obliged to "allocate" it elsewhere.

Apparently most of the winners in the various sweepstakes on the Derby were persons of moderate circumstances.

The latest big winning reported is that of a widow, Mrs. Anna Elliot, an assistant in a department store. She won the second prize in the Baltic Exchange Sweepstakes, worth £20,000.

Previously she had sold a half share on her ticket, which called for Manna, to a friend for an unnamed price. She had conveyed a quarter share to her fiance, and thus the couple will be able to set up housekeeping with £10,000 in their hope chest.

Donoghue Got £10,000

LONDON, May 30—The name of Steve Donoghue was on every tongue and the doughty jockey who won his sixth Derby, riding H. E. Morriss' Manna, was the hero of the hour. The race brought Donoghue not only fame but considerable cold cash, for it was reported in racing circles that Mr. Morriss had made him a present of about £10,000 sterling.

The attempt to broadcast the Derby from Epsom Downs by radio was a failure, owing to the rain and the bad state of the wire between the course and the transmitting station in London.

A WOUND IS AN OPEN DOOR

Absorbine Jr. enables you to shut the door quickly.

The skin is Nature's own protection against germs. When it is bruised, broken or cut, that protection is withdrawn. The door is open. As quickly as possible Nature closes it by forming what we call a scab and renders you comparatively safe against infection. But this scab sometimes takes days to form and until it has fully sealed the wound, even until the wound has thoroughly healed again you must furnish the required protection yourself.

A few drops of Absorbine Jr. in the water will give you an antiseptic wash that will kill all possibility of infection and help nature to heal the wound. As well as being a very powerful germicide, Absorbine Jr. will draw out the inflammation and bring instant relief.

Absorbine Jr. is antiseptic, germicide and liniment in one container—handy to keep always in the house; easy to carry around if you travel.

JUNIOR GAME ON TUESDAY NIGHT

Lakeviews Must Win to Tie With C.G.E. in League Standing.

A GOOD GAME.

On Tuesday evening, at 6 o'clock, the Lakeviews and, C.G.E. Juniors will play at James Stevenson Park. The Lakeviews are out for revenge for the defeat they received from the Electrians on Victoria Day, but the C.G.E. have no fear whatever of the LeBarr gang.

Last night the C.G.E. team travelled to Dufferin Park and defeated the Hillcrests 6 to 1. This victory leaves the Electricians on top of the league standing.

ORIOLES HAVE GOOD LEAD IN THEIR LOOP

It looks like another runaway race in the International League. At present Baltimore, winner for the last six years, is several games out in front and quite likely to hold to the dizzy pace it has set. Toronto and Buffalo are the only clubs apt to give the Orioles a battle, if it can even be called that.

KING EDWARD WON GOOD SCHOOL GAME

Defeated Central School 10-3 at South End School Grounds.

On Friday afternoon the baseball team of Central Public School journeyed to King Edward Public School where a pretty fast game took place with lots of support for both teams. Some real good baseball was payed by both teams, but when the last man was put out, King Edward walked off with the 10-3 game. The line-ups were:

Central—C., Delahey; p., Graham; 1b, Coleman; 2b, Baker; s.s. Weir; 3b, Nisbett; r.f., Mahood; c.f., Sage; l.f., Levine.

King Edward — C., Battle; p., Cripps; 1b Pugh; 2b, Austin; s.s., Solmes; 3b, Miller; r.f., Moffatt; c.f. Steers; l.f., Kearns.

GOOD BALL GAME.

Caughnawaga Defeated Indian River Tigers 13-9 at Norwood.

NORWOOD, May 30—Caughnawaga and Indian River Tigers played the second baseball game of the season on Saturday evening. Caughnawaga winning by a score of 13-9. The line-up for Caughnawaga team was as follows: P., Leo Gooley; c., Leo Herr; 1b, Joseph Heffernan; 2b, Gerald Heffernan; s.s., Harry Fraser; 3b, Leonard Christie; c.f., Frank Lonergan; l .f., Alphonsus Heffernan; r.f., Leo Herr.

AT THE ROYAL

Richard Dix has attained the heights—stardom. His first picture at the head of his own company is the Paramount production, "Manhattan," directed by R. H. Burnside from an adaptation of Jeffery Farnol's immensely popular novel, "The Definite Object."

In the picture Dix has the role of an active young New Yorker whose ancestors had left him more millions than he'll ever know what to do with. He is bored by the dull routine of the teas, dances and idle amusements of his set. More than anything else he craves adventure and the stodgy old island of Manhattan seems utterly unable to provide it. There's but one thing left to do and he does it—goes out in search of action, anything that promises excitement. His quest brings him to Hell's Kitchen section of the city and more thrills to the square foot than he ever dreamed were in store for him.

If it's pell-mell action and a real he-man story with unusual heart-appeal you're looking for, why don't trouble yourself to look further. Here it is—plus! Combine all the hair-raising scenes of all the screen thrillers you've ever seen, all the high spots of the funniest comedies you've ever enjoyed and there you have "Manhattan."

AL. PLUNKETT'S NEW SONG HITS

About the first question asked when anyone says "The Dumbells are coming back in a new show," is: "What Does Al. Plunkett Sing?"

To answer this question fully, as regards the Dumbells' latest success, "Oh, Yes!" which comes to the Grand on June 8 and 9, Al. opens the show with a tonguetwisted called "Since Ma's Gone Crazy Over Cross-Word Puzzles." Then he sings, "Do Shrimps Make Good Mothers?" and put it over with the famous smile and little chuckle that we all love so well. His next number must naturally be a "mother song," and this time it is "My Mother's Lullaby." The way Al. Plunkett puts over a "mother song" is probably the best reason there can be for anyone writing them.

Hits last number, which comes down close to the finale, is destined to prove a great seller in the music stores. The title is "The Worst Looking Men Get the Best Looking Girls."

"Oh, Yes" is just brimming over with tuneful melodies, interspersed with clever comedy and punctuated with spectacular and thrilling scenes.

AT THE CAPITOL

"MADAME SANS GENE" MOST MAGNIFICENT SWANSON FILM

Gloria Swanson's new Paramount picture "Madame Sans Gene," the story of a French laundress, who befriended Napoleon in the days of his poverty and was remembered by him in the days of prosperity and power, opens at the Capitol Theatre Monday.

It was while Napoleon was a young lieutenant of artillery that he first met Catherine Hubscher. She had a laundry in the Rue St. Anne in Paris, and there the young officer took his soiled clothes. Incidentally it was in this street during the recent war, that the American provost-marshal had his headquarters. Many an American soldier who went "A.W.O.L." spent several nights almost next door to the spot where Napoleon had his washing done.

Catherine was pretty and outspoken. She didn't know—and if she had known, probably would not have cared—that her impecunious customerer was one day to be the greatest figure in the world. Napoleon lived at the Hotel des Patriots, near her shop, and he owed her, as well as other tradespeople, a long score. When he went into the laundry one day, she was about to ask him for payment when she noticed that his shoes were worn so that his bare feet showed through. So she simply added the amount to the list and said nothing.

Napoleon, it is said, forgot the bill but he never forgot her. She married a young sergeant named Lefebvre, and many years later Catherine and her husband became the Duke and Duchess of Danzig, the former sergeant being made a marshal of France. Catherine never lost her habit of plain speaking and it is history that the tattered and unpaid laundry bill was once used by her to prevent France from committing a grave diplomatic blunder.

It makes an absorbing story, this chronicle of Napoleon and Madame Devil May Care.

Charles de Roche, popular Franco-American leading man, heads the cast appearing in support of the star. Emile Drain, of the Comedie Francaise, has the role of Napoleon. The other characters are all prominent on the French stage and screen.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.

In the early days of Christianity, Jesus and the resurrection was preached. According to the false theories that are promulgated in these days, the doctrine of the resurrection is not necessary, for false teachers say that man's destiny is fixed at death; and that man does not really die, but passes out into a place of endless torments or endless bliss, from which there is no release. It is folly to speak of resurrecting a man who is already alive. The Apostle Paul said if there was no resurrection, those who have passed away have "perished." The meaning of the word "perish" can be easily found in any reliable dictionary. It is the will of God that all men should be saved and come to a knowledge of the truth. Saved, from what? Why, certainly, from the penalty of sin, "Death." Jesus is the Savior of all men, saving from death, each and every one. Note, saved from death first, and then coming to a knowledge of the truth, after being saved or resurrected. In the the day of judgment or trial, all shall have a knowledge of the truth, and none shall perish finally by going down into the second death through lack of knowledge or opportunity necessary to obtain everlasting life.

BIBLE STUDENTS MAKE PRESENTATION

Departing Teacher Given Gift of Remembrance From Class.

On Tuesday evening, May 26th, the Co-Workers Bible Class of George Street Methodist Sunday School met at the home of Mrs. Strong, 537 Harvey Street, to spend a social time together. An interesting contest was arranged by Miss Brock which was much enjoyed. The main feature of the evening was the presentation of a solid leather hand bag to Mrs. Batstone who has been teaching the class for the past nine months. The address was read by Mrs. Strong, the president of the class, and the presentation made by Mrs. A. Allison. Taken completely by surprise, Mrs. Batstone made a suitable reply, stating her sorrow at leaving the class when she had gained so many friends and felt so much at home.

The class regrets very much the loss of Mrs. Batstone, but it is not possible for her to remain in this city any longer. She returns to Boston, Mass.

Dainty refreshments were served by the class. The evening was brought to a close by singing Blest Be the Tie That Binds.

THOUSANDS WORKLESS.

Mine Owners Cease All Industrial Construction—The Wage Standard High.

ESSEN, Germany, May 30.—(Canadian Press.)—Thousands of workers have been thrown out of employment by the decision of Bochum District mine owners to cease all further industrial construction. United industrial concerns of the occupied zone assert their inability to maintain the wage standard fixed in the new trades agreement, which is sixty to one hundred per cent. in excess of the customary wages.

FINANCIAL NEWS.

May Wheat Took Big Drop In Last Day of Trading

WINNIPEG, May 30. — Sinking precipitously throughout to-day's session wheat prices declined nine cents on an extreme dip. May slumping to $1.82 3-4. This is the last day of trading in May wheat, and the longs were caught on a congested market. With the United States markets closed and an acute lack of foreign demand, trading was extremely dull and the market apparently sinking under its own weight. New crop futures and October held relatively firm, tales there.

Mining Stocks Firm With Penny Issues Very Active

TORONTO, May 30. — Gold stocks were firm but not over-active on the standard mining exchange this morning. Hollinger holding at $14.80 and Dome at $14. Teck Hughes strengthened to $1.31 and Tough Oaks held firm at 27½. A number of the penny issues came into prominence, twenty-two thousand shares of Baldwin changing hands at 3 to 3-4; eighteen thousand shares of Gold Reef sold at 1 3-8 to 1 1-2; Argonaut sold down to 25.

Trading Was Light With B. C. Fish On Leading Market

TORONTO, May 30. — B. C. Fishing set the pace on the Toronto stock exchange this morning, 830 shares changing hands and the price advanced from 40 to 41½ during the day. Brazilian weakened fractionally to 52 3-4 under light trading and Bell Telephone was also off slightly. Paper stocks were quite. City Dairy showed a gain of ½ a point for the day. Tradings was light in balance of list.

Double houses eight rooms each N.E. corner Charlotte and Rubidge, 104 feet on Charlotte, 84 feet on Rubidge; lane in rear. Houses are solid brick, 14 to 18 inch walls; copper and shingle roofs; new a few years ago. Hardwood floors throughout most of one house. It would cost at least $15,000 to reproduce these houses now.
Houses may be bought separately. Back part of lot, about 40 feet on Charlotte and 84 feet deep may be bought separately for business. Liberal mortgage to responsible parties.
I will be in Peterboro about the first week of June.
Any offers may be addressed to me at Campbellford.

QUEBEC QUAKE ON SATURDAY WAS THIRTEENTH OF SERIES RECORDED SINCE JULY 14, 1924, ON THE COAST

Strongest Tremor Was Felt on Feb. 28—Nine in Last Three Months.

BOSTON REPORT.

Engineers Complete Comparison With Figures of Dominion Observatory.

BOSTON, June 1. — (Canadian Press).—The Engineering Economic Foundation, which is engaged in organizing knowledge of earthquake hazards, when asked yesterday for a statement on the earthquake shock reported Saturday from Quebec, said:

"The news of the 'quake tremor of Saturday is of particular interest to the Foundation at this time as it has only this week been checking its figures with figures obtained by the Dominion Observatory at Ottawa.

"The statement shown to the Foundation says, 'The series began on February 28, when 'quakes rocked the eastern section of the continent.' The fact is that the tremor of May 30 is the thirteenth tremor of a series which began July 14, 1924, and has continued up to the present time. Four tremors felt by men in the north-eastern section of Canada and the United States occurred in seven and one-half months to February 28, the date of the strongest 'quake of this series. Nine tremors felt by men have occurred in three months since February 28.

Every Two Weeks.

"The average time between shocks in the first period was approximately two months. The average time between shocks in the second period was approximately two weeks, except for the group of tremors in late April. Sometime ago in publishing a statement of the results of study of each of these tremors which had then occurred, the Foundation said, 'This series of earthquake tremors in number, in intensity, in diversification of the zones of origin, and in area affected by the shock, is greater than the inhabitated area of the north-east part of the continent has known since the earth spasm of 1755, the year of the great Boston 'quake.'

"Since that statement was made five tremors have been added to the list. Each new tremor should, however, simply drive home the comforting fact that while we cannot prevent earthquake shocks, we do know to-day that 75 per cent. of the loss and suffering from earthquakes can be prevented."

Dr. Hollis Godfrey, chairman of the Foundation, who made public the statement returned yesterday from Ottawa, where he spent last week comparing data at the observatory.

LOYALTY TO THRONE SHOWN BY GRANT

Italian Chamber Voted $80,000 Honorarium For Crown Prince.

ROME, June 1. — (Canadian Press).—The Italian Chamber of Deputies yesterday voted the annual 2,000,000 lire honorarium for Crown Prince Humbert in a wild demonstration of loyalty to the House of Savoy, precipitated by the Communist deputy, Bendini, who declared that such an outlay of money for the heir to the Throne was "scandalous." (Two million lire is about $80,000 at present exchange). The whole Chamber arose immediately in protest against the Communist's statement. Shouts of "Viva" for the King drowned Bendini's voice while the packed galleries joined in hurling epithets at him.

DOCTORS IN ENGLAND.

Number of Canadians Among Those Touring English Hospitals.

LONDON, June. 1. (C.P.)—A large party of doctors, including a number of Canadians members of the interstate post graduate assembly's tour, arrived yesterday on the chartered steamers Ansonia and Doric, for a study of the methods used in the clinics and hospitals of England.

Couple Married In Air By Minister In Second Plane

DETROIT, Mich., June 1—With a minister riding in another plane shouting the wedding ceremony through a megaphone, Howard N. Potter, a student aviator, and Gladys Mae Baxter, were married 3,000 feet above the ground Saturday.

Potter and his bride arose in one plane, piloted by Frank Overcashier. The Rev. H. H. Ford, pastor of the Memorial Baptist Church of Highland Park, was a passenger in the other plane.

When 3,000 feet high, the engines were stopped, the planes brought close together and the ceremony was shouted through the air.

E. V. Nichols and Ruth Baxter, best man and maid of honor, respectively, remained on the ground. They were to have been in the air in a third plane but their pilot, Jack Burns, was fatally injured yesterday when his plane fell while final tests were being made for the wedding.

FOUR INJURED IN AUTO SMASH

Racing Cars on Provincial Highway Smashed Another Car.

ONE MAN ARRESTED.

CHATHAM, June 1 (Canadian Press).—Two women, a six-year-old girl, and a man are in St. Joseph's Hospital seriously injured as the result of an auto smash which occurred on the provincial highway about a mile west of Chatham at 8.30 last night. The injured are: Mrs. Harry Rose, Miss Stella Dennomey, Rayburn Derand and Clayton Orturne, the six-year-old daughter of Harry Rose's sister, all of Windsor. The Windsor party when driving Westward was met by two autos that apparently were racing. Harry Rose, driving the Windsor car, turned out as near the ditch as he could, but not far enough to escape and the two approaching cars piled into him and all three cars were smashed. B. Mann of Chatham was the driver of one eastbound car, and A. Best of the other.

Mann was arrested and is now in jail, and will face a charge of driving recklessly while intoxicated.

Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave Says Report Incorrect

To the Editor of the Examiner:
Peterborough—

Dear Sir: I wish to correct a report which appeared in Saturday's Examiner, copied from a Toronto paper, of an address I gave in Toronto on Thursday evening of last week. It is entirely wrong in many respects. I never said Divine healing is a reality." I do not use the term "Divine Healing" but "Spiritual Healing," which is quite a different thing. I discussed the question as to its possibilities and difficulties generally. I made no specific claim except for the power of faith in all life, which is quite consistent even with modern science. I never said a child died for want of faith on the part of anyone except myself, and pointed out that such sad experiences were entirely beyond us and that we must leave them in God's hands.

Please give this correction a place of prominence, and oblige.

Yours truly,
R. C. BLAGRAVE.

JELLICOE JOINS BRITISH LEGION

Earl Haig Emphasizes Opportunity of Veterans in Promoting Good Will.

BOND OF EMPIRE.

LONDON, June 1. — (Canadian Press).—In his presidential address at the opening of the annual conference of the British Legion in Queen's Hall Saturday, Field Marshal Earl Haig welcomed Viscount Jellicoe, who was present, as a valuable reinforcement to the Legion. He regretted that a resolution which was passed at the conference of the Inter-Allied Federation of Ex-Service men in September last, urging the collaboration of the Allied ex-servicemen's organization with former enemy organizations, had not met with the whole-hearted support of the Allies. He emphasized the Legion's enormous power for doing good by convincing the Allies that the only way to secure the peace of the world was by agreement, co-operation and mutual good-will, and also by binding the Empire together by a chain of mutual good-will and understanding.

Earl Haig mentioned that there had been an increase of 103 branches in the Legion which was now that largest non-party organization in the country.

Amid great cheering, Prince Arthur of Connaught presented Earl Haig with the Legion's Royal Charter.

Viscount Jellicoe stated that he would devote himself to helping that class of immigrant who was willing to work on the land. It was a class for which there was every opportunity in Australia and New Zealand.

BOILING OIL USED IN ALLEGED MURDER

Woman of 38 Said to Have Admitted Slaying Her Husband.

TRENTON, N. J., June 1.—(Canadian Press.)—Following the death of her husband from burns, Mrs. Elizabeth Storaci, 38, mother of eight children, was arrested on a charge of murder last night.

According to the police, Mrs. Storaci admitted that she poured boiling olive oil and water over him as he lay in bed.

Takes Stars and Stripes Off Tourist's Automobile

TORONTO, June 1.—(Canadian Press).—In the opinion of S. L. Squire, Deputy Minister of Highways, the action of a Toronto policeman in taking a United States flag off an automobile on Saturday in Toronto, will not have any influence on United States tourists coming to Canada. "I don't think the incident will be taken seriously at all," said Mr. Squire. "Fair-minded persons will not regard it as other than the act of an over-zealous person and will remember that it was only one flag, on one automobile."

The complaint was made Saturday afternoon to the Inspector of Police by H. Rider, of Cleveland, Ohio, of the conduct of the traffic officer on duty at King and Young Streets, who snatched an American flag from the front of an automobile.

AN EPOCHAL DAY

This is an epochal day. There has never been one like it in Peterborough before.

This is the day that sees the opening of the Made-in-Peterborough Exhibition—a splendid concerted effort of the manufacturers to show the greatness of the industrial life of the city.

For years people have been viewing the gloomy picture of a depressed industrial situation. The picture has been cleaned and renovated, bringing out its true colors and significance. The exhibits at the Armouries bid citizens of Peterborough to deliberately turn their attention away from disagreeable things, from depression and slackness, and brooding failure, and contemplate that which is bright with achievement sunny with promise, and beautiful as an example of the handiwork of our friends, and ourselves.

To enable you to better understand the production of the myriad things on exhibition this week, The Examiner presents in this issue a special section devoted to manufacturing. Examiner reporters visited and examined every factory in the city to tell of the processes that go on there.

So not only is this day unique, but this edition of The Examiner is extraordinary, for through it you can get—and can convey to your friends in other places—an X-ray view of the backbone of the city, its industries.

SUDDEN DEATH TAKES CITY'S OUTSTANDING BUSINESS MEN

W. E. Conway, Manager of Grafton Store, Died Yesterday.

PROMINENT MASON.

Dr. F. L. Robinson, Veterinary Surgeon, Passed Away on Saturday.

One of the most highly respected citizens of Peterborough, William E. Conway manager of the Peterborough store of the Grafton Company, died suddenly at his home 396 Downie street yesterday morning, at 2.00 o'clock. Mr. Conway had been in business all day Saturday, and had gone home in the evening feeling as well as ever. During the night he was taken suddeny ill and passed quickly away.

There remain to mourn his loss, his wife, two daughter, Mrs. G. M. Farrow, of Toronto, and Miss Grace Conway of the Red Cross Hospital, Dryden, Ontario, three sons, Ames C. of Toronto, Lorne E., and J. Harold of Peterborough, two sisters, Mrs. John Ross of Dundas, and Mrs. William McKay of Philadelphia, and three brothers, James H., of Windsor, R. F. of Dundas and H. L., manager of the Brantford store of the Grafton Company.

Mr. Conway was 57 years of age and had been in the employ of the Company since September 1883. In June, 1892, he was appointed manager of the Peterborough branch, then a very small store. Under his careful management, the business has grown and it is now one of the leading clothing stores in the city. Several extensions have been made and recently another addition, to be built at the back of the present store, was authorized by the head office, and Mr. Conway was working on the plans at the time of his death.

Mr. Conway was a past master of Peterborough Masonic Lodge, holding the office of Worshipful Master in 1899. A pathetic feature of his sudden call was that tonight he was to confer the third degree of the order upon his son, Lorne, at a combined meeting of Peterborough and Royal Arthur Lodges. This gathering has been postponed and the regular meeting of Royal Arthur Lodge will be adjourned immediately upon the opening of the lodge.

The funeral service will be held under Masonic auspices at the family residence, 396 Downey street, on Wednesday afternoon at 2.00 o'clock. The service will be conducted by Rev. Archdeacon J. C. Davidson and interrment will be made in Little Lake cemetery.

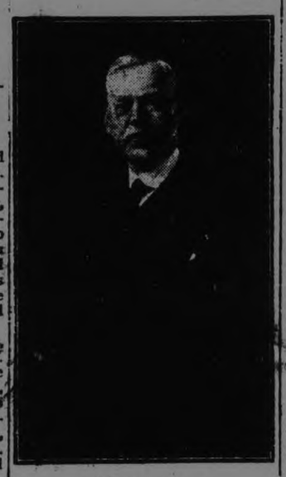
DR. F. L. ROBINSON

The funeral of the late Dr. F. L. Robinson, V.S., took place this afternoon from the family residence, 225 Charlotte Street, to Little Lake Cemetery. The service was conducted by Rev. J. W. Gordon, of St. Andrew's Church, of which Dr. Robinson was a member for many years. The pall-bearers were six fellow members of Peterborough Lodge, 111, I.O.O.F. A few years ago Dr. Robinson was presented with a veteran's jewel on the occasion of the completion of his twenty-fifth year as a member of the order.

Fred L. Robinson was born in 1865 in Peterborough and continued to reside here all his life. He graduated from the Ontario Veterinary College when a young man and started up in the livery business and veterinary profession in the city immediately after. He occupied the property built by his step-father, the late Tobias Fitzgerald, at the corner of Aylmer and Charlotte streets and also maintained stables across the road.

He is survived by his wife formerly Miss Etta Madill. One sister, Mrs. J. G. Howarth, died about ten years ago. He was a highly respected citizen of Peterboro, and his sudden death was a great shock to his many friends. A large funeral cortege testified to the esteem in which he was held.

DIED YESTERDAY.



W. E. CONWAY,
William E. Conway, for 33 Years Manager of Grafton Peterboro Store, who died Suddenly Sunday morning.

MYSTERY DEATH OF BON VIVANT

Wealthy Broker Found Dead in Partly Burned Drawing Room.

POLICE BUSY.

CHICAGO, June 1 (Canadian Press).—Police enquiry was under way today in the mysterious death of D. R. Parsons, wealthy broker and bon vivant, who was found burned to death in his apartment here early yesterday following a fire, the origin of which has not been explained. Firemen found Parson's body partly clothed in the burned drawing room. In the apartment at the time was Mrs. Parsons and James King, a policeman, who said he had accompanied the broker home several hours previously. The Japanese servant said he had been awakened early and asked to prepare breakfast for Parsons and the policeman. He had returned to bed leaving Parsons and his guest in the living room.

MEIGHEN'S PROTECTIVE TARIFF MOTION WILL BE DEBATED IN HOUSE ON TUESDAY

Calls For Upward Revision of Duties on Natural Products and Manufactured Goods—Also Oppose Empire Preference.

OTTAWA, June 1 (By Canadian Press) — The House of Commons will spend Tuesday in debate on the subject of high protective tariff. Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the Opposition, will, by special arrangement with the government, move a resolution which has been standing in his name on the order paper since the beginning of the session. The resolution states that in the opinion of the House there should be "an immediate revision of the Canadian tariff on a definitely and consistently protective basis."

It states that such revision should apply to natural products and manufactured goods, that steps should be taken to conserve for Canadian development resources of material and power, and that no empire preference should be given at the expense of the Canadian worker.

Mr. Meighen will bring the matter before the House by moving the resolution on a motion to go into committee of supply. He will be followed by other speakers from the Conservative party, and although the debate will probably not be carried to a division it will likely last throughout the afternoon and evening sittings. It is stated that certain Liberal members may contest the right of the leader of the opposition to bring his resolution before the house for debate in this manner by raising a point of order.

Wheat Growing Evenly In Saskatchewan Districts

REGINA, Sask., June 1. — (Canadian Press).—With the exception of a few isolated areas, wheat is growing well and evenly in all districts of Saskatchewan, according to a crop report issued Saturday by the Saskatchewan Co-operative Elevator Company. Only slight damage from frost and drifting is reported.

Showers of good heavy rains have fallen at practically all points, and a good root system has developed almost everywhere. Cutworms have appeared, but the report indicates the damage from that source is light.

HAIR CUT COSTS 75 CENTS NOW

Chicago Barbers Are Asking 35 Cents For a Shave.

EFFECTIVE TO-DAY.

CHICAGO, June 1. (Special.) — Thirty-five cent shaves and 75c hair cuts became a reality here this morning when the new price schedule adopted a few weeks ago went into effect.

The schedule calls for a charge of 75c for a hair cut every day except Saturday and 85c on that day.

A combination haircut and shave on every day except Saturday will cost $1.00 and $1.20 on Saturdays.

WEATHER

Yesterday the temperature rose to 79 degrees in the shade, and last night the lowest it got was 63 degrees. Both figures are the highest up to the present time. Rainfall last night .05 of an inch. June is usually considered the most pleasant month of the year. Nature is now at its best. Everything appears green and fresh, with none of the browned and burned and insect-mutilated appearance of later months. It is also the month of roses, of wedding bells and bridal parties, when "two hearts with but a single thought, are made to beat as one." Here's wishing that every happy couple may have their fondest anticipations more than realized.—W. P.

Ratepayers' Meeting in Smiths Falls Demands Resignation of Principal.

MET ON SATURDAY.

SMITHS FALLS, Ont., June 1.—(Canadian Press).—At a ratepayers meeting called by Mayor Dr. I. A. Anderson here on Saturday, resolutions were passed unanimously calling for the immediate resignation of Mr. G. E. Evans, principal of the Collegiate Institute, who was the centre of the recent students' strike, when the students in a body walked out demanding his dismissal. The ratepayers' meeting also asked for the reinstatement of three teachers, C. S. Allin, Miss M. Burns and Miss M. Ellis, in addition to the four already reinstated by the Board as the result of the first students' strike.

At the meeting was read a letter from School Inspector G. F. Rogers, Brockville, denying in toto, to Miss Ruby Hubell, that he had made any report to the Smith Falls Board of Education, charging inefficiency on the part of any teacher of the Institute. This was stated to be the case at a meeting of the Board when the seven teachers were first given notice, causing the students' strikes.

The pupils declare they will not return to school as long as Principal Evans remains in office, while the Board of Education has announced that it will not change its decision that the principal must stay. The principal has already been re-engaged for the coming school year.

THREE HURT IN CAR COLLISION

Radial Car and Automobile Came Together North of Toronto.

OTHERS BRUISED.

TORONTO, June 1 (Canadian Press.—Three women were seriously injured and four other persons, all Toronto residents, were badly bruised and shaken up when a radial car on the Metropolitan division of the Hydro-Electric Radials crashed into a large touring automobile, owned and driven by Thomas Robinson, aged 50, just north of Toronto last night.

The injured are: Thomas Robinson, aged 50; Mrs. Thomas Robinson, aged 45; Miss Marion Robinson, aged 18; Master Willie Robinson, aged 10; Harry Buckner, aged 22; Mrs. Harry Buckner, aged 20; George Buckner, aged 25.

LABOR TRIUMPH IN NEW SOUTH WALES' ELECTION

May Have Majority Over All Other Parties When Final Returns Are In.

WOMAN ELECTED.

Sir George Fuller's Cabinet Returned— Used Preference System of Voting.

SYDNEY, New South Wales, June 1. — (Canadian Press Cable, via Reuter's).—Labor was victorious in the New South Wales election on Saturday, and when all the votes have been counted it probably will have a bare majority over all other parties. So far in the count the Labor group has made a gain of six seats. All the members of Sir George Fuller's Cabinet were returned, and Miss Preston, Stanley, appears to be the first woman elected to the Legislature of New South Wales.

The preference system of voting was used in the election, and many absent votes have yet to be counted. Present indications are as follows:

Labor	43
Nationalists	31
Progressives	8
Independents	2
Doubtful	6
Total	90

The Legislative Assembly consists of 90 members, representing 24 electoral districts.

CONSULAR AGENCY HAS BEEN CLOSED

Mr. W. McKee Bingham Thanked For His Service Here.

Peterborough is no longer to have an American Consular agency. Mr. W. McKee Bingham, who has been consular agent here for some time, resigned from the position, and in accepting his resignation, the United States' Department of State expressed appreciation of his services and thanked him for the manner in which his duties had been performed. The Department also stated that it had been decided to close the local agency.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

What is Amundsen's Fate in Stern Cold of North

There is a cold goddess who is hidden among the eternal snows of the polar regions, and for every man who returns from her domain another must remain there forever.

Raold Amundsen is somewhere up in the white emptiness with his airplane.

Will he come back from his trip to the North Pole? Or will he add his name to the long list of those who sought the goddess of eternal winter and met the specter of death?

Recalls Scott's Death.

Amundsen's adventure recalls that of Captain Robert F. Scott, whose tragic adventure was so closely bound up with Amundsen's discovery of the South Pole.

Scott reached the Pole, by dog sledges, just five weeks after Amundsen did, in 1912. He photographed Amundsen's cairn and flag and started back.

The antarctic winter struck with unleashed fury. Food and fuel gave out. Scott and his men plodded on with frozen feet. Then a blizzard made progress impossible.

They were only 11 miles from a supply depot, but they could not continue. Months later their frozen bodies were found near a long-dead camp-fire.

Balloon Disappears.

Others, too, found an unseen death in the polar lands.

Strangely like Amundsen's adventure was that of a Swedish aeronaut, S. A. Andree, who in 1897, sailed north from Spitzbergen in a balloon.

The balloon is still up there, somewhere, its flabby envelope encased in ice and its occupant eternally buried in the white, unbroken silence.

Dies of Disease.

Sir Ernest Shackleton was another. After a life time of exploration in the ice fields, he died of disease on his ship while at sea near the antarctic continent in 1922.

Sir John Franklin was still another.

In 1845 he sailed from England with two ships, the Erebus and the Terror, to explore north of Greenland. His ship was sighted in Baffin Bay months later by a whaler, and then the cold arctic silence settled down.

Relief expeditions were sent out from America and England. It was in 1859, however, before the secret was solved. Franklin had died after his ships became locked in ice. His men sought to escape over land, and all perished.

Another Victim

Now the north has beckened again. Amundsen, who planted his flag at the south pole, has gone to the top of the world.

Will he come back? Will he add another chapter to the thrilling stories of narrow escapes from the arctic's clutches

Or will he be just one more to fall a victim to the white goddess of the north, who reigns where there is no color but white and where icy gales howl through the darkness of an everlasting winter?

LARGE FAMILIES MENACE WELFARE

Bishop of Birmingham Says Civilization Seriously Weighted By Reproduction.

BRIGHTON, Eng., June 1. — (Canadian Press.)— "Human welfare is now menaced by human fecundity," declared Bishop Barnes, of Birmingham in a sermon last evening before the delegates attending the health congress here. The Bishop suggested that the crowded state of Europe was probably the main underlying cause for the great war and that the catastrophe would recur "unless that altruism which limits the increase of the population can be made to prevail."

Large families are a hindrance to social progress, he asserted, and "civilization is dangerously weighted by reproduction that may submerge it."

"BRINGING UP FATHER" — Geo. McManus

OFF THE HIGHWAY ON TO THE BYWAY

Touring Motorist Will Enjoy Trip by Avoiding Heavy Traffic.

Motorists who will get most joy out of touring this summer will leave the highways for the byways.

There are two outstanding reasons for this.

One is the congestion of traffic that is expected on the main roads this year.

The other is the unmarred beauty of the country that is revealed to the motorist on the side road.

Out of the cities, like bees from their hives, automobiles will scatter for short trips and long, going somewhere in particular or anywhere at all—practically all of them taking the traveled paths for speed and directness.

But these will encounter traffic tangles even on the high roads. There will be more road hogs, more speeders, more reckless drivers, more honking and confusion this year than ever, for there are many more cars with which to contend.

May Be Speedier.

Even if you have a set destination and want to make it in a hurry, taking the highway this year may slow you up more than would the side roads.

Of course, rainy weather should make you wary of attempting dirt roads, or even the semi-improved roads.

But many motorists keep off even the main highways in such weather.

It is during the dry days, when the sun is out and nature offers its best to view, that touring along the unfrequented roads affords keener joy. Then the motorist will avoid the unpleasantness of the congested highway and gain the full benefit of an unmarred countryside—unmarred by large billboards, by hot-dog stands, or by other unwelcome signs of modern civilization.

Besides the original beauty of the scenery, the side road offers still more advantages. Dirt pavement traveling is much easier than riding on improved roads. The tires seem to sink into the soft earth and roll along with a pleasant and comforting feeling.

Occasionally you can stop at a country house and get a glass of real milk or some fruit at prices and with the service that the modernized stands along the main roads fail to supply.

Then there's the thrill of seeing new landscapes and of enjoying nature as it was intended to be enjoyed.

There are sign posts on the byways, although not as modern and as frequent. But there are enough of them to furnish the stranger with information that will get him to his destination.

Special Care.

For the byway traveler there are a few warnings and some handy advice.

The warnings may be included under one heading: Care. That refers especially to insufficiently marked railroad crossings.

The advice may also be confined to one word: Preparation.

For country driving needs more preparation than city or main road touring. There are no gasoline stations along the byways. And no auto service stations. Houses are far apart, and more than likely the farmer and his help is busy in the fields, or out touring too.

So the tourist who plans to stay off the highways should see that his gasoline tank is full, that his oil supply is sufficient and that there is plenty of water in the cooling system. He should prepare especially for any kind of emergency. That means a complete kit of tools and accessories.

Extra Accessories.

Of course, every motorist should see that his tool chest is complete, so that he may be prepared for any emergency, whether he travel through city or country. But this is especially important in country driving.

Extra gasoline and oil should be taken for long trips, also a spare tire or two, and such additional accessories as a stout tow-rope, heavy chains to help get you out of a rut and perhaps extra spark plugs, fan belt, hose connections and other such parts that my easily go out of order.

Those who enjoy roughing it, will find countryside camping to their liking. Here everything is left to the ingenuity of the tourist, from pitching to breaking camp.

All of the conveniences of home may be found in some of the municipal camping sites along the highways. But this is just what many tourists want to escape.

So they take along camping equipment, tent, stove, utensils, canned foods, sleeping essentials, and enjoy themselves for a few days in a secluded spot away from all signs of civilization. They must take the byways for this.

STRANGER THAN FICTION

INTERPOLATED TRAGEDY.

By M. B. LEVICK.

There was a hint of the old glitter of Vienna in the crowd that filled the Burg Theatre. To the lean man in the topmost gallery, however, it was only a reflection—a reminder of the gayety which was the tradition of centuries. He told himself this brilliance tonight was only a paste diamond in a ragged shirtfront, and at the image of a shirtfront he thought of lean ribs underneath. The brightness here now was like the brightness in a feverish eye.

He scanned the house slowly, row by row, as far as he could see from his place in the heights, but the figures he sought had vanished as utterly in the war years as those laced figures who danced gavottes in Mozart's day. A few of them, perhaps, were about him, disguised in threadbare coats as gallery gods. But down below and in the loges and the boxes there were folk of another sort—outlanders or profiteers, thick-fingered men with garish women. If you wanted to see fat folk you must look there, in the boxes.

The lean man watched a group in a lower box at the right. The box was a recess, but he could look down almost directly into it. For a moment he amused himself by trying to place the occupants. They were not Viennese; even at this distance he could make out that much at first glance. From the Balkans, perhaps. From somewhere. In the shadows at the rear of the box sat a man and woman; a youngish pair, one would say. Closer to the front was another couple, more middle aged. The man sat in a corner, partly shielded by the hangings. He had an air of importance. As he looked over the audience there was alertness in the poise of his head. The woman, his wife, was against the railing. Between them sat a fifth

WAR LORD IN OTHER ROLE.

Here is General Paul von Hindenburg, newly-elected president of Germany, in a new role for him. The picture, taken the day after his election, shows him with his three grandchildren.

Of those in the box, it was this fifth one that people looked at oftenest. A young woman with bobbed hair. One would say she had charm, a personality at any rate. The pallor of her face gave intensity to the nervous smile which she thrust now at the woman and now at the man. She chattered without cease, and when she put her head forward in some sally her movement was like that of a greedy bird pecking at food. She would laugh quickly. Her staccato laugh was lost in the murmur of the audience.

The hubbub rose faintly to the man in the gallery, and as he looked down on bobbing heads and craning necks he laughed at Ibsen for insisting that there be no orchestra for his plays, so the audience might give closer attention to their message.

The bill tonight was "Peer Gynt." The man upstairs contrasted gallery and boxes a trifle rancorously. To the boxes the play and the star were an occasion for display, he said; the piece itself was to them a ballet with sphinxes and desert dancers. But for himself, Ibsen's fable would be something more, a hint of explanation of life. At least it would set one speculating on the meaning of things, this story of the man who became rich trafficking in slaves and idols. Was Peer Gynt himself like poor Austria, waiting for the button molder at the last crossroad, who would take him and melt him down again? Or was there some ultimate solace, some Solveig who at the end would sing "I will cradle thee, I will watch thee"?

Thus the thoughts of the gallery god trailed off and he forgot the group in the box, with the bobbed-hair girl, and at the rise of the curtain he sighed with satisfaction. After all, it was worth dining on crusts if one could come again to Vienna's greatest theatre, look once more on the famous model stage, even if one looked from the clouds and saw the actors very far and very small and foreshortened, showing the tops of their heads.

At the end of the act he asked himself if Vienna were Peer Gynt or if those who had conquered Vienna were the dealers in idols. His glance turned again, without his willing it, to the girl in the box. She seemed more tense; her smile was more a grimace and he fancied she was even paler. Perhaps it was the play, working some emotional effect in her.

Another act gone, he looked again. She was leaning forward, her hand clutching the rail. She was laughing, but her hand seemed to be clutching tight and her arm was stiffened. The middle-aged man leaned forward a little and while he chatted his eye moved around the house incessantly, passing a moment in this direction and that.

Perhaps the play had worked an emotional effect on all the rest. The was a hint of tension in the quick silence that fell as the curtain rose on the scene of the madhouse in Cairo. Now the mad director draws Peer into a corner and whispers to him: "The Absolute Reason departed this life at 11 last night." Slowly the stage fills with lunatics, grinning and hopping and wailing. The mad director dogs Peer Gynt and together they speak with King Apis, who carries a mummy upon his back. The minister Hussein accosts Peer: "They The minister Hussein accosts Peer: "They take me for a blotter and I am a pen." Peer tears his hair. * * *The man in the gallery looks at the box. The girl has moved forward, half turning. * * * King Apis prepares to hang himself. Hussein groans as he cuts his throat. In the darkness the audience shivers.

A shot. The lunatics start but the audience remains tense and motionless.

A man in the gallery, looking down in the box, sees the bobbed girl at the back of it. She has risen; a pistol is in her hand. Five times more she shoots. The audience watches the stage, but the middle-aged man in the box slides to the floor, the couple in back fall in one heap, the older woman in front leans over the edge o the box. She shrieks. There is blood on her face. Under the box men and women start up, but some among them quiet the others. They sit down again. In the shadowy box men are carrying out limp figures. The girl with the pistol is led out.

But the play continues.

Anna Karlinciu, 26, described as beautiful and reputed to be a Bulgarian secret agent, killed Todor Panizza, Macedonian leader, in a box at the Burg Theatre, Vienna, recently. She had become friends with him and his wife and invited both to the theatre, with the man's sister and brother-in-law. Mme. Karlinciu told the police Panizza was so closely guarded no attempt on his life could be successful on the streets. Her shots wounded all the others in the box. Panizza, who carried two pistols, was the successor in leadership of four men assassinated in a year. The shots that killed him were not heard by the audience or were taken for a part of the play, which continued.

OLD LANDMARK OFTEN PASSED

Bethany Church, Near Hastings, Was Pioneer Methodist Church in District.

NOW IN RUINS.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 1.—Few travellers on the Hastings road, as they take the turn to the latter village five miles out from Campbellford, realize that they are passing one of the historic landmarks of Northumberland county. At that turn, which is known as Bethany Corners, there is a vacant lot, planted to maple trees and showing the stone foundations of former buildings. One of these buildings was the old Bethany church, one of the first Methodist places of worship ever erected in this district and the other was a large shed which sheltered the horses of the members.

One of the most famous preachers who ever held the pastorate of this church was the father of Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals in the Dominion Cabinet; and whose father was connected by marriage with the Stephenson family of Hastings. The pastor was transferred to Egansville in Renfrew county, where his distinguished son was born a short time afterward.

For lack of supporters the church was abandoned some years ago and the buildings were sold to T. J. Horkins of Campbellford, who dismantled them, moving the bricks and other material to this town, where they were used in local structures. The corner stone contained a copy of a Toronto paper and specimens of the coins current at the time the church was put up, but these articles of historic interest have been lost sight of.

Situated in a corner of the lot under the spreading maple trees, there is a lonely grave, the only one in what was at one time designed for a cemetery. A small headstone carries the inscription:

"In memory of Ellenor Louisa, infant daughter of John and Ann Cunningham, who died May 12, 1878, aged three months

"Beneath this stone in sweet repose,
Is laid a mother's dearest pride;
A flower that scarce had waked to life,
And beauty 'ere it died."

BEAVERS HALTING WORK OF MINERS

Dam Creek and Back Water Into Workings—Persist in Labor.

GOLDEN, B.C., June 1 (Canadian Press).—So thick and industrious have beavers become in the Windermere Valley, that they are seriously interefering with mining operations, according to H. E. Perlain, of Wilmer, who is developing claims on Horse Thief Creek.

The beavers, by damming the creek, caused water to back up into the mine and it was some time before the reason was discovered. After a search the mine workers located a beaver dam and blew it up, but found that the dam they had destroyed had been reconstructed and reinforced in weak spots by the busy animals within twenty-four hours. Furthermore, some sixty saplings, cut into usable lengths ,were found ready for further work on the dam.

Officials of the British Columbia Game Board, in an effort to overcome the difficulty, have suggested that the flume idea, evolved by the Biological Survey of the United States, be tried out on the creek. This is the cutting of a flume through the beaver dam so that the water will not rise above a certain point, on the theory that Mr. Beaver pays so much attention to his work that he never gives a glance upward Though persistent as well as industrious, there is a limit to a beaver's patience and, finding that his dam does not succeed in holding the water back, he and his crew shift to some other place and begin homemaking all over again.

Three years ago the Game Board closed the season for trapping beaver south of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and they have multiplied so rapidly that they are becoming a nuisance.

DEATH TIME OF REJOICING TO SOME INDIANS

Big Feast and General Drunkenness Marked Funeral of Brave.

BURIED VALUABLES.

Bodies Were Consigned to Caves With All Earthly Possessions.

By N. REYNOLDS PACKARD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

BUENOS AIRES, June 1 (United Press)—With the recent unearthing of Indian mummies in Peru further light has been thrown upon a civilization as ancient and as curious as the famous dynasty of King Tut-Ank-Amen in Egypt. Archeologists believe that these mummies are the remains of aborigines of South America laid to rest many hundreds of years ago.

Researches made by eminent scholars show that when one of the tribe of the aboriginal Indians died he was clad in his best garments and after a gorgeous festival was taken to a cave and buried. Never more than twenty-four hours elapsed between the death and the burial. In those days the Indians did not regard a funeral as a time for mourning and tears. They were so confident in their belief in an after-life of eternal happiness that they celebrated the death of their friends with great rejoicing and hilarity. Generally the entire tribe would become drunk on corn whiskey.

That these people had material conceptions of spirits is evidenced by the various things buried with the body. They always included jugs of liquor and great bowls of spiced foods for the deceased. Little in the line of valuables were willed to another person, as practically all of the precious possessions were entombed with the body.

Totems and numerous curios have also been unearthed and prove that the ancient Indians believed in a multiplicity of gods. Never was an important act executed without first the deity presiding over that particular transaction had been propitiated by some sort of sacrifice.

The countries in South America where mummies centuries old have been found are Peru, Chile, Bolivia and certain parts of the Argentine in the northern extremity. The sections famous for their mummies are of late much besieged by tourists who are anxious to carry a souvenir back home. But as a rule the mummies are only obtained with great difficulty, having been buried deep into caves that have since been sealed by rains and heavy growths of vegetation.

All of the mummies are found in the same posture. The legs are doubled so that the knees press tightly against the chest and the arms are encircled tightly about the legs, similar to the embryonic position. Though this posture is supposed to have a religious significance, scientists as yet have not agreed to a satisfactory explanation.

There is a tremendous difference between the mummies of South America and Egypt. In Egypt, the custom was to remove all the organs from the interior of the body. Then the body was soaked into brine for several days until it had become like leather, after which spices and silks were used to fill the body. Finally great quantities of cloth were wound around the body for further protection. None of these extensive preparations were used by the South American Indians, who merely buried their dead in natural state, trusting to the elements to preserve, which they did. For though no preservatives were used in the embalming process, none of the mummies show signs of putrefacation. Scientists attribute this phenomenon to the prity and rarity of the air in the high mountainous regions where all of the remains have been excavated.

The custom of mummifying the dead was popular among the South American Indians until within the last hundred years. But with the advent of missionaries this custom has fallen into historic desuetude.

Vienna now has 1,006,290 women and 862,038 men, according to a census taken Jan. 1. The war is believed to have placed women in the majority.

EVELYN NESBIT SINGS IN CABARET TO TRAIN HER SON AS A SURGEON

CHICAGO, June 1—Evelyn Nesbit, central figure in the famous trial of Harry K. Thaw for the murder of Stanford White on the roof of Madison Square Garden, two decades ago, has risen to the crest of the wave again.

Her 20-year fight to regain the respect and confidence of the nation has succeeded, she says.

No longer is she rudely stared at when she appears in public. Her performances on the stage or in the carbaret get the same polite attention that is given other actresses.

"The public has taken me back," says Evelyn, who is appearing nightly in a cabaret here.

"And why shouldn't it?" she asks.

Not a Square Deal.

"The people have watched me through these years and they have watched Harry Thaw and his mother They know now that I never got a square deal."

Although it has been 20 years since White's murder, Miss Nesbit has kept her youthful appearance. Her hair is shingle bobbed and she usually wears striking gowns of white and black, her favorite colors.

And it was not entirely for herself that she made the fight to "come back." Her son, Russell, 14, claims most of her thoughts.

"It's for him that I'm working," she says. "He must be fed and clothed and educated. So I'm singing in cabarets to earn money for him."

Russell is now going to a preparatory school at Longport, N.J. Later he is going to college. His mother says he hopes to become a surgeon.

In her fight to come back Miss Nesbit has buried the dead past forever. She explains that there is no possibility of any reconciliation between herself and Thaw.

'I feel sorry for him, but I no longer care for him," she says.

"Do you ever intend to marry again?" she was asked.

"Never," was her quick reply. "I'm independent now and I'm going to remain independent. Oh, it's wonderful to be independent.

"I like my woork. I don't dance any more—just sing. The public gives me a wonderful reception.

Stares Are Few.

"Of course, a few people still come to see me just out of curiosity. They want to see what Evelyn Nesbit looks like.' But the crowds no longer stare at me like they used to."

After a vacation at Atlantic City this summer Miss Nesbit intends to come back to Chicago and open a cafe on the "gold coast."

She is always accompanied by one of her four Belgian Griffon dogs.

"They're so much more companionable than men," she explains.

"Dogs are honest and faithful and never deceitful. That's more than you can say for some men."

YOUR GARDEN

WATERING.

The daily sprinkling with the hose that is the common practice and delight of many gardeners is the cause of many garden troubles. Ornamental plants as well as the utilitarian crops do not like to be constantly wetted; very often resent the treatment and do not do so well. It is much beter, and conserves energy and time, to water only when necessary at intervals, during hot dry spells say once or at most twice a week. Under this system a good soaking when applying the water is necessary so that the moisture may penetrate deeply.

Late afternoon with few exceptions is the best time as the water will have time to soak into the soil and enable you to cultivate the surface quite readily the following morning. This is most important as it breaks up the crust that will inevitably form and would otherwise bake hard. Breaking up this crust prevents excessive evaporation and consequently conserves moisture.

Lawns may be sprinkled more constantly in dry weather but even here it is advisable to allow the ground to be thoroughly soaked before the sprinkler is removed to a new position. Cutting the grass at a greater height and thus shading the roots, will prove much more satisfactory than sprinkling. Two inches or more will be none too much in extreme weather.

Roses are better watered early in the morning as they are very subject to mildew. Here the follow-up cutivation is especially important.

HASTINGS WON OPENING GAME

Defeated Campbellford 18-13—Both Pitchers Struck Out Fourteen.

HEAVY HITTING.

(By a Staff Reporter)

HASTINGS, June 1—The Campbellford baseball team has never been known to make a good showing at the opening of the Northumberland League, as a member of which the team is in its third season, and the game here on Saturday afternoon, with the Hastings nine was no exception to the rule. The score of 18 to 3 in favor of the villagers tells the story in brief.

Campbellford has aways opened the season without preliminary practice and it can be said of the team that it never fails to improve and after a few rather disastrous defeats gets into form and goes as strong as any of them. There are a bunch of youngsters on the team, the only steadying element being presence of those old standbys, Nesbitt Blakeley and Holmes, but neither of these veterans have struck the gait that in the past has made them formidable in the field or at bat.

It was Ibey, the young High School student, who is the pitching hope of the team this year, who did the best work of them all, making two hits and scoring each time he got to first. It was lack of support alone that sets the record agains him. Fourteen of the Hastings players fell vicitims to his curves, a pitching feat that equalled that of Stephenson the clever young left hander of the home team. Ibey pitched for the entire nine innings and was more effective in the last innings than in the first although it was a long siege for any young pitcher in his first game, considering the number of batters who faced him.

In the first inning Floyd, the Campbellford third baseman, was spiked by a sliding Hastings runner and was so badly injured that he had to retire, Daniel taking his place. The visitors went hitless until the fifth when Blakely singled but he was left at second. In the seventh Ibey singled, stole second and scored on Daniel's slashing triple to right.

In the ninth Ibey singled again, stole his way around to third and scored when McNaughton made a safe hit. The latter by good base running managed to add the third and last tally to the visitors' count.

Hastings has a team this year that should figure in the finals, Scriver and Harrington, and other veterans doing as clever work as ever. Three singles in six times up was P. Lemoire's record. Scriver tripled twice and single twice, sending in runners ahead of him each time. Cassidy had two doubles and every other man on the team with one exception made a safety. The line-up:

Campbellford—Nesbitt, c.f. and c Holmes, c. and 2b; DeCarrol, 1b; Ibey, p.; Daniel, 3b; Fox, 2b; McNaughton, 2b and c.f.; Blakely, l.f.; Regan, s.s.; Reynolds, r.f.

Hastings—P. Lemoire, l.f.; Scriver, c.; Harrington, 1b; Stephenson, p.; Cassidy, r.f.; Lambert, c.f; Baker, r.f.; Cruickshank, 2b; Gould, ss; D. Lemoire 3b.

By innings:

Campbellford ... 600000102— 3 4 8
Hastings ... ... 32034411x—18 16 5

Campbellford's next game will be at home on June 10th when Colborne will be their opponents.

COW OWNERS SCARE OFF POUND KEEPER

Quesnel Finds Animals Trying to Eat Vegetables Through Window.

QUESNEL, B.C., June 1 (Canadian Press).—There has been much good-natured discussion at meetings of the Board of Trade here over the question of enforcing the pound law. Views of cow owners, and those owning neither cows nor small boys with saddle ponies running at large, were aired.

It was at the instigation of the Quesnel Board of Trade that the pound law was put into effect in British Columbia in 1912. Later on similar laws were put into force in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

The chief difficulty in enforcing the act is the retaining of a pound keeper. For a time, one year, the president of the Board of Trade acted in that capacity, but his life being threatened on one or two occasions by irate cow owners whose animals he had impounded, no other incubent of that office has offered to take the job.

"It's not the gardens they destroy that bothers me; mine is well-fenced," remarked one member, "but in the spring before the grass gets green the cows come up to my store and try to scoop the green things out of the plate glass window."

A public meeting is being called when some solution of the difficulty wil be soulght, and an effort made to make life more interesting for the pound keeper.

CANADIAN WON $5,000.

Prof. Mackenzie Awarded Kahn Fellowship.

NEW YORK, June 1 (Canadian Press)—Professor Roderick Duncan MacKenzie, a Canadian-born, who graduated from the University of Manitoba, has been awarded the $5,000 Kahn Fellowship for the study of foreign nations, one of the most highly prized opportunities for study abroard offered in the field of education. Announcement of the success of Prof. MacKenzie, who is at prsent connected with the University of Washington as research director of the survey of race relations, was made at Columbia University Saturday by Secretary Packenthal of the Kahn Foundation.

The Fellowship was established by Albert Kahn, of Paris. He asserted at that time that the award was to enable men of proved intellectual attainment to enjoy sufficient leisure and freedom from all professional pursuits, to enter into personal contact with men and countries they might otherwise never know.

POPULAR CITIZENS PASS.

The sudden death of such well-known citizens as Mr. W. E. Conway and Dr. F. L. Robinson has cast a gloom over the whole community.

Mr. Conway, for many years manager of the local store of Grafton & Company, had been one of Peterboro's best known business men, held in the highest esteem by the people of the city and district and regarded as a citizen of the finest type.

Dr. Robinson was equally well known, having practised the profession of veterinary surgeon here for a long period. He had a host of friends, not only in Peterboro, but throughout the Province, and his death will be deeply regretted.

The passing of two prominent citizens under such tragically sudden circumstances has been a shock to the people of Peterboro. Both leave a gap in the ranks that will be difficult to fill.

TOO MANY LAWS.

No wonder the people of the United States are beginning to complain that they are suffering from too many laws—an ailment that affects Canadians, too, but, fortunately, not to such an extent as their neighbors over the border.

The State Legislatures are the law-mills which grind out so many statutes.

Last year the number of new laws as passed by these bodies reached a total of 10,800.

They cover all sorts of things, from regulating people's morals to the length of women's skirts, and how the man on the street keeps track of all the new statutes is a mystery.

It might have been worse, however.

The total of new bills introduced into all the State Legislatures last year was 38,844, while the year before the figure was 50,000.

We on this side of the line are also given to a super-abundance of prohibitory legislation, but we should be thankful that we have not yet, at least, reached the condition of our United States friends who find freak legislation springing up in every State capital, and must begin to wonder what the end will be.

This, too, in the land of liberty.

SUNDAY BATHING.

The City Council is tonight to discuss the question of whether or not the civic bathing beaches should be kept open on Sunday.

Why this discussion should be considered necessary at the beginning of each bathing season is not quite clear.

The pressure of public opinion favours the opening of the beaches on Sunday, inasmuch as it has been shown that whether or not the civic dressing-rooms are open people will continue to swim on that day anyway, and they might as well be given the opportunity to do so under proper conditions and with the protection that is afforded by the presence of a caretaker.

It is also recognized that Sunday bathing is indulged in without any interference by those who are able to visit river or lake resorts, and there is a general feeling that the citizens who are without motor cars or summer cottages should not be deprived of the opportunity of a cooling Sunday dip during the hot weather.

The Council has always recognized the potency of these arguments in other years and has ordered the city's bathing beaches to be kept open.

It is not likely that there will be any change in this policy this year, as there has never been a protest against Sunday bathing in the past.

In fact, this policy might just as well be made a permanent one and thus avoid the annual discussion over this question.

A DAYLIGHT SAVING WAR.

Down in Oshawa the people want a thing when they want it; being apparently made of sterner stuff than the majority of Peterboro citizens who are content to accept the verdict of their representatives in Council.

As in Peterboro, there has been an agitation in the Motor City for the adoption of daylight saving during the summer months.

It culminated, as did the local campaign, in a visit to the Council of a big deputation urging the city fathers to authorize the change in time.

And the Oshawa Council, like the Peterboro Aldermen, declined to grant the request.

Here the verdict ended the matter.

Not so in Oshawa.

The exponents of daylight saving were determined to have summer time no matter what the Council said.

The result was that today the business men and the manufacturers opened their doors an hour earlier than usual, while the Board of Education, falling in line with the campaign, is operating the school in accordance with the new schedule.

Oshawa having officially discarded daylight saving, is now conducting its affairs according to that system.

Naturally some of the Aldermen feel that their dignity has been hurt by this callous disregard for their wise rulings and they threaten to resign.

The daylight saving advocates are quite frank in saying that they don't care whether the members of the Council design or not, so long as they have that extra hour of daylight at the end of the day.

MADE-IN-PETERBORO.

To mark the opening of the Made-in-Peterboro Exhibition, the Examiner publishes today a special industrial section in which an attempt has been made to give the citizens of Peterboro some idea of the extent of the city's industries and the variety of manufactured products that are turned out by Peterboro's plants.

It is hoped that this section will be of much profit to readers generally, because of the information it gives concerning the firms whose exhibits are now on display at the Armouries.

The Examiner offers it as a supplement to the educational side of the Made-in-Peterboro Exhibition, and hopes that the articles dealing with Peterboro's industries read in conjunction with the exhibits made by these firms will give citizens generally a more comprehensive and intelligent knowledge of the city's industrial life.

If this result does not follow, and if the publicity given to Peterboro's factories as a result of the Exhibition does not lead to a more general local demand for Peterboro products on the part of our people, the Examiner, frankly, will be disappointed.

In the past people have not been as insistent upon buying goods made at home as they should have been—possibly because many citizens did not know very much about the products of local industries.

That explanation will hardly hold water after this week's Exhibition.

THE FIRECRACKER AND THE BABY.

The firecracker seems to have done particularly deadly work this year among the babies, the youth and even the adults of the Dominion, bent on celebrating Empire Day with the same intelligence as the Chinese show in shooing away the evil spirits at the New Year, says the Montreal Star. Nobody is immune. A baby, watching other children fire off these miniature bombs, has a piece of tin driven into her head and must be taken to a hospital. Two soldiers, suffering from shell-shock, are thrown into convulsions in a street car. Eyes are hurt and some may yet loose their sight. A child sets fire to its clothing and is burned to death.

Isn't it about time that our highly civilized community found a safer and saner method of showing its loyalty?

A firecracker is a dangerous toy. It not only maims and kills, but it sets countless fires that destroy property and endanger life. No one would really suffer if its use were forbidden by law. Children would easily discover other ways of letting off their exuberance and marking a day that we all want to mark—except the politicians at Ottawa.

Our neighbors, the Americans, have been fighting for years for a "safe and sane Fourth of July." Their casualty lists on that occasion have commonly risen to appalling proportions. "Life" has been in the habit of printing every year just before July a grewsome picture of a child, lying on a sofa with a bandage on its eyes, while distracted parents hang anxiously over the little sufferer. Thus was the day after "the Fourth" celebrated in too many homes.

The proper authorities might well take prompt measures—while the peril and the terrible price are present in the public mind—to put an end to the use of firecrackers by children. Fireworks should be used under proper supervision and with the utmost care for all within the zone of fire. We would be just as loyal if we killed fewer babies, blinded fewer children and frightened fewer victims of the war with ghastly memories.

BRITISH SETTLERS.

Canada has ample accommodation for all newcomers, no matter how numerous, says the Hamilton Spectator. There are the railways, the great public works, especially in Western Canadian cities, waiting for the population to make more extensive use of them, and there are the thousands of square miles of land ready for the settlers. But they do not come in sufficient numbers, and the sparse population of this Dominion is left to bear the heavy financial burdens without prospect for any great relief. The obvious remedy is immigration, and there is no reason at all why that remedy should not be applied. The Mother Country is willing to assist in the most generous manner; nothing could exceed the magnanimity of the proposals made for the transference of Britain's surplus workers, particularly agricultural workers, to the soil of the overseas dominions, and Canada has been specially favored in the suggested arrangements. On this side, however, there has been a strange lack of aggressive response. Tentative efforts have been put forth to encourage the movement, but they have been only of a half-hearted character, and have proved largely abortive. In the meantime other countries of the Empire are going ahead with their plans, and it looks as if Canada will be far outstripped in the competition for desirable settlers, of good British stock.

It is one thing to induce people to come into a country, and another thing to provide adequately for their well-being when they get in It is no use, for instance, overcrowding the labor markets of Canada with men and women for whom there is no employment. Quite properly efforts are being concentrated on peopling the farming areas of the country, in existing circumstances. But are those efforts vigorous enough to meet the requirements? When the settler comes in, is it made certain that the contract wil be fulfilled by him, and is he given all possible assistance in establishing himself in his new surroundings? The British Government can be relied upon to do its part. The recent arrangement with Australia is a sufficient guarantee of that. A loan of £20,000,000 to the Commonwealth, spread over a period of ten years, has been arranged for the explicit purpose of assisting settlers from the Homeland, and providing for their comfort and prosperity after arrival. Development works of all kinds will be undertaken, and in certain circumstances the amount of the loan will be greatly increased. This money will be lent by the Federal Government at rates as low as 1 per cent. to the various states, and again the British Government comes to the rescue in bearing half the interest. Why should not Canada do more than it does to avail itself of such munificent help? Is this Dominion giving the co-operation it should?

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Now it is up to the people of Peterboro to make the Made-in-Peterboro Exhibition as big a financial success as it is as an exhibition.

The Armouries should be the most popular place in Peterboro this week.

Remember, the Health Association needs every dollar that will be taken in for its work during the year.

The manufacturers have done their part; the citizens generally should show the same spirit of co-operation by visiting the Armouries as often as possible this week.

Caretakers have been appointed for the bathing beaches, but until there has been enough warm weather to take the winter chill off the water their duties are likely to be light.

Somebody has discovered that Longfellow's poem, "The Wreck of the Hesperus," was not found on fact. But what difference does that make?

Wise and Otherwise.

A THOUGHT.

WHY?

Why should I say the world is gray
Because it's gray to me?
There's some who think it's bright and pink,
As rosy as can be.

Why should I [illegible] blossoms bloom
For others that I know?
Have I the right to mock and spite
The whole blamed flower show?

What if I have no friend to lend
A hand across the space?
That doesn't mean this earthly green
Is not a friendly place.

Do blind men doubt a sky's about
Because its blue seems black?
Do deaf men sneer at those who hear
The thunder rolling back?

Must I confess that happiness
Has passed the whole world by,
Because it shuns, of all the ones,
This little one called I?

FORTUNE SEEKERS HIT GOLD TRAIL

Lured By Stories of Trappers Who Uncovered Rich Pocket.

VANCOUVER, B.C., June 1 (Canadian Press)—Lured by the stories of a rich strike of gold last summer by two trappers, Hugh Ford and Bill Grady, who deserted their trap lines long enough to unearth a rich pocket, fortune-seekers are rushing into Dease Lake country of the Cassiar.

Since the report of the strike reached the outside world hundreds of prospectors—sourdoughs and chechakos—have gone north to try their luck in the Cassiar wilderness. All except the hardiest spirits remained at Wrangell or Telegraph Creek because of the ice on the Stikine River, but with the ice gone the rush is on. Both Telegraph Creek and Wrangell which depend mainly on the outfitting of big game parties and the fur trade have been crowded all winter. Already the first boatload, commanded by Sid Barrington, veteran Klondike boatman, has started for the lake where the gold was discovered.

More than 150 tons of freight, including caterpillar tractors, auto trucks and oxen are being taken to Telegraph Creek in the first boatloads from Wrangell, which is the head of navigation on the Stikine.

The Cassiar gold field is not a new one, however. Although abandoned for many years, it was one of the first to bring fame to British Columbia as a mining country, and the trails that are being followed today by prospectors in motor trucks are the same in many cases as those trod by shoe-leather and moccasins of the gold-seekers of half a century ago.

French Canadians, attracted into the remote Cassiar district originally by its wealth of fur-bearing animals were the first to discover the mining possibilities there. Choquette in 1862 came upon gold in the sand bars of the Stikine, and eleven years later Thibert, in the course of a perilous journey from Minnesota through the Rockies into the unexplored places of Northern British Columbia, found gold on a creek running into Dease Lake. He took out as much as two ounces of rough gold a day with a rocker, and news of his strike spread like wildfire. About that time the gold mines of the Cariboo and the Omineca districts began to peter out and the miners that had congregated there were in a receptive mood to follow up reports of prospects elsewhere.

The Cassiar strike gave them just the opportunity they were looking for and in 1874 there were estimated to be about one thousand six hundred miners in the Cassiar, principally on Dease Lake and Thibert Creeks, where most of this year's activity is expected to be centered. Though so far away from the centres of population and without the modern means of quick and convenient transportation, the new diggings are comparatively easy of access. From the head of navigation on the Stikine river to Dease Lake is only 117 miles, of which 110 miles is land travel. The remainder of the route is along Dease Lake, where at first canoes were used, but later a steamboat.

In the summer of 1874 Captain William Moore built a trail from Telegraph Creek, sixteen miles above the head of navigation, to Dease Lake, and this is the same trail that is being used today by the present generation of miners. The mines on Dease Lake Creek and the lower part of Thibert Creek paid very well during that summer. Barely one hundred miners dared to remain in the Cassiar during the winter, which is almost of Arctic severity. Those who did remain regretted their courage, for the cold was so intense that thermometers became congealed and several of the party died of scurvy.

In the following spring more than a thousand miners were busy on the various creeks around Dease Lake, but the output of gold for the season was somewhat smaller. Despite these returns the next season brought more than two thousand miners into the camp, resulting in poor wages for everyone and extremely high prices. From that year on the Cassiar goldfields declined steadily. Except for a few instances when miners struck rich pockets that were soon played out, those who followed received only fair wages for their labor. The passing of the Cassiar as a mining region was gradual, however, for as late as 1896 twenty white and a number of Chinese were reported there. The yield for the year was only $22,00. They were the last faithful remnant of admirers of the fickle goddess, clinging to her service year after year in the hope of better times or of some rich strike to reward their devotion.

Whether this years' crop of prospectors will fare any better will be demonstrated within a few months—possiby weeks. There is a tremendous area in the Cassiar where the clatter of the prospector's hammer is still unknown and it may contain the hidden wealth for which the old-timers hunted in vain for more than thirty years. In the late 90's the discovery of gold in the Klondike diverted attention from the Cassiar altogether and also from the Cariboo, which returned to a brief period of glory between 1880 and 1890, and since then only an occasional wandered has tapped the Cassiar for gold.

THE REAL LIFE

The festive pleasure-seeking throng
Can voice no sentiment or song
Of my sad heart tonight.
No bright emblazoned thoroughfare,
Nor strains of music in the air,
Can stay my hurried flight.

The ribald laughter, jesting jeers
Around me ring, but my soft tears
Replace the old-time smile
I choke at thoughts of merriment,
And hasten faster on intent
For many a weary mile.

Until at last behind me lies
The city of a million eyes,
Distorted and ablaze.
A million hearts may beat and sing,
Make light of love and everything.
I cannot stand and gaze.

For me, no vain fictitious life,
No hollow emptiness of strife,
No foolish tinseled goal.
I claim the open road and sky,
For this I'll let the world pass by,
And feed my famished soul.

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Burton

THE STORY SO FAR:

GLORIA GORDON, beautiful flapper, marries DICK GREGORY, a struggling lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes ....but no work or children.

Dick borrows his mother's maid, MAGGIE to teach Gloria to cook but she refuses to learn. Later Maggie leaves disgusted with Gloria's wild parties. Then Gloria hires RANGHILD SWANSON although Dick tells her they can't afford a maid. Her extravagance swamps Dick with debts. . . .

Gloria begins to see a great deal of STANLEY WAYBURN, an actor with whom she becomes infatuated. Her best friend MAY SEYMOUR, wife of DR. JOHN SEYMOUR, begs her not to see Wayburn. She tells her how she, herself, has been snubbed because of a foolish love affair with JIM CAREWE. MOTHER GREGORY also begs Gloria to mend her ways.

Dick becomes dangerously ill with pneumonia. While he is recovering Wayburn tells Gloria he expected to leave town soon to get a job in New York. He needs money. Gloria gets $200 from Dick's secretary, MISS SUSAN BRIGGS, by telling her she wants it to have some gardening done as a surprise to Dick.

Wayburn promises to pay it back within three weeks. Gloria goes shopping to buy a new dress, so as to appear attractive in Wayburn's eyes. She discovers, to her horror, that she is getting fat.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Gloria took Wayburn's cigaret case from Dick.

Wondering, she turned it over and over in her slim hands.

"Where in the world did you get this thing?" she asked, puzzled. The last time she had seen it, it had been lying in the wet yellow mud beside the wreck of her car. And she was quite sure that she hadn't picked it up.

"The nurse in the office downstairs just gave it to me . . . along with the jewelry you had on when you came into the hospital," Dick answered. His voice sounded tired and flat.

He took a little handful of jewelry from his pocket and tossed it down on the bed. Gloria picked up her rings and put them on. She slid her wrist watch under her pillow.

Then she looked up at Dick. There was scorn written in the lovely depths of her eyes.

"So you knew when you came into this room that I'd been with Stan the day of the wreck!" she said. "And you set a trap for me?"

"Of course, I knew. The minute I saw his initials on the cigaret case I knew," Dick answered grimly. "I wish I had the fellow by the throat this minute!" He made a twisting movement with his hands.

"Dick, please don't get exicted over this! There's really very little to it!" Gloria pleaded. "I told Stan that day that I was never going to see him again. Truly, I did . . . and, anyway, he's going to New York soon. . . ."

Dick stared out of the window at the housetops across the street. He jerked his head toward them.

"I wonder if any of the men who live in those houses have wives like you, Gloria," he said. "I wonder if their wives are the kind who refuse to have children, who go tearing around with other men, who never stay at home . . . who don't even know how to make a home. . . ."

"Well, it's their own fault if they have!" Gloria cried shrilly. "It's their own fault!"

Dick turned toward her.

"How do you mean, it's their own fault?" he asked sharply. "I suppose you mean it's my fault that you've been stepping out with this Wayburn? Because you have, of course!"

"Yes," Gloria answered boldly. "I have. And I'll tell you why I have, if you want to know . . . because he knows how to be a pal to me, and you don't!"

Dick said nothing. There was a white line around his lips. And a fine sweat came out on his forehead.

"No, you don't!" Gloria repeated, as if she were arguing with him. "You think that because you've given me a roof over my head and paid the bills you've done your husbandly duty."

She paused for breath.

"Well, you've kept me pretty busy paying your bills," Dick said. "Although I wouldn't mention the fact if you hadn't brought it up."

Gloria flushed.

"You kick every time I ask you to take me out to a dance or to a picture show," she went on. "Your idea of the end of a perfect day is to go to sleep over the newspaper every night! And I can just sit there and twiddle my thumbs, I suppose? . . . Well, I'm not going to! Not if I see myself first!"

"If I go to sleep over the newspaper it's because I'm dog-tired after my day's work," Dick answered. "And if you did your housework, as you should, instead of lying in bed till noon every day, you'd be pretty tired yourself at night. Other women don't want to be gadding every night in the week, I notice."

Gloria pulled her blue silk bed-jacket around her shoulders. With her uninjured arm she picked up her hand-mirror from the table at the side of her bed. She smiled into it.

"Other women! I should worry about other women!" she said serenely.

She turned so that Dick could see her face snuggled against the pillows, in its halo of short, red-gold hair. She smiled at him with teasing sweetness. The corners of her lips tilted up like the wings of a flying bird.

"Other women aren't as pretty as I am," she said bluntly. "Most of them are mighty lucky to have husbands. And they know it. They work hard to hold them . . . but I don't have to! I don't even need a husband! You know, Rikky, that any stage-manager in the country would be glad to give me a job, don't you?"

"Yes, I do," Dick answered truthfully. "You're far and away the best-looking girl I've ever seen. But you remember what happened to Helen of Troy. In the end she was dog-goned glad to sneak home to the old husband!"

"Yes, but she had her good time first!" Gloria said, brightening. "And you'd better treat me gently, Dick, or you'll wake up one of these mornings to find me gone."

"Treat you gently . . ." Dick groaned. "As if I'd ever treated you any other way! Sometimes I think that if I'd pulled a little of the cave-man stuff on you, you'd been a better wife. . . ."

He stopped, lost in a new train of thought.

"See here, Gloria," he said after a moment, "I want you to tell me how far this Wayburn affair has gone. Has he made love to you?"

* * *

Gloria widened her eyes at him, like an innocent child just waking up from a nap.

"He was trying to make love to me the day I wrecked the car," she said. "I hit him. . . . I forgot all about driving. And the next thing I knew I was lying under the car half dead. . . ."

She began to cry weakly.

Dick put his arms around her very gently.

He could feel the beating of her heart. It fluttered like a frightened bird's, it seemed to him.

"And then you talk to me as if I was a bad woman!" she sobbed. "Just because I want to jazz around and have a little fun. . . ."

Dick patted her shoulder. When he spoke his voice was harsh. His eyes were filled with passion and tenderness.

"Poor little kiddie!" he said. "I'm sorry."

It was not until he was half way home . . . away from the warmth and perfume of her . . . that he began to doubt what Gloria had told him. She had lied to him so often!

* * *

That night Gloria lay in bed thinking over what she had told Dick about Wayburn.

She had told him the truth. But not the whole truth! Far from it!

She had not told him that Wayburn had kissed her dozens of times.

She had not told him that the reason she had struck Wayburn that day in her car was not because he had tried to make love to her . . . but becuase she was afraid of his love-making when he had been drinking!

Above all, she had not told him that she had given Wayburn $400 of Dick's own money! Money that he would probably never pay back!

* * *

Ten days later, when Gloria left the hospital, her own little blue car stood at the curb waiting for her. It looked as good as new.

Gloria shuddered when she saw it.

"I don't know whether I have nerve enough to ride home in it or not!" she said shakily to Dick.

"Sure you have. Hop in," Dick encouraged her. "Your nerves are jumpy. You'll be all right pretty soon. Doc Seymour wants me to go away for a long rest. We'll go together, you and I. We both need it."

He started the car.

"Perhaps mother'll go along with us," Dick said, as the car rolled slowly along. "She looks pretty seedy after that operation of hers."

"Just you dare to ask your mother to go anywhere with us!" Gloria's eyes flashed. "I'd rather stay in this town all my life than go anywhere with your mother!"

Dick tried to change the subject.

"We may not go anywhere ourselves," he said. "We've spent so much money on doctors and nurses and hospitals this month that we won't have much left to go gadding around the country, I guess. Your bill at the hospital was $445. I just paid it."

"Oh sure, tell me what my bill was! Rub it in!" Gloria cried. "Why don't you talk about the money you paid Mrs. O'Hara and Doc Seymour for your own sickness! I get tired hearing about all my expenses!"

Again the sickening thought came to her that Dick would soon find out about the $400 she had borrowed from him . . . through Miss Briggs.

"Hasn't the gardener started work on the back yard?" she asked in surprise as they drove into the garage.

"No. He came here with a whole raft of rose bushes that you'd ordered," Dick answered. "But I sent him away. We can't afford to fix up the yard just now."

He helped her out of the little car.

It was sunset. The long shadows of the new-leaved trees lay across the grass. The lilies-of-the-valley were in bloom along the fence.

A delicious odour of broiling steak came from the open door of the kitchen where Ranghild was getting supper.

"Home's pretty nice, isn't it?" Dick asked. "It's a pretty good place to be after all. Isn't it, Littlest?"

Gloria raised her eyebrows.

"I guess so," she said shortly.

They went in.

Ranghild opened the door for them. There was a broad smile on her fresh-cheeked face.

Everything was quite as usual.

After dinner Dick picked up the paper and sat down in his armchair to read. In a few minutes he was sound asleep.

The clock in the hall ticked off the leaden minutes.

Eight o'clock! . . . The end of the day for the Gregorys.

For some people it was the peak of all the 24 hours!

For some people 8 o'clock meant brilliant restaurants, streets filled with rushing taxicabs and cheerful crowds, theatres with their doors wide. . . .

Theatres!

The thought of them brought Stanley Wayburn into Gloria's mind.

Where had he gone?

Where was he now . . . at this very minute?

Suddenly Gloria put her head down on the table before her and cried as if her heart would break.

Dick stirred, woke, lifted his head.

"What's the matter, honey?" he asked, yawning. "What are you crying about?"

Gloria raised her tear-stained face.

"My arm aches," she said. "And I'm lonesome."

"Lonesome?" Dick repeated. "Why should you be lonesome right here, in your own house with me?"

Gloria sniffed.

"You!" she cried. "You aren't here when you're asleep! Why don't you stay awake and talk to me?"

Dick laughed good-naturedly. He pulled his lacquer smoking-stand up beside her chair, and filled his pipe. It was a little short-stemmed briar pipe that smelled like a bonfire of autumn leaves.

He puffed for a while in silence.

"Do you want me to tell you what ails you, Glory?" he asked at last. "What makes you so restless and unhappy?"

There was a troubled look in Gloria's eyes. She turned her wedding ring round and round on her finger nervously.

"Tell me," she said.

Intense Heat! —fast Cooking!

NOT least of the remarkable points about McClary's Gas Range is the full constant flow of intense heat that comes from the burners. This makes cooking fast—nearly twice as fast as with wood or coal—without fuss, muss or trouble.

Other features which housewives prize in McClary's Gas Range are:

—The porcelain enameled top, rust proof and sanitary.

—The porcelain enameled oven, so easily cleaned and kept sweet.

—Unbreakable Pyrex glass in oven doors with thermometer to regulate cooking.

These are just a few of the qualities which have made McClary's known as the satisfactory Gas Range.

DE SALABERRY KIN PASSES IN FRANCE

Granddaughter of the Hero of Chateauguay Died on Sunday.

MONTREAL, une 1—Miss Hermine De Salaberry granddaughter of the hero of Chateauguay, died Sunday in Paris according to cable advices received here by Mr. Justice Archer whose wife is a first cousin of the deceased.

The late Miss De Salaberry was born in Quebec City 69 years ago, the daughter of the late Col. Alphonse De Salaberry, who was adjutant-general of lower Canada prior to confederation. She was educated at the Villa Marie Convent, Montreal, returned to Quebec, then came back to Montreal some thirty years ago. Since that time she has resided here. She was a comparatively frequent visitor to Europe, and in 1889 had the honor of being received in private audience by the late Queen Victoria.

On January 1, she sailed for France. While at Nice she was taken ill and removed to a hospital, remaining there until April 28 when she was removed to Paris.

Surviving members of the family in Canada are: R. Salaberry, Ottawa, cousin; Mrs. Charles Archer, Mrs. H. Laroque, Mrs. Charles De Salaberry, and Mrs. H. Baby, all of Montreal, first cousins. In France the family is represented by the Comte De Salaberry, whose seat is at Fosse, near Blois, and there the funeral will take place.

The late Mrs. Bussy, wife of Mr. Justice Bussy of the Court of Appeals, Quebec, was a sister of Miss De Salaberry.

53 BODIES RECOVERED.

Smoking Workers Believed Cause of Mine Explosion.

COAL GLEN, N.C., June 1—The mine of the Carolina Coal Company, where an explosion on Wednesday entombed undetermined number of men, had yielded, up to yesterday, fifty-three victims, two more than the number first thought by company officials to be missing.

A re-check of the list of missing revealed that five other miners were unaccounted for, and it was thought the removal of debris from the second right lateral would uncover the bodies. The death list contained the names of twenty-seven white men and twenty-two negroes, with four bodies yet unidentified.

Smoking in the mine, a practice forbidden by the owners, may have been the cause of the explosion, according to a revelation made by Dr. John L. Scott, Sanford physician, in charge of the temporary morgue. He told Government experts that he had found matches in the pockets of several of the victims.

NEW MOTOR RECORD.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 1.—Breaking all existing records for the event, Peter De Palma, youthful racing star and nephew of the famous Ralph De Palama, Saturday won the greatest race ever staged on the Indianapolis motor speedway, when he piloted his little cream colored racing creation to victory in 4.55.39. De Paolo set the remarkable average of 101.13 miles an hour for the 500 mile grind. The boyish looking De Paolo with only three years of driving experience behind him, set a killing pace the instant he was clear of the red starting flag and fought it out to the finish with Earl Cooper, Benny Hill, Dave Lekis, Harry Hartz and Phil Shafer, whose cars were within striking distance throughout the race. De Paolo won in the last few miles after a nerve-wracking battle down the stretches and around the turns with Benny Hill driving as a relief pilot for Lewis.

In addition to the racing glory De Paolo won approximately $38,000 in cash prizes. He won the prize of $20,000 to the winner, $7,800 in lap prizes, and another $10,000 offered by accessory manufacturers.

LAPOINTE SAYS CANADA SHOULD BE FIRST LOVE

National Unity Will Solve Problems of Country, Minsiter of Justice Declares.

FREE OF DISCORD.

Political Differences Maintain People's Interest in the Affairs of Dominion.

OTTAWA, June 1.—(Canadian Press).—United by the love of the same country, devoted to the same flag and cherishing the same national hopes, were the means by which Canadians working in harmony with one another, irrespective of the different race which at present inhabit the Dominion should strive for national perfection, declared the Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, at a banquet held here Saturday in connection with the diamond anniversary celebration of the Union St. Joseph.

"Our destiny and the solution of all our difficulties must have their basis in Canada. The honor and respect of our country comes before all else, no matter what may be their political nature and we must strive to create a truly Canadian type by the elemination of the imperfections of the different races. Political differences will always continue for thus is one's interest in the doings of national life kept aroused, but the best way in which to serve one's party is to serve the interests of one's country.

"Thank God, we, in Canada, are today free of the baneful influences of hate and discord. Union, the concentration of all the forces of the country to develop the unlimited resources, is the question of the day. Previous generations have made Canada a political entity; today we make it an economical entity, and this is to be attained through the forces of unity and concord."

LONDON EMPTY OVER WHITSUN

Railways Reduce Fares to Pre-War Rate—City Deserted.

WEMBLEY CROWDED.

LONDON, June 1 — Hundreds of American tourists who arrived Saturday found London had given itself up to the Whitsuntide holiday, and tens of thousands left for a brief spell on the continent at the seaside, and in the country.

The railroads have made an important change in their holiday policy by running excursions over the weekend to the seaside at extraordinarily low rates. It is possible to travel at the rate of three miles for a penny (2 cents) to resorts in Lincolnshire and on the Devonshire coast. This is an an interesting experiment in trying to revert to pre-war cheapness in the days of high cost of living. The railway companies have been keeping up the rates on the score of necessity, despite protests from the public. They are now trying to see if the numbers carried will reimburse them for the low fares.

Parliament has risen for 12 days, and the King and Queen on Saturday opened the new road artery to the west which will be of the greatest service to motorists. Americans running out of London for Devon and Cornwall knew to their cost the terrible congestion of the "Bottle-neck" narrow streets of Brentford. That now will be avoided altogether by the new 120-feet wide highway.

The Wembley exhibition has attracted great crowds from the industrial centres of England but the principal attraction of the holiday will be sport. The golf courses are packed, county and other cricket matches are in full swing and several important lawn tennis fixtures are in progress.

HISTORIC BOSTON MARKET FLAME SWEPT

The historic Quincy Market in Boston, Mass., was swept by flames. Practically all apparatus in town was called to save the old landmark. Fifty firemen were overcome, and 12 had to slide for their lives when trapped on the roof.

CHASING WHALES IN THE PACIFIC

Eight Vessels Leave Port of Victoria on Summer's Work.

VICTORIA, June 1 (Canadian Press).—Off to chase the Pacific whales that wallow and blow in the North Pacific waters and off the Vancouver Island coast, eight vessels comprising the fleet of the Consolidated Whaling Corporation, have left port after undergoing their winter overhaul, and with their harpoon guns in first-class shape. The vessels will work from three stations—Rose Harbor and Naden Harbor in the Queen Charlotte Islands, and from Kyuquot, on the West Coast of Vancouver Island, and will pursue the mammals of the deep until next October.

Present indications, according to whaling authorities, indicate a lucrative season, the hauls having improved during the past two years although still far below the old-time days of the whaling industry.

With the arrival of the fleet on the whaling grounds, shore stations immediately become active handling the huge carcasses which are reduce to oil, bone meal and fertilizer. In previous years particularly during the early days of the war, efforts were made to create a domestic demand for the meat of the whale, which resembles beef, but beyond a moderate demand existing in the Orient, this new branch of the industry has not met with any marked success.

Thousands of miles of highways in Germany an France are shaded by rows of fruit trees, some of which are state owned.

Ovation For Royal House Swept Italian Chamber

ROME, June 1—The Italian Chamber of Deputies Saturday voted the annual 2,000,000 lire honorarium for Crown Prince Humbert in a wild demonstration of loyalty to the House of Savoy, provoked by the Communist Deputy Bendini, who declared such an outlay of money was "scandalous." (Two million lire is about $80,000 at present exchange.)

The whole Chamber arose immediately in protests against the Communist statement. Shouts of "viva" for the King drowned Bendini's voice, while the packed galleries joined in hurling epithets at him.

When the uproar subsided Deputy Federzoni declared the whole nation would warmly applaud the action of the Chamber of Deputies. The destiny of Italy was inseparably connected with the glory and prestige of the monarchy of Savoy, he declared.

Deputy Alfieri enumerated the sterling qualities of the Italian Crown Prince and said a fitting stipend was necessary to keep up the royal traditions of the ancient household that typifies the continuity of the country.

TO-NIGHT IS THE NIGHT

If you do not feel well there is some reason for it. In nine cases out of ten it is due to your liver. So start tonight and take two Tanol Calomel Tablets or take one before meals and a glass of hot water in the morning to wash all poisons from the system. Calomel, as you know, is the only drug known that acts upon the liver and that is why there has been such wonderful results from the use of it in the new form called Tanol Calomel. Just get a few of these sample tablets from F. C. Webber's Drug Store, Peterborough, and you will be surprised how effective they are. m.-w.s.

Great for Children

ALMOST any morning in the year many a Mother faces the problem: "For breakfast today what shall I give the children that is satisfying, tempting, and, above all, healthful?" In the morning youngsters are usually restless, eager to get outdoors and play. And there is always the probability that breakfast will be eaten in haste, "swallowed whole", as our grandmothers said. Morning food must be easily digestible. Post's Bran Flakes with Other Parts of Wheat combines laxative value with nourishment and delicious taste—keeps radiant health in growing young bodies and solves one problem more for Mother.

For bran is Nature's own laxative. Post's Bran Flakes supplies necessary food roughage, aids digestion and promotes regularity. Other nourishing parts of wheat are retained, adding their own good food value to its flavored, crisp-toasted flakes. Children like it—thrive on it. Serve with milk or cream.

Buy a wax-wrapped package today from your grocer and give it to the youngsters regularly—but be sure it's Post's Bran Flakes.

IMMACULATE CONCEPTION.

Confirmation in the Roman Catholic Church was celebrated at the Immaculate Conception Church yesterday afternoon, when the sacred rite was centered on forty girls and thirty-four boys, by His Lordship Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., Bishop of Peterborough, assisted by Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl, Rev. P. Butler and Rev. J. Power.

ST. JOHN'S ANGLICAN.

At the services at St. John's Church yesterday, Rev. Dr. Blagrave referred to the work done in that church by the late Mrs. A. P. Poussette, whose death occurred at Sarnia on May 24th. Mrs. Poussette was the organizer and first president of the Chancel Guild. Her memory is honored in St. John's Church by a cabinet placed in the vestry in commemoration of her work, and several of her old friends yesterday sent flowers for the altar as a remembrance. Flowers were also placed on the altar in memory of the late Trevor Cuffe, one of St. John's parish soldiers killed in the Great War.

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.

Speaking on the significance of Pentecost Sunday at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday, Rev. P. Costello referred to it as the birthday of God's church on earth, the day when the apostles were filled with the divine fire, and inspired to begin their work in the preaching, and the teaching of the wonderful works of God.

"The Catholic Church has never changed since that day," said the reverend speaker. "And it never will change, because truth never changes and never can change. With God the Holy Ghost, as a teacher, she can never go astray.

"It is often said that Catholics are narrow-minded. But truth cannot be compromised. If other people do not want to believe the truth that does not affect its verity nor change it in any way. So with the Church that preaches and teaches the Word of God and cannot change, because she is ruled and guided by the Third Person of the Blessed Trinity."

Father Costello added an admonition to those Catholics whose conduct in the past might have been a scandal to their neighbors, to take a resolution on Pentecost Sunday to be an example for good, and to fill their hearts with burning zeal for the spread of the truth of Christ.

The Tridum which was held at St. Peter's Cathedral last week for the young women of the parish, was concluded yesterday. High Mass was solemnized by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, and a sermon preached by Rev. Father McMahon, who also brought the three day retreat to a close last evening with a sermon on vocations.

At the morning Masses at the Cathedral yesterday, Father Costello commended the Made-in-Peterboro Fair to his congregation, speaking of it as a good cause, worthy of hearty patronage and support.

ALL SAINTS' ANGLICAN.

Rev. R. B. Grobb, former rector of All Saints' church, was greeted with large congregations at both services yesterday, on the occasion of his first return to the parish. In the evening the members of the Ancient Order of Foresters attended the service and the subject of the sermon was optimism.

The "Gloria" was chosen by Mr. Grobb as his text. He took the last three words: 'world without end,' first as showing that there is no end to God. There is no place in the Christian religion for pessimism, which sees everything coming to an end, as the dominant thing is life. What is needed is something to help people get everything there is in to-day. Most peoples' lives are clouded by brooding over the past or fear for the future. A joyful confidence in God is what is needed.

All through the Bible, said Mr. Grobb, there is a spirit of triumph. In the first chapter of Genesis, the phrase occurs six times," and the evening and the morning were the first day, the second day and so on. This shows the constant travelling, not towards night but towards day.

In the heart of the Bible, the four gospels, there is the same note of triumph. All was dark for the disciples while the Master was in the tomb but after He rose, they went out and preached that there was no end. Modern scientific notions of the world, see nothing but cause and effect, without perceiving the great living principle behind them.

In the first half of the Gloria there are three facts. The first is that God is love. The expression Father expresses the belief in His love. The second is that, despite some people who say that the world is like a huge machine and not even God can interfere with it, He can interfere when things are not going right and sent down His Son to save the world. The third part speaks of the personal God who is beside everyone.

The choir rendered the anthem, "The heavens are telling" from Haydn's "Creation."

GEORGE STREET METHODIST.

Rev. W. Harold Young, preaching at George street Sunday evening on his subject, "The Great Adventure," took as his text, Chapter II of the Epistle to the Hebrews, "And he went out not knowing whither he went."

The speaker said this text would appeal to all red blooded men because of the thrill of adventure of the unknown path. Abraham in blind obedience to a hidden voice, an impulse at the age of 75, left comfort luxury and security to find out a new life in a new country of which he had no knowledge. This deed calls to us all with a wistful wish to do likewise. Mr. Young here quoted those lines of Kipling's "Something hidden behind the ranges," etc.

Although life denies we can all be adventurers in the common meaning of the word; we can all read of it. Yet we don't have to go to the end of the world to find adventure, for adventure is knocking at our door in everyday life. The speaker explained forcefully that friendship, business and death are all adventures greater than even that entailed by the discovery of 'the North Pole.'

Mr. Young, speaking of death said, "None of us have the least suggestion of what is really yonder. Either it is everything or nothing." Thus we find adventure right at home.

Mr. Young said "But the greatest adventure comes when a man says 'I commit myself absolutely to God.' This is truly the greatest adventure, since it leads to supreme mountains of difficulty and wide expanses of sweet peace."

There are two sides to this adventure, according to the speaker. First, that of Abraham, who went out on an unmapped highway because of the voice within—God's voice. It is the surrender of oneself to "a hidden guidance." "Not till he does this can he really discover God," said Mr. Young, and he continued by saying that "too many of us to-day try to make it a partial surrender." This leads to the tragedy of the man who tried to sit on two stools.

The speaker then quoted Donald Hardy. "Religion in the last analysis is betting your life that there is a God." This is the greatest test and leads to the greatest adventure in overcoming unforeseen difficulties and temptations because one is trying to copy Christ. Abraham could not foresee what trials were to to him and no more can we.

Here the speaker appealed to the youth to do this, because it was hard and would tax all their strength and endurance, not because it would in any way be easy—but because of the heroic in every man's heart, as did Girabaldi in calling to the Italian patriots.

Mr. Young further entreated all to embark on this adventure since only as you make the great adventure will you find the greatest things in your heart." This adventure develops the great things in us. A Christian's daily life," said the speaker, "could be summed up in Cromwell's message on the eve of the Battle of Dunbar: "We are on the eve of a battle very difficult."

This was one of the greatest sermons Mr. Young has ever preached and will be carried in the hearts of his congregation long after he has left this pulpit.

KNOX PRESBYTERIAN.

On Sunday evening at Knox Church the Reverend A. H. McConnachie, M.A., preached a farewell sermon to Peterborough friends on the eve of his departure for a new field in the Winnipeg Presbytery.

Mr. McConnachie's parting words were based on the latter part of the tenth verse of the tenth chapter of John: "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly." Introducing his subject, Mr. McConnachie said, "The proper study of mankind is man, accordingly the proper study of an individual consists of a study of that individual's life.

God has implanted within each of us the embryo of life and the problem which we should try to solve is: How to make the most of it.

Jesus Christ had much to say concerning life but very little of death—life was the great word on his lips and if we are able to provide for life death will take care of itself.

There are different ways of seeking life. Some try to find it in places of dubious character; others seek it in more wholesome surroundings; some seek it earnestly in travel and may find that after weary years of search the object has eluded them and failure must be admitted.

The pursuit of life is a solitary affair There can be no companionship but the individual and God. Intimate friends cannot share the inner existence but in the rush of great factories and busy cities all must travel the way of life alone. When God shares in the daily plan, however, life will flow sweetly like a song.

is day in which we live is one of opportunity, it is our day of probation for life is like a great river which flows ever onward and never again touches any part of the course over which it has flowed.

At the beginning of life, youth should be given an impetus in the right direction for many lives may be saved by even an hour's consideration at the outset.

It is then necessary to learn the art of living. There is an art to all things in nature so why should there not be an art to the greatest function of being, that of maintaining an existence. We must learn how to live in order to build a super-structure which will withstand the ravages of time and stress of circumstance.

We can build that foundation either with or without the aid of God. There are some who although they attend Church regularly fail to remain consistent throughout the week while others take God into consideration always, work with Him daily.

God has a desire and plan for each of our lives. He is the Great Architect; no builder would work without a plan or blue print, yet there are many people who would attempt to build a life unplanned.

It is well that we might sit at Jesus' feet and learn the plans which were provided for us. To those seeking something better Jesus says, "I am come that they might have life."

True religion is the augmentation of life, the natural expansion of personality and the supplement of a true existence Christ came that the increase of experience may be made possible along correct paths.

There have been great teachers before the time of Jesus and great teachers since, but there has never been one save the Christ who could give utterance to the words, "I am come that ye might have life, that yet might have it more abundantly."

But Christ will not dispense this fullness of life indiscriminately. Sin has destroyed or impaired the magic living vessel and we accordingly must know and realize that Christ has been our sin bearer, that he suffered and died on the tree to save us.

Some are too proud to admit sin, to say in earnest prayer, "God be merciful to me, a sinner." No matter how respectable we may have lived it is certain that sin has crept in. When we are ready to admit sin then Jesus is waiting to lead us across the threshold into the house of life.

To adopt Christ as a friend does not mean that the normal life need be denied of pleasure for the ties of friendship are enriched when He is enthroned in the being while joys are deepened, beautified and hallowed which Christ is permitted to share.

Christ not only gives life but he gives it in abundance. The life which Jesus gives is full to overflowing, one which takes possession of the individual and constitutes the motif of being.

There are many who have drifted into the Church who have had no vital experience of Jesus. We are living in a period of dead level existence. Did Christ die on the cross that we might live at this level. No. He died that we might live a life of fullness, plenty and beauty.

We must all make the most of life and the sure method of doing this is to live up with Jesus Christ. Those who are out to have what they term 'a good time' would find the deepest satisfaction in the company of Jesus and it is impossible to learn the Art of Life in any other school than the one which He teaches.

The inspirational quality of the sermon was supplemented by splendid music which was admirably suited to the theme.

Mrs. Ross Williamson sang "How Lovely are Thy Dwellings," selection by Liddel.

ST. PAUL'S PRESBYTERIAN

Rev. G. I. Craw, of Springville, was the preacher at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, yesterday, before large congregations.

The Giving Proof of Repentance."

This subject in the morning was founded on the text, in the third chapter of Luke's Gospel, eighth verse: "Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance."

The main thought underlying Mr Craw's sermon was the repentance of most people, without the sincere actions and words to show their turning to God from sin. The Apostle John was fearless in his denunciation of the sin of his day; he preached the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins.

Mr. Craw said repentance for sin was summed up in the words: True repentance must be shown in the lives of people from day to day. The walk and conversation of the repentant will show how deep is their sincerity for God's work.

With scriptural examples Mr. Craw showed how human nature has been prone to sin, become truly repentant, and how people without God's help have tried to walk the straight and narrow path, and failed. We must put our trust in God, and with His strength overcome evil with good.

THE EVENING SERMON

The text Mr. Craw selected was found in the eleventh chapter of the Book of Hebrews, the tenth verse: "For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God."

The subject, "How God Kept His Promise to Abraham," brought out the truth that when He makes a promise to His people, it is fulfilled. Abraham was travelling over the desert looking for this solidly-built city, and God in time brought him to that land, which his seed was to occupy after him, but the part Abraham was permitted to occupy was a plot wherein his body lay after death. We, the world, the Church, the community need men of vision to see ahead what is our best asset, and what will tend to the prosperity and good of the individual and the land in which we dwell.

The speaker, in conclusion, urged his hearers to seek that city and the builder and maker, God, for the salvation of our souls. Men and women, who were fond of pleasure only, must have something else shown them so they can change their ways and thus do most good to mankind.

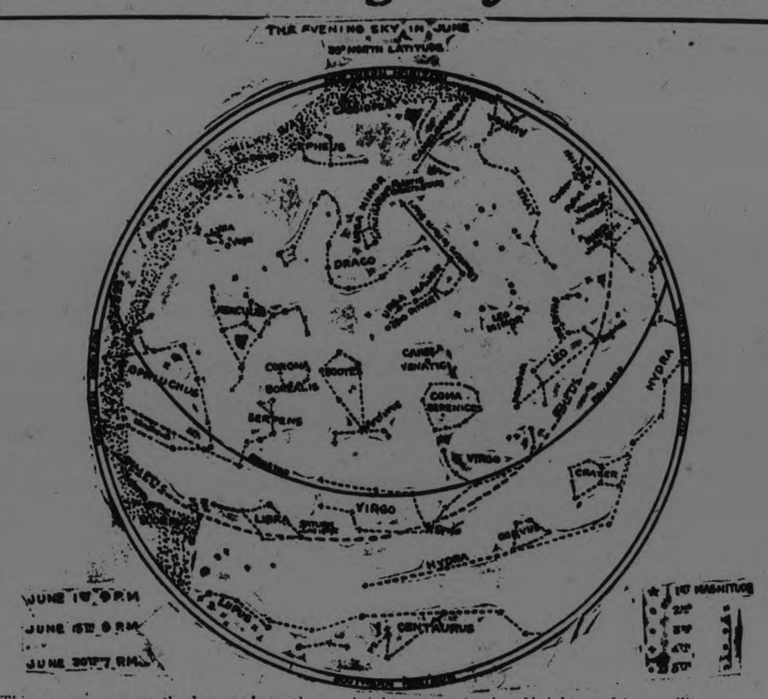
The Evening Sky In June



This star map shows the heavens as they appear at 9 p.m. June 1, 8 p.m. June 15, and 7 p.m. June 30 in 35 degrees north latitude. A change of 5 or 10 degrees in latitude makes little difference in the appearance of the heavens so the map may be used in all parts of the country.

The map should be held over the head, or inverted, with the top toward the north to view the constellations as they appear in the heavens.

The constellation of Bootes, The Herdsman, shaped like a boy's kite, is now directly east of the zenith or point overhead. The brilliant orange-hued Arcturus in Bootes and the bluish-white Vega, in Lyra, which is over in the north-east, are now the two brightest stars in view.

Arcturus can always be found by prolonging the handle of the Big Dipper toward the south-east about 30 degrees, which is approximately the extent of the Big Dipper itself. One will have no difficulty in finding the Big Dipper directly to the northwest of the zenith.

The zodiacal constellation of Virgo, The Maiden, is directly on the meridian due south. The first magnitude star, Spica, represents the ear of wheat that the Maiden holds in her hand, symbolic of the harvest.

The planet Saturn is now between Libra and Virgo some distance to the east of Spica and in excellent position for observation. A small telescope will show its rings and the brightest of its satellites.

Jupiter is not yet above the horizon at the time for which the map is given but by the end of June it will rise in the south-east in Sagittarius soon after sunset.

Mars and Venus are both in the north-western sky in the early evening but Venus will be too close to the sun to be seen until the end of June when it may be seen in the twilight not far from the horizon.

Mars is farther east of the sun than Venus but it will be lost to view before the month is over as it is now no brighter than a second magnitude star because of its great distance from the earth. Venus will be seen because of its exceptional brilliancy though closer to the sun than Mars.

ADENOIDS EASY TO REMOVE

If your child is a finicky eater and is apparently undernourished there is a possible chance that he suffers from adenoids.

Adenoids are a superflous growth, which form at the roof of the nasal passages.

Because of their location they prevent the passage of air through the nose, and the child breathes through the mouth.

Because the air does not pass through the nose the child possesses little sense of smell, and also suffers in the sense of taste.

Food that has no taste is disagreeable to the child, and does not stimulate the appetite.

Adenoids are not difficult to remove. A surgeon can take them out without seriously endangering the life of the patient.

In addition to the loss of smell and taste, adenoids tend to produce a receding chin. This as a result of keeping the mouth open for breathing.

When the doctor examines the child for adenoids also have him examine the tonsils.

Decayed tonsils are the cause of numerous ills.

HOW TO REACH DISPOSAL SITE

Seekers For Work Should Avoid Tramping Over Private Property.

LONG WAY ROUND.

Considerable trouble is being experienced by those endeavoring to reach the scene of operations at the new sewage disposal plant site, as the way to this location is not very well known. There is a right-of-way by road from the River Road between McMartinville and the old Welch's brickyard, a quarter of a mile further south than McMartinville. The plant is situated directly across from the foot of Park Street, which is the nearest point by foot.

It would seem reasonable that anyone wishing employment in this connection should apply to the City Engineer and avoid a lot of lost time and a long, hot walk for nothing, as it is understood that at the present time all the help that is necessary is on the job. The practice of walking along the river bank over private property in defiance of no trespassing notices is likely to result in a police court case.

Announcement

Our catalogue for 1925-26 is ready for distribution. It gives complete information concerning our courses, tuition rates, dormitory accommodations, employment for students who are obliged to earn part of their expenses, and opportunities for our graduates.

This is the largest professional school of college grade in the world devoted exclusively to training men for the duties of office manager, cost accountant, auditor, comptroller, treasurer, credit man, and public accountant. It requires two years to complete our courses and be ready for a good position with a promising future.

Men who have completed the classical general, technical, or commercial course in a high school are admitted without entrance examinations.

The demand in business is for specialists, for men qualified to do some one thing particularly well. Our graduates are in demand because they are equipped with a training which, coupled with business experience, qualifies them ultimately as specialists in the great field of accounting and finance. If you aspire to a successful career in business, fit yourself for something more than a mere clerical position; otherwise, your chances to become an executive are much less favorable.

To be Bently-trained carries prestige in business.

Through our placement bureau we have filled more than 600 positions during the past two years. Send for catalog.

SECRET CHURCH WEDDING NOW FOR EARL OF CARDIGAN

Locked Doors and Police Kept Curious Public Outside

WRONG AGES

Somerset House Official Says Ceremony Legal Just the Same

The young Earl and Countess of Cardigan, whose secret marriage at a register office last July was disclosed recently, have been re-married at St. Mark's Church, North Audley street, W.

The secrecy in which the religious service was wrapped almost equalled that of the civil ceremony. The time of the service was kept secret, and it was held behind locked doors, with police to ensure the exclusion of the general public.

Spectators waited from 9 o'clock, but it was not until 12.30 that the Earl's parents, the Marquis and Marchioness of Ailesbury, drove up to the doors of the vicarage in a Daimler, accompanied by Mrs. Gerald Madden, the bridegroom's aunt, and the Rev. G. H. Schofield-Frobisher, vicar of St. Katharine's, Savernake Forest, Wilts, and chaplain to the Marquis. They entered the church through a private entrance.

Shortly afterwards Lady Cardigan arrived in a taxi at the back entrance to the church, with three friends.

Lord Cardigan drove up alone in a taxi from the Great Western Hotel, Paddington.

It is understood that the service, without music, was conducted by the Rev. J. Pennyman, vicar of St. Mark's, assisted by the Marquis' chaplain.

The Marquis and Marchioness left by the vicarage entrance, and the three friends who accompanied the bride by the back entrance.

"ESCAPE" FROM CHURCH.

The Earl and Countess were conducted by the verger, through winding passages and stairways, through the Polytechnic School, which adjoins St. Mark's, emerging into the street some 30 yards away. The verger then walked in one direction and the couple, arm-in-arm, in the other direction along a couple of by-streets to Grosvenor Square, where a taxi was hailed. The shining "topper" of the Earl, however, disclosed his identity, and the crowd quickly surged towards them and gave them hearty cheers.

It is stated that inquiries are to be made at Somerset House in view of the difference between the ages given by the Earl of Cardigan at the register office and in the "Peerages" and books of references.

An official at Somerset House said that the authorities there were unlikely to take any proceedings.

The ages of both the Earl and of Miss Salter—as she then was—were given at the Register Office as 22. The Earl was born in July, 1904, and his bride in 1905.

The official pointed out that no proceedings could have the effect of nullifying the marriage, which, once registered, despite any inaccuracy as to age, was legal.

MAN BOUGHT BAR OF GOLD OVER COUNTER

Carried from Bank of England Wrapped in Newspaper

A man walked out of the Bank of England with a bar of gold weighing 28 pound and worth nearly £1,750. It was wrapped up in a copy of a newspaper, but might have been merely a bar of soap, so nonchalant was the man who carried it.

Representing a large firm of manufacturing jewellers, he had been to buy a bar of gold. It was handed to him across the counter in exchange for notes.

Manufacturing jewellers, who for years past could only purchase gold from bullion dealers or assayers, can now obtain it at the Bank of England.

The man with the two stone of gold did not walk very far, but went to the office of his firm in a taxicab.

The bar measured 10 inches long by 3 inches wide and half an inch deep.

The price of gold is now £3 17s. 10½d. per standard ounce.

PRACTICAL JOKER HOAXES HOSPITALS

Asked Collectors to Call for Donations in Eastbourne

Eastbourne's practical joker has been busy again.

Forged letters to tradesmen resulted in quantities of goods being delivered to Mr. and Mrs. Henty, of Avondale road.

Now the secretaries of the Princess Alice Hospital and the Leaf Hospital, acting on instructions received in letters, sent collectors to receive donations of £5 and £7 respectively, only to find they had been hoaxed.

Mr. and Mrs. Henty have received a letter in block type from the hoaxer expressing regret for any annoyance caused to them and promising that it will not occur again.

CYCLIST LOST HIS TROUSERS IN DITCH

R. E. Whitley, of Egham, while motor-cycling, took the wrong turning and drove into a deep ditch.

His bicycle fell on top of him, and the contents of the petrol tank were emptied over him.

His acetylene lamp ignited the petrol, and by the time the flames were extinguished nothing but the waistband remained of his trousers.

Whitley was removed to hospital suffering severely from burns.

SLEEP WALKER WHO CLIMBED FENCES, MET DEATH ON RAILS

William Barnes, aged 27, a clerk of Christian-road, Preston, walked in his sleep to his death at Preston station.

Barnes got over the back yard wall by a step ladder, dropped 6 feet on to a horse siding, then 4 feet on to a railway line, and crossed three sets of metals before being killed by a goods train. He was clad in a shirt.

A brother stated that Barnes had been known to walk in his sleep since boyhood, but not to leave the house.

SWAN SMASHED MOTORIST'S NOSE

Vicious Pair of Birds Attacked Car Driver and Laborer

While T. L. Burlen, of Corporation street, Birmingham, was motoring between Bishop's Stortford and Cambridge in the early hours of the morning a full-grown male swan flew into the windscreen, smashing it to splinters.

When Burlen attempted to remove it from the driving seat, it attacked him, one blow of a wing breaking his nose and rendering him unconscious for a few minutes.

The swan's mate, flying with it, alighted and put up a big fight, when a farm laborer appeared with a pitchfork. The mate kept guard on the injured bird's body and attacked both the motorist and the laborer when they approached the dying swan to put it out of its misery.

FOUR MEN DASHED TO DEATH IN PIT

Safety Apparatus in Scottish Mine Failed to Operate

Four men were dashed nearly a thousand feet to death by a mishap to the cage at a colliery near Carluke, Lanarkshire, yesterday morning.

They were in the cage, about to be lowered to their work. The pithead-man signalled "All right," and drew away the "shuts" on which the cage rested.

But instead of being lowered the cage began to rise towards the winding gear. About 10 feet above the cage is placed a safety apparatus intended to prevent the cage being drawn over the winding wheels. This apparatus, which had been renewed only a few days ago, released the catch which holds the rope, and the cage should then have been caught by a hook. But for some reason this failed to act, and the cage began to descend.

A young man who was approaching the shaft to go down said: "It was all over in a few seconds." He heard the men shout as the cage started to descend at great speed. Then came the terrible crash as the cage reached the bottom 160 fathoms (960 feet) below.

When the scene was reached later it was found that the cage was completely wrecked, and on top of it were the four dead bodies.

CROYDON PROVIDES LARGEST CARILLON

Fifty-three Bells Cast for New York Baptist Church

The largest and most complete carillon in the world has just been completed by Messrs. Gillet and Johnston, of Croydon. It comprises 53 bells, to be hung in the Park Avenue Baptist Church, in New York.

The total weight of the bells is 50 tons and the frame and fittings are about the same weight.

The bells were rung for the first time yesterday by Chevalier Jef Denyn, the famous carillonneur of St. Rombolds Cathedral, Malines, and principal of the Belgian National School of Carillonneurs. The beauty of their tone was striking, and the recital is to be repeated in the course of a few days before members of the Worshipful Companies of Clockmakers and Musicians.

FAIR MARKSMAN HAS BISLEY AMBITIONS

Girl of Seventeen Has Many Successes With Rifle

Her chief successes since she began shooting at the age of 15 are:

97.47 out of a possible 100 for 19 matches in the Printer's League.

Winner of the women's competition in the Printer's Bisley.

Aggregate medal for Messrs. W. H. Smith and Son's "B" team.

A score of 196 out of a possible 200 in 90 deliberate and 97 rapid shots at a Raynes Park competition.

"I got interested in shooting," said Miss Williams, "through watching the sport on our club rifle range. I made no headway at first because my right eye was weak, but as soon as I tried my left eye I found I had an aptitude for the sport."

SPENT £34,000; NOW CANNOT PAY FINE

Once the owner of a fortune of £34,000, Ralph Tongue, 38, was unable to pay a fine of 12s. at Leigh (Lancs.) Police Court, where he was convicted of drunkenness.

He asked for time to pay, and was allowed ten days.

Left £34,000 at the age of 18 by his grandfather, he gave up his work as a surveyor in Leigh, and abandoned himself to a life of pleasure until nothing of his fortune remained.

GRANNIE VISITED ROYAL ACADEMY TO SEE HERSELF

Old Lady from Whitechapel Made Famous by Striking Portrait

CHANCE MEETING

Painter Saw Striking Face Expression on Margate Pleasure Steamer

Oil painting No. 378 at the Royal Academy, and the subject in real life, gazed at each other recently.

Each was a speaking likeness of the other. No little detail differed. Every wrinkle, every mark of the passage of time; the very bonnet, the self-same black silk blouse with the plain little brooch; the black gabardine coat.

Society people stared at the picture and its replica in flesh and blood, while this old lady from Whitechapel, suddenly famous by the work of Alfred E. Orr, marvelled at seeing herself so embarrassingly exhibited among the mighty.

Ms. Waterhouse had strong moral support for the occasion. With her were her son and daughter, several grandchildren and one great grandchild. They were met by Mr. Orr, at whose studio in Chelsea Mrs. Waterhouse sat on many days for five weeks.

It was Mrs. Waterhouse's face that inspired Mr. Orr. He and his wife were on a Margate pleasure steamer last June. So was Mrs. Waterhouse.

Mrs. Waterhouse told a newspaper representative that she put her hand to her head, and said, "Oh, dear, I have forgotten to get the children their Margate rock!"

Mr. and Mrs. Orr were near, and, impressed by the expression on a face already lined by care and kindliness, Mrs. Orr said: "My husband would like to make a picture of you."

"I said, 'I really cannot afford to do that,'" explained Mrs. Waterhouse. "I thought they wanted me to sit for a photograph. Then Mrs. Orr told me that her husband was an artist, and would like me to sit for him, and I agreed."

So this great-grandmother of 69, with what Mr. Orr calls "a most wonderful expression," went to the studio. There she met other famous sitters, including Lord Bradbury, the man for whose autograph on Treasury notes the whole nation clamoured.

"How do you like to sit still, Mrs. Waterhouse?" asked Lord Bradbury, and Mrs. Waterhouse confessed: "I have never sat so quiet in all my life."

"When I was going into the Academy one of the attendants looked at me and said, 'Your portrait is inside. I knew you in a second.'"

Married at 19, a grandmother at 39, and in the Academy subject at 68—that is the record in brief of Mrs. Waterhouse.

She has had many troubles, and in February lost her husband after a partnership of 49 years. But she has always met life with courage, with tenderness, with determination, and with good humor. Each of these qualities has left its mark, and Mr. Orr has transferred them to canvas with wonderful sympathy.

FLYERS SUFFOCATED IN RIVER'S MUD

Mid-air Collision in Fifeshire Resulted in Nose Dive

Two Fairey aeroplanes from the Leuchars air station, in Fifeshire, collided at a height of 500 feet and both the occupants of one of the machines were killed.

The accident took place at the mouth of the River Eden, near St. Andrews. A naval lieutenant, H. L. Roseveare, of Winchester, sports officer of the camp, was flying a new aeroplane, accompanied by Corpl. T. V. Warwick.

The movements of the machine were being keenly followed by the camp staff, who saw it crash into a machine carrying a naval officer, Lieut. E. A. A. Gibbon, and Aircraftsman A. J. Stewart, about two miles from the aerodrome.

The former craft turned turtle, and, after a spinning nose-dive, fell into the mud at the river mouth.

Lieut. Gibbon's aeroplane made a forced landing on the sand, and was slightly damaged, both the occupants luckily escaping injury.

Men from the Leuchars station, who hurried to the scene, found the wrecked machine partially buried in the mud. Efforts were made to extricate the two airmen, but by the time they were got out they were dead, having been suffocated in the mud.

The machine, on crashing, caught fire, but the flames soon subsided.

6,000 GIRLS SOUGHT WEMBLEY JOBS

Four thousand girls "invaded" Wembley, in response to the Dominion Catering and Supply Company's advertisement for 40 assistants.

They began to assemble at 6 a.m., and three hours later there was a queue 200 yards long. The arrival of hundreds more led to a rush, and eventually the authorities had to call out their reserves and close all the gates.

Not anticipating such a crowd of applicants, the firm could not cope with them, and finally the services of mounted police had to be requisitioned.

In addition to the 4,000 girls who attended, about 2,000 applications were received by letter.

INMATE LEAVES £300 TO WORKHOUSE

Mrs. Cobb, a "paying guest" of Bridgewater Workhouse, has died, leaving £300 to the Board of Guardians for the benefit of her fellow inmates.

"It is an unusual bit of luck," said the chairman, at a meeting of the Board. "I have never known a similar legacy."

A committee was appointed to administer the legacy.

THE RE-OPENING OF WEMBLEY

ENORMOUS CACHE OF DRUGS FOUND

Enough Discovered in Trunk to Kill Thousands in London

OWNER MISSING

Every Description of Dope Was Packed Into Huge Box

Police officials have seized at an address in the West Central district of London a large trunk containing sufficient poisonous drugs to kill many thousands of people.

The trunk, which is about four feet long, three feet wide, and three feet high, was packed with opium, heroin, morphine, cocaine and other drugs.

If sold at the prices which illicit purveyors of drugs extort from their unfortunate victims the value of the capture would run into many thousands of pounds. Even at wholesale drug prices the value is a substantial sum.

Scotland-Yard detectives are now seeking the owner of the trunk. They have practically no information to work upon, as it has been discovered that the supposed owner is a non-existent person.

POLICE CHIEF WILL FACE THE MUSIC

Returns to Answer Fraud Charge at Wife's Pleading

After being missing for three weeks from his home adjoining the police station in the lonely village of Leven, in East Yorkshire, Police Superintendent Fred Cooper walked into the station and surrendered to a warrant charging him with fraudulently applying £6 to his own use. It was alleged that he had received the money in payment of fines.

Cooper who has a wife and son, and was shortly to retire on pension, was apparently exhausted both mentally and physically.

IN THE DOCK.

When in the dock at the Petty Sessions Cooper hung his head when charged with the offence. The Justices' clerk stated that on December 13 a man was fined £6 and this money had not been paid to him by Cooper.

Cooper was remanded to the Leven Petty Sessions. Bail was allowed, himself in £100 and two other sureties of £50. The bail was forthcoming.

Cooper had written to his wife numerous letters, the last one in a train. She had appealed to him, through a personal advertisement, to return home and told him that he could be sure of a warm welcome.

PAID IN FULL

Bankrupt Through Surety Bond, Printer Carried Out Resolve

Thirty-four creditors of Ernest Senior, head of Messrs. E. Senior and Sons, printers, of Denton, have received at Manchester full settlement of their claims, which totalled £1,446 15s. 2d.

Mr. Senior became bankrupt 28 years ago through having to fulfil a bond as surety for another undertaking. He was discharged shortly afterwards, but stated that he would never rest until his debts had been paid. To make this possible he limited his living expenses for many years to £1 a week.

At the meeting letters of appreciation were read, and those present decided to present Mr. Senior with an illuminated address or other form of acknowledgment.

COMIC KING OF MELANCHOLY DEAD

Famous English Comedian Caught Chill on Morroccan Trip

SOME HITS

"I've Gotta Motter—Always Merry and Bright" Most Popular

Alfred Lester, the famous comedian, has died in a nursing home in Madrid.

He had recently withdrawn from the cast of the "Punch Bowl" revue at the Duke of York's Theatre on the ground of ill-health; and by doctor's orders had joined a few friends in a trip to Morocco. On his way back a touch of cold weather at Madrid gave him a chill. His companions found an English doctor and nurse for him, and he felt so well that he persuaded the rest of the holiday party to go to Paris, hoping to rejoin them in a few days. Three days later, however, they had disquieting news, and at once decided to go back. The next day he was dead.

Alfred Lester was a bachelor, of modest tastes, fifty-one years of age, and for years he earned £150 a week, and it is expected that an examination of his affairs will reveal the fact that he was worth at least £100,000.

Alfred Lester on the stage was the king of comic melancholy. He began his career as Little Willie in "East Lynne" at the age of five years, and after a hard struggle he won fame. His best-remembered song was "I've gotta motter — Always Merry and Bright," in "The Arcadians."

The Duke of York's Theatre was closed on the night of his death as a mark of respect.

LADY DOUGLAS FREE TO BECOME SULTANA

Amongst 135 decrees nisi made absolute by Mr. Justice Swift, in the Divorce Court, was that granted to Lady Sholto Douglas against Lord Sholto Douglas.

On April 8 an engagement was announced between Lady Sholto Douglas and Prince Burhan-ed-Din, son of the ex-Sultan Abdul Hamid of Turkey, who lives in Vienna.

Lady Sholto Douglas is reported to have said that it was a love match. She added that the Prince expected to become Sultan of Turkey in three or four years' time.

Lady Sholto Douglas benefitted under the will of her grandfather, Mr. George Dorrepeal, one of the merchant princes of the Dutch East Indies, who left £3,000,000, and she also shared the millions bequeathed by her aunt, Mrs. Thurkow.

CHICKS' AIR SPACE WAS INSUFFICIENT

Blanche Cook, the wife of a dentist, of the Tower House, Bideford, Devon, was summoned at West London Police Court for causing 9 chickens to be conveyed from Bideford to London, in a manner likely to cause them unnecessary suffering.

She sent a letter to say that the chickens were fed and watered before despatch and should have arrived in proper condition.

Gordon Jones, for the R.S.P.C.A., said the chickens were sent in a box the floor space of which was 7 inches by 7 inches. When the box was opened all the birds were dead. They had been advertised as 5-weeks-old chickens, but were only one week old.

Mrs. Cook was fined £5 with 2 guineas costs.

SACRED RELICS OF FRENCH CONVENT, SOLDIER'S LOOT

Priceless Casquet Found in Ruins of Peronne During War

SEALS AND BONES

Authorities Claimed Finder No Rights, So Paid No Reward

Behind the announcement in the press of the return to Peronne of a famous reliquary lies a curious story of how the aid of Government Departments, Scotland Yard, the French Ambassador and high dignitaries of the Roman Catholic Church was invoked to secure the handing back of the relic by a British soldier who found it during the war, and considerel it fair loot.

The reliquary, a small casquet containing relics of saints, was found in the ruins of a convent at Peronne during the heavy fighting on the Somme in 1918 by a London soldier.

He salved it at the risk of his life, for German troops were in the neighborhood.

The gilding on the relic, and what appeared to be inlaid work of rubies and diamonds, convinced him that he had found something not merely of religious interest but of great value.

His officers gave him permission to send it home, and for a year or two this sacred relic with a history believed to go back many hundreds of years lay in his house in South London.

Fearing for its safety, the finder, a fishmonger, deposited the relic at his bank. The manager to his surprise, told him that it was priceless, and that if he had one-sixteenth of its value he would be able to retire.

The finder then decided to communicate with the Roman Catholic authorities, and wrote to the editor of the "Catholic Herald," offering to dispose of the casquet.

Eminent Catholics in this country, including Lord Balfour of Burleigh, took the matter up, and the Bishop of Amiens approached the Cardinal-Archbishop of Paris, who brought pressure to bear on the French Government. Eventually the French Ambassador in London was requested to use his good offices in the matter.

SCOTLAND YARD CALLED IN.

Thus, after more than six years, the relic picked up on the battlefield by the London soldier became an object of diplomatic negotiations.

As a result, a high official of the Catholic Church in London, told a newspaper representative yesterday, Scotland Yard was called in.

Detectives saw the man. At first he was reluctant to part with his war trophy, but it was pointed out that he might be prosecuted for being in possession of property that did not belong to him, and finally he handed it over to two officers from the Yard, through whom it was returned to its original owners.

Apparently the main raised the question of a reward, and the "Catholic Herald," states:

"We have satisfied ourselves that he has no moral or other claim upon the authorities."

The reliquary somewhat resembles a gilt picture frame, 20 inches by 14, and about 4 in depth. It contains several bones of saints and martyrs, including St. Clement, St. Vincent, St. Joan, St. Leon, St. Honore, and others. Seals of Pope Clement XII. (1730) are also in it.

MONKS BUILDING BUCKFAST ABBEY

Queen Only Woman Having Right of Entry to Edifice

The last stage in the building of the church at Buckfast Abbey, South Devon, which is occupied by a community of Benedictine monks, was begun yesterday by the laying of the first stone of the west front.

For 20 years from four to six of the monks have been working there from dawn to dusk. They have hewn the stone, mixed the mortar and conveyed materials to the site of the old abbey, which dates back to 904 A.D.

The last section of the building is expected to occupy seven years, and it is hoped to open the finished church on the 50th anniversary of the Order taking possession of the abbey on its arrival from France.

When the church was begun the lord abbot had exactly £1 in his possession, but already £20,000, voluntarily subscribed, has been expended, and thousands more will be spent before it is finished.

The abbey is sacred to man, and the only woman who has the right to enter is the Queen.

FAMOUS CONDUCTOR DIES AT CHELTENHAM

First a boy chorister in Gloucester Cathedral, then organist of Cheltenham Parish Church, and founder of the Cheltenham local festival, Mr. John Alexander Matthews has died at Cheltenham, aged 84.

During the 50 years of his connection with the festival society over 50,000 vocalists passed under his conductorship.

He gave the first public performance of any work by the late Sir Hubert Parry.

WATERLOO CANNON KILLED SOLDIER

Said to have been used at the Battle of Waterloo, a field-gun was responsible for the death of William Mills, aged 21, a driver in the Royal Horse Artillery.

He was engaged with his battery, it was stated at the inquest at St. Pancras, in practising at the Albany Street Barracks for the musical ride in the Military Tournament.

The gun-carriage skidded, struck Mills in the back, and a wheel passed over his body, fracturing his spine.

Accidental death was the verdict.

ROBIN OUTWITS HORSE WHO ATE ITS HOME, BUT IT IS STILL PUZZLED

A robin had built three nests in a stable belonging to Mr. Wilfred Godwin, of Shawford, Hants, but each time its neighbor, a large horse, ate up the home as soon as it was completed.

Not to be baffled, the robin repaired to a narrow shelf, about two inches wide, where it laid three eggs at intervals of a foot. It has been unsuccessful, however, in solving the problem of being in three places at once.

ROMANCE OF IRISH DESERTED VILLAGE

Cabby Whoe Family Once Owned it Fined for Drunkenness

CIVIL WAR

Backed South Against the North With Last Shilling and Lost All

The once flourishing condition of a now deserted village in the South of Ireland was recalled at Tranmere, near Waterford, on Saturday, when a cab dryer, who is a member of the family that formerly owned the village, and was then one of the richest and most powerful in the country, was fined for drunkenness and reckless driving.

He is George Malcomson, and the now deserted village is Portlaw, eleven miles west of Waterford.

The Malcomson's cotton and woollen factory still stands there, and old inhabitants recall the time when it was never closed, night or day, and every child in the village, some 3,000 in all, was employed there.

In those days the Malcomson's had their own cotton fields in the Southern States of America, ran their own ships across the Atlantic, exporting cloth and importing cotton, issued their own leather money, which was recognized legal tender, and kept a pack of hounds and a little army of servants.

Then came the American Civil War, and as their interests were bound up with the South, they backed them with their last shilling against the North, and lost.

French nuns now occupy the Malcomson mansion, and Portlaw is almost a deserted village, with about 900 people where once were over 3,000.

VICAR BANS BELLS FOR CHURCH BANNS

Thinks Peals Out of Place Announcing "Life Sentence"

The vicar of St. Paul's, Addlestone, Surrey (the Rev. A. Cumming), is looking for trouble. There are parishioners who may not let his description of marriage as "a life sentence" pass unnoticed.

In his parish magazine he refers to the fact that in some parishes a bell is still rung to announce the banns of marriage have been published.

"I give notice," he adds, "that there will be no banns' bell rung from Addlestone Church tower during the present vicar's incumbency.

"Just fancy ringing a peal from the belfry after the announcement of an impending life sentence. I would not authorize even a muffled peal."

BUILDER MADE SURE OF BEING DROWNED

Tied Tank to Neck and Pushed it Overboard from Punt

A man's unusual method of suicide was described at an East Molesey inquest yesterday. It was stated that Frederick James Smith, aged 50, who had been employed by a local building firm for 40 years:

Left home early one morning, went to the bank of the River Molt, tied a heavy tank to his neck with his scarf and a piece of rope, and got into a punt, from which he pushed the tank, being dragged into the river with it.

A verdict of suicide whilst of unsound mind was recorded.

BAPTIST MINISTER SUCCUMBS TO GRIEF

Octogenarian Took to His Bed After Brother's Funeral

The Rev. Jabez Parnell, aged 84, the Baptist Minister of Stretham, was found dead in bed the day after the funeral of his 79-year-old brother, Thomas Parnell, to whom he was devotedly attached.

It is believed that he died of grief. Mr. Jabez Parnell was a remarkable man for his age. He had never been attended by a doctor, and, until a year ago, was the finest skater in that part of the country.

He learned to ride a motor-cycle at the age of seventy-four, and was in the habit of riding from Stretham to London and back in one day—a distance of 140 miles. He made this journey as recently as a week previously.

TORCHES MADE COPPERS GLISTEN IN COLLECTION BOXES LIKE SOVEREIGNS

Out of £370 collected at a torchlight procession in aid of the funds of voluntary hospitals in Aberdeen, £117 consisted of halfpennies.

This represented 56,160 "bawbees." Perhaps the donors mistook theme for other coins in the flickering light of the torches!

LOADED BREAD WITH MERCURY TO SEEK FOR MISSING GIRL

Legendary Custom Tried in River Avon Without Success

WIDE SEARCH

Sir Oliver Lodge Suggests Clairvoyant's Services Be Engaged

A group of ex-Service men stood on the bank of the River Avon near Amesbury recently watching a loaf of bread bloating in mid-stream.

The bread contained perchloride of mercury, which had been thrown into the river in the hope that it might be attracted to the body of Elsie Alice Ford, the 17-year-old nursemaid, who had been missing from the village of Amesbury for nine days and it is thought may have been drowned.

The bread was thrown into the water above a weir known as Ham's Hatches, and again below it, but without result.

To search for a body with a loaf containing mercury is a well-known old practice, which, it is stated, has sometimes been successful. It is described in Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn."

In 1921 John Byrne, 65, an employe of Messrs. Brunner, Mond, and Co., was drowned at Wheelock, Sandbach, Cheshire. After six days' dragging operations bread loaded with mercury was tried and is said to have stopped directly over the body, which was then recovered without a drama.

CLAIRVOYANCE IDEA

Sir Oliver Lodge, who has just returned from France to his house near Amesbury, is not inclined to attach much importance to the bread and mercury method, but thinks that something might be done by means of clairvoyance.

"I am afraid the mercury theory is all superstition," he told a reporter. "I have heard it as a legend and as an old tradition among the country people.

"Of course, there are weeds in the river and the body might well be found entangled in them. If it were possible to obtain a clairvoyant, however, and to give that person something belonging to the missing girl, assuming that she is dead, that might prove of some value in finding out where she is, but of course it is problematical."

A modest, good-looking girl, happy in her work as maid to Lieut. and Mrs. Beatty, at Bulford, she went out on the evening of Saturday, April 25, to buy some fish for supper, and failed to return.

Over 200 men, volunteers from the district, mustered by the local branch of the British Legion, have made an organized search of the country-side without result.

They were marshalled near the Queensberry Bridge, on which, it is stated, the girl was last seen, and were under the guidance of ex-Sergt.-Major Jack Martin. A number of girls, members of the railway staff and postmen also took part in the search.

The band of searchers advanced in extended order like soldiers in attack.

The river banks and woods were closely examined, holes in the river in which horses and sheep have been known to disappear, were carefully probed, but no sign of the girl's body was found.

MOVIE "TORTURES" APPLIED TO BOY

Juvenile Beaten and Buried in Sand on Caister Beach

A 12-year-old boy compelled a boy of seven to undress on the beach at Caister, Norfolk, then, ordering him to stoop, beat him with a spade. Next the little victim was driven into the sea, and on coming out of the water he was blindfolded, buried in the sands up to his neck, with sand stuffed into his mouth and ears.

The boy's mother said she found her child naked in a nervous condition and he did not know her.

Dr. H. E. Taylor said there was more bruising than he had ever seen on anyone. Great violence must have been used.

When Inspector Mansford asked why he did it, defendant said because he had seen it on the pictures.

The Rollesby Bench adjourned the case to arrange for the boy to be sent to a reformatory.

BIRD FOUGHT ITS IMAGE IN WINDO

A dipper (or water ouzel), a bird rarely seen away from the moors and mountain burns, has surprised a Scottish household by prolonged fights with its reflection in a window.

Mr. E. E. Dennis, of Crawley, Sussex, describing this behavior, says that the bird, a male, "frequently woke us in the early morning with flutterings against the glass and vicious pecks at its reflection. Blackbirds often do this in spring, but have never before heard of a dipper doing so."

Mr. Dennis photographed the bird during a pause in its onslaught, showing how it "perked itself up" to deliver its blows.

Cats will frequently have a physical argument with their reflection.

GIRL'S KNOCK WAS CAUSE OF DEAT

Robert Burnell, aged 15, of Wi pool, Exmoor, put two cartridges in a gun in order to scare rooks.

He was holding the weapon with muzzle slightly depressed and fingers on the trigger when a you sister accidentally knocked his el causing the gun to go off.

A younger brother, Frederick, received the charge in the abdomen and died soon after. The story was at the inquest, when a verdict death by misadventure was retur

Cynthia Grey Says

"For the east is east, and the west is west, and never the twain shall meet."

Kipling's oft quoted lines may not be true in one respect in these days of rapid communication and airplane travel, but they can be taken quite literally in another.

The verse does not apply to those impulsive marriages of people of different traits, customs and associations.

So many people fail to realize that a sudden sweep of passion in either a man or a woman who meets some one of an entirely different class can be easily mistaken for love. How often have you seen a girl of the highest culture and education attracted by a man with absolutely none?

And even outside the movies and fiction there are many cases of college graduates being attracted by a girl who has spent all her life in an entirely different class.

Usually marriage is a matter of impulse. And unless either the girl or man has very exceptional natural ability to bridge over the gap these impulsive matings result in unhappiness.

IS THIS YOUR BIRTHDAY

MONDAY, JUNE 1—If today is your birthday, your first inclination will be to engage in some work or profession, not generally associated with your sex. For instance, if a woman, you will want to be a lawyer. If a man, you will study to be a stenographer. The chances are that you will be more successful in life, if you side-track your first inclination and take up some work more suited to your sex. You will have only a few love affairs and will be married either in April or August. You are born under the zodiacal sign of Gemini, and because of this will have a strong religious nature.

She tried Lux for dishwashing
-now she uses it as a toilet soap, too

(Letter received from a lady in Ontario)

Dear Sirs:

Lately I have seen many articles written in praise of Lux. But I never yet have seen one extolling its use as a personal soap for dainty women. Until I used Lux three times a day to wash dishes with, I was grieved to see my hands getting disfigured, in fact I was ashamed of them when playing the piano. Finding that by using Lux for the purpose they soon became as nice as ever, I tried it in my daily ablution water, including bath! And now, I find the effect of using Lux far more softening on the skin.

Yours truly,

Lux for dishwashing, of course. Nothing better!

But use pure, dainty Lux for your daily toilet and bath, too! You will find it delightfully refreshing. Lux contains no free alkali and does not dry up the oils in the skin. The gentle, creamy Lux lather is soothing to the most sensitive skin and keeps it soft and smooth.

HERE'S THE NOVEL THAT SET THE WORLD TALKING. NOW IN PICTURES!

The book sensation of years now comes to the screen—the story of a reckless youth in whose veins runs the blood of caveman ancestry is a story that will carry motion picture audiences into hitherto unexplored lands of thrills. In this film drama appears the most amazing lover who ever stepped forth from the pages of fiction. Here is a picture that gives new meaning to romance.

John Gilbert, Aileen Pringle, and Eleanor Boardman Head Big Cast in Elaborate Production, By King Vidor, of Cyril Hume's Sensational Novel.

A film production with many brilliant scenes, and one which tells a most unusual love story is "Wife of the Centaur," King Vidor's production which opens for 3 days at the Regent Theatre.

Taken from the novel by Cyril Hume, which caused such a widespread sensation when it was published, the story has as its theme, the infidelity of man, and the eternal conflict of love and passion which goes on within him.

The story is interesting also in that it goes to demonstrate once more the versatility of its director, King Vidor. In his last few pictures, Vidor has gone from the exotic love stories of Elinor Glyn to the morbid realism of Joseph Hergesheimer's "Wild Oranges," and has made excellent photoplays of each subject.

Has a Great Cast.

Three well-known leading men, three equally popular leading women who have been featured in many pictures, and a host of character players, make up the cast.

John Gilbert heads the list of players as Jeffrey Dwyer, the "centaur" of the story, and Eleanor Boardman is the wife.

Aileen Pringle, who became a popular screen figure in "Three Weeks" as "True As Steel," has a part equally important as those of Mr. Gilbert and Miss Boardman.

"MME. SANS GENE" A GLORIA SWANSON CINEMASTERPIECE

First Motion Picture Ever to Play Broadway at Five Dollars a Seat.

The first motion picture ever to play at Broadway at five dollars a seat—that's the repuation "Madame Sans Gene," hailed as Gloria Swanson's cinemasterpiece, made for itself at its opening performance in New York. Moreover, the theatre was packed to the rafters for the occasion, with hundreds of unsuccessful applicants for seats and a crowd of several thousands giving the police a tussle outside the theatre in their efforts to get into the place and also to catch a glimpse of Miss Swanson and her French nobleman-husband, the Marquis de la Falaise de a Coudraye.

Manager Crowe has booked "Madame Sans Gene" at the Capitol Theatre, starting today.

Even for Gloria Swanson, whose screen efforts are always acted in elaborate settings and gowns, "Madame Sans Gene" is an unusually luxurious production. It was filmed in France, and the backgrounds include the palaces at Versailles, Fontainebleau and Compiege, spots hitherto forbidden to motion picture directors. Gloria is seen sleeping in the actual golden bed of Marie Antoinette, flirting in the gardens where that unfortunate queen conducted her amorous intrigues, and coquetting with Napoleon (Emile Drain) in the actual private chamber which the real Napoleon occupied. The results are said to be startlingly realistic in the extreme.

In "Madame Sans Gene" (Madame Deed-May-Care), Miss Swanson has the role of the witty, flirtatious little French laundress, who used to wash Napoleon's shirts for him, when he was an impecunious corporal, who married one of Napoleon's sergeants and who was swept by the French Revolution into the title of Duchess and residence in Napoleon's court, where she alternately scandalized and sent into hilarious laughter the haughty lords and ladies, ending by saving the Empress's honor and winning for herself Napoleon's eternal gratitude.

"OH, YES" IT'S A GREAT SHOW

If anyone should ask you to name the best show in Canada today, just say "Oh Yes!" That's the proper answer. Two words; the first in two letters meaning an exclamation, and the second in three letters meaning an affirmative. There you have it—"Oh, Yes!"—That's the attractive title of the new "Dumbells" revue.

From all reports emanating from the cities where the company is now playing, the new vehicle has all the class of a Rolls-Royce, sport model; and with just as much speed.

The entire cast, chorus and orchestra that helped to make "Ace High" the sensation of 1925, have apparently put over something even better with "Oh, Yes!"

The revue is definitely stated to be entirely new from the overture to the finale.

The Dumbells will offer "Oh, Yes!" here at the Grand Theatre for two days commencing Monday, June 8th.

DIX A STAR IN GREAT PICTURE

Paramount's "Manhattan" at Royal To-Day.

All who enjoy real fast-moving action-drama will be right in their glory when Richard Dix's first Paramount starring picture, "Manhattan," opens at the Royal Theatre today for a run of three days. The story is an adaptation by Paul Sloane and Frank Tuttle of the novel, "The Definite Object," by Jeffery Farnol.

The star has the role of Peter Minuit whose great-great-great-grandfather purchased the island of Manhattan from the Indians and Peter is all for giving it back to them. "There might be some life in the old town then," says he.

You take it from this that Minuit is slightly bored with life. He is just that—a millionaire bachelor who has everything in life except that which he craves most—action, adventure, a definite object, something to live for, to strive to be worthy of. He finds action-plus in New York's Hell's Kitchen and a definite object in the beautiful sister of a youthful yegg whom he befriends.

Jacqueline Logan has the leading feminine role opposite the star. Gregory Kelly, George Seigmann, Gunboat Smith also have important parts. Oscar Figman, Edna May Oliver and Alice Chapin complete the cast. R. H. Burnside directed.

If you liked Dix in "Unguarded Women," "Sinners in Heaven," etc., see what you think of him in "Manhattan," a story all his own.

Little Red Riding Hood

Once upon a time there lived by the side of a deep wood a very pretty little girl who was so sweet and good that every one loved her. All the people in the village and even the woodcutters in the forest were very fond of her and would often stop to talk with her as she strayed off into the woods, looking for wild flowers for her mother.

The little girl's grandmother, who lived alone on the other side of the wood, had made her a little red cloak and hood which became her so well that every one called her Little Red Riding Hood.

One bright summer afternoon her mother said, "Your grandmother is not very well and I think it would cheer her up if you went over to see her. I will fill your little basket with fresh eggs and butter and a nice cake. Would you like to take them to her?"

"Yes, mother," said Little Red Riding Hood, who was always glad to do anything to make others happy. "I shall be glad to go."

So her mother prepared the basket and the little girl set out on the path that wound through the wood to her grandmother's house.

She had been in the woods but a short time when she heard some woodchoppers, so she left the path and went over where the sound came from. There she came upon two woodcutters who knew her.

"Well, well!" said one of them. "Here is our little friend with the red cape. Come and sit under this tree and have a good cool drink from our jug."

"Thank you," replied the little girl, "you are always so kind to me."

She rested and talked for a while and then told the woodcutters that she must leave them, as she was going through the wood to see her grandmother.

"Aren't you afraid you'll get lost?" asked one of the men.

"Oh no!" she replied, "I know the way and have been there many times." Then she went on her way.

As Little Red Riding Hood was in the depth of the wood she met a great wolf. Now this wolf was very hungry and wanted to eat the little girl, but he was afraid of the woodcutters who were not so very far away. So he came up and asked very politely where she was going.

Of course Little Red Riding Hood did not know how dangerous it is to talk to a wolf; and since she had always been taught to be polite she replied, "I'm on my way to my grandmother's with some nice things for her to eat."

"Is it very far?" asked the wolf.

"Oh, yes, it is 'way out on the other side of the wood, the first house in the village."

"I hope you will not be lonesome," said the wolf; "I should like to go with you to keep you company, but I have an errand to do and I must be trotting along. I hope your grandmother enjoys the things you are taking her," and with that he disappeared into the wood; but as soon as he was out of her sight he took the shortest way through the forest toward the home of the little girl's grandmother and ran as fast as he could.

Little Red Riding Hood was in no hurry. She chased butterflies and picked wild flowers, enjoying the afternoon. As she crossed a brook she stopped to watch the little fishes swimming about under the old bridge. It was so pleasant in the woods that she had little thought of time.

When the wolf reached the grandmother's door, he knocked, "toc, toc, toc."

"Who is there?" asked the grandmother.

"It is your grandchild, Little Red Riding Hood, who has come to visit you and has brought you a present from her mother," replied the wolf.

"Just pull the latchstring and the door will open," said the old lady, who was too ill to get out of bed.

So the wolf opened the door and dashed in and soon ate up the old grandmother, for he was very hungry indeed.

Then the wolf shut the door again, and tucked himself away very snugly in grandmother's bed, with her nightcap on his head.

It was so warm and pleasant in bed and so quiet in the little house that the wolf could scarcely keep awake. By and by when he could keep awake no longer and was just beginning to doze, there came a tap, tap, tap, at the door.

"Who is there?" called out the wolf, making his voice as soft as possible.

"It is Little Red Riding Hood, grandmother, and I have brought you some very nice things to eat," said a voice from outside.

Then the wolf, still talking very softly, called out, "Pull the latchstring, my dear, and the door will open. I am too ill to get up to let you in."

So Little Red Riding Hood opened the door and went in.

"Good morning, grandmother dear," she said; "I'm so sorry you are ill."

"I have felt very badly for many days," said the wolf, trying to hide himself under the bedclothes. "I have been hoping you would come to see me, for I get so lonesome."

"But Grandma," said the little girl, "don't the woodcutters pass your door every morning and evening? Any time you need us I am sure they would bring us word."

As the day was drawing to a close, the thought that the woodcutters might come along at any time caused the wolf some alarm. So he resolved to wait no longer than was necessary. In his anxiety he forgot to soften his voice and Little Red Riding Hood turned quickly and said:

"How very strange and hoarse your voice sounds, grandmother," said the little girl. "It is generally so soft and pleasant."

"I have a very bad cold, my dear," replied the wicked wolf.

"Grandmother, how very big and bright your eyes are!" went on Little Red Riding Hood, surprised to note how strange her grandmother looked.

"The better to see you, my dear," said the wolf.

"Then Little Red Riding Hood began to prepare supper for her grandmother. She spread the table and placed on it the butter and cake from her basket and then turned to ask her grandmother where to find the other things; but when she looked again she said, "Grandmother, what great big ears you have. I never noticed them before!"

"The better to hear you, my dear," replied the wolf, who was getting tired of waiting.

"Grandmother, how very long your arms are!"

"The better to hug you with, my child."

"But grandmother," said Little Red Riding Hood, who was beginning to get frightened, "what great big teeth you have!"

"The better to eat you with!" roared the wicked wolf, as he jumped out of the bed to spring upon the little girl.

Just as the wolf was about to eat her up she screamed very loudly. Then there was a great noise outside and the door burst open. In rushed two woodcutters who were passing by on their way home from work. They had seen the wolf hurrying through the wood toward the village and had kept on the lookout to see what mischief he was up to.

When the wolf saw the woodcutters he fought very hard to get away; but they soon killed him. They were terribly angry that the wolf had tried to eat up their little friend.

So the woodcutters walked home with Little Red Riding Hood, one on each side of her, and returned her safely to her mother, who was greatly worried because the little girl had stayed so long.

She thanked the woodcutters as only a mother could for bringing Little Red Riding Hood safely home, and she insisted that they stay for an excellent supper which she prepared for them.

Early next morning, all the woodsmen for miles around started out to kill every wolf to be found in the forest. Within a very short time not a wolf was left in all the country, and then Little Red Riding Hood knew that she could safely chase butterflies and pick wild flowers anywhere she pleased. And she never forgot how kind the woodcutters had been to her.

THREE HOME RUNS PUNCTUATED PETES' PERFORMANCE IN OSHAWA

HECKMAN'S TRIPLE SCORED THREE

Rose, Ross and Hall Crashed Duke Dainty For Three Long Ones.

HECKMAN'S WIN.

Johnston Squad Scored Third Victory of Week in Oshawa Saturday.

(By F. D. C.)

Manager Shiner Johnston's Petes hung up their third victory of the week in Oshawa on Saturday, when in a game featured by the long distance hitting of the winners, they defeated the Motor City crew 8 runs to 5.

The Petes have not been noted for long drives; as a rule they have required a flock of hits to get runs. Saturday, however, they broke out in a perfect rash of tall clouting, their ten hits including home runs by Ray Rose, Bob Ross and Jimmy Hall and a three cushion wallop by Al. Heckman.

Incidentally the pitcher's triple was the most fruitful blow of all for it came with the sacks densely populated and thus was cashed in for three good runs.

Heckman was on the firing line for the Petes and annexed his second win of the season, holding Oshawa to eight hits. The Petes' right-hander lacked the usual zip on his fast ball but he used his hook to good advantage, did not give a base on balls and with more accurate support in the early stages would have escaped with only a brace of runs registered against him. Oshawa's first three counters were helped by fielding misplays, but after the third innings the Petes' defensive work was air-tight and snappy.

Dainty Came Late.

"Duke" Dainty was to have started the game for Oshawa but the well known southpaw must have been the victim of sleeping sickness for he did not arrive on the scene until the batteries had been announced with Lennox, Oshawa's new left-hander on the hill top.

It was Mr. Lennox's debut in the Central League and he'll remember it.

He faced only four batters but when he departed in favour of the tardy Mr. Dainty three runs had been scored and the Petes had a man on third.

It happened in this wise.

Legon walked, Rose and Swanston bunted safely and Heckman hit the first ball pitched to him for a long three-base hit to left, counting three runs.

Dainty answered Manager Reeves' S.O.S. signal then and after Harrison had singled Heckman home, succeeded in breaking up the party.

Circuit Wallops.

The southpaw showing considerable steam got along in great style until the sixth when the sudden Peterboro mania for circuit wallops made its appearance.

Rose started it with a homer between left and centre, scoring Legon who had singled just before.

Bob Ross followed with another four-ply blow in the seventh and Jimmy Hall came back with the third in the eighth. Unfortunately the sacks on both occasions were as deserted as a Glasgow street on tag day.

These very pleasing long distance raps came at a very opportune time inasmuch as Oshawa had been pecking away at the Petes' early lead and twice crept within one run of tieing the score. The crash of three homers in three successive innings, however, took most of the enthusiasm out of the motorists and they passed out of the picture very meekly in the last three frames, Roddick being the only foeman to reach first.

Smart Defensive Work.

There was some nice fielding stunts with Oshawa's defensive work, better than that of the Petes, a wide throw by Ward being their only error. Roddick's catch of Holyman's long fly in deep left and Dinnen's grab of Harrison's torrid liner featured for the losers, while Rose's smart play on W. Fair's hard rap over second, a one-handed pick up by Holyman and a nice catch by Hall of a hard hit ball from Dainty's bat were bright spots for the Petes. McPherson played third for the winners and handled himself nicely.

Four In First.

Lennox got away to a bad start. He could not get the ball over for Legon who walked and Rose and Swanston beat out bunts down the first and third base lines respectively, to fill the bases. Heckman promptly unloaded them by booming out a triple over Roddick's head in left, Legon, Rose and Swanston registering. This was enough for Lennox and Dainty went to the firing line. Harrison greeted the Duke with a crashing single past third on which Heckman trotted home. Ross forced Harrison on a grounder to Dineen. McPherson fouled out to Dineen. Holyman singled through short. Morrison made a fine play on Hall's hard hit drive to short, robbing the batter of a hit by tossing to Rowden in time to force Holyman

Oshawa got two back in their half. Dineen first up lifted a high fly in short right field. It should have been Ross's ball but the right fielder fell and Hall had to sprint over from centre and the ball trickled out of his hands, Dineen reaching second. It was an excusable error. W. Fair singled to left, Dineen stopping at third. Rowden's sacrifice fly to Legon scored Dineen and after Tyson had popped to Holyman, Roddick singled over second, scoring Fair who had advanced to third after Heckman had thrown past second trying to nip him off that bag.

Legon led off for the Petes in the second with a single to left. Rose fanned and Swanston skied to Morrison. Heckman drew a pass but Harrison's high fly in short right was gathered in by Rowden.

For Oshawa Ward fanned and Reg. Fair flied to Ross. Dainty singled to centre, only to have Dineen pop to McPherson.

The Petes did not do much with Dainty in the third. Ross was called out on strikes, McPherson walked Holyman fanned and Hall flied to Walter Fair.

The motorists cut another run off the Petes' lead. W. Fair got a life when Holyman dropped his fly in short left. He stole second and went to third on Swanston's low throw, scoring when Rowden hit to McPherson, who threw home too late to get Fair. Tyson flied to Legon and Roddick lined to Hall. Morrison singled to left but Ward lifted an easy one to Holyman.

Legon was safe on Ward's wide throw to open the fourth but Rose and Swanston were retired on strikes and Heckman hit to Ward for a force play on Legon at second.

Heckman made short work of Oshawa in this frame, striking out Reg. Fair and Dainty and getting Dineen on a high fly to Harrison.

Harrison, first up in the fifth, cracked a vicious liner at Dineen who made a fine catch of what started out like a home run drive. Ross flied to Roddick and McPherson missed three.

McPherson made a running pick up and a fast throw to retire W. Fair in Oshawa's half. Rowden singled to left but Tyson lined to son.

Ross Hits Homer.

The Petes' home run epidemic broke out in the sixth. After Holyman had fanned and Hall flied out to Morrison, Legon singled to left. A few moments later he was sprinting home ahead of Ray Rose on the latter's smashing drive between Roddick and R. Fair for the circuit. The ball rolled so far that there was not play at the plate. Swanston was thrown out by Tyson.

Rose's homer made the score 6 to 3 but Oshawa again cut the lead down to one in their half. Morrison flied to Holyman but Ward doubled over third and Reg. Fair tripled to centre to score the third baseman. He registered himself a moment later when "Heck" pulled and accidental balk by hitting his arm against his leg in starting his wind up and dropping the ball. Dainty grounded to Harrison and Dineen fanned.

Ross Slammed One.

Homer No. 2 came in the seventh. Heckman flied to Rowden. Harrison was called out on a batted ball from his own bat that hit him on foul territory and rolled fair. Then Bob Ross met one of Dainty's fast ones for a clean home between Reg. and Walter Fair, the ball rolling nearly to the race track while Ross went all the way round. McPherson ended the frame by striking out.

In Oshawa's half Walter Fair was thrown out by McPherson, Rowden hoisted to Holyman and Rose took care of Tyson's fly.

Hall Made It Three.

Jimmy Hall came through with the Petes third circuit rap in the eighth. Holyman made a good bid for one opening the inning but Roddick playing deep took his long high fly back of the foul flag in left field. Then Hall crashed a liner to right, the ball hopping high over W. Fair's head and rolling to the track while the young outfielder circled the bases, giving the Petes the third homer in three innings. Legon was retired on strikes and Dainty robbed Rose of a hit by breaking down his hard smash and getting the batter at first.

Roddick gave Oshawa a start by singling over second and advancing on a wild pitch but "Heck" whiffed Morrison and Ward and Rose made a great play on R. Fair's smash over second to retire the hitter.

In the ninth Swanston was thrown out by Tyson. Heckman walked. Harrison flied to W. Fair and Ross struck out.

Dainty flied out to Hall, the centre fielder going back and making a nice catch of a hard hit ball. Dineen was easy on a high fly to Legon and Holyman ended the game by a running gloved hand pick up of Walt Fair's fast grass cutter.

STARS SPUTTER AGAIN WINNING THIRD STRAIGHT

Three From Rochester During Week End—Skeeters Run String to Five.

ORIOLES BEATEN.

Three Straight to Reading—Toronto Still Unbeaten—Pounded Buffalo Sunday.

SYRACUSE, N.Y., May 31. — Swansboro's triple to the score board in the eighth inning scoring Griffith, broke a tie score and gave Syracuse a 4 to 3 victory over Rochester here today. It was the third straight win over the Tribe in the present series. Horne, on the mound for Rochester, was touched up for 12 hits including home runs by Krahe and Niebergall. Grabowski started for the Stars but was relieved in the eighth after Conlan had walked, and Merkle singled. He pitched two balls to Quellich before Boyd took up the pitching burden. Boyd allowed but one hit after that. The score:

Horne and Lake; Grabowski, Boyd and Niebergall.

Toronto 7; Buffalo 2.

BUFFALO, N.Y., May 31.—Toronto continued its winning streak by beating Buffalo again today with a score of 7 to 2. Satterfield was found for but six hits, Ed. Miller getting one half of the Buffalo collection. Maley and Auer were found for sixteen safe blows. Catcher Manion registered his second home run in the three games thus far played. Satterfield, besides pitching winning ball, placed a double and single to his credit. Score:

LONDON, June 1. — S. Ferris, a British runner, won the annual Marathon race on Saturday from Windsor Castle to Stamford Bridge. Ferris made the record time of two hours and 35 minutes, 58½ seconds, winning by more than 3 minutes over his nearest competitor. The distance was 26 miles 385 yards.

BERLENBACH IS NEW CHAMPION; WON ON POINTS

Light Heavyweight Title Wrested From Irishman in Fifteen Round Bout.

YOUTH SERVED.

Winner Had Best of the Last Half——McTigue Rallied in Final.

NEW YORK, June 1.—Paul Berlenbach, of Astoria, N.Y., became light heavyweight champion of the world at the Yankee Stadium Saturday night, by outpointing Mike McTigue in a fifteen round bout. McTigue gained the title from Battling Siki in Dublin, two years ago. It was a case of a slugging youth meeting a middle aged boxer with a great defence.

In the first three rounds Berlenbach was the master, but from the fourth to the seventh it seemed that McTigue had regained his championship form. His artful left was continually in Berlenbach's face and the Astoria man seemed unable to penetrate his wonderful covering.

In the last half of the fight the youth and strength of Berlenbach gradually wore down his opponent. In the eighth Berlenbach cut McTigue's lips with rights to the head and in the next two rounds opened cuts over his left eye and his ear.

The light heavyweight ring crown thus passed to the head of a fourth new champion in three years. A capacity crowd of 40,000 spectators saw the engagement.

McTigue Backed Up.

In spite of the fact that he had promised an offensive fight to dispose of his challenger by a knockout, McTigue contented himself with a steady retreat from rope to rope, which failed completely to hold off the aggressive Berlenbach. In vain the champion rallied gamely in the final round and for the first time in the bout took the attack, but the stand came too late, and the judges rendered a speedy verdict for the challenger.

Neither man was in danger of a knockout at any point. Although Berlenbach repeatedly forced the titleholder against the ropes and lunged at his body and chin desperately with hard rights and lefts, the crafty McTigue slipped away from him and doged to cover. Time after time McTigue made the challenger miss his dangerous left leads in the centre of the ring, but the Astoria man was not to be denied. He kept boring in on the champion and redeemed every miss with a solid punch on the shifting McTigue.

Berlenbach Stronger.

Berlenbach, fighting the twenty-sixth bout of his professional career, declared after the match that he had been unable to attain his best condition for the fight, claiming that he had been threatened with diptheria at the training camp. This compelled him, he declared, temporarily to discontinue his work-outs. He failed to evidence lack of condition once he swung into action, however, and was far stronger at every point of the match than the champion.

The crown transferred to the dark thatched head of the former Olympic wrestling champion, had been held for but two short years by McTigue, who had lifted the title from the conqueror of George Carpentier—Battling Siki.

Only once before had McTigue stepped into the ring with a challenger to a decision. In this fight he had boxed to an unpopular draw verdict with Young Stribling in Georgia. Later he lost newspaper decisions to both Stribling and the welterwegiht champion, Mickey Walker, at Newark, N.J.

Opened With Rush.

Berlenbach opened his bid for the championship last night with a rush, tearing in at McTigue with left lunges to body and head and working his right at close quarters as the champion went to the ropes to cover with both hands. For the first four rounds, the champion observed caution, which permitted Berlenbach to do all the forcing and leading. McTigue appeared slow and although he stuck but a feeble left at the challenger as he rushed to close quarters, he later fell back almost entirely on a straight right as a counter.

Frequently McTigue, retreating steadily before the sturdy Astoria fighter, turned completely around and danced away from the attack of his opponent. But, although he avoided many of the challenger's leads, the champion was unable to hold off Berlenbach as they crashed into the ropes, where Paul pumped both hands vigorously to body and head.

McTigue's Best.

The sixth, seventh and eighth were the champion's only good rounds. He beat Berlenbach to the punch with his stiff right across and made the challenger miss often by slipping under his left hooks and side-stepping his rights. In the last five rounds of the battle, however, Berlenbach crashed home terrific wallops to the head and it finally became apparent that the champion could only retain his title in the closing round by a knockout.

McTigue's backers sent him out to make a final stand in the fifteenth, after Berlenbach had pounded him vigorously in the two preceding rounds, and gamely the champion went to the task. He rushed at Berlenbach, and had him on the ropes and applied solid rights and lefts, but the latter soon indicated he was more than willing to mix.

The Astoria fighter leaped back at his foe, and for the first time in their contest the men battered away at each other without attempt at defence. It was give and take with the challenger losing nothing. McTigue had the skill and the courage, but the finishing punch which was necessary at that point was missing.

Burke Knocked Out.

Two other contenders for the title stepped before the throng.

Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo, made the most favorable impression of the night by quickly disposing by a technical knockout of Jack Burke, Pittsburgh battler, in the second round. Slattery dazed his opponent with fightning speed and blinded him with a rapid fire attack in which he threw at Burke every punch known to boxing.

WRESTED TITLE FROM M'TIGUE.

Paul Berlenbach outpointed Mike McTigue in their fifteen round bout in New York Saturday night for the championship of the light heavyweight division. McTigue had won the title from Battling Siki who had been Georges Carpentier.

Motor Notes

Besides the advice and warnings you will get before you start your long-distance trip this summer, here are a few "Don'ts" you should keep in mind constantly during the trip:

Don't allow the car to be without provisions or food of some sort at any time.

Don't fail to have warm clothing in the outfit. The high altitudes in the west are cold and the dry air is penetrating.

Don't forget the yellow goggles. In driving west you have to face the sun all afternoon and the glare is hard on the eyes.

Don't drive through water without first ascertaining the depth,

Don't wait until your gasoline is almost gone before filling up. There might be a delay or it might not be obtained at the next point where a supply station is expected.

Don't allow your water canteens to be other than full of fresh water and keep them filled. The burst of a water hose or a sudden leak in your radiator might occur between garages.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

The run-up is no run-up unless it runs to the pin, meaning some spot near enough to make one putt reasonably certain. The average golfer I have observed, lacks understanding of what it is that makes the run-up run, since even a casual study of players will show them invariably short with the run-up. When the ball is to be made to run, take your stance so that the mashie blade is slightly in front of your nose, say. The hands may at the same time be slightly in advance of the blade or even with it — makes no difference which. From this position draw the blade straight back, making it scrape lightly through the grass as it comes back on a straight line. Do not let the hands move backward very much Be sure to hold the head still. Then throw the blade forward and directly through the ball. The ball will run to beat the band.

ZBYZSKO INJURED.

Several Ribs Broken in Mat Match With Stetcher.

ST. LOUIS, June 1. — Joe Stecher (Nebraska scissors-hold expert, gained the right to meet Ed "Strangler" Lewis for the world's heavyweight wrestling title here Saturday, when he downed Stanislsus Zbyzsko, veteran of the mat game, in two straight falls. Stecher was defeated four years ago by Lewis, who Saturday won from Wayne (Big) Munn, also a title claimant.

The match was staged in St. Louis University athletic field before a crowd estimated at 13,500. The announced value of the purse was $50,000, of which $10,000 was posted by Joe Stecher and his brother and manager, Anton Stecher.

Zbyzsko was to get the purse win or lose.

While Stecher was receiving plaudits of the crowd it was found that the veteran Pole who was stretched out on the canvas was virtually unable to move his massive body.

Realizing his helpless state his attendants hurried him to the dressing room, where he fainted several times and suffered spells of vomiting.

He was taken to the hospital where he was found to be suffering from internal injuries, several broken ribs and injuries to his back.

The police took cognizance of the case when the extent of Zbyzsko's injuries became known and placed Stecher under a common law bond.

STRONG FINISH FEATURED THE OPENING GAMES

Bankers Scored Three Runs Needed to Win After Two Were Out.

RAGGED BASEBALL.

Sudden Change in League Personnel Caused One-sided Game.

A garrison finish by the Bankers who scored three runs in the last inning after two were out, and turned apparent defeat into a 6-5 victory, featured the double header which opened the season of 1925 for the Mercantile baseball league, on Saturday.

This exciting finish occurred in the second game of the afternoon. For four innings Lefty Donnelly turned back the financial experts with three hits and as many runs. In the fourth Ash hammered the ball right back at him and struck him in the back. He finished that inning but retired to centre field, allowing Gord Connors, another southpaw, to finish the fray. Connors was successful for two and two thirds innings, allowing nobody to reach first base, but with victory in his grasp, he weakened, walking McWiliams. The next four men came through with the necessary hits, sending three runs across to win the game.

Casey Masterson was on the mound for the Bankers. He pitched good ball but some of his help were apparently more familiar with handling banknotes, and found the horsehide hard to hold. Errors counted for but one of the Lockmakers' runs.

Irvin Bailey, of hockey fame, held down the keystone sack for the Lock Works and turned in a nice game, and making some great stops and throws. The feature play of the game was a sparkling catch by Ash of a fly in short right, which he took while going at full speed away from the plate. Murray, who was on second at the time, thought that the ball would fall beyond the first baseman's reach and was past third on his way to the plate when the ball was caught so he was easily doubled.

The curtain raiser was notable for twenty stolen bases and ten errors. Scates and Guerin were constantly in difficulty through lapses of their teammates but the Examiner finally pulled out with a 14-7 victory over the Victorias, from the Lockworks. The latter team was recruited at short notice after the C.G.E. club withdrew from the series and showed a large assortment of talent. They hit the offerings of the Examiner hurler hard and often but he was almost unbeatable with men on the runways.

The printers bunched eleven of their thirteen hits in three innings, when they compiled thirteen runs Three innings they went hitless and once they wasted two solid blows. They stole bases with impunity, several times taking an extra base through overthrows. Collins, a left-hander, was behind the bat for the Vics and was hampered in his throwing by the lack of spikes.

Harry Dugan led the hitters of all four teams, collecting two doubles, a single, a base on balls, and being hit once, in five appearances which gave him a perfect batting average. His teammates aso did good work with the willow, the batterymen being the only players on the team to go hitless.

MIS-KICKED BALL COSTS QUAKERS GORDON CUP TIE

Smith Was Very Unlucky—Blower's Terrible Lefts Rolled Over the Bar.

OPPORTUNE GOAL, 1-0.

Keen and Aggressive Play Was the Feature in Hard Fought Tussel.

Dame Fortune again failed to smile upon the Quaker Oats on Saturday in the G. N. Gordon soccer cup, first round game at the Oval, when the Woollens gained the only goal in a splendid exhibition of soccer—a draw would have been a more fitting result. The Quakers were more aggressive in mid-field but weak in front of goal while the winners awaited the opportune moment to count.

Mr. Wm. Rickard handled the game in an unbiased manner.

Game Described.

The Canadian Woollens took advantage of the western wind, along with the toss. A succession of corner kicks to each team made goal territory tactics very interesting whenever the goal-keepers would make clever clearances. From the left wing, Burgess turned the ball into the middle where Mitchell's outstretched leg sent it into goal. Quick as a flash, Curtis tipped the rolling sphere to Maker who sent Williams along his wing to the other end. The defense retaliated with swinging passes to the extreme wings, but the Quakers' half backs responded with aggressive play that favoured their forwards.

Smith Very Unlucky.

Gardner and Smith in close combination outwitted the full backs, the inside man, shot the ball back to Scott who placed to Smith's waiting foot. He picked the vacant spot in goal but Blowers came from nowhere to divert the sphere into play. Tactics were very fast and clean when Mann was injured with a nasty cut over the eye. He resumed a few minutes later. Exchanges continued very even until Logan forced the issue against Griffine's charge with a hair-raising shot. Then Smith immaculated his previous performance right in front of the goal. It was very evident that Gardner was the dangerous man because two men hung around him like ivy and whenever he was in possession it was three-to-one, thereby smothering the little fellow.

"Blowers Terrific Left."

On several occasions, the Woollens went down the wings. The Quaker backs, S. Maker and Honor, repelling a concerted effort by the smooth working opposing left wing. But Blowers lifted back again into goal where Mitchell's deadly header was fisted clear from in below the bar. There was an entire absence of sparkle in the play at this period, with the exception of Blowers' terrible left shots that went rolling over the cross-bar. A foul against the Woollens transferred the excitement to Woollens' goal, where flag-kicks were in abundance. From a cross by Mayette, Smith's parting shot missed the upright. Mitchell gained possesion in mid-field, Scott robbed him to send along to his teammates. Smith accepted the opening, shot hard for goal but J. Cridland's covered head saved a count. Just before half-time, the Woollens awoke to the situation when their defense responded with long punting clearings that went abegging in an individual front line. In one instance, they were within an ace of counting when Gaskill handled carelessly and free-kick awarded. This let the opponents go right back into Woollen's area where Quakers' forwards misunderstanding proved their disaster. Half-time—no scoring.

HALF-TIME.

The next forty-five minutes gave the porridge boys the wind in their favour. Style of play was altered by both teams as was shown when Gardner and Mitchell sent long drives for goal. It was a fast, clean and sportsmanlike game, and the feature was the individual effort of Logan against the famous Woollens' left wing. Time and again, the half-back intercepted well-planned movements that held the left wing in check. But he had to concede the occasional pot-shot to Blowers.

Well Taken Goal.

In spite of his injury, Mann was keeping pace with the game. At last, the Woollens pressed home their opportunity when Scott miskicked inside the dreaded area. Mitchell dribbled around his men at ease, then tested Curtis with a point blank. Quaker's goal-keeper saved but the Woollens' centre shot high into the net for the only goal.

Revived Then Fell Away.

That goal! Yes it was a disheartening tally to the unfortunate Quakers who responded with keen and progressive tactics that failed to gain any fruit, no matter what they tried, every effort was awanting the few necessary inches for the equalizer. Fate was sure with them—Honor becoming an non-effective through minor accidents. As time rolled on, a Quaker last flash was frustrated just before the final whistle announced the Woollens winners by the odd goal. Woollens 1, Quakers 0.

Goal scorer: Mitchell.

Quaker Oats—Curtis, goal; S. Maker and F. Honor, backs; Logan, Scott and A. Maker, half-backs; Mayette Smith, Gardner, N. Maker and Williams, forward.

Woollens—Griffine, goal; Cridland and Chambers, backs; Read, Mann and Blowers, half-backs; Sayers, Gaskill, Mitchell, Wilson and Burgess, forwards.

Puzzle Plays in Baseball

The Play.

It is the last half of the ninth inning and the home team is on the wrong end of a 10 to 1 score. With two down the batsman hits safely. He steals second and third unmolested, the team in the field paying no attention to him, since his run really had no great bearing on the result.

After the runners reached third, some wag in the bleachers shouted for him to steal home. He made a break for the plate on the next ball pitched. The visiting pitcher, sensing the humor of the situation, decided to make it possible for the runner to turn the trick.

Instead of hastening the pitch, he continued to wind up. When the runner slid over the plate the pitcher was still in the act of winding up.

The count on the batsman was two balls and one strike. Had he permitted the pitch to go by it would not have jeopardized his time at bat whether it was a ball or strike.

However, he chose to hit at the ball that was right over the plate. The batsman flied out to left field, making the third out and ending the game.

Did the run count?

The Answer.

Despite the fact that the runner had crossed the plate before the ball was delivered to the batsman and was sitting on the bench when the batter flied out to left, the run doesn't count.

The inception of the play was the start of the pitcher's wind-up. The finish was the fly to left field for the third out. The rules say that a runner cannot score on a play in which the batsman fails to reach first base for the third out. Such was the case here.

SPORT GOSSIP AND COMMENT.

There will be rare doings at Riverside Park on Saturday, neighbor. The Kingston Ponies are slated to tie into the Petes on that date and the game should be one of the best of the year with the leadership at stake. At present Kingston lead the parade with three wins and no losses, and they have a mid-week game with Oshawa, which means that they will come here Saturday either with four straight wins or with three wins and a loss, leaving the Petes in a position either to tie them or take first place, for the Johnstonites are sitting pretty with three victories in their first four starts, two of the wins nicked away from home.

* * * * * * * * *

Manager Johnston's present plans are to assign the task of curbing the Ponies to Frank Whitehouse, and his teammates are confident that the young southpaw can turn the trick against the leaders. It is too early to say who will work for Kingston, although it would not be surprising if the veteran Gallagher were saved up for use against the Petes.

* * * * * * * * *

The safe blows in Saturday's game at Oshawa were well distributed. Although McPherson for the Petes and Dineen and Tyson for Oshawa were the only players to go hitless, only three batters got more than one safety, Rose and Legon getting two each for the winners and Roddick being the only motorist to get two.

* * * * * * * * *

Dineen, the new Oshawa first sacker, is a classy fielder, but his offensive work does not seem to be of very heavy calibre.

* * * * * * * * *

It looks as if Central Ontario League umpires should study the rule about a batter being hit by a ball from his own bat while standing in the batter's box. Harrison was the victim of a bad ruling Saturday on this play, just as Legon was on Wednesday night.

* * * * * * * * *

There used to be a time when, if the Petes got three hits off Duke Dainty, to say nothing of three home runs, they'd say that they had been on a batting spree. Dainty is still a fine pitcher, but is no longer the same old mystery to the Petes.

* * * * * * *

Al. Heckman is the first Central Ontario League pitcher to register two wins this season. Dainty of Oshawa and Cairns, Gallagher and Young of Kingston have each won one, while Whitehouse has won one and lost one. The standing of wins, losses and complete games is as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	C.G.
Heckman, Peterboro	2	0	2
Gallagher, Kingston	1	0	1
Dainty, Oshawa	1	0	1

Lennox, Oshawa	0	1	0
Keon, Belleville	0	1	1
Jeffrey, Belleville	0	1	1
Goyer, Belleville	0	2	1

COGS WON GAME AT CURVE LAKE

Defeated the Home Team 15-5 in E.P.B.L. Game Saturady.

ROOKE THE STAR.

The Cognawaga Athletic Club of St. James' Church went to Curve Lake on Saturday to play the first game in the East Peterboro League and defeated the home team 15-5. The game was fast from beginning to end, the Cogs getting five runs in the first inning. Billingsley, who was on the mound for the Cogs, pitched a good game, fanning six and allowing seven hits. Muskrat allowed twenty-three hits and fanned five. Rooke, first baseman for the Cogs, was the star of the game.

LEWIS DEFEATS MUNN

MICHIGAN CITY, June 1—Ed. (Strangler) Lewis, world's heavyweight title claimant, threw Wayne (Big) Munn, two out three falls here Saturday, retaining his diamond studded belt, emblematic of the championship. The third and deciding fall came after seven minutes, when the "Strangler" applied seven headlocks, weakening his opponent, by the resistance.

ROYAL OAK C. C. BEAT THE GROVE

Local Team Scored 68 Runs and Held School Boys to 20.

GOOD BOWLING.

A good game of cricket was witnessed at the Exhibition Grounds on Saturday afternoon last, when the cricket team of the Grove School, Lakefield, played the Royal Oak C.C., on the latter's ground. R. Dyer, for the Royal Oaks, winning the toss, decided to bat first, and opened the game with Mann and Duggan, Jr., the latter making the only boundary hit of the game. With the score at 8, Duggan was unfortunate in playing a ball onto his wicket. R. Dyer joined Mann at the bat, and after breaking his "duck" also played on, and the outlook for the home team was none too bright, with two of the best bats out for 9 runs. The wickets fell fairly regularly until after the fall of the eighth, when the score was 35, and Duggan Sr. took his place in assisting J. Dunkerley, who had stopped the "rot" at his end, and when Duggan Senior's wicket fell, the score had been carried from 35 to 59, the innings finally closing for 68; J. Dunkerley being top scorer with 28 not out; a masterly exhibition of defence against tricky bowling, the next highest scores being W. Mann 10, and Duggan Sr., 9. Barnard for Lakefield took 5 wickets for 33, Christmas 3 for 22, and Loosemore 2 for 5 runs.

Lakefield's innings opened disastrously, when one of their best batsmen, Barnard, fell for 2 runs, and there were 7 wickets down for 11 runs, R. Dyer's bowling being practically unplayable. Nine runs were added for the eighth wicket and then the bowling was changed, Duggan Jr. going on for J. Dunkerley, and he succeeded in taking the last two wickets with the only two balls he bowled, the innings closing for 20 runs, leaving Royal Oak C.C. winners by 48 runs. The only stand made for Lakefield was by Griffith, with 8, which included two 2's and one 3; Pullen being next high man with 3. The bowling analysis gave R. Dyer 6 wickets for 7 runs, Duggan Jr. 2 for 0 runs, and Dunkerley 2 for 11 runs. Full scores are as follow:

"THE GOOD OLD DAYS"

LONDON, May 29.—After a debate by women at Ivinghoe recently, the women in the audience decided they would have been happier if they had live a hundred years ago.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

SOUTHPAWS FAIL.

The southpaws have disappointed during the first month of the major league races.

Prior to the start of the season, practically every big league club with the exception of the Chicago White Sox, boasted a pitching staff topheavy with left-handers.

Eddie Collins bemoaned the fact that he had only one port-sider, Mike Cvengros, and there was a question as to whether he would be able to place as a regular.

As a matter of fact, Collins frankly admitted that in hoping for success, he was more or less playing a hunch. He doped it that since so many clubs had from two to four left-handers, some of the novelty of that style of pitching might wear off, lessening its effectiveness.

If such proved to be the case, he figured his pitching staff, dominated by right-handers, might be that much more efficient.

So far Collins has gotten a good break in this respect. His capable right-handed pitching staff has kept his club in the first division.

FORM REVERSAL.

Last season at this time, Ydo, the youthful southpaw of the Pirates, was the sensation of the National League. This year he turned in only one win in his first six starts.

During the first month of play, the veteran Cooper, one of the craftiest southpaws in the business, was unable to win a single ball game for his new club, the Chicago Cubs.

Two such sterling left-handers as Eppa Rixey and Rube Benton annexed only three victories in a dozen games in which they figured, Rixey doing all the work, getting an even break with three wins and as many defeats.

A similar condition exists in the American with a few exceptions. On the whole the work of the southpaws has not come up to the expectations of most of the managers.

Last season there was an epidemic of southpaw pitching and it was uniformly successful. In the world series, southpaws were very much the whole thing, particularly from a Washington standpoint. The veteran portsiders, Gogridge and Zachary, featuring.

The season of 1925 has produced a reversal of form on the part of the southpaws. Only a few have been able to win consistently. Perhaps the theory of Eddie Collins that the novelty had worn off is correct.

* * *

ART OF RUNNING.

Another theory, that baserunning doesn't mean much in modern baseball, has also been exploded by the same Mr. Collins.

For a half dozen years the value of the steal in baseball has greatly diminished in the eyes of practically every major league manager.

It has been contended that it was foolish to experiment with baserunning tactics, with so lively a baseball in use. Get runs in bunches rather than one at a time has been the popular procedure.

The Chicago White Sox have demonstrated that baserunning isn't a lost art, even with the dynamite ball now in use.

I feel that I am conservative in saying that one-third of the games won by the White Sox so far this season, can be directly traced to intelligent baserunning.

A steal of second, and an attempted double steal, including pilfering second and third or second and home, have featured a number of Chicago games and their successful completion have been turning points in the game.

* * *

Eddie Collins and the White Sox have conclusively proved that intelligent baserunning is still an important feature of baseball.

PETERBORO' C. C. WON FROM T.C.S. IN RETURN GAME

Local Bowlers Set Down the School Batsmen With 19 Runs.

GOOD BATTING.

Dr. Hewitt Compiled 68 of 129 Runs Scored For Six Wickets.

On Saturday afternoon a cricket match was played at the Exhibition Grounds between the Peterboro Cricket Club and the Trinity College School, and those who were present had the satisfaction of watching a game full of life. The ladies associated with the Peterboro Club served luncheon and all voted the afternoon a huge success. The Canadian Tent and Awning Company kindly loaned a tent for the afternoon, and Coleman Bros. assisted by providing the table equipment, which the Peterboro Club gratefully acknowledge.

The game itself was a particularly good one, filled with clever fielding and sparkling displays of batting, and the local club is highly pleased at being able to claim victory over such worthy opponents as the T.C.S.

The Port Hope boys won the toss and elected to bat first, opening their innings a little after two o'clock with Lazier and Biggar opposed by Thorpe and Dyer, who bore the brunt of the attack all afternoon. Before a run was scored Biggar was dismissed, Dyer making a good catch in the slips, and with only 33 runs on the board seven good school wickets had fallen. At this stage Burns commenced a systematic defence of "stonewalling" and was able to hold his wicket while Boulton hammered the bowling to all corners of the field, including in his score two lovely 5 hits. The tail-end continued to wag successfully, and it was not until the very respectable score of 91 was reached that the last wicket fell.

After luncheon the Peterboro Club opened its innings with Dr. Hewitt and Coutts, and after a careful start the former delighted everybody with as fine a display of batting as has been seen in Peterboro for many years. Collaring most of the bowling he scored at a fast rate, and when Coutts was dismissed at 44 the Doctor had 33 runs to his credit. Langley and Dyer fell victims to smart catches in the field, but with Dr. Hewitt and Thorpe in partnership runs came thick and fast, and the T.C.S. score was passed with seven wickets intact. Frequent changes in the bowling were made, and Martin was finally successful in clean bowling Dr. Hewitt, who had batted for over an hour for a well played 68, including in his score one 6 and five 4's, pulling and driving at all times with such force that in his score was found only ten singles. With his departure the game lagged, and when stumps were drawn as per agreement at 6.30, the score stood at 129 with still four wickets to fall.

The score in detail follows:

Station for League.

LONDON, June 1. — The League of Nations may have its own powerful broadcasting station at Geneva, if advice of certain advocates is followed.

The idea is to build a giant super-power broadcaster that could reach every angle of the globe with the peace propaganda to be broadcast by the league.

It may be stationed high above the sea level so that its message may be clear of all interferences.

Its cost may go as high as $10,000,000, some reports have it.

GOLD STANDARD AN EXPERIMENT MEREDITH SAYS

President of Bank of Montreal Says Britain's Action Causes Anxiety.

HOME FROM EUROPE.

Found Canada Less Popular in Financial Circles—G.T.R. Propaganda.

MONTREAL, June 1.—"The return of Great Britain to a free gold market constitutes one of the most important financial events of recent years," declared Sir Vincent Meredith, Bart., president of the Bank of Montreal, who has just returned from a visit to England and France, in the course of an interview here Sunday.

"Viewed in a cold-blooded, analytical sense, it is an experiment. No one can dogmatise and say what the result will be. Already the exports of small parcels of gold has materially raised discount rates in the London money market, and the gold bulletin, published daily by the Bank of England, is watched with interest and not a little anxiety. There is also a considerable amount of colonial borrowing in London in prospect, which will to some extent aggravate the drain of gold, but full confidence is felt that those at the helm are competent to steer the ship.

Canada's Course.

"There are those who advocate Canada following Great Britain's lead and at once declaring herself on a gold basis, but I am not one of them. Canada is not Great Britain, and while, as everyone hopes, the latter will be successful, it is, as I have before remarked, an experiment, and it would be a still greater experiment for a young country like Canada. I am, therefore, strongly of the opinion that Canada should await the evolution of the only true gold basis, viz., a less unfavorable balance of trade with the United States, or some other, at present undisclosed condition which would render it safe and desirable for Canada to take the risk. In addition to which Canada has not the necessary reserve of gold should she be called upon to meet large withdrawels which would require the establishing of a credit in the United States, a costly proceeding and one which for many reasons, should be avoided. To all intents and purposes, as far as the man in the street is concerned, Canada is already on a gold basis.

Canada Less Popular.

"From my observation, I was sorry to find that Canada is not as popular in financial circles in London and Paris as was the case on the occasion of my last visit. The propaganda of disgruntled Grand Trunk shareholders, supported by financial and other newspapers, has created an unfavorable impression.

"While the floating of foreign issues in London is prohibited, this does not apply to borrowings in Canada and the other overseas dominions. Notwithstanding the criticism of Canada, of which I have spoke, there was no question the dominion, provincial and municipal issue would be favorably received in the London market. At the moment it is somewhat cheaper to borrow in the United States markets, and there is a slight disadvantage in the matter of exchange, but I am strongly of the opinion that as soon as equal terms are procurable, it will be to Canada's interest to do her borrowing in London rather than in foreign markets.

"Pessimistic reports on general conditions in Canada reaching England from this side are to be deprecated as not being in the best interests of our country, in my opinion they have little basis in fact."

A LINE-O-TYPE.

There's not a bit of use in wasting time in tears or imprecations when things go wrong with us.

Learn to Bend. This admonition is called forth by two seemingly far separate incidents observed in the city on Saturday and Sunday. One was a child's anger when his ball rolled into Jackson Park creek, and the other was a man's rage when his automobile tire picked up a nail and went flat.

Life is made up of just such shocks and jars—we are always losing something or having work thrown upon us or being delayed when in a hurry. We need a flexible disposition that can absorb these attacks and not be destroyed by them.

Learn to bend before the storm. That is the secret of weathering seeming disaster. The storm passes harmlessly over the bushes that bend before it, while it lays low the rigid tree.

If our friends do not meet their obligations promptly; if we are disappointed in our employers or in our employees, are we ready easily to adjust ourselves to these misdoings? Or are we so brittle that at the slighest thwarting of our plans we go to pieces?

There's no use flying into a rage at an offending automobile tire or anything else that displeases. Storms and earthquakes and flat tires will come. Recognize the fact, come down off your egotism, and your flexibility will prevent your destruction.

"It's never too late to learn," is the motto of the bird upstairs who practices on the trombone till 3 a.m.

A New Version. The Golden Rule, as applied to a public man, is "Do unto a public man as you would that a hundred thousand should do unto you." The American mania for ignoring the arithmetic of human contacts was shown when King George had to have police protection after a tourist grabbed his hand with a "Howdy." Ten thousand imitators started to do the same thing, and His Majesty had to submit to the nuisance of a police guard, like a United States President. His own people respected the human limitation that prevented his shaking hands with all his millions of subjects.

Even in the small arena of municipal affairs, sometimes this disregard of the rights and limitations of public men is disregarded, and calls are made upon them on the general supposition, probably, that the person requesting the favor is the only one. Suppose every one of the 20,000 people in Peterborough all got after Mayor Turner for some favor? How would you like to be Mayor?

Not that His Worship has ever turned anyone down, any more than the King rejected the overtures of the nervy American. But the arithmetic of human contacts should be applied in all walks of life.

People who live in glass houses should not throw stones . . . And they certainly ought to be careful how they do their bathing.

Born and Christened on Liner

SEVERAL months ago this young gentleman was born on the Canadian Pacific S.S. Montrose when that vessel was crossing from Saint John to Liverpool, and the above photograph was taken when, five months later, he returned to Canada on the same boat. He was christened amid great rejoicing, on board and when his mother carried him up the gang-way for the return trip, he was enthusiastically welcomed by the crew who regarded him as an old friend. Mrs. Hazelhurst, whose home is in Madison, Saskatchewan, had been on a visit to her mother in England. Mr. Hazelhurst, who is a farmer had not yet seen his son when the above picture was taken.

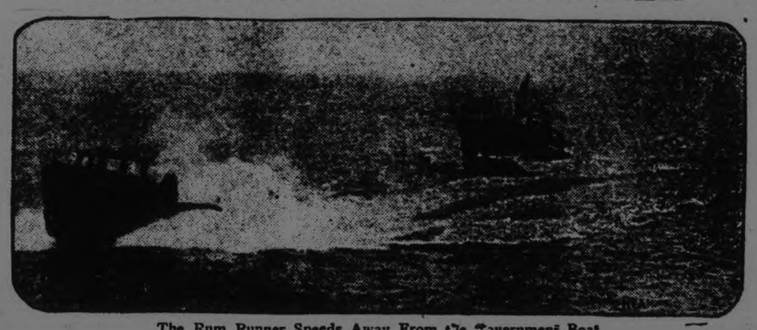
BUSINESS OF RUM ROW HAS BEEN CHECKED



The Rum Runner Speeds Away From the Government Boat

BY BOB DORMAN
NEA Service Writer.

NEW YORK, May 30—An almost impenetrable ring of ships has shut off the liquor supply of the Atlantic sea-coast between Atlantic City and Nantucket Island.

To test the tightness of that ring I tried to run it in an idle bootlegger's boat.

A few weeks ago hiring such a boat as I rode in would have been an impossibility. Those high-powered speed craft wouldn't have looked at such "chicken feed" as I paid. For the profits they could earn in running liquor dwarfed any such insignificant transactios as boat hire.

But today—to may men who have lain idle for several weeks, with ill-gotten gains mostly spent in high living, and with no prospect of the return of the rosy past—even chicken feed is not passed by.

Putting out from Jones Inlet with several suspicious glances from the two Coast Guard boats anchored there, we entered the open sea.

Heading east along the coast we made our way toward Jones Inlet. Our speed was about 20 knots. Not a boat was in sight save a lone tramp heading up for New York.

Suddenly out from shore from a concealed inlet shot a war-gray picket boat. Straight toward us it headed. Faintly a megaphoned call to halt came to us.

Our answer was an increased burst of speed. Theirs was a bullet that clipped a wave a hundred yards to starboard of us.

By this time both boats were racing at top speed.

Swiftly the rum runner drew away from her slower pursuer. Doggedly the picket boat hung on.

Then we slowed down and gradually permitted her to overhaul us. She drew alongside with an alert, grim-faced young officer inquiring what it was all about.

With a Coast Guard officer aboard us as a guarantee of our honesty of prupose he had to be satisfied, but it was very evident that he questioned the sanity of newspapermen who tested out the alertness of an armed patrol boat in a boat whose very lines shrieked "rum runner."

The test of the efficiency of the Coast Guard patrol was part of an inspection of what was formerly "Rum Row."

Everywhere the story was the same. Not a chance was there for a shore boat to establish contact with a supply ship at sea. Each of them I found to be picketed with two to four ships of the Coast Guard patrol. Many of the rum ships were hauling up their anchors and making sail even as we passed.

In one place we found four rum ships. They were surrounded by 12 vesesls of the Coast Guard. And at night the lights winking out from each of the vessels gave that far-to-sea portion of the ocean the appearance of the entrance to New York harbor.

Discouragement is laying hold of the rum fleet. One skipper offered to trade a case of whisky ofr two cartons of cigarets.

Others not so affable as this skipper who invited us aboard to have a drink, were surly in their disappointment.

If the Coast Guard can maintain the present rigidity of their watch, the importation of liquor from the ocean, at least, is at an end.

ENGLISH BOYS' MORALS BETTER

American Boys' Worker Finds Them More Law-Abiding.

RACE IS PURER.

NEW YORK, June 1. — (C. P.)— The morals of English boys are better than those of America, according to Rowland C. Sheldon, executive secretary of the Big Brothers and Big Sisters Federation International who returned on the Red Star liner Zeeland.

"The English boys are more ruly than New York boys and are better at observing the laws. I put this down to the fact that the race is purer and the spirit of law observance is more ingrained in the English than in the Americans," said Mr. Sheldon.

DO THIS AFTER SEVERE ILLNESS

How to Speedily Gain Strength and Put on Needed Weight.

Nothing like the wonderful vitalizing vitamines in Cod Liver Oil to help convalescing people to quickly get strong and well—everybody knows that.

But no body wants to take the ill-smelling, horrible tasting, stomach upsetting oil itself, so nowadays, up to date medical men are ordering a tablet of Cod Liver Oil and it surely has proved a blessing to thousands of people who have been sapped of their natural strength after a severe illness and especially after the Grippe or a stubborn cough or cold.

Ask Warne Drug Co., McDermid & Jury, Jas. Lynch, or any other regular druggist for a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets. They cost but little, are sugar coated and as pleasant to take as candy.

Skinny men and women take them to speedily put on plenty of good healthy solid flesh and for this purpose they are so extremely good that thin men and women often take on 5 pounds or more in 30 days. As a matter of fact, your druggist will return your money if you don't take on 5 pounds in 30 days.

Great for weak, skinny, backward, run-down children, too, and gives them a hearty appetite.

Be sure and ask for McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—60 Tablets—60 cents.

FABLES ON HEALTH.

TO RELIEVE CHOKING

Mothers who permit their children to crawl over the floor, and fill their mouths with everthing they can find loose, should have at their finger tips some good remedies for choking.

In bad choking, where the patient turns dark in the face, no time is to be lost.

Send for the doctor at once. He may have to open the windpipe to save the victim's life.

Meanwhile slap the patient on the back, right between the shoulders.

Open the mouth and insert a finger as far down as possible to try to grasp the obstruction, and remove it.

Turn the person head down, and slap the back forcibly. If this does not succeed, press the hinder portion of the tongue. This may bring on vomiting and relief.

A mouthful of bread sometimes will dislodge a fish bone in the throat.

If the child swallows a coin, take him by the heels, with head down, and shake, or slap the back.

Sometimes with children a good method is to press the chest against something hard like a table.

NINE KILLED IN CHINESE RIOTS OTHERS MAY DIE

3,000 Students Stormed Police Station Protesting Conviction of Strikers.

FIRED INTO MOB.

Agitation Against Japanese Cotton Mills in Shanghai —Trouble in Tsing-Tao.

SHANGHAI, June 1.—Sikh police, armed with carbine rifles, fired into a mob of 3,000 Chinese students attempting to storm the Louza police substation on the Nanking road on Saturday, killing six, wounding eight probably fatally and eight others seriously. The demonstration was attempted as a protest against conviction of Chinese strikers, who left their employment in Japanese cotton mills.

The decision which precipitated the disturbance was handed down by a mixed court.

The command to fire one volley was given when the students began to rush the gates of the station compound and after two foreign officers had suffered minor wounds. The disturbance took place in the heart of Shanghai's business district.

The Shanghai volunteer corps, eight artillery and twelve armored cars, were ordered out to aid in restoring order. Fifty students have been arrested. The Louza district, where the disturbance centred, is a thickly populated department store area and the shooting created intense excitement.

Every one of the twenty-two shots fired by the police into the student mob took effect.

Sunday all available foreign defence units supplementing the regular police were stationed at strategic centres of the foreign settlements, and a heavy rainfall was believed to have deferred any attempted new activity of recalcitrant elements.

Other police reserves held in readiness were composed mostly of business men. The Shanghai volunteer corps was mustering a force for duty throughout the night, anticipating outbreaks in other sections particularly the Yangtze Poo and other western industrial districts where Japanese cotton mills have been in disorder during recent weeks owing to strikes.

Conviction of strikers by a mixed court, the action which caused the demonstration, was the outgrowth of arrests made in connection with the strike.

Police authorities attribute the labor disorders and the outbreak to Chinese-Russian bolshevist activities, particularly the activities of the radical branch of the Koumintang Party directed from Peking.

Three Strikers Killed in Tsingtao.

TSINGTAO, China, June 1. — Three Chinese cotton mill strikers were killed and a score injured Saturday when gendarmes attempted to clear troublesome strikers from a Japanese mill. Several members of the attacking force were beaten by the strikers, who made a menacing retreat.

The Japanese Government recently ordered two destroyers from Port Arthur to proceed to Tsingtao, China, where Chinese striking employees were reported to have occupied the plants of Japanese spinning companies. According to Tokio despatches received here on May 27, the Chinese police force at Tsingtao was inadequate and unable to cope with the situation. Japanese police troops were also ordered to Tsingtao from Tsinan.

Tokio despatches received on May 28 said:

"It is hoped, however, that the Chinese authorities will suppress rioting, thus obviating the landing of Japanese blue packets at the Chinese port. The Japanese Minister at Peking has been instructed to warn the Chinese Government that it must protect Japanese property."

PETERBOROUGH'S PRIDE IS IN EXTENT OF ITS INDUSTRIES

AND THEIR SKILL

The pride of the City of Peterborough is in the skill and knowledge of the toiler who intimately knows his craft.

It has been a source of much pride to me to learn that the milled products of Peterborough go to fifty-seven countries of the world; that Peterborough canoes are not only used in Europe and South America, but float upon the waters of Alaska; that Peterborough carpets adorn some of the richest homes in the great Republic to the South is an indication that the Brinton Company can make a product equal to anything in the world; that the dairy supplies manufactured in Peterborough extend all through the sister Province of Quebec indicates the value of the DeLaval Industry; while nearly all the great power generating plants are using the products of the Canadian General Electric.

These manufacturing industries which are the backbone of the city, and upon which we all rely so much for the continued progress of the city, are made successful chiefly through the loyal and faithful service given by the men and women who form the great army of toilers producing for the consuming world.

The statistics furnished by the Examiner indicate a steady, forward policy, which I trust will continue until Peterborough is known not only as the great Electric City, but the most highly industrialized city in Canada.

Citizens Will Be Missionaries For City's Manufacturers After Visiting Big Made-In-Peterborough Exhibition

DURING the past two years the manufacturers of Peterborough have been invited to take space in the Colliseum Building, Exhibition Grounds, Toronto, but have refused, chiefly because they were afraid they did not manufacture staple or household commodities to the extent the exhibits would receive cordial reception from the public. One realizes the difficulty when one thinks of The General Electric Company with huge machines for electrical development, and the William Hamilton Company, who manufacture water wheels, band saws and saw mill machinery. The G. Walter Green Company are in a similar position—but they are able to show smaller articles such as pumps and other small machinery.

One wonders if we are too modest in advertising ourselves, for while we cannot show a line of furniture we can show carpets, rugs, wool blankets, manufactures of wool such as stockings, sweaters, sweater coats, babies' knitted wear, harness, shoes, pork products, doors, sashes, gummed and waxed paper, miniature motors

CO-OPERATION IS WATCHWORD OF CANADA'S NEW BUSINESS ERA

ASKS SUPPORT

Business today is on a broader plane than it was in olden days. "Co-operation" is the business watch-word today. This has been evidenced in the Made-in-Peterborough Fair that is to take place. The manufacturers and the public generally are co-operating to make the Fair a success. The Fair will accomplish many things. It will be a surprise to many of our own people to see the number of diversified industries that are operating in our City. It will be advertised over an area more than one hundred miles wide and will bring many visitors from outside, who will see what we are doing here in Peterboro' and will broadcast it to their friends. It will advertise the City of Peterboro' as well as its industries. The Electric City has plenty of power available, is well served by two lines of railroads and can offer inducements to industries seeking locations that can not be found elsewhere. Last but surely not least, the proceeds from the Fair will enable the Peterboro' Health Association to carry on the good work in which it is engaged for another year.

The Kiwanis Club take a great deal of interest in the Children's Camp at Jackson Park and we feel that no effort is too great for its maintenance.

MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION SENDS HEARTIEST OF GREETINGS TO SPONSORS OF EXHIBITION

Inspiring Message to Manufacturers From President Arthur F. Hatch.

CANADA'S BUSINESS

Compliments Peterborough on Industrial Progress—Discusses Sources of Wealth.

On behalf of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association I beg to extend the compliments of the members to the citizens of Peterborough for organizing the "Made in Peterborough" Exhibition. The City of Peterborough has made wonderful progress in manufacturing.

If the industrial system of Canada were operated at full capacity, it would support directly about two and a half million people, or over a quarter of the entire population. In addition to those who are directly dependent on industry for their living, there is a large percentage of others, such as retailers, bankers, those engaged in transportation, various forms of business, the professions and other occupations, who are partly dependent upon industry. The producing capacity of all these groups is the principal source of the wealth of Canada, and the products grown or made by them constitute what they have to offer in exchange for what they need. Consequently, if the production of the farms, the factories, the mines, the fisheries and the forests can be increased, there will be more work for Canadians. But, unless this production can be sold, it has little practical value. How then are we to enlarge the sale of Canadian products? I submit that, as Canadians interested in the development of our country, we should buy Canadian proucts whenever possible inr preference to the products of othe countries. Are we doing this? During the twelve months ending February, 1925, Canadians bought from other countries products to the value of 800,000,000 dollars. Our largest purchases were:-

From the United States, 515 million dollars; from the United Kingdom, 150 millions; from Belgium, 5 millions; France, 18 millions; Germany, 6½ millions; Japan, 6½ millions; Sweden, 1¼ millions; Switzerland, 8 millions.

I give only a few examples of the products that we bought from other countries:-

Books and printed matter, 11½ million dollars; Chemical products, 24 millions; Anthracite coal, 37 millions; Bituminous coal, 28 millions; Eggs, 1 million; Fruits, 26 millions; Furs, 8 millions; Glass, 6½ millions; Manufactured leather, 3 millions; Meats, 4 millions; Metals, 177 millions; Automobiles, 10 millions; Fabrics of Silk, 13 millions; Tobacco, 7½ millions; Vegetables, 6 millions; Wool, 47 millions; Tweeds, 3 millions; Worsteds and coating, 10 millions; Wearing Apparel, 5½ millions

These importations represent employment and the investment of capital, the benefit of which went to other countries. Have we no unemployed in Canada who might have been given work if part of these imported goods had been made here? Would not our farmers have received benefit if we had bought these meats, vegetables, fruit, eggs and other farm products at home rather than abroad?

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association for many years has conducted a "Produced in Canada" campaign. At the beginning it had little support, but it has been growing every year. This year it has reached the greatest proportions in its history. It has become a national enterprise, because Canadians are realising that, if they put the principles of the campaign into practice, they will benefit themselves.

The manufacturers and other citizens of Peterborough in arranging the "Made in Peterborough" Exhibition, are not only affording an opportunity to display the excellent products of Peterborough but are also co-operating in a most helpful manner with the general "Produced-in-Canada" Campaign.

Wishing the Exhibition every success,
Yours faithfully,
ARTHUR F. HATCH, President,
Canadian Manufacturers' Assoc'n

for sewing and washing machines, labels, canoes, boats, farm implements, cream separators, horse blankets, flags, elastic webbing, cereals, flour and a host of other products.

The Made in Peterborough Show will give an opportunity of exhibiting our products to the citizens—who in turn will do missionary work as they travel about from place to place—advertising and speaking well of all they see.

Possibly Manufacturers might be interested in sending out invitations to customers in the surrounding country to visit the Show—go over their plants—which should tend to strengthen the business ties and add to confidence already established.

It would be difficult to find a firm of manufacturers who do not believe in advertising and The Made in Peterborough Show offers a medium at small expense.

Create a desire to buy—by showing goods.

As stated before goods manufactured in Peterborough have an enviable reputation in the markets of the world and surely we may be excused if we show a just pride in achievement and exhibit our wares wherever and whenever we have opportunity.

Visit The Made in Peterborough Show and see goods made in Peterborough.

LIEUT.-COL. A. F. HATCH,

WESTCLOX WAKES SLEEPYHEADS FROM BOTH POLES TO EQUATOR

Big Peterborough Plant Turns Out Hundreds of Clocks a Week.

IDEAL FACTORY

Inspection Not Satisfied with More Than 2-Minute Variation in Day.

When you have just settled down for that extra "forty winks" on a cold winter morning, and the alarm clock takes a notion to arouse you thoroughly with its clarion call, a little drop of comfort may ooze through your discomfort if you remember that the louder the bell, the baser the metal that fashioned it. It is the impurity in the steel that makes the bell-ball that gives it a real loud ring. Like loud-tongued people who have unmannerly ways, so the vociferous alarm clock has to be made of steel that is not of the best possible type for other purposes.

In the Westclox factory, where the alarms are made that wake thousands of sleepy heads every morning, they look for steel with phosphorus in it. Phosphorus is an impurity, but it makes the bell ring loud and clearly, so it must be retained in the steel. Special orders go in for this particular type of steel to fill the wants of the big plant on the hill, over in East City.

There are three buildings here, the plating house, with one floor, the boiler house, with one floor also, and the main factory, with four floors. Under the main plant is something out of the ordinary, a concrete tunnel through which run the hot-water pipes and electric conduits. In this tunnel also are the pipes that carry the overflow from the vats in the plating room, so that the sound of splashing water echoes through the corridors of the underground stone galleries.

Clocks and clock watches, the latter a cheap watch built on a clock scale, are the products of this factory, which sends its timepieces all over Canada. From it and the parent factory at La-Salle-Peru, Illinois, go Westcloxes to the world at large. In far-away Pago-Pago, in Samoa, where Robert Louis Stevenson spent part of his exile, one may find a half-naked native carrying a Westclox whose time he cannot read, but whose ticking he enjoys. They have them in the Arctic circle and in the Antipodes, and in the big plant on the East City hill, which, as the punster puts it, is always busy, because it always has room for more "hands," and is always jovial, because it is always making "faces," are men and women occupied with the business of putting Westclox parts together in such a way that they will emerge finally as a completed article

Interesting Process.

It is an interesting process that takes one from one end of the factory where the assembling is commenced to the other, where a girl is testing the alarm and making a final thorough inspection of the finished clock. There are about 40,000 feet of floor space in the big building, which employs one hundred and thirty-eight hands and turns out approximately one thousand timepieces daily. This marks the fifth year since the company was established in Peterborough, commencing in the factory on George street south, then progressing three years ago to the handsome new plant on the hill in East City. Every year, the whole plant shuts down for an annual vacation period of two weeks, from August 3rd to 15th, inclusive. Employees who have continuous service records for five years receive one week with full pay, based on their hourly rates. Seventeen per cent. of the staff have unbroken records for this length of time. Mr. J. H. Vernor is the superintendent in charge. A feature of the plant is the multiplicity of windows, looking out on a wonderful view from all sides, and another feature of the mechanical appliances is the number of specially-constructed machines for fine work. Many of these are invented in the factory and used for one special process.

Strips of bright, cold-rolled steel and rolls of brass form the first portions of the process that makes the completed Westclox with its shining face, its trim hands and feet and its loud tongue. This brass is deceptive. One would think it quite easy to lift a light-looking roll, but a trial convinces that it is particularly hefty, even the smallest roll being almost beyond the range of the lightly-made individual.

Clacking machines punch out clock wheels and pierce the front cases of the Big Ben alarm clocks. It is interesting to watch the exactitude with which the tiny, difficult operations are duplicated instantly by the big presses with their safety devices to protect the workers' hands.

In the plating room, with its specially-constructed, latticed floor, designed to prevent "plater's rash" among the workmen, are the vats of soda and cyanide that eat through their wooden cases, boxwood sawdust that dries the plated goods, and bells and cases submerged in green liquid in long tanks.

In the buffing room, special devices draw off the dust that rises from the polishing wheels. At rest, these are lax-looking bunches of loose-leaves cotton rings, but on the wheel, whirling at a terrific rate, bound and compressed together by the force of their wild momentum, they become hot and dangerous to the unwary touch ands strip the pink glaze from the bras casing and bells, to bring them forth shining with metallic lustre.

Assembling Rooms.

In the upper floor are the assembling rooms.

Girls start the operation by putting in the wheels between two clock plates. About twenty-eight operations are required to assemble this first portion of the article. The girls turn out about a hundred and eighty of these parts in a day, with a total of two hundred and ten when they are racing.

The tiny hair spring which is the thing that decide whether a clock will run well or badly, and illustrates the well-known saying that a chain is only as strong as its weakest link, for this tiny thing that vibrates unceasingly must be true or the clock will not run well, goes in next.

These clocks are started with an automatic contrivance that sets two hundred and forty going at the same time.

The completed watches are tested by being run for a day on their faces, a day on their backs, and a day hanging up on a specially-constructed rack. Only two minutes variation is allowed within the twenty-four hour period.

A final inspection for defects is very minute. Tickets reading "case crooked," "indicator off centre," "brassy bell," are some of the errors that are hardly noticeable to a casual eye, but are sternly marked and send their owners back to the culled class, to wait for corrections later on. There are clocks also that suffer from "a bad back" or "a bad case," the nature of the latter not being indicated any further, and these too are put aside for renovation.

A winding machine that does away with any hand work in this connection is a unique affair, a little device that does the job in a second. Special machines of this type are scattered all over the big building, which has special convenience also for its employees in the way of a large, airy, upper cafeteria and rest room, very elaborate washrooms with individual clothes lockers, and shower baths for the men workers in the buffing and plating rooms.

Hon. Thomas H. Low Sends Compliments To The City

HON. THOMAS A. LOW

Replying to your letter of May 8th, may I extend my congratulations to the enterprising manufacturers of Peterborough for their initiative in organizing a "Made in Peterborough Exhibition."

It was my privilege to know Peterborough intimately and to have an active association with its business enterprises in the years of the war, so that it is with particular pleasure that I write to wish you and the citizens of the "City of the Lock" every success in this undertaking.

There are few cities in Ontario whose growth and development have been as satisfactory and as stable as that of your city. Situated as it is in the centre of a rich farming country, with a wide variety of industrial production, blessed by great national advantages and beauty, it is one of the most representative cities in this Dominion. Its growth has been steady and well rounded. Religious and educational institutions have expanded equally with the progress of material development.

You have laid a sound and enduring foundation for a very broad expansion. The wisdom and discretion which have governed your development to the present day and kept it equally balanced are the surest guarantee to larger and enduring prosperity.

THOS. H. LOW,
Minister of Trade and Commerce.

SANITARY ICE FACTORY COOL

And Spreads Its Summer Blessing in Blocks All Over City.

PURE PRODUCT

One of the prettiest locations for a factory is that in which the Sanitary Ice Company's plant, on Water street, is situated. With the river as a background, a stretch of green lawn at front and sides, and low buildings painted in pure white, it makes an attractive setting for the glistening blocks of ice that the interior machinery converts from the streams of water that gush out of the two artesian wells, seventy-five and eighty-four feet deep, respectively, fed from hidden springs, and rising to upper heights to become in time frigid blocks of concentrated, frozen air and water.

With five white rigs delivering ice to a warm and thirsty city, an average of some ten employees, and garage accomodation for seven cars, the Sanitary Ice plant, under new ownership by Mr. Reg. H. Turner, with Mr. H. H. Miller as manager, has a capacity of twenty-five tons output per every twenty-four hours. A further ten-ton unit installed in the plant remains idle for further expansion of business. The capacity surpasses present demands by several degrees. One ton of ice per day per one thousand population is the agreed ratio of consumption. Toronto uses five hundred tons of artificial ice per day, this total representing fully ninety five per cent. of its ice needs.

An outlay of about $90,000 is represented in the interior mechanical furnishings of the plant, one machine costing $22,500.

Filtered through charcoal, sand and felt, the water comes pure to the tank that can hold 180 cans of 300 pounds each. Immersed in a brine solution, kept just two degrees above zero by ammonia, it takes just thirty-two hours, by different processes, to convert the water in the cans into the ice that is stored in huge, cylindrical blocks in the refrigerator, with its atmosphere of fourteen degrees of frost.

With greater demand for his product, Mr. Turner prophesies cheaper prices. The plant is open for public inspection at any time, and has already been patronized by various classes of interested children from the city's schools.

DRIVERS' LIVES MAY DEPEND ON BRAKE QUALITY

Fine Copper Wires Are Woven in With the Asbestos Yarns.

"SILVER EDGE"

Raybestos Company is Largest Producer of This Class of Goods.

While the problem of starting the motor car is usually considered one of major importance, that of stopping it is often much more pressing and for this purpose the brakes are called upon to function. Lives depend on their efficiency.

The solving of brake problems has occupied the attention of skilled engineers ever since the birth of the automotive industry and the history of automobile brakes is synonymous with with the history of the Raybestos Company.

The company began in a very small way using the first machine especially designed for the weaving of a brake lining; this loom was capable of producing from fifty to one hundred feet daily.

This machine has been supplanted by modern twenty space looms which can weave 2,500 to 3,500 feet per day.

The Raybestos Company, a branch of which is located in this city, was not only the pioneer in the industry but today it is the largest manufacturing concern which produces that type of material, having factories in Bridgeport, Conn., Stratford, Conn., Charleston, S.C., London, Eng. and Peterborough.

Big Industry.

The Canadian branch is quite capable of handling all the trade which might develop in this country so that some idea of the production might be conceived.

The factory is large and clean, there being ample storage space for raw materials and the finished article.

The manufacturing of Raybestos is not an intricate process but none the less interesting.

Asbestos is mined in Thetford, Que. and sent to Charleston, S.C., where it is woven into yarn and sent back to Peterborough. The asbestos used for this purpose is selected long fibre material. In the rock form it has a glazed appearance.

Slivers or strings can be picked off and when rubbed the glaze disappears and soft woolly material remains, much like the fluff in a milkweed pod. This material can quite readily be woven into a yarn which is wound like wrapping twine on conical forms and when placed on the machine is ready for the weaving process.

It is woven on narrow space looms especially designed for the purpose of making the narrow bands necessary for brake lining; otherwise the loom resembles those used in the manufacture of carpets.

In the weaving process fine copper wires are used with the asbestos yarns which act as binders and add to the weaving qualities.

In order to give greater durability and wear-resisting powers the strips are impregnated thoroughly with a special Raybestos compound which soaks into every fibre of the material.

This solution is then cooked into the lining at a greater temperature than would ever be experienced in the ordinary use of the brakes.

The Silver Edge is a trade mark nationally known which is added ofter the baking process and incidentally the name "Raybestos" is also printed on the strip.

The lining is then wound in standard sized rolls, wrapped in bags and shipped direct to the jobber.

Service Stations.

There are one hundred and fifty Raybestos service stations in Canada between Halifax and Vancouver, all of which employ specialists in brake adjusting.

The stations are equipped with special machines for placing the lining in the band and are in every way capable of attending to all braking troubles.

In addition to the brake lining the Raybestos Company also manufactures clutch facings, transmission linings, valve-stem packing and also a new rapid change clutch band for Ford cars.

Machines and tools for applying these accessories are supplied all jobbers so that mechanical perfection may be achieved.

The high heat compressed asbestos sheet packing is made from the long-fibred Canadian asbestos mixed with the best grade of rubber. This is rolled into sheets of 50" x 15" and sold to the trade for use in make gaskets for pipe flanges, packing for pumps, etc.

The new clutch bands will be welcomed by garage men who know what it means to remove the old transmission linings from a Ford. By the use of a shifting lug, one ear of the band may be removed which allows it to be slid easily into place without the usual accompanying flow of sulphurous language. A complete change of bands may be effected in forty minutes.

The Raybestos Company has kept pace with the progress of the automotive field. It has blazed a trail in its chosen line and maintained a supreme position down through the years. Both tradition and merit are claimed and it has so satisfied the trade that the term brake lining has become synonymous with Raybestos.

BACK YARD LOOKS LIKE A CEMETERY

T. W. Moore Has Many Sample Monuments Off Charlotte Street.

"Established in 1842" is the sign that directs the customers to the monument establishment of T. W. Moore, in the rear yard of the Millinteria store at 163 Charlotte street. Here arranged as they would be in the cemetery for which they are destined are samples of monuments in the grey and white and black stones of the prevailing modes.

Dogs cannot be landed in England except under a special government license.

TOMBSTONES AWAIT OCCASION FOR USE

Granite and Marble Monuments Found at Bert C. Moore's Establishment.

Waiting for living men to die and give them a chance to achieve the purpose for which they were made, might be said to be the aim of the headstones and markers and cornerstones that inhabit the monument establishment of Bert C. Moore, at 161 Charlotte street. Commenced just about a year ago, the interior holds samples of the most up-to-date modes in reminders of the dead. These modes change from time to time, but mankind has not yet, evidently, found anything more suitable as grave markers than the granite and marble it quarries out of the living earth.

There is only one genuine Sheathed Wire Element

THE phenomenal success of sheathed-wire has resulted in the introduction of elements with cast iron surfaces so constructed as to resemble the patented Hotpoint element.

The sheathed-wire element is the result of continuous research and experimental work extending over a period of 15 years. Each feature is covered by patents.

There is nothing "just as good" as sheathed-wire. It is a Hotpoint innovation which has revolutionised electric range construction, and rendered obsolete all previous types of elements.

For your own protection, insist on Hotpoint—the Range with the Indestructible Element.

CANADIAN GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY LTD. IS CITY'S BIGGEST MANUFACTURING CONCERN AND BUILDS LARGEST GENERATORS IN USE

Many Branches to Huge Business That Has Employed Up to 2,300 Workers in All Phases of Electrical Construction Work—Plant Still Growing.

ONE OF LARGEST BORING MILLS IN CANADA INSTALLED LAST WINTER

Variety of Machines Produced is Almost Endless, Including Switchboards, Generators, Motors and Control Equipment —Porcelain Works Run in Conjunction With Main Plant.

What does the Canadian General Electric Company make? Everything connected with electricity from the huge generators which generate the power, down through all the apparatus for transmitting it to the machines, light and heating devices that consume it; including also the newest of appliances, and radio sets of all descriptions. All these devices are not made at the Peterborough works, as this huge company maintains factories for the production of the smaller things at various other Ontario cities, but all the larger equipment for generation transmission and consumption of electricity is produced in Peterborough, with the exception o transformers, which were made here until 1921.

The Canadian General Electric Company is the city's largest manufacturing concern. It employs over one thousand people at all times and has had as many as 2300 workers. The buildings cover many acres and contain thousands of feet of floor space. The company started operations in the City as the Edison Electric Company with one building with a floor area of 45,000 square feet and has grown steadily. During the past winter it installed one of the largest boring mills in Canada, which will turn castings up to 36 feet in diameter.

The starting point of energy in the form of electricity is, of course, the generator. These machines are made in Peterborough in many styles and sizes. The most important are the revolving field alternators which produce the ordinary alternating current which flows through the power and lighting lines of this city and many others. These vary in size from small ones producing 75 or 100 k.v.a. to the huge machines which were installed at Queenston and produce 54,000 k.v.a., or more than 60,000 horse power. The majority of these machines are vertical That is, the shaft is perpendicular and the rotating element would, if the outer casting were removed, resemble a huge spinning top.

Alternators.

When an order for one or more of these alternators is received the engineers figure out winding and insulating specifications and the general design of the machine, with the approximate weights of the parts. These go to the draughting department, where drawings are made of the whole machine, the various castings, the punchings, the wiring diagram, the piping system for water and oil, and all the special parts that will have to be made up or ordered in. The number of drawings that contains the complete plan of a machine is astonishing, and they vary in size from little ones, slightly larger than postcards to some that would go a long way towards papering one wall of a room. They are sent out to the various departsents of the factory where the work will be done, to the production department which supervises and schedules all work, having regard to the various shipping dates, and to the stores department which orders all the parts. The blueprints themselves are made like photographs, and the tracings, transparent pieces of paper or cloth, which correspond to the negative, are stored in a vault, where they are kept for use if duplicate machines are required.

Pattern Making.

An interesting department, where one of the first steps in the building of one of these machines takes place, is the pattern shop. Here wood or metal patterns are made corresponding to all the various casting drawings. Some of these resemble very closely the casting which will be produced while others, to the eye of the uninitiated, look like anything but what the drawing calls for. The pattern maker is a very skilled workman in both wood and metal and the parts of the patterns are accurate to a very close degree. After the patterns have been finished they are sent to various foundries, some of them going to local foundries, others to various moulders in Canada or the United States, although the majority go to the company's own plant in West Toronto. The foundries that make the larger castings, some of which weigh twenty or thirty tons, prefer to have the drawings and make the patterns to suit their own special equipment. After the patterns have been completed and sufficient time has elapsed for the castings to cool, and in some cases, to be annealled, they begin to arrive in the works in bags and boxes, or stored up on cars, all looking very rough and dirty, and not much lik the smooth, shining pieces that will go out to the power houses.

Another department where work starts quickly is the stores department. As soon as the winding specification is received the necessary quantity of copper wire for the armature coils and strip for the field coils is ordered. The stocks of bolts, nuts, pipes, and many other fittings are checked up and quantities marked off the records for the shop order on which the work is being done. As soon as the necessary information comes through on any part, or the pattern for any casting is completed, an order is sent out to whatever vendor is to supply the material.

Square Copper Used.

When the bare copper wire, which, contrary to popular ideas, is usually square or rectangular in section and not round, is received it passes through complicated machines which twist bobbins of cotton or silk thread around it, forming a smooth coating like that on the wire milliners use in making ladies' hats. Sometimes two or three layers of thread are put on before the wire is sent to the coil winders.

For the field coils, the copper strip is not covered with any insulation but goes to the winders as it comes in.

Coil Winding.

When the wire reaches the armature winding department it is wound on forms which make the coils just the right shape and size to fit in the machine. After the proper number of turns has been put on the coil is insulated. Vari us kinds of tape, such as varnished cambric, cotton and mica, are wound around the turns and in between windings the coil is submitted to various varnishings, dippings and bakings, which thoroughly impregnate the tapes with insulating compounds. The coil, when ready for the machine, is apparently a loop of metal covered with a rough and dirty tape.

The coils are placed in slots in punchings. These are made from sheets of steel, specially annealled, which are put under dies on huge presses and stmped out to the proper shape. After being punched and annealled the punchings are assembled in the castings, which are slotted to fit the dovetails on the punchings.

Machine Work.

The most important part of the work on one of these huge machines is the machine work. The castings are received in a rough form and the outer shell has to be machined off and the casting turned down to the proper size. The various holes and slots and keyways are then put in, and it is a common thing for a casting to be on the different machines for several weeks, day and night. The shaft is turned on a large lathe and then the keyway is put in and the holes for the attachment of collector rings and cables are drilled.

The rotor, which resembles a wagon wheel, is turned down, the bore of the hub is made the right size, the lots for the attachment of the field coils are put in and the shining steel wheel which results is vastly unlike the rough and dirty wheel which was received a few weeks before.

The stator casting is machined on the inside and slotted to fit the punchings. The holes for attaching the bearing bracket are drilled at the top and bottom. The bearing brackets look like spiders. They have a large hub, which is bored out to receive the bearing and six or eight arms which are attached to the rim of the stator.

A great many other small castings are used in the machine which is set on a circular iron base nearly as large as the stator.

Each of these machines contains enough piping to furnish the plumbing for a number of houses. The bearings are water-cooled and must be kept well supplied with oil as well. Wiring on the machines, to provide light when work is being done, is also inclosed in pipes.

The copper fittings, collector rings, etc., use up a great quantity of copper and dozens of small parts are used in the machine. There are, on the larger ones, platforms for working at the exciter which sits on top of the machine and these are fitted with handrails and stairs.

Some generators are horizontal instead of vertical but they are constructed on the same principal, and the chief difference is in the manner of supporting the rotor, which is mounted on pedestal bearings, one on each side of the stator.

Direct Current Generators.

The construction of a direct current generator, which develops power for street railways, welding outfits and other such uses is very much like that of the alternator, except that the field is stationary and the armature is on the revolving part. As the current generated in the armature alternates, they are fitted with commutators which change the connection just as rapidly as the current changes, thereby producing a direct current on the lines.

The main difference between a motor and a generator is that the motor, like the direct current machine, has a revolving armature. Motors are made in Peterborough varying in size from little washing machine motors to huge motors for the operation of heavy machinery. The huge compressors at the new sewage disposal plant are to be operated by C.G.E. motors rated at 100 horse power and yet these are small compared to some that have been built in the plant. Motors are the principal feature of the company's business and provide work for more men than anything else. A generator may be worth more money than a hundred motors but its construction is spread over such a length of time and so few men work on it that it makes very little difference in the prosperity of the workers, so that it is when orders are coming in for hundreds of motors that the wheels turn and business booms in Peterborough.

Transmission.

After a generator has been built and is developing electrical energy, and a factory has been built and the motors connected to the machines there is something needed before any wheels will turn in the factory. That is a means of transmitting and controlling the energy to the terminal boards of the motor. Transformers, which step up the voltage for transmission across country to others which reduce it to the capacity of the motors, are not built in Peterborough, but all the control equipment is.

A most interesting part of the plant is the wire department. Besides covering the wire for winding the machines the department covers with various types of insulation the wires for transmission. Sometimes these are coveredwith rubber, and for other uses asbestos forms the insulation. The wires and cables are soaked in compounds and before being sent out are laid in tanks of water and a current is sent through which must not find any loop-holes in the insulation.

Switchboards.

One part of the works where very few duplicates are turned out is the switchboard department. Some of these are for controlling and distributing current over various circuits; others collect the current on their buses from different sources of supply and put it all out in one circuit. The switchboard at the Utilities Substation is a good example of a made-in-Peterborough switchboard and it combines both these purposes Owing to the different needs of every factory and every powerhouse two switchboards exactly alike would be hard to find. They are built of marble, slate and recently asbestos lumber has been adapted for the purpose. Meters of all shapes and sizes, for measuring currents of all strengths are mounted on the panels. Switches are mounted on the panel, some of them direct operating and others to control large switches, possibly a thousand yards away.

Control Equipment.

Controllers, rheostats and compensators for the direct control of motors are made in the works. These comprise a great variety of types and models, varying almost as much as the switchboards. The compensators are for providing an extra current by means of transformer coils, just when a motor is being started and after full speed has been attained a switch is thrown, either by hand or automatically which cuts out the coil and permits the passage of the ordinary current.

In controllers, a number of contacts are connected to the terminals of a resistance and as the handle is turned the resistance is varied and the motor speeded up or slowed down.

Rheostats are resistors with switches and introduce a resistance into a circuit which can be varied to maintain a constant current.

Meters.

The little meter which keeps watch on the electricity which is consumed by the householder was doubtless purchased from the C.G.E. and these instruments keep a number of people busy. The meter consists of a recording device driven by what is in effect a small motor. The lamps are the resistances and as more are turned on the speed of the motor increases and it adds up more juice which the Utilities Commission very kindly charges for. These meters are delicate jeweled instruments, having sapphire bearings.

Porcelain Works.

A branch of the factory is located on Townsend street near the Canadian National track. This is the porcelain works. Insulators are made here some for use in the apparatus made in the main plant, some for use at the other plants and some, such as wiring cleats and insulators, for sale to the user in the form in which the plant turns them out. Porcelain is a mixture of mineral substances and water which is kiln-dried and glazed, forming a very hard substance very much like coarse crockery. It is one of the best insulating substances known for electrical purposes.

Peterborough's largest industry supplies one of the greatest needs of the country today and helps to use up all the Hydro power that is produced. The electrical business has a great many parts and the variety of machines and equipments produced in the Peterborough works is endless.

Exhibition Will Indicate Importance Of Peterboro Says Hon. W. E. N. Sinclair

To the Citizens of Peterborough.

May your City be richly rewarded by its "Made in Peterborough Exhibition." Producing as it does a great variety of manufactured articles most of which contribute to the comfort of home life, the Exhibition will be most interesting and will place more prominently before the country the great importance of your City. Its Manufacturers through faith in Peterborough and by the application of business principles have made possible the great development by attracting loyal employees to lo ate within its bu nds. As Peterborough has developed through the industry and thrift of its citizens, may the present Exhibition result in a further extension of its trade, thereby improving the condition of employer and employee and of the whole commercial and social fabric of your City which is so happily located amidst Nature's wealth and beauty.

W. E. N. SINCLAIR,
Leader of the Opposition.

BON MARCHE CO. MAKES MIDDIES

Busy Factory Turns Out Ladies' Apparel in Prevailing Mode.

FASHIONS CHANGE

One walks up two flights of stairs to reach the loft factory of the Bon Marche Company, at 173½ Simcoe street. But there is plenty of light in the upper long rooms where ten or eleven women work at the garments that are the output of this whitewear company.

Mr. F. Tougas is the manger of the factory that turns out women's wearing apparel, in the way of lingerie, in cottons and ginghams and sports suits for the children's garments in which it specializes. There are pretty night-gowns in colored crepes, bright colored sateen under-slips and Buster Brown suits for kiddies. Pillow covers too, comprise a portion of the product here.

Fed from whirling overhead bobbins are the electrically-driven machines with their deft operators and there is a buttonhole making machine and an out of the ordinary contrivance that embroiders the materials that come under its swift, shining needles, forming patterns in the embroidered things that delight the heart of womankind.

The changing wheel of fashion that makes for popularity or disfavor in so many things used to point to the dial marked "shirt waist." Times were when the shirt waist was all the rage, with its stiff cuffs and linen collar, suiting so admirably the Gibson girl with her tight skirt and stiff pompadour. Nowadays, the middy blouse reigns supreme, and in this little upper factory room, middy blouses are one of the chief items on the list of products.

PASTRY BAKED BY NUT KRUST

Electric Ovens Turn Out Dainties Besides Wholesome Bread.

HERE SINCE 1920.

The rich odor of baking pastry gushes out to meet the entrant to the Nut-Krust Bakeries at 326 George Street. On trays and shelves, on high racks that stand behind the counters and in the windows are samples of the wares of this white-painted store, with its white-tiled flooring.

The Nut-Krust Bakeries were originally established in this city in 1920, then reorganized two years ago. The local store and the Oshawa branch work in collaboration. G. L. M. Kirkwood is manager here, with a staff of about seven employees who turn out the toothsome pastries and buns and breads of many varieties that cover the trays.

Electric ovens stand at the rear of the store, and the basement is also used for baking purposes. In these big ovens, with three shelves each, twelve hundred loaves are baked every day, with about a thousand dozens of cakes and buns. The bread and cookies, the tarts and buns, the puff pastries, come from these cookers. There are fern cakes in the window, with a fern tracery in dark brown on their white icing tops; cocoanut novelties; and two specialties of the store, in the date cookies and the jelly doughnuts, the latter an elongated doughnut resembling a chocolate eclair, with the centre pierced lengthwise to admit some rich red jelly.

TOOLS AND DIES ARE MADE HERE

Peterborough Machine and Lubricator Company Does Good Work.

ENGINES BUILT

One of the strictly utilitarian small manufacturing plants of the city is the Peterborough Machine and Lubricator Company, tucked away in the old pink brick building at 226 George street, that was at one time a Bridge Works, then became a skating rink, and now houses jointly this company and the Dustless Sweeper people's plant. Where jolly skating parties used to disport themselves to band music, the old rafters now ring with the noise of hammers and the whir of lathes.

E. R. Wilson is the president of the Peterborough Machine and Lubricator Company, which makes tools, dies, special machinery of many types and automobile parts. Repairs to machines and motor boats are also done here where marine engines used to be built at one time, a manufacture now discontinued. "The Peterborough" gasoline motors are made in the old building, with special and experimental machines of all kinds to order. Supplies and accessories for autos and motor boats are manufactured, and repairs of all sorts to automobiles and motor vehicles.

Started in 1904, the business has been going on for the past twenty-one years. Offices are at 138 Dalhousie street.

ELASTIC TAKES RESPONSIBILITY

No Embarrassment Results to Those Who Use Peterborough Product.

There are probably very few people in the city who know that Peterborough possesses within its confines an elastic factory, a place where clacking bobbins take the tiny elastic threads and spin them into the accommodating fabrics that have no hard and fast rules about life, but adjust themselves obligingly to all manner of situations.

Elastic is an amiable material. A tremendous responsibility devolves upon it, for the holding up of the hose of the world is no light matter. It is ready too to take off the surplus flesh of femininity in the elastic reducing corsets coming into popularity of late, or to form in shoes the new gores that make them fit the ankle so neatly.

Peterborough's elastic factory is a loft factory, situated three stories above the street, over the White and Ackford garage and repair shop, at 204 George street. J. C. Riedel and Company run it, with Mr. Riedel in charge. Formerly superintendent of the Colonial Weaving Company's works, Mr. Riedel started his own manufacturing business about three years ago, commencing operations at the rear of his residence.

One of the noisiest of the small factories is this elastic-making centre. With the fine elastic threads of pure rubber, dyed different shades, fed from a central tube, the clicking, busy, rackety small bobbins race in and out, weaving the threads into elastic of different widths, plain and fancy, into loop elastics and braids and trimmings for corsets and lingerie, into corset-laces and ric-rac braid. There are half a dozen girls guiding the efficient-looking little electric machines, and a couple of youths putting up the finished products on cardboard spools and flat boxes.

Some of the larger city stores purchase elastics from this factory, but most of the output goes to Toronto and Montreal.

ARTCRAFT STUDIO HAS BEST IN ART

Picture Framing is Done and Pictures Are Cleaned on Premises.

Mr. C. D. Mathias is the proprietor of the little Artcraft Studio at 173½ Simcoe street, where an attractive display of photographs, picture frames, art goods and souvenirs, is made. "Let pictures tell the story" is the slogan on the wall, and there are numerous examples here of the photographer's art, in portrait and outside work both.

Finishing for amateurs is another sideline. Mr. Mathias has agencies at Toronto, Montreal, and at the summer resorts of Stoney Lake, where films are left and brought down to him in specially constructed bags.

Picture-framing work in a great variety is done here, and a specialty made of restoring old frames, re-constructing broken gilt corners, and repairing antique frames. The cleaning of pictures is also done, and Masonic frames turned out, with special corner emblems and adornments.

Mexico's greatest silver mines are in the State of Hildalgo.

Why Raybestos?

The original brake lining. Made by brake specialists who know brake lining from a practical as well as theoretical standpoint.

Made of long fiber asbestos reinforced with brass wire.

Woven solidly and compactly. Contains no plies or layers of loose filling.

Thoroughly treated with a heat and wear-resisting compound at a temperature greater than that subjected to in normal brake service.

Compressed before and after treatment resulting in a lining uniform, compact and homogeneous.

Contains no rubber to swell when heated or to slip when wet.

The most widely advertised and popular brake lining.

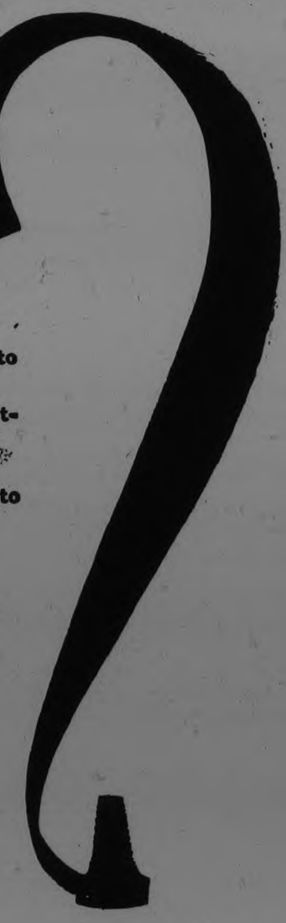
Brake lining is known as Raybestos. 75% of car owners specify Raybestos.

Guaranteed for one year.

Used as factory equipment on leading automobiles.

Raybestos always has a high market value – can always be sold at a profit.

The Raybestos Company in selling the dealer through the jobber, obligates itself to co-operate with the dealer in furnishing advertising matter, circulars, display cabinet, window trims, newspaper cuts, flange signs, etc., all of which assist the dealer in building up a profitable brake lining business.



THE CANADIAN RABESTOS CO. LTD.

PETERBOROUGH ONTARIO

THREE GENERATIONS CONTRIBUTE TO SUCCESS OF LUMBER COMPANY

John McDonald's Son and Grandsons Have Carried on Faithfully.

SEMI-CENTENNIAL.

Alfred McDonald Company Has a Reputation For Prompt Delivery.

A business that has been in the hands and direction of three generations, growing and expanding in successive years, and this year having the distinction of celebrating its Semi-Centennial may worthily claim that the best elements in manufacturing and merchandizing have all contributed to its progress. Steady and gradual growth, a turning into the business of the earnings of previous years, diligent work and foresight, gaining the support of a wide field of customers have all contributed to the success and permanancy of the Alfred McDonald Lumber Company, a Peterborough institution of half a century of growth.

The beginnings of the business came in 1875, when John McDonald the First, (grandfath r of the present owners) entered on his first modest enterprise, to be fostered and expanded by his energetic and capable son, the late Alfred McDonald, whos name the business bears. It passed on his death, for a time, into the direction of a Board of Trustees, to be handed over when the trio of capable sons reached maturity, J. R. McDonald, President, A. D. McDonald, Vice-President, and J. H. C. McDonald, Secretary-Treasurer of the Company, respectively. Today the enterprise stands as one of the most substantial in resources and equipment among the wood products manufacturing plants in the district and probably the only one of its capacity within thirty miles of the north shore of Lake Ontario, where years ago such enterprises were numbered by the hundred.

It is an axiom of business that enterprises that make money get close to the earth. The nearer the manufacturer can come to the working up of his natural products to a finished material in his own hands and paying tribute to none, the better the opportunity. That is the position of the McDonald Lumber Company, with its extensive limits to the North, in the townships of Harvey, Galway, Chandos and Anstruther to draw from, its admirably equipped plant, well trained force of men, bred to the business, and extra good shipping facilities. From its back-country reservoirs has come the supply of raw materials that feed the mills in the city and places the firm in a position of independence in regard to stock of all kinds. Year after year the supply seems as unlimited. From the log in the forest to the finished article there is none to take tribute. The business is self controlled and handled at minimum costs. Thus the first condition of succesful manufacturing is met.

Mill Destroyed.

In June 1898 the fine mill in use was destroyed by fire. The loss was a severe blow to the proprietor. With his characteristic energy he set about replacing the structure. At that time, three miles up the river from the town, at Nassau, was the one time famous "Red Mill", of the Irwin-Boyd Co., one of the largest in the province, but unoccupied. Mr. McDonald promptly acquired the building, had it taken down and transplanted to his mill site, the point of and known as the Crescent ,on the shore of Little Lake, and in the centre of the industrial district. The capacity of the works was at once doubled, and other lines in wood manufacture entered on. That building forms the heart of the Company's operating premises today.

To hold and expand trade the manufacturer must be in a position to supply the varied needs of his customer, who prefers to have car load lots from one source of supply. Piled in the mill yards, stored in the warehouses ready in the delivery sheds can be found the entire requirements for house, factory, store and business buildings, seasoned, kiln-dried where needed, and ready to deliver on order, promptly. It is this readiness to supply all needs that has brought to the Company its large trade and holds its customers for future business.

In 1919-20 the factory capacity was again enlarged. Additional buildings were put up and filled with the most modern of woodworking machinery. Materials are ever wanted in a hurry, and the firm's reputation for promptly meeting requirements is known far and wide. To do all this quickly 120 men are employed about the premises, and in the lumber camps 75 to 100 men in season. No industry carries on, in Peterborough, with greater regularity and steadiness than the McDonald Company.

It is recognized that needs and wants change from year to year. Meeting such demands means progress. Things that are enquired for and which may not be made in quantity are supplied, the firm holding agencies for several well known and preferred products. The Brantford Roofing Co. products are a case in point. Hardwood floorings, in all woods and grades are a specialty. Foreign woods, now in considerable favor, as those from British Columbia, are carried in stock and planed and finished to suit all forms of construction. With large resources in forest products and imported stock any demand can be met, offering a wide opportunity for selection.

Qualified Managers.

Brought up in intimate association with the mills and shops, tutored by and with fatherly experience and knowledge, the present owners readily took hold and have organized and established a most successful industry. Modernizing did not stop with the incoming of modern equipment, for this month a new and commodious business office has been erected worthy of the enterprise and the firm, has been built and opened. The old, but comfortable, small office had answered through the years that have gone but today the importance of the firm's trade called for larger premises, and it has been met. And so the Company enters on the next fifty years of progress and well-doing comfortably housed and finely equipped.

The annual production of the plant runs into surprising amounts. And it is to be remembered that what is produced from day to day has to be disposed of and not kept in stock in its entirety. The demands from customers easily keep the factories in operation. Roughly in amount produced, lumber of all kinds will easiy reach 5,000,000 ft. and 5,000,000 shingles is a moderate estimate. A particularly active department is that devoted to turning out thousands of doors, with sash, interior fittings and finishes, as the interior construction of dwellings is termed. In the last few years crates and boxes and containers have been devised of paper, pulp and various manufactured boards, but the durable and well constructed wooden box stills holds the preference with many shippers. Thousands of these in all sizes and strengths are turned out, as well as box shooks, to be afterwards nailed together. Lath, as yet a necessity in house building is made in thousands of bundles. To enumerate the lines made would be to print a catalogue.

Edmund Wand Planing Mill Has Been Operated In Peterborough Since Over Half Century Ago

One of the city's oldest factories lies to the north of the Hunter Street Bridge. This is the planing mill, at present operate by Edmund Wand. This mill has been operated by the Wand family for over fifty years. and had been in operation for a number of years before they took it over.

Despite its great age, the plant is modernly equipped with the latest saws, planes and other woodworking machinery. Doors, sash, moulding, and builders' supplies form the produce of the mill and are all of first class quality. A number of men find steady employment in this factory.

PLANING MILL NOW WOODYARD

W. H. Baker Handles Many Hundred Cords of All Kinds of Wood.

BIG BUSINESS

W. H. Baker owns and manages an extensive wood yard. Some years ago a planing mill was incorporated with the plant but the wood business is now sufficient to constitute an extensive industry. The establishment is yet known as the Peterborough Planing Mill.

Al kinds of fire wood are obtainable, including the hard and soft varieties. Hard wood slabs of maple and elm, etc., as well as the soft woods, such as pine and hemlock, are always obtainable.

These woods may be had in mixed lots which some prefer for cooking purposes. This firm is one of the few in Peterborough which deals exclusively in wood.

BUTTONS SEWN BY MACHINERY

Ingenious Devices Expedite Work at J. C. Poolman & Co. Establishment.

LADIES' WHITEWEAR

A very clever machine that takes a pearl button, or any other type of button, for that matter, between its two steel jaws, and holds it fast while an energetic needle, properly guaged, comes swiftly down and sews it tightly to the required garment, is one of the mechanical appliances in the upper factory room of the J. C. Poolman and Company's establishment at 208½ Charlotte street. There are other ingenious machines here also; a machine for making button-holes, one for attaching strapping to children's underwear, taking in the button on its little holder, at the same time, another that does over-seaming and gets rid of the raw edges during the operation, and four hem-stitching machines that are interesting to watch, doing fine hem-stitching with such even, mechanical precision as to make them seem almost alive in their careful execution of work that used to mean so much long and careful effort to achieve.

Another appliance here that is out of the ordinary is an electric knife for cutting. Something reminiscent of the guillotine is in the fine shear edge that descends with dangerous speed on thick layers of cloth and cuts them with exact evenness.

Established in the city about a year ago, the J. C. Poolman Company caters exclusively to the wholesale trade from coast to coast, with six travellers on the road, selling ladies' whitewear, the children's dresses and rompers and the art needlework that comprise its product. J. C. Poolman is the local manager. Another sideline of the firm, which has an average of about ten employees in its local plant, is the doing of hem-stitching for several of the large retail stores of the town.

Here are girls busily running the power-driven machines, making garments and hem-stitching the big linen bedspreads which can be cut, stitched and patterned within the space of less than ten minutes. And here are girls applying patterns to various linen pieces, all ready for embroidery. It is interesting to watch the speed and care with which the machines and their drivers turn out the white goods and the finished garments. In the outer shipping room, a young man is rolling mull that has the delicate shade of pink ice cream.

NU-ART MARBLE HAS PROSPECTS

One of the Most Promising Infant Industries in City is Growing.

WONDERFUL WORK.

The Nu-art Marble Company, which nestles under the shadow of the Hunter street bridge, in the old Rapid Tool Buildin, is one of the city's most promising infant industries. Edward J. Roberts, who did the granite finish work on the bridge, beneath which he now labors, is the inventor of a process for glazing cement. A number of Peterborough men have formed this company and machinery will soon be installed to start operations on a large scale. Mr. Roberts has just returned from visiting England. France, Germany, Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia and Holland, where he exhibited his samples and had machinery made to his specifications.

A great variety of bowls, lamps, vases and kindred articles may be seen in the factory, which appear from a distance to be finely glazed china, with a pattern which resembles marble. On handling, the weight of the articles soon shows that they are not made of china clay but of ordinary cement, such as forms the Hunter street bridge. Sand from a pit on the outskirts of Peterborough, and cement from the Canada Cement Company, mixed with water from the Otonabee River, are the ingredients of these beautiful pieces of art.

A new departure for the company will be the making of tile for walls. These will also be made of cement, with mottled designs or floral designs glazed on them. Any color and any pattern can be applied to these tiles which are much stronger than ordinary clay tiles. One of them was held in boiling water for a time in the winter and then placed outwhile still hot, in the 30 below zero weather of that day. No damage was done to the finish or to the tile itself.

Architects and others who have seen Mr. Roberts' samples are already asking when production will begin as a great many of the tiles can be used for construction work, as they are both beautiful and durable.

CANADIAN NASHUA PAPER CO. HAS MULTITUDE OF PRODUCTS FROM CHEWING GUM PAPER UP

Pink Wrapper on Spearmint Produced in Peterborough Factory With Many Other Brands of Waxed Paper for Scores of Purposes Everywhere.

ONLY HIGHEST QUALITY WORK IS DONE

Paper Strips That Fasten Package in Retail Store and Others That Hold Carton Closed Probably Had Genesis Here—Canadian Materials Are Used.

The Canadian Nashua Paper Company Ltd. was organized, and established its plant at Peterborough five years ago and has been in continuous operation since that time. The Company is associated with the Nashua Gummed and Coated Paper Company of Nashua, New Hampshire, and with the Gummed Paper Manufacturing Company Ltd. of Narborough, England.

The main products of the Peterborough plant are gummed and waxed paper and the industry falls into the class of paper conversion as paper is not actually manufactured, but is used as raw material and adapted to particular uses.

Huge rolls of paper, weighing around 400 pounds, are brought in car-load lots and it may be had in different grades varying according to work for which it is designed.

Kraft paper, from the greatest Kraft mills in the world located in Quebec, is used chiefly for package wrappings.

Sulphite or a specially treated paper manufactured in Ontario is coated with a fine vegetable gum and is used for labels.

Cambric is also gummed and used in the manufacture of corrugated cartons which have in the last few years replaced the wooden packing case as a shipping container for light merchandise.

While a small quantity of Canadian glue is used the greatest amount comes from England. It is received in bags of 112 pounds and is in a finely ground state and of a brown colour. The glue is mixed with water and stirred in two large copper retorts till it has attained the proper consistency, when it is taken to the gumming machine and placed in a tank which holds a large supply of the viscous fluid.

The paper passes over a series of rollers, one of which spreads the glue evenly over the surface; it then passes over a steam heated drum which partially dries the glue. The drying process is completed before the paper leaves the machine. All of the various papers may be gummed on this special gluing apparatus irrespective of material or weight.

The rolls are taken from this machine to the slitters.

There are four slitting machines, three of which are "score cut" and the remaining one a "shear cut" machine. The score cut machine slits the strips by means of a series of sharp disks set at definite spaces and operating against a steel roller. The large roll of paper from the gluing machine is placed on the slitter and in passing through, is cut into sections.

The "shear cut" machine has two sets of disks which operate in such a manner that they rotate in opposite directions and exactly mesh, operating on the same principle as a pair of scissors.

These machines will cut the paper in strips of any width from ½inch to a 36 inches.

The strips may be shipped plain or printed with the trade marks of the various firms.

Printing Presses.

There is a small printing press designed for printing various package stickers, and has a capacity for rolls ¾-inch to 4 inches in width.

Three large presses are used for the wider stock and consist of a 3 colour press, 2 colour press and one colour press and are used for printing bread and candy wraps and trade-marked paper. The cuts and inks are supplied by a Toronto firm.

The rolls are then wrapped and the ends are covered in a way which the factories in the United States cannot approximate, so that a certain amount is cut from the overhead. Shipments are made in bundles, that method having been found to be more convenient than casing would be. The use of gummed paper is increasing greatly, of late years, due to the wide adoption of the corrugated shock proof cases.

Waxed Paper.

The paper stock used for waxing is of a different consistency and is purchased largely in Canada from firms at Niagara Peninsula, and Quebec. Certain special grades are obtained from United States.

Printed on plain paper it passes through wax melted, and at a high temperature. It is then subjected to a chilling process, the cold for which is supplied by an ice machine, having a 10-ton capacity per day. Water is sucked off by a vacuum process.

There is one dry wax machine which gives a special preparation to the paper. After passing through the wax, the paper passes over three hot rollers so that it becomes thoroughly impregnated with the wax in such a manner that the presence of wax cannot be detected by the touch. This machine was working on an order of pink paper for the Wrigley Chewing Gum Co.

The rolls of paper used for this purpose are from 800 to 900 pounds in weight. They are 57 inches long and are about 25 inches in diameter.

The paper is shipped in car-load lots and is used to keep the gum moist, pliable and elastic.

Before being sent away it is slit into rolls, the proper width for the wrapper, bound in bundles and tightly packed.

Wax paper slitters operate on the same principle as those for slitting the gummed stock except that the paper is usually printed before being cut. All colours are used and the trade-marks of the various firms are printed in different coloured inks. Wrappers for bread, gum, tobacco and liners for candy boxes are slit on these machines in sizes from 1½ inches to 60 inches.

The paper is also cut into sheets on a special machine which is built in two decks and has 24 rolls. A knife cuts twenty-four sheets with one slash, the sheets being of any length, from 18 inches to 84 inches.

The "spot" sheeter, a different machine, cuts just one sheet at a time, collects five and delivers the group. This machine is used for cutting trade-marked stock and may be set in such a way that the knife falls each time on a spot which has been made in the wax. By this method the designs on the paper are cut around properly.

All sheets are trimmed to size on the Seybold Guillotine Cutter, an instrument which can accommodate a stack of paper 6 inches in depth and 60 by 60 inches.

Sheets are also cut on this machine for use in grocery stores, notably for sanitary wrappings of meat, lard, butter, etc. Bread and candy wrappers may also be cut on this machine. A great knife is forced down on the paper which shears through a stack of it as if it were so much cheese.

Special rolls of lunch wraps are prepared for use on picnics, parties and preparing the ordinary lunch box. From 12 to 60 sheets are rolled around a pasteboard core and labelled. This work is done by hand and a number of girls are employed for this purpose.

Wax is Canadian.

The greater part of the wax used is refined in Canada with the exception of the highest test variety which must be imported and comes from Burma.

The wax comes in car-load lots in great white slabs twelve inches by eighteen by one and a half inches and may be had in three grades, varying according to the melting point. The finer grades have the highest melting point. The best of pure paraffin wax is used in all operations.

In connection with the plant there is a machine shop where all the necessary repairs are made. Special machines for grinding the slitter knives are also installed.

Boxes, crates and cases for the shipment of goods are constructed in a wood working department. In this way the quantity of cases required and the sizes may be supervised more readily.

The waste is baled and sold to paper manufacturers with the exception of the waste waxed paper, which is a total loss. Some narrow strips are used for candy packing, but the greater quantity must be destroyed.

An exceptionally large warehouse is used for keeping the large stock of paper and in winter it is also utilized as an indoor playground, having a volley-ball court and other amusement facilities.

Gets Large Ordes.

The Nashua Company receives large orders from some of the biggest firms in Canada and United States.

Some of the goods seen in process of manufacture were intended for such companies as Wrigley Chewing Gum, Quaker Oats Company which buys a considerable quantity of waxed paper for corn flake boxes, Imperial Tobacco Co. and Canada Bread. All companies wishing to retain the moisture in their product use large quantities of the waxed paper and find it very satisfactory.

At 4.30 a number of the employees were seen playing tennis on a well-equipped court and when inquiry was made the reporter was told that, due to a liberal policy of the management, all employees were allowed to get out and play at 4.30 on the days when overtime was to be worked at night. Thus the workers have practically two and a half hours of freedom before again taking up their tasks.

A number of trees and spacious grounds equipped for tennis, volley-ball and playground baseball, all go to make conditions very favourable for the employees. This with the consideration shown by the management combine in making the Nashua Paper Company a very popular factory.

EMPIRE'S BIGGEST CEREAL MILL GENERATES ALL ITS OWN POWER AND IS MODEL FOR THE WORLD

Efficiency and Cleanliness Are Watchwords at Quaker Oats Plant in Peterborough—Everything From Power to Sacks Made in Big Factory on Hunter St.

PRODUCT UNTOUCHED BY HUMAN HANDS

Hundreds of Intricate Machines Used in Preparing Flour, Rolled Oats, Corn Flakes, Puffed Rice, Wheat and Corn—Laboratory Tests All Foods.

Peterborough has the biggest and most efficient cereal plant in the British Empire. There are those who have lived in Peterborough for years who do not know this. The immensity of the Quaker Oats factory is not all apparent from the outside. In fact, scarcely a glimmering of the actual size and gigantic undertakings can be understood except by spending hours gazing in admiration at machines which are superior to human hands in their marvellous intricacy of operation.

Under the name "Quaker Oats" there is a flour mill which has a capacity of 4,500 barrels per day, and there is an oatmeal mill the capacity of which is 2,500 barrels per day. The total capacity of the plant is approximately 8,000 barrels.

When it is learned that the factory has a floor space totalling 521,245 square feet, and that dynamos capable of developing 5,000 horse-power are required to operate the machinery, some revealing light is cast on the enormity of the factory. When run to capacity, from 550 to 600 workmen are given employment.

It is not usually understood that incorporated under the head "Quaker Oats Co." there is a complete power installation for generating the electricity which drives all motors in the plant, there is a battery of boilers, a factory for the manufacture of wooden boxes and one for paper boxes, a bag factory, a completely equipped research and test laboratory, a beautiful dining-room, and small hospital ward in charge of a competent nurse.

One could inspect the plant for days and see no end to fresh marvels.

Destroyed by Fire.

In 1916, Peterborough experienced one of the greatest fires in its history when the plant of the Quaker Oats Company was completely destroyed by flames. Profiting by this, and making many improvements where defects existed before, a new plant was constructed which is the last word in efficiency and in cleanliness.

Food products pass through hundreds of operations and are never touched by human hands at any time during the transformation from grain to the finished and edible cereal. The floors, walls and ceilings are spotlessly clean, the nature of the architecture permitting thorough sweeping, as there are no secluded nooks and crannies which could harbour dust and dirt.

Insects, the bane of cereal mills, are dealt with in a unique manner. Instead of using gases and other insecticides, which might prove dangerous, the factory is closed down from three to four days at periods when the moths grow troublesome. All doors and windows are closed tightly, and by the medium of live steam, the air is heated to 125 degrees fahrenheit. This kills all insect life and also destroys any eggs which may have been deposited. The walls, ceilings and floors are then carefully brushed and swept, and work is resumed.

There are men whose sole work is the maintenance of cleanliness, and the effectiveness of having such a system is at once apparent. It would seem that "cleanliness" was the keynote on which the entire working conditions were based.

As you watch your mother or wife preparing the morning meal of porridge, providing that you possess the mentioned relatives, that you are awake in time to see the operation and that you partake of the plebeian oat, do you ever think that numbers of operations, hundreds of employees, and thousands of dollars worth of machinery are necessary in preparing a food which can constitute a breakfast costing very few cents.

Oats are brought to the plant in carloads and stored in bins till required for use, then submitted to cleaning and grading processes, passing eventually through rolls which flatten the grain. The hulls are removed by a special machine which, with almost human instinct, removes the flat particles from the hard cases.

Rolled Oats.

There are a number of kinds of oat meal. Rolled oats for domestic use, as well as the quick Quaker oats, which are similar but pass through other rolls which make the grains thinner and consequently needs less time for the cooking process in the home. There is also the ground oat meal, which is a great favorite in the older countries. This variety is not ground in flakes, but looks more like flour though not so finely milled.

On passing through the rolls the oat meal is stored in tanks ready to be packed by the various machines.

Cardboard boxes, manufactured in the plant, are fed into a chute and rolled flat. They are opened out and placed on forms passing on a conveyor. Both ends of the box are open. What this machine does will read like a fairy tale, but it is absolute fact.

The boxes pass along with flaps on both ends open. In their journey they go under a roller and emerge with the top flaps pressed down and glued securely. They pass on, and under an arched tube, which sucks them up one by one and places them with the remaining open end up, on another conveyor, which takes them to the filling machine.

The filling machine weighs the meal, pours it in the boxes, and packs it down so carefully that complaints are never received for short weight in packets; this machine fills three boxes at the same time. Passing from this machine the boxes pass under the same rollers again, and the tops are glued down.

After the final gluing process, the small packets continue on their journey to the wrapping machine, which seizes and encases them in a brightly colored jacket. The packets leave the wrapping machine in a continuous stream, and before dropping down a chute are thoroughly inspected to detect faulty wrappings.

As the packages come down the chute to the next floor a packer seizes them, four at a time, and throws them dexterously into the cases and pushes the box to a table; on one side of the table two men twist the wires securely about the case, and another man opposite drives nails through the top of the box into cleats in the ends.

These men are able to pack and send out over a hundred cases per hour. There are eight of the tables in a row, each under a filling and wrapping machine on the floor above, so some idea may be obtained of the quantity of oatmeal which can be packed up and sent out.

In front of the tables a big conveyor runs, which carries the cases to a chute which takes them to the floor below, from which they are loaded into cars or stored in the warehouse.

The cases from some of the tables are nailed by a machine which drives two nails at once. One man on this machine can handle the cases from two tables.

Shot from Guns.

The making of puffed grains is a very interesting process. Wheat of a special hard grade is used for puffed wheat. Steel tubes are loaded and slid into an oven, which cooks the grain in its own steam for about forty minutes. A tube is pulled from the oven to a conveyor, is slid along and rammed into a closed compartment as a shell might be placed in a gun.

The door of the tube is dropped and a terrific explosion follows, during which instant the wheat shoots from the "gun" into a screened compartment from which it drops into wheeled tanks. The "guns" are heated in order so that there is always one ready to be shot. The wheat, after the explosion, is about eight times its original size.

Rice is dealt with in a similar manner. This operation is performed in the western annex, so the product is wheeled to the other building where it is packed in boxes and shock-proof cases, much the same as the oatmeal.

Corn Flakes.

For the preparation of corn flakes selected corn is used; the germ is first removed by a special process, after which the corn is flaked by a series of knife-like cutters. The flakes are cooked over gas flames and conveyed to tanks after passing a rigid inspection.

The corn flakes are wrapped in the ordinary cardboard cartons, and an additional wrapping of waxed paper is used to keep out moisture so that the original crispness of the flakes will be retained. The smaller cartons are packed in larger cases and afterwards trucked away and stored.

Quaker Flour.

The Quaker Oats flour mill is capable of a 4,500-barrel production per day and is a marvellously equipped department.

The elevator capacity is 1,600,000 bushels. The wheat, after being cleaned, goes through a machine which picks out grain far more skilfully than human fingers could do the task. The machine consists of a number of rotating discs, on the surface of which are little pockets which will hold a grain of wheat but will throw an oat grain aside. Thus the separation is effected, and the wheat flows on free from the oat grains. The wheat passes through cleaners, scouring processes and separators, and finally arrives at the rolls

The rolls are huge, corrugated cylinders, each weighing about five hundred pounds, four of which are in every machine. In the Quaker mill there are dozens of these roll machines, and to the lover of machinery they make a beautiful picture as they stand in long rows, each doing its work in breaking the wheat grain into bran, shorts, middlings, low grade and flour.

As the grain flows from the rolls, or breaks, it passes through sifters, which sort the product in the various grades. Gradually the different processes work and finally the products are all conveyed to the individual packers.

The flour packers are all fed from a great oblong tank, under which men, operating the machines, draw off the flour in bags, weigh it, sew the sack and place it on a conveyor.

Some wholesale firms demand that the sacks be hand-sewn, in which case a man, armed with a large needle, quickly draws the tops of the bag together, allowing the familiar ears to stick up.

More often, however, the bags are placed on the conveyor open, with the the top folded neatly. In this case they are all sewn by a machine as they pass in line. The operator of this machine must be very deft to get the bags sewn as they pass.

Sacks and Cases.

The bags used for the various products are made in the plant. Jute sacking, imported from Scotland, arrives in bales, which are placed on a huge machine.

This machine cuts the cloth a suitable size, prints it with the desired lettering, and folds it ready to be sewn. The bags are then wheeled to the sewing department, where a number of girls, operating high speed machines, sew up the side of the bag and across one end. The bags are then taken to another machine which turns them right side out, after which they are baled ready for use. Many of these bales are shipped away for the use of other mills.

The mats used in the press for printing the various devices are all designed in the department and are cut from a special rubber material.

Considerable ability is necessary for this work as the designs are intricate and the letters must be cut backwards. An ordinary knife is used for this job.

The wire-bound cases are also made and printed in a box factory operated for the purpose. The parts for the boxes are shipped in and assembled, having strips of wire along the boards. They are sent up to the package department in flat four, where special machines bend them into box form ready to act as containers of food products.

In the Laboratory.

All testing is carried out in a large and well-equipped laboratory, and tests are made of all products. When the wheat first comes to the elevators it is tested for moisture content, and when the finished flour is ready it is baked, as mother would bake it, in an oven. Hundreds of tests are made daily and a thorough inspection maintained, which keeps the materials up to the high level of perfection.

A dining-room is maintained for those who bring lunches for the noon hour, and tea may be obtained, made in great hot-water heaters.

There are numbers of flowers in the room, a good phonograph and many conveniences which add to the comfort of the worker and aid greatly in giving a high degree of satisfaction.

A nurse is employed who gives speedy and practised assistance to all emergency cases, though, due to the high efficiency of the machinery, serious accidents are very rare, and in many cases due to carelessness rather than defective mechanism. To avoid this cause, foremen watch particularly to prevent workmen from becoming careless.

Weekly meetings of all department heads are held in the dining hall for the purpose of discussing economic and improvement questions. All matters that would add to the comfort and convenience of employees are discussed. Any faults of machines are noted and later corrected. Cleanliness is preached and drilled till it becomes an obsession. But it is this care for detail which has resulted in the sale of Quaker Oats products all over the world, which has made possible a marvellous expansion and has won unparalleled admiration and respect from contemporaries in the commercial world.

Small things are not neglected. Cleanliness to the "nth" degree is maintained. Employees are given the greatest consideration, and various pastimes and sports are provided for after hours' amusement. Machinery is kept efficient, and labor-saving devices are used where possible.

By these means has the Quaker Oats Company risen to enviable heights in the statement "the Quaker Oats Cereal Co. of Peterborough is the largest, best-equipped plant of its kind in the British Empire.

OTONABEE MILL IS BUSY PLACE

Has Distinction of Selling Much of Its Product Locally.

MAKING YARNS

A manufacturing plant about which little is known by the citizens of Peterborough, but which gives employment to a number of happy and smiling girls, is the Otonabee Mills Ltd. plant on Hunter Street East. This factory produces yarn for knitting and mending, and a great deal of its product is sold in the stores of the city, while more of it is used by knitting firms here in Peterborough.

The raw material comes into the factory in the form of wool tops, round bundles which resemble tam-o-shanters. The wool comes from these in long strings resembling ropes, and is run through a variety of machines, all very much alike, until it comes out in threads not much thicker than the cotton thread which is used for sewing. Each of these machines comb the fibre and draws it out to a greater length and makes it smaller.

The first and second machines of the battery of seven are known as gill-boxes. When the yarn comes from these it resembles a thin rope. After passing through a four-spindle and six-spindle drawing box, it resembles finished yarn, but consists of one thick strand instead of two or more thin ones.

The last machine in the drawing room is the rover, which brings the yarn down to even smaller diameter. It then passes to the spinning room where it first passes through a spinning frame, which is the final machine over which the single strand passes. Two, three or more strands are then twisted together on the twister and then the finished yarn is reeled up into the skeins in which it is commonly sold.

Preparing for Sale.

Although the manufacturing process has now been finished, the yarn is not ready for sale. Certain mixtures and colors require only to be washed before going to the stores or to hosiery manufactures, but the white yarn which comes through has, in many cases, to be dyed to whatever shade is wanted by the customer. This is not done at the mill, but the yarn is taken to Parker's Dyeworks. After it returns, the yarn is wound up on cones, in which form it is sold for some purposes, or from which it is wound into balls, or on cards, to be placed in the stores, where the girl who wishes to knit a new sweater, or the mother who has to darn the stockings of the family tearall, buys whatever quantity and quality she requires.

Yarns of all colors and thicknesses are turned out, from the thick yarn much used for hand-knitted sweaters, down through all the grades of yarn to the fine quality used in machine-made hosiery. Some is all-wool, other yarns contain a mixture of silk and wool. It is quite possible to buy hosiery in Peterborough stores, knitted in Peterborough factories from yarn spun in Peterborough mills.

TWO TONS OF BABIES.

LONDON, June 1.—One of those omnipresent statisticians has figured out that two tons of babies were born at a London hospital last year. He also says that if they were laid end to end they would form a line 260 feet long.

LOCK COMPANY SHIPS PRODUCT TO MANY LANDS

Multiplicity of Activities Staggers Visitor Till System Seen.

ARTISTIC WORK

Some Finely Finished Locks Made With 25,000 Possible Combinations.

There is located in Peterborough a factory whose product not only adds to the beauty of the home, but protects that property against all light-fingered gentry who draw their living from the life-blood of their fellow men. Those who would not scruple to picking up odd pieces of silverware would find a hard job ahead of them if, in the pursuit of their calling, they were confronted by a door securely closed by a Peterborough lock.

A lock factory is a most interesting place to visit, and so complicated that there is at first sight, no beginning or end. There are locks at every hand, all in different stages of manufacture, and not only locks but all manner of fittings, such as coat hooks, hinges, drawer pulls, bolts, fireplace fittings, and everything in metal about the home.

Begins in Metal'

The beginning of a lock is in the foundry, where the white-hot metal is poured into the molds, which are made of a preparation containing clay formed into a rectangular shape. When the metal has set in the molds they are taken apart and the various pieces removed to be sent to buffers which grind off the sharp edges and impart a smooth finish.

Other parts, of thinner metal, are made in punch presses, which stamp the articles out of long metal strips.

The keys are stamped out in this manner and sent to milling machines which cut the grooves necessary to make the key fit. To give an idea of the complicated nature of the work, it might astonish many to know that some of the locks are made with over 25,000 possible combinations.

As the various parts of the locks go through the machining and finishing processes they pass to the assembly room, where they are skilfully put together and the proper key is placed with each lock. All are stacked ready to be taken to the packing room, where they are placed in tissue wrappers, in separate boxes, and despatched to the various customers.

Finish Artistic'

The finishes which are imparted to metals now are varied and exceptionally artistic.

Before an article can be plated it must be thoroughly cleaned and smoothed on buffers which travel at a high speed. The buffers, in many cases, grade from a coarse emery to softer asbestos pads, mounted on a shaft which polishes the work so that the ions from the anodes in the plating rooms will stick to the surface.

The pieces to be plated are first thoroughly cleaned in a strong alkaline solution which removes all grease. They are then suspended on hooks and hung from rods in vats full of a solution of carbonate of copper, potassium cyanide and ammonium. Besides these articles in the solution, there are also pieces of the metal from which the plating will be derived.

The electric current is then turned on and it passes from the pieces of metal, or anode, through the solution carrying the electrified atoms, so well known to cross-word fans, and depositing them on the surface of the material to be plated. The pieces are left in the bath about forty minutes, and, when removed, have a film of possibly 1-1000th of an inch deposited upon them. It is in this way that door knobs or plates may be gold-plated or silver-plated or covered with a coating of nickel, as desired

After the article has been plated, it is cleaned of the solution and burnished by revolving wheels, which bring out a wonderful lustre. Very pleasing effects are obtained by partially covering the articles with a plate before placing as the wheel. This has the effect giving a two-tone finish and this, when done in black nickle, has a very neat and pleasing appearance.

The smaller articles are placed in a revolving barrel, which turns in a vat of solution. The plating process is carried on just as effectively as when the articles are stationary, and a great saving of time is effected by this method and a quantity production attained which would be impossible by any other method.

Many of the knobs are finished in metal and must go through the plating process but there are also a great number of glass knobs which are imported from Czecho-Slovakia, and fitted to the holders and then to special high-grade locks, usually for use in private homes.

Output Standardized'

The locks made by this company are standardized as much as possible, and there is an absence of freak varieties neither are these any extremely large or small ones. The cylinder lock seems to be showing an increased popularity, though there is, of course, a heavy demand for the tumbler type for inside work.

The locks are very widely distributed to many other countries outside of Canada.

Hotels are good customers, as when a new one is built a large order is usually submitted for the complete outfitting of all the metal work.

So it is that the product of this city, being dispersed in all directions, carries with it a certain degree of responsibility.

All locks are stamped "Peterborough," and carry this name to every land, and where they are sold Peterborough is represented as a city where strong, durable locks are manufactured.

The advertising of a city does not stop with the character of the territory which contains it, but judgment is also passed on its contributions to the world.

SWEEPER DOES DUSTLESS WORK

W. T. Blaney, Inventor, and Howard Bishop Manage Peterborough Baby.

AIR FILTERED

The big red motor van with its bright red coloring and yellow lettering that makes its daily rounds on the city streets is one of the most interesting manufactured articles possibly within the city limits, as its invention took place here and the man who first thought of it is a resident of the city. The Dustless Sweeper is a bonafide Peterborough baby, albeit a large one.

The inventor himself, W. T. Blaney, is superintendent and director of the Dustless Sweeper Company, and Howard Bishop is its managing director, in charge of the selling and promotion end of the business.

As well as the manufacture of the dustless sweepers, which goes on in the building at 226 George street, the making of an air-filter for mills and elevators goes on, and similar filters for use in tractors and trucks are made. Used in automobile assembly, these filters take the dust out of the air, keeping it from getting through the carburetor into the cylinders and scoring them. By this system, the life of the engine is prolonged by about seventy per cent.

In mills and elevators, terrific explosions from dust collection often take place. The big battleship-grey filter is designed to obviate this danger. An experimental specimen has been installed for some years past in the Quaker Oats Company's plant, where a permanent one will soon be placed.

With this machine, the dust particles are cleaned out of the air, which is gathered in by suction devices near the floor. The air is later returned to the room, thus effecting an appreciable saving in heating. The old system was to discharge dust and air together into the outer atmosphere. A drum in the interior of the new device revolves once within twelve minutes.

Another interesting minor manufacture going on here is the making of the steel brushes used in the sweeper. By a contrivance of Mr. Blaney's, a steel brush that formerly required a man's labor for sixteen days to turn out now can be manufactured by a man in two and one-half days.

IDEAL FACTORY FOR PRODUCING TURNER TENTS

Light and Cheerful, With Growing Flowers Everywhere in Plant.

MANY SIDELINES

Coal Bags and Bunting Made in Quality That is Well Known.

Cheerfulness and light, with a goodly number of growing plants scattered about the interior, seem to be the keynotes of the J. J. Turner and Sons establishment, on George street. From the top to the bottom floors, there is plenty of air and plenty of light, and there is a wonderful view of the surrounding district and the city itself from the uppermost of the five floors.

Tents and coal bags, flags and buntings, tarpaulins and pack bags, horse blankets and awnings come from the big factory, which started out in three storeys and then gradually grew in size until it reached its present proportions. The business was commenced half a century ago by the late John J. Turner, father of the Turner brothers, in the little grocery store by the lane, opposite the market square, on Water street. Then the premises now occupied by John Butcher, on Brock street, were taken, with removal later to the store now under the management of P. Black, at the corner of King and George streets, and final occupation of the present handsome building, where an average of sixty-eight people are employed all the time, including travelling salesmen.

From coast to coast, from Vancouver to Halifax, the products of the Turner building go. On the shipping floor, any day, one may find parcels addressed to Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, to Renfrew and Kingston and near-by Bewdley, to Sydney, in Nova Scotia, to Oshawa and Cobourg and Vancouver There are three motor trucks in their special cement-floored quarters, taking out and bringing in orders and supplies and attending to the wants of people who want jobbing work done.

In the basement are the two blacksmith forges, with their red fires and heavy doors, for the manufacture of the irons and rollers that are needed for the big awnings. And on the top floor are the jute blankets and life preserver cushions. Kapok from the Isles of Java fills a small room, where a machine pulls the cohesive stuff apart.

In the sign department are men working out various designs and backgrounds in paint for signs, plain and electric, and in another department are the tents that represent a small fortune, done up in heavy bags. Here are eight, of 50 by 100 feet, worth $2,000 each, and five that measure forty by eighty feet, worth about $1,600 apiece. These are rented out mainly to Fall Exhibitions. Each of the largest tents is as big as the Turner factory itself, occupying an area of 50 by 100 feet.

In the awning department are the green and white, the khaki and chocolate contrivances that keep the sun out, and there are piles of heavy pack bags. Machines for stitching the ponderous, heavy coal bags can cut through a half inch board. There are five two-needle machines that make two seams at one operation, and there is a braiding machine for the coal bags, going through the thick substance without any apparent difficulty.

Downstairs, in the front premises, are auto tents, compact little affairs with windows and doors covered with mosquito netting, furnished with a cot, a small table and a couple of chairs, all capable of being carried on the running-board of a car.

There are snowshoes here, also, toboggans, canoes and paddles, oiled clothing and imported woollen rugs and porch swings. And the Turner Company is the exclusive agent for the "Sunstop" window and porch shades made by the Peterborough Canoe Company, ventilating shades of basswood strips, made on an ingenious plan.

PETERBOROUGH CANOES SAIL WHEREVER WATER IS FOUND TO SPREAD FAME OF THE CITY

Universally Used by Explorers and Pleasure-Seekers for Quality.

283 MODELS

Name Known From Hudson Bay to Brazil—Yukon to Australia.

Made in Peterborough—boats of all kinds, canoes, skiffs, sailing boats, motor boats; boats of all sizes, from 9-foot motor boat tenders to 24-foot freight canoes and cruising motor boats; boats for all purposes, pleasure sailing, touring, racing, hunting and freighting; boats propelled in many manners, by paddle or oar, by sail or motor; boats made of many materials for use in many lands—these can all be found among the two hundred and eighty-three models of the Peterborough Canoe Company, made in the large plant on Water Street, at the east end of King Street.

The Peterborough Canoe Company is one of the city's oldest industries. Founded in 1879, it was the pioneer in the construction of wooden canoes, which were first built by John Stephenson, who died a few years ago. The early influence of this city and company on the building of these canoes is shown by the fact that in many parts of the north, a canoe, whatever trademark it may bear, is called a "Peterborough."

A Canadian Vessel.

The canoe is distinctly a Canadian vessel. It was in use among the Indians when America was discovered, and birch canoes were used by the early voyagers and explorers. Champlain passed through this part of Canada, in 1615 with his Huron allies, travelling by canoe to attack the Iroquois, south of Lake Ontario.

Now wooden canoes made in Peterborough are sent to all parts of the world. Many go to European countries, there they are fast gaining popularity as pleasure craft.

Used by Explorers.

Freight canoes, made in Peterborough, were used by the Roosevelt expedition into the Brazilian wilds in 1914, and many canoes are shipped nowadays to South America as well as to the United States Government Survey, the Hudson Bay Company and other fur traders of the north. Peterborough canoes formed the flotilla of William Ogilvie, first governor of the Yukon, on his trip through that territory and down the Mackenzie River in 1887.

Canoes made in Peterborough are shipped to Australia and New Zealand, and every country between here and there. Wherever they go, they spread the name of Peterborough as that of a place where skilled workmen turn out reliable products for the use of the whole world.

An Interesting Process.

The manufacture of a canoe is an interesting process. From the lumber yards, which contain large piles of cedar and basswood for the planking, rock elm for ribs, and mahogany and other expensive woods for trim, come the boards which pass through shapers and planers and sanders until they are the required shape and size.

When the boards have been cut to the right shape they pass to the building department. Here there are many moulds on which are built the canoes. The boards for ribs, keel, bow and sternposts are steamed and bent to shape. They are then fastened on the mould, and the long strips, narrow with a grooved joint for wood canoes, or wide with flat joints for canvas-covered craft, are nailed on. If the canoe is to have a canvas cover, this is then put on, and after the mould has been taken out, gunwales and decks are added.

Many Finishing Processes.

Then comes the finish. Many coats of paint or varnish, and filler, with applications of sand for smoothness are given before the canoe becomes the shining craft which floats on the Otonabee, or other beautiful river. Then it is packed, with its quota of thwarts, seats and paddles, and starts on a journey, it may be half way round the world, to where some happy canoeist will claim his craft and float gayly on beautiful and storied waterways. Again, it may go north, where some prospector or freighter will use it on the wild unnamed streams flowing into the northern ocean through rocky and wooded territories, whose waterways are their only highways.

A beautiful canoe, the pride of the Company, is that called "Cedar Rib." For this construction, longitudinal ribs, or battens, are put on the mould and the cedar strips run around the canoe instead of lengthwise. When the canoe has been smoothed and varnished and polished many times, until it glistens like a smiling pool on a sunny day, it is ready for some lucky swain to paddle out, arousing the envy of all who gaze upon it.

Special Lines.

Many special constructions are made in addition to the ordinary run of canoe. There is the huge freight canoe, 24 feet long, more than five feet across, and two feet deep, capable of conveying a load of two and one-half or three tons. These canoes are used in the uncharted and undredged streams in primitive and unsettled lands, and have thick wooden strips nailed lengthwise along the bottom to prevent jagged rocks from making disastrous rents in the canvas and thin cedar which form the fabric of the bottom.

For the man who has a nervous wife or a family of energetic young ones, or both, the Company provides canoeing comfort with the sponson canoe. This craft is a canvas-covered model, with air chambers on the sides. It is possible to stand on the side without upsetting and the canoe will not sink even when full of water.

Sporting Models.

A considerable item in the canoe business is the sporting canoe. There are light racing canoes of different lengths for one or several paddlers. There are sailing canoes, all decked in except for a very small cockpit. An interesting example of this is one built to the specifications of a New York enthusiast, who expects to win many races with his splendid boat during the coming regatta season. This boat is fitted with a false bottom in the cockpit to reduce the space where water could accumulate and add weight at critical moments. War canvas, popular for racing and cruising at many places, are also a product of the Peterborough Canoe Company.

Other Boats.

But canoes are not the only boats made here. Skiffs and outboard motor boats are sometimes made with the smooth outer surface of the canoes, as are also sailing dinghys, but most of them are of lapstreak construction, with each board overlapping the one beneath it, as in a clapboard house. These boats, like canoes, are made in many varieties. Some of them, such as sailing boats and motor boat tenders, look to be almost as wide as they are long and have very small draught. Others, for fishing and pleasure sailing, are more gracefully shaped than these, but all are well built and serviceable craft. The sailboats are furnished with heavy iron centre-boards, which can be raised or lowered at will, and which add greatly to the stability of the boat. Some of these boats are furnished with rudders, but the outboard motor boats are steered by turning the motor, which is pivoted.

Motor boats are shining, highly finished pieces of workmanship. They vary greatly in size, from little boats for local use to huge cruisers with cabins and bunks. A boat being built for an economical man, who plans to use sails when there is a breeze and the motor only when the wind fails, is a strange looking craft on the ways owing to the huge, wedge-shaped keel, which requires several feet of water for safe cruising.

All fittings for the boats are made at the factory. Leeboards for sailboats, thwarts, seats, lazybacks, paddles and oars are all produced there. Masts, for the boats, some of them hollow, are also made here.

Winter Products'

A sideline of the factory, which helps keep the wheels turning when the demand for boats falls off, is the manufacture of skis and toboggans. These are shaped on the same machines as the parts for the canoes.

Another product is the sun-blind, yards of which are rolled up ready to be cut into proper lengths for verandahs or windows where a shade is wanted that doesn't cut off the breeze.

To Help Manufacturers Make Money

LOOKING the facts of to-day straight in the face—calling a spade a spade—it must be admitted that it is not easy to make money.

Wages are high. Production costs high. Taxes, direct and indirect, are a burden.

Competition is keen, often bitter, especially where imported goods have commenced to fight their way again into the Canadian market.

The trade is carrying smaller stocks and seeking price concessions. There is strong sales-resistance from the public.

The consumer has more ways to spend his money—more taxes to pay—and is critical about qualities and prices. It takes more pressure to sell him and her.

Under such conditions, it requires more energy, more resourcefulness, more persistency, more all round ability to market goods at a profit. The manufacturer needs to be an even keener, better business man than in pre-war days.

He needs to be open-minded too, open to ideas from those outside his business. Many a success can be traced to an idea that came from outside. Sometimes from an able advertising man.

Some very valuable ideas have originated in our advertising organization. Sometimes a manufacturer himself has an idea of which he doesn't realize the marketing possibilities until a man conversant with national advertising points out its exceptional worth.

Who knows but a conference with us might put new life, new pep, new inspiration, into your business—if it needs it? (Such has been the result in other cases.) It might lead to more healthy conditions in your business and more profit for you.

While our business is ADVERTISING, it is, also, to help our clients to make money. This does not mean to run a man's business. That's his affair.

But in the fund of knowledge we have gained in helping others to successfully advertise and market their goods in Canada under the after-war conditions, is there not likely to be found something of real value to you?

If you are an open-minded manufacturer, we would welcome an interview. No obligation. No charge. A list of our clients furnished as references. You'd be proud to be numbered among them.

Photographs of Children Are F. L. Roy's Specialty

Between Water and George streets, on Hunter street, the Roy block is situated. This block takes in the stores occupied by Miss Derry and the Fashion Craft, and the upper floors are given over to the business of taking pictures for the Roy studio's patrons. Commenced twenty-seven years back by the late R. M. Roy, the business has been carried on for the past twelve years by Fred L. Roy, who makes a specialty of up to the minute work, in commercial and portrait photography, finishing for amateurs and picture framing.

In the pretty reception room where examples of the studio's work adorn the walls, there is a color scheme of grey and blue, with period furniture, fresh flowers on the central table, an attractive fireplace and a couple of old spinning wheels.

In the skylight room, where the pictures are taken, there are seven special appliances in electric equipment which represent the advance made in modern photo-taking over old methods. These are designed to replace or to supplement daylight in the taking of photographs.

Children's photography is a specialty here, and to this Mr. Roy devotes much of his attention. A great feature of the studio work is this branch, and portraits of babies and young children are prominent on the walls. "Forced postures and unnatural expressions" are not characteristic of children's posing, according to Mr. Roy.

"Peterboro's beauty spots" in sepia tints and in colored work are another pleasing feature, and much attention is paid to special functions and community events.

The amateur finishing department is quite complete in itself and the picture-framing section is well equipped.

ADAM HALL LTD. STOVE FACTORY

Thousands of Heaters and Cook Stoves Shipped Out of City.

ALL CLASSES.

Adam Hall Limited is a firm which has been manufacturing stoves and ranges since 1878, during which time thousands of heating and cooking plants have been distributed throughout Canada.

Camp stoves from Adam Hall Ltd. warm the quarters of lumber jacks and pulp wood cutters in the distant wilderness of the northern forests. Mining camps and the lodges of hunters and trappers are heated in many cases by stoves from the foundry in Peterborough.

Even to the northern reachs of the Klondyke Peterborough stoves are sent to combat the bitter cold of the frigid zone.

In addition to heaters great ranges and cook stoves are made, many of which are for special use in hotels.

Among the products of the company is the Tropic household stove which is especially constructed for home use.

Stoves vary in weight from 100 to 4,000 pounds and are shipped to all points in Canada as well as exported to Newfoundland and the United States.

Pig iron is brought to the foundry from Port Colbourne in carload lots and is moulded for the various uses for which it is intended.

Sheet steel is imported from Pennsylvania and Hamilton.

It may possibly prove of interest to Peterborough people to know that excellent stoves may be purchased which have been manufactured in the home city.

LUMBER CONCERN IS HUSKY YOUTH

Dick-Carew Factory Has Forged Ahead in Short Time.

BEST PLANT.

One of Peterborough's newest industries is the wood working establishment of Dick and Carew which was founded 1923.

Due to the excellence and variety of the work which could be turned out the infant industry has endured a period of rapid but normal growth.

To-day the factory of the firm is recognized as the best designed plant of its kind between Ottawa and Toronto, and it is equipped with the best and latest models of machinery necessary for the manufacture of anything in wood.

Included among the products of the firm are sash and door and all kinds of interior wood finishings such as mouldings, cornices, panels, stair-cases and posts.

"Anything in wood" is the watchword of the Dick and Carew Company.

Used in Export.

A short time ago a number of cases containing products of the Western Clock Manufacturing Company were shipped to the East Indies, Glasgow and Liverpool, while later still a carload of condensed milk contained in cases made by the Dick Carew Company was sent to Cuba by the Peterborough Milk Products Co.

The Dick-Carew factory is 60 feet by 120 feet and is exceptionally well lighted and ventilated.

It is centrally located and has facilities for catering to all local trade in the capacity of interior finish and trimming. Some of the standard fittings are sent outside the city.

It speaks well for industry in Peterborough when such a new concern can forge ahead and find a place in the sun of manufacturers notice. It is merely a matter of attaining the initial velocity after which the recognition of merit will keep the ball of business rolling along.

250 EMPLOYEES DOING NOTHING BUT SPIN YARNS

Canadian Woollen Company Big Factory Turns Out All Varieties.

HOW IT'S DONE

General Offices Are Located in Fine Building at Peterborough Plant.

If a visitor on a stroll through a small village should take time to pause and consider the manifold activities of the people resident therein, he would find them doing many things. But when two hundred and fifty people, which would make a sizable little hamlet, gather together under the roof of one of the large manufacturing concerns, they are all engaged in the same industry, with varying ramifications, all tending toward the same end.

Under the roof tree of the Canadian Woollen establishment on McDonnel street are enough people to make a respectable village, a quarter of a thousand of them, and they are all busy about the manufacture of yarns. In the Auburn Mills of the same plant, cloths are woven, but in the McDonnel street factory, nothing but yarns are turned out. Here too, in the big Administration central building, with the smell of fur in its main entrance, are the general offices of the whole Canadian Woollen Company, only the sales offices being located in Toronto. John Chadwick is factory superintendent here.

It is not the wool right from the grower that comes to this plant. It is what is called the "combed top," and the various processes through which it goes, before it emerges all ready for machine and hand knitting and weaving, are interesting in the extreme.

In the office are samples of the artificial silk that is used in conjunction with some of the woollen yarns. The resemblance to hair that obtains in the rougher yarns is noticeable here also and there are wonderful colors, corn and wild rose and tangerine, in this fine product of soft wools. The flame of a match sets the artificial silk strands blazing on the moment, while the woollen yarns burn sullenly to a smouldering ash.

The yarn that comes from the sheep's back is sometimes fifteen and sixteen inches long. Bleached and wound into fuzzy "comb balls" that look like the base of a big round kettle, it is ready for the busy bobbins of the machines in the "drawing" department. Girls stand before the intricate shuttles that whizz back and forth with a clacking noise, drawing the threads ever finer and finer, until they are of the right size for the "roving" machines. To restore some of the oil that has been bleached out of the wool, an "emulsion" of oil and water and borax drips on the soft substance, drawn through an apparatus that resembles a washboard.

In the spinning department is a "flyer" frame, and a "cap" frame with metal caps over the tiny bobbins. By a turn of a lever, an automatic contrivance replaces full bobbins with empty ones.

The "twisting" department comes next, with a "ring twister" to convert the tiny strands of yarn into two or three or four-ply twists. The "reeling" department machines wind the yarn into skeins on octagonal reels.

There are pure white skeins and Oxford mixtures in greys and brown wools from the black sheep of the flock. The yard-long skeins of four-ply Botany yarns are the main output here. Down in the dyeing department is a tiny room where the dyes are carefully mixed, with a barrel of red-crystalled vitriol at the entrance. Here the heavy skeins of yarn are run through dye baths, to be placed later on the drying frames and then put in a big hot-air furnace. For the white yarns, there are bleaching vats of peroxide and then a rest in the sulphur house to still further whiten the skeins.

Then comes the "bundling" department, where the bundles of yarn are made ready for shipment and where unsatisfactory samples are culled out.

In the long rooms, where plenty of light comes through many windows, with extra heavy flooring to withstand the weight of the ponderous machines, are fifty spinning machines.

Outside is the two-hundred foot high white brick chimney and the boilerr ooms.

A convenience that has the hearty appreciation and patronage of all the employees of the big works is the cheerful little cafeteria on the ground floor. Here all who wish may take their lunches at the round tables and have a cup of the tea which is supplied free by the company. The genial Charlie Munyon is in charge and dispenses supplies at cheap rates, in the way of chocolate bars, candies and confectionery for the ladies, and tobaccos for the men.

CANADIAN TENT AND AWNING CO.

Capacity of 1,800 Tents a Year—Business is Steadily Growing.

An unpretentious but very productive little industry is that of the Canadian Tent and Awning Company Limited where tents, awnings, tarpaulins, auto tops and side curtains are made.

Much of the raw material used is canvas which is manufactured in Nova Scotia and some of the Northern States. Bunting is imported from England.

The material comes in bolts containing a hundred yards and strips are sewn together and fashioned into the desired product.

There are four sewing machine heads in operation so that a capacity of about 1800 tents a year is possible.

The smallest tent which has yet been on order is one five feet by five, while the largest was twenty by thirty feet.

The staple lines are usually from seven by seven to twelve by sixteen feet.

The weight of duck used varies from eight to twelve ounce fabric.

While the business is still of very modest proportions it is none the less showing a steady expansion which should result eventually in a keen competitive industry.

The company has been in existence for four years and under the present management for slightly more than one year so that it still has before it many years of normal growth.

WAGONS BUILT BY FITZGERALD

One of Oldest Industries in Peterborough Keeps Pace With Times.

WORK ON AUTOS

One of the oldest industries of Peterborough is that of Fitzgerald and Company which has been established since 1850 and under the present management since 1920.

The products consist of commercial wagons, sleighs, motor truck bodies as well as auto tops and trimmings.

A profitable sideline which has lately been developed is that of auto painting, the new Duco finish being very popular.

A large number of wagons are made for firms in all parts of Ontario. This is a comparatively new extension of the business as five years ago only one wagon had been constructed for use outside of Peterborough.

As the use of trucks increases the demand for spread bodies grows in proportion and the Fitzgerald Company is adequately equipped for attending to this line.

The chief raw materials used are wood and steel which can be purchased from Peterborough dealers.

Many of the models are designed by the company while all construction is completed in the factory.

Auto tops which are in disrepair can be torn off and new ones provided by a special branch of the service.

This industry is one which has been expanding considerably of late years, more especially in work outside the bounds of the city and has developed greatly along this line under the new maagement.

LABELS MADE FOR DOMINION

Colonial Weaving Co. Products Go All Over the Country.

INGENIOUS WORK.

When one buys a suit of clothes, or other wearing apparel, made, perhaps, in Toronto or Hamilton, with a label inside bearing the manufacturer's name, it is not often thought that the label is the product of one of Peterborough's many manufacturing plants.

The Colonial Weaving Company makes labels, trimming and banding. The labels are made of either silk or cotton. The long threads of the body color are interwoven with threads of the body color and the color of the writing or lettering that is to go on the label. This is arranged by a pattern up above which lifts up the lengthwise threads so that the colored threads are either over or under, as required. The pattern consists of strips of cardboard with holes arranged in rows. The needles are controlled through these holes and labels can be made of three or four colors if required. Some of the labels are for different manufacturers of clothing and like goods, while others are made for hotels and railway companies to mark table linen and bed clothes.

Trimming is made for dresses. Some, made in the same manner as the labels, contains pictures of animals, such as rabbits, or birds. This variety is intended for trimming children's rompers. Plain trimming of different colors and banding for ladies' skirts also form part of the product.

All these products are made in a long, well-lighted factory where a number of happy, healthy girls and men are employed.

DEAN'S CANDY CLEANLY MADE

Purest Ingredients and Best Materials Are Used Here.

TEMPTING DISPLAY.

Most citizens eat candy, and a great deal of that consumed by theatre-goers comes from Dean's Candy Shop, opposite the Capitol. The delicious peanut taffy for which this store is famous is made in a candy kitchen over on Water Street. The purest ingredients and the best peanuts that can be obtained are used by Mr. Dean, and cleanness is the order in the whole process. The marble table, with slabs of this toothsome delicacy laid out to cool, presents a tempting appearance to anyone who has a sweet tooth.

GRADY'S BAKERY WORKS BY DAY

Model of Cleanliness and Known For High Quality.

Part of the citizens' supply of bread comes from the plant of John Grady, which is the one bakery in the city where all the bread is baked in the daytime. The shop, located on Park Street South, is a model of cleanness and efficiency, and the utmost care is used in the entire process of mixing and baking bread. The bread is known throughout the city as being high in quality and commands a ready sale.

DE LAVAL COMPANY'S PLANT IS MOST BEAUTIFUL SEEN FROM MONTREAL TO TORONTO

SCORES OF INTRICATE PROCESSES

Skill is Needed in Making Separators, Pasteurizing Machines, Milkers, Churns, Bottle-Filling Machines and Gas Engines—All Tested for Fractional Discrepancies.

It has been said by travelling men that the office buildings and plant of the De Laval dairy machinery manufacturing company are among the most beautiful in Ontario between Montreal and Toronto.

Ideally situated as regards light and sunshine the factory is indeed a revelation of neatness and cleanliness and one is struck by the order and method which prevails in all the processes of manufacturing separators and churns.

A list of machines made for dairy purposes would include the previously mentioned articles together with churns, bottle-filling and capping devices, milk testers, milker pails, pasteurizers, large milk, whey separators, and gas engines.

The machines turned out by the De Laval Company reflect the pride of workmanship which the men take in their tasks. The user will find no botched jobs here, where all materials and products pass through rigid inspections so that no faulty work is passed. Only in this way can the name of a firm remain untarnished.

Loyal Pride.

From the foundry to the assembling room the men take a loyal pride in their work and the machines which result are a shining tribute to their skill and patience.

The castings for the machines are made either in the brass foundry or the iron foundry. Gfeat crucibles are placed over the furnaces and glow with liquid fire as the contained metal is reduced to a molten state.

In the meantime the molds have been fashioned out of a special clay mixture. The crucible of molten metal is then poured in, allowed to cool and the resultant parts removed. The rough edges are trimmed off, the articles are cleaned in baths which cut the grease away and prepare them for tinning or machining.

Those castings which are to be tinned are dipped in a bath of molten tin, spun on a machine to spread the coating evenly and then dipped in various fixing baths.

The cast iron parts go through many machining processes which adapt them for use in milking machines, cream separators, bottle washers, etc.

The bowl of the separator is cast, tinned, machined and finally balanced by expert inspection hands. In the process of balancing the bowl is placed on a whirling spindle and revolved at a high rate of speed, with a blue pencil held so that it barely touches the bowl; the degree of wabble is measured and the defect remedied by a drop of solder, the size of which varies with the amount of sway which the bowl shows in whirling.

Pasteurizing Machines.

Pasteurizing machines consist of large vats in which is placed a copper worm which is connected to a fine shaft and revolves at a slow rate.

Milk is placed in the vat and live steam turned into the worm. Thus the milk is heated to a high temperature and disease bacteria is neutralized.

Cold water is then passed through the coil, restoring the milk to the desired temperature.

The copper worm is molded on a special machine and is formed from a long pipe of seamless tube. The end of the tube is clamped to a large grooved wheel which is slowly turned. The clamp is moved farther back as the operation progresses so that a long spiral results.

The diameter of the spiral can be varied by the use of different sized jigs or set ups.

The bottle washing machine is a specialty designed for use in large dairy plants where the number of bottles is too great to economically machine them by hand.

Cases containing the bottles are inverted and placed on a conveyer.

They travel first over a cold water spray, then an alkali wash and, finally, a bath of live steam. There is little chance of dirt remaining in the bottles after these processes have been passed through.

Some of the machines used in the manufacture of the cast parts are lathes, milling machines, drill presses, punch presses, tapping machines, Brown and Sharpe automatics, grinders, high speed drills, multiple drills and screw machines.

Skill is Needed.

All the above mentioned mechanical aids are necessary in the production of De Laval products, yet they would be utterly useless without the skilled hands which operate them.

The Brown and Sharp is perhaps one of the most marvellous contrivances. A number of tools, each designed to perform a different operation, project from a disc-like head.

The work is pushed against this head which revolves as the various tools are brought to bear upon it. A continuous stream of oil pours on the work while the process is carried on. Small bushings are usually made on such machines, though it can be set for a variety of jobs.

A multiple drill consists of a special drill head which holds a number of jointed rods on the ends of which drills of any size may be fitted.

This machine is used for drilling a number of holes at the same time where perfect accuracy in spacing must be maintained. It is only used when a number of holes are to be bored in a single casting.

The work is held in a jig or special frame.

Materials Tested.

Considerable space is occupied by stock which is crated and ready for shipment. Most of the materials before being sent away are given a test which insures the ultimate buyer against faulty mechanism or workmanship. The machines are run by a belt driver and pulsators for milking machines are tested on a special bench fitted for the purpose.

These are piled in various places—huge stacks of boxes and crates, milk bottle cases, and oil cans. There are hundreds of milker pails, all aglow with their fresh tinned finish or painted dull gray, where they are to be used as traps or condensation containers for the milking machines.

With each outfit a quantity of oil and a can is sent so these, too, must be fitted up in the plant.

Two horse boilers equipped with auto[illegible] and steam, but the power is supplied by three electric units.

Reclaim Oil.

In the same department is a machine for reclaiming the oil of the entire plant. In appearance it resembles a small cream separator, but is used for clarifying and dividing the heavy and light oils. This feature alone effects a great saving in the operation of the plant.

The electro-plating department is compact but very efficient. An alternating current is used which flows through heavy conductors which results in a high amperage and low voltage being given.

Provision is made for copper, tin, zinc and nickel plating. A coating of about 3-1000 of an inch is placed on most of the articles plated. Before this process is started the articles were thoroughly cleaned in an alkaline solution.

In the woodworking department, bottle cases, staves for churns, and lumber for vats are prepared. The lumber goes through various sawing, trimming and planing processes and is eventually shaped to the desired size.

The bottle cases are made of selected boards having the separating wires rivetted by a special cold rivetting hammer. A washer is placed over the protruding end of the wire and the little hammer with a staccato "tat-tat-tat" [illegible]

Welding.

For welding, large flat sheets of metal a spot welder is used. This is a machine having two protruding arms in parallel position which terminate in electric plugs. The material is placed between the plugs which are brought together by pressure of a foot pedal. On the contact of the plugs with the material an immediat welding process takes place locally or in the particular spot touched by the plugs. This is repeated on various parts of the material, the separate sheets becoming firmly united.

The largest churns have a capacity of from 12000 to 15,000 pounds per churning, while the new 90 separator can handle 12,000 pounds of whey or 10,000 of milk per hour.

The little 7, one of the smallest machines, separates at capacity 175 pounds per hour.

An average of 12,000 separators are distributed every year.

Spacious Office.

The office is spacious, well ventilated and lighted, and splendidly equipped. A staff of fifty is necessary to administer the general business.

The office extends through three floors, the basement being reserved for the mailing department, where a list of 50,000 names is on file, and tabulated carefully as prospects for trade.

The main floor is devoted to general office work and the top storey is occupied mainly by the engineering and draughting departments.

The grounds are well kept, free from weeds and the grass is regularly clipped. The lawns, together with the fine appearance of the buildings, do not indicate a factory but rather some specie of club.

Needless to say this condition should be a cause for an expression or feeling of gratitude on the part of Peterborough people and many other manufactories would not be remis in attempting to emulate the worthy example set by De Laval.

Peterborough In Front Rank Of Ontario Cities, Says Hon. W. E. Raney

Few places of 30,000 people can boast as great diversity of industries as Peterborough, though I notice that an industry I have in mind is not mentioned in your list. I refer to the manufacture of that highly important commodity, Public Opinion. Right government, civic, provincial and Dominion, is a prime essential in Peterborough as everywhere else. But you cannot have right Government without right Public opinion as a foundation, and Public Opinion does not grow like Topsy. It has to be educated, in other words, manufactured. The principal manufacturers of Public Opinion are the Homes, the Schools, the Press and the Pulpit. If these sound a high note of straight seeing and clear thinking, if they teach the relation of cause and effect and the difference between right and wrong in public as in private affairs, the output will be the highest type of citizenship. I have no reason to doubt that in this as in other lines of activity, Peterborough is in the front rank of the cities of Ontario.

HORSE HARNESS STILL DEMANDED IN SPITE OF CAR

B. F. Ackerman, Son & Co. Specially Equipped for Manufacture.

BOOTS AND SHOES

Three Hundred Pairs Turned Out in a Day on Latest Machinery.

While the interest in horses may not be as great now as it used to be in the pre-automobile days it is none the less true that a great number of the animals are still in existence and are used in a variety of ways.

In order to make use of a horse it is necessary that some kind of harness be arranged so that the animal may be attached to the implement on vehicle which it is intended to haul. If the horse is used for riding purposes suitable saddlery must be provided.

The B. F. Ackerman Son and Company factory is especially designed for the manufacture of harness and saddlery as well as a complete line of boots and shoes. This factory is not the least of Peterborough's interesting plants as there are several machines which are capable of performing miracles.

The raw material is, of course, leather, which comes largely from Texas. The hides which are imported from that state are of a supreme quality and are removed by skilled hands.

The raw leather is tanned in Ontario and is of a quality which cannot be excelled.

A car load of leather is used every three weeks, 500 hides being used in that time for harness while 100 are used for shoe leather. Every month the skins of from 1,200 to 1,500 cattle are used.

The hides are all cut in the various sized strips by hand in order to avoid such imperfections as grub holes and scratches from barbed wire.

The leather along the back is tougher and accordingly of greater value than that from the underside of the bovine.

The quality of any leather cannot be guaranteed as staple as it varies with conditions; for instance, the hide stripped in the summer is not as good as one taken off in the winter.

Very powerful sewing machines using a linen thread imported from Ireland are used in the construction of the harness which when made by machine is greatly superior to harness hand made because of the special lock stitch used which leaves the junction of the two threads in the middle of the work and not exposed to wear.

These sewing machines are so strong that they can sew straight ahead through an inch board or through thin metal. At one time for a test a penny was sewn securely to a leather strap the needle remaining unharmed throughout the performance.

The thread is waxed as it is pulled through the machine.

The making of horse collars is an especially interesting process. The various parts are cut and sewn together with the thread while a leather thong [illegible] on some models, more particularly [illegible] heavy work collars.

The collars are stuffed with rye straw which must be flailed for the purpose. This straw is punched into the rim of the collar by a flying piston which operates between two guards. The rim is shaped by pounding it around a specially shaped form.

Shoe Making.

The shoes made by the Ackerman Company are built on the improved army mission last which was selected by officials of the United States army as being the last which would fit the largest number of feet.

The various parts are cut by dies on clicker machines, which are operated on the same principle as a press.

The parts of the uppers are assembled and sewn together growing more finished as they proceed through various operations down the line. The last machine puts in the eyelets and clinches them in place.

The uppers are then taken to the lasting machine where the soles are nailed on. This is done by inserting small threaded screws by means of a special machine which uses rolls of screw wire for the purpose.

Following this the soles are smoothed by a leveller which rolls over the surface of the sole and presses it flat. A tremendous pressure is exerted by this machine, so great in fact that one pair of shoes in 60 must be culled because they do not stand up to the test.

The capacity of the shoe department is three hundred pairs a day.

The soles of the shoes are made on a specially heavy machine which is equipped with dies of different sizes. The leather is pressed in plies and has a wooden shank inserted. For sole leather a dry tanned material is used.

During the last war harness was sent as equipment for the Cossack forces of Russia addressed to the Chief Military Engineers, Vladivostock. Military paraphernalia was also supplied the Great Britain, French and Canadian forces.

The plant is a fine modern building with all conveniences for the comfort of employees. There are large ample store rooms which stock a complete line of leather findings, trunks, bags and blankets while an exceptionally heavy stock of shoes is carried in all sizes and grades.

A great part of the machinery used is leased from the manufacturers and can not be bought outright. A monthly rental is charged whether the machines are in actual operation or not.

The process of converting raw leather into useable articles is certainly one of great interest and instructive possibilities.

GREEN FOUNDRY GIVES THOUGHT OF HEAVY WORK

Huge Castings Made From Metal Poured From Big Furnaces.

1,600-POUND PIECE

Men Are at Work on Mould for Big Metal Casting.

The first glimpse of the interior of an iron foundry makes an indelible impression on the mind of the spectator. When the furnace is running full blast, when the men are "pouring off," and the red-hot molten metal sizzles out of the roaring flame, it must be a splendid sight, but even the spectacle of the big place when the furnace is cold and the men are engaged in the placing of patterns in the moulds, is interesting.

A long building, without flooring, patterns of various shapes piled in corners, men going about ankle deep in the heavy clay, the high roof unceiled, but crossed at a height by ponderous rafters, light coming from the windows that form the ventilation of the big place, and draw off the poisonous gases from the furnace when it is in operation, cranes with chains hanging idly, and men going silently to and fro, laying patterns in their moulds or assembling parts, makes a picture of the workers in metal for the saw, shingle and lath mill machinery that forms the output of the G. Walter Green Foundry on McDonnel Street.

Founded by the late Walter Green, about a quarter of a century ago, the establishment employs, at its busiest times, about forty-five men, with an average of some twenty-three at the present. Recently a garage has been added, T. C. Donaldson is the manager.

From coast to coast, with occasional orders filled for the Old Dominion of Newfoundland, the machines from these buildings go to Canadian buyers, with a general jobbing and repair business on the side.

A storeroom for machines, with patterns in the loft above, a blacksmith shop, a machine shop with its smell of oil and grit, the workers with the black smudges about their eyes that make every man look like an Irishman, whose eyes are supposed to be "rubbed in with a dirty finger," a wood shop, where revolving things that look exactly like barrels filled with "shot" (small pieces of metal), clean the castings with a noise like rumbling thunder; the foundry itself, the core room, and several other storehouses, make up the list of buildings in a foundry.

One looks up the inside of the big cupola furnace, circular shape, fifty-two inches in diameter, its firebricks scarred with the heats of countless raging fires, and sees the blue sky far above. One ascends in the rough wooden elevator to the upper room where the furnace is fed with kindling and coke, and then one comes down again with the idea of the labour involved in these processes in which, unlike other manufacturing establishments, so much is done by hand. Out of the side of the furnace projects the metal trough, its lips encrusted with grey metal fringes, which conveys the red hot ore to the waiting ladles, buckets of small and large sizes.

Men are fitting a pattern for a 1600-pound casting, with careful hands. The heavy clay clings to their nails and garments. In the outer room is another hand-worker, chiselling the rough edges from a huge casting with an air chisel, a hundred pounds pressure to the square inch behind its clapping blows.

OLD HOME CANDIES MADE AT HAWLEY'S

Chocolate Making is Fascinating Game—How Curleycues Are Made.

It is possible that the most popular food of the day is chocolate. It is certainly a food of high nutritious value and one which it is deemed advisable by army forces and exploration parties to include in emergency kits. The system will assimilate sugar more readily than any other food with the exception of milk.

The manufacture of chocolates is rather an interesting operation. In an interview with A. C. Hawley, who makes all of the candy which he sells, some interesting features of the industry were learned.

Cocoa is bought in the form of beans which are somewhat similar to coffee beans. They are roasted and ground into a fine flour.

Part of the cocoa butter or oil is removed which permits the chocolate to reach the proper consistency.

The flour is liquified by a heating process and run into cakes. It is remelted when required for dipping.

In making chocolate covered creams a compound of boiled sugar is creamed and put away to age when it is then remelted, formed into shape and dipped in the chocolate solution by the fingers. The chocolate is placed on waxed paper and the drip from the fingers makes the fancy curly top which many may have wondered about. The result of this operation is Hawley's Old Home Candies.

STAFF OF LIFE MADE WITH CARE

Stock's Bakery Contains Modern Equipment for Baking Bread.

GREAT PRECISION

Bread has been the staple food of the white races for years and Stock's Bakery supplies a good portion of the needs of Peterborough people for the staff of life. Of all the things that are made in Peterborough there is nothing more important.

"Bread is food made from ground grain" says the dictionary but there is much more to the process in a modern bakery than this statement would lead one to believe. The ingredients are flour, water, milk, yeast, malt, salt, and sugar and they are placed in the proper proportions in a mixer capable of handling 700 pounds of dough at once. When it has been mixed, the dough is put into large troughs, where it is allowed to rise and then is punched down. A baker, like a boxer, does not punch the dough when it is down. After it has been punched down a couple of times it is sent to a divider, which makes the loaves by forcing the dough into cups on the rim of a wheel. During all these stages great attention is paid to the temperature of the dough, which is recorded on forms for each batch.

Near the divider is a scale. The weights are set for a pound and twelve ounces and a pointer on the scale shows whether the portion of dough placed on the pan is light or heavy. One space on the scale is about half an inch long and represents one quarter of one ounce. From the divider the bread travels along a belt and is dropped into a rounder-up, which takes the irregular pieces of dough and thumps them around a circular arrangement, turning them out round. The loaves are then placed in a prover, which holds four hundred loaves, where they are allowed to stay for a time to rise.

From the prover the loaves are thrown into a chute to the next floor. They come out of the chute through the moulder or panner and are put into the pans of different shapes. The pans are placed in large racks and run into a steam prover where they rise, while the steam keeps the outside from forming a crust. When the loaves come from this they are about half the size of the finished product. They are placed into the ovens, which hold five hundred loaves each. Steam is kept on them here for a few moments to keep the heat from stopping the fermentation. After they are baked the loaves are allowed to cool in the rack room, and then they go to the shipping room where they are packed in boxes for rail shipment or in the wagons for retail delivery. The finished loaf weighs a pound and one half, and there are twenty-one varieties.

Eight wagons and four motor trucks are used to deliver the product of this bakery, which was started in 1872. About two hundred boxes are out all the time between the bakery and the customers who are served by rail, whereas the first rail shipment, some 25 years ago, was taken to the station in a wheelbarrow. The original oven used by the firm is still to be seen in the basement of the residence occupied by the manager, James Dutton, and is much different from the present large ovens.

FASHION RULES EVEN MONUMENT FOR CEMETERY

Coughlin Monumental Works Turns Out Many Varieties of Tombstones.

GRANITE FAVORED

Finishes Better and Stands Weather Conditions Longer Than Marble.

"Tombs are the clothes of the dead. A grave is but a plain suit, and a rich monument is one embroidered." So said Fuller, in "The Holy and Profane States," speaking of "Tombs."

The embroidered clothes of the dead have a home at the Hunter street premises of the Coughlin Monumental Works, where John Coughlin, the proprietor, has a worskhop which turns out fancy and plain suits for the underground dwellers in God's Acre.

There are marble and granite pieces, in stately monuments, in headstones and foot plates and corner posts in the quarters of this company, which is the largest factory and plant of its type in Central Ontario. It makes a specialty of monumental and general cemetery work and manufactures granite and marble monuments and does all kinds of granite finishing work. This firm has been in business for nearly half a century, with a residence of thirty-five years in Peterborough, and an average employment list of ten workmen. The Coughlin Works have erected many of the finest monuments in the Little Lake and St. Peter's Cemeteries and in surrounding districts, and have placed Soldiers' Memorials in Frankford, Keene and Hastings.

With power driven machines, and by hand work, with air chisels, the work on the huge blocks of granite and marble is done. Steel shot cuts the rough surface down in the first instance, then it is washed off, covered with carborundum and buffed to give it a high gloss. A man directing a steel ring wheel goes over every inch of the surface through the green viscous plaster of the carborundum. Hand work does the chiseling of the inscriptions, with fine dust flying from the chipped stone surface. In the yard behind the works is the huge derrick that lifts the big blocks. There is the grey and white granite from Stanstead, Quebec, coarse in grain, with a finer type coming from Barrie, Vermont. There is the black granite from New Brunswick, and the pink and grey mottled stone that comes across the sea from Sweden to keep down the restless spirits of Canadian men and women.

Granite is more popular for monuments than marble. It finishes up better than the latter, and stands up under inclement weather conditions to much better advantage.

The changing wheel of fashion has a great deal to do with monuments and headstones, as well as with clothes and ideas. Time was when styles in such things inclined to the tall and slender. Now the wider and lower types are in demand. There is a new sort of monument that is very popular at the present moment, the "sarcophagus" style, made in an oblong shape of unpolished or polished granite, with very little adornment or trimming or any sort.

And there is something pleasing to the man who chisels your final message to the world in the fact that your name "fits in." Like a newspaper headline writer who strives to make his words fit a certain standard, so the monument chiseller approves of a dead man who has a name that looks well on a gravestone.

LARGEST MEAT PLANT IN WORLD USING HOGS AS RAW MATERIAL IS LOCATED IN PETERBOROUGH

Canadian Packing Company Shipped 20,000,000 Pounds of Its Products Last Year, With a Value of $3,500,000 —Sixty Per Cent. of This Was Export.

BIG DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN TRADE

Carload Goes Every Week to Northern Ontario — Two Hundred and Ten Canadian Workmen Turn Out Products and By-Products With Greatest Skill.

In Peterborough there is located the largest meat plant in the world which uses hogs as its raw material. This plant is the Canadian Packing Company which was founded in 1884, and last year shipped out twenty million pounds of product, valued three and a half million of dollars.

Sixty per cent. of this immense trade was export, while the remainder of the goods was sold in Canada. All goods are stamped with the letters C.P.C., which is traceable directly to Peterborough. Thus the city is judged by the quality of pork which it ships. In this Peterborough ranks with the best for the quality of their products vies with that of any other company in the same field.

Bacon is shipped to the main seaports of the United Kingdom, Germany and West Indies, while the Canadian trade is confined to the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. Cars are shipped weekly to the larger towns of Northern Ontario and everywhere the stamp of Peterborough products is branded and the goods are known as the best which can be obtained.

The live hogs are brought in car load lots from points east and west of Toronto, while a smaller proportion is delivered by the neighbouring farmers in wagons and trucks. The truck is rapidly becoming a great factor in farm operations as quantities of produce are brought in by motor which would otherwise necessitate the use of railway cars.

About two hundred and ten men are employed and it is the policy of the company that only Canadian workmen be used. The men are all skilful in their jobs, a fact which is amply proved by the fact that hogs can be killed and dressed at the rate of 300 an hour. Each man has some certain job to do and it is done skilfully and swiftly.

Fully thirty per cent. of the floor space of the plant is under refrigeration, the degree of coolness ranging between zero and thirty-two degrees.

Many Lines.

The main lines carried and produced are fresh pork, pickled, smoked and cooked. Sausage and lard are also staples, while such produce as butter, eggs and cheese are handled in large quantities.

The butter is sent from five of the best creameries of the district and the company has contracted for the entire output of the Warsaw and Young's Point cheese factories, while eggs are sent direct from stores and dealers during April and May when they are candled, cold stored and sold as storage eggs during fall and winter months. This business has been largely developed within the last five years.

The hogs are killed within forty-eight hours after their arrival at the plant where they are killed and dressed and afterwards transferred to coolers where they are chilled to a temperature of about 38° within a period of thirty-six hours. They are then slashed into the different cuts forty-eight hours after the killing process and either sold first or sent to the cellars for curing purposes.

Curing processes take from nine to thirty days when the product is sold pickled, smoked or cooked.

The cuts are in four main divisions—ham, shoulder, billy and loin. The trimmings are made into sausage. The fresh fat is made into lard or grease, depending on its quality, and the bones and scrap are made into fertilizer so that there is little or no waste of any of the materials.

Government Inspectors.

There are four government inspectors at the plant at all times who examine the glands of the killed hogs and thus protect the public from diseased meat. Tuberculosis is very common among hogs.

Hogs which are afflicted by the disease are used only for grease and about fifteen per cent. must be dealt with in this manner.

The hogs from the various shipping points are killed separately so that if any are badly infected they can be traced to the source and steps may be taken to eradicate the disease at the farms from which the infected meat comes.

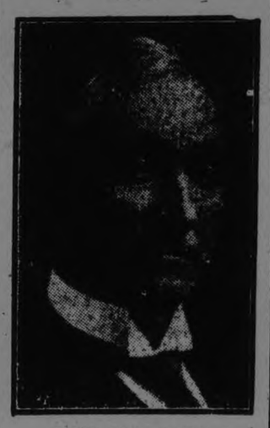
As the disease cannot be detected until the hogs is killed it is impossible to cull the shipment at the point of departure.

When statistics show that the death rate has been annually decreasing since the milk and meat have been inspected it certainly shows that this factor aids considerably in maintaining suitable health conditions.

The Canadian Packing Company maintains three large distributing centres in the city which dispense products of the great plant.

The plant which has been in existence so long has maintained its supremacy on a basis of service and the quality of the product.

Exhibition Should Show Rural And Urban Relation Says Hon. James A. Robb



HON. J. A. ROBB

It is with pleasure that I respond to the request of "The Peterborough Examiner" for a brief word upon the occasion of the "Made in Peterborough" exhibition.

The activities of the Department of Immigration and Colonization, over which I have the honour to preside, are directed toward obtaining for Canada settlers who will work on the land, rather than those who will engage in factory employment, and there is a possibility that the close relationship which our immigration activities bears to industrial prosperity is not always appreciated.

Canada's prosperity is directly dependent upon the development of industry based on her natural resources. Some of these resources, such as timber, minerals, and water power, are directly employed in manufacture, but our greatest natural resource is our fertile farm lands, the wealth from which can be won only by the labour of the agriculturist. This wealth is eventually distributed through all classes of industry, and becomes the basis of our national prosperity.

Canada is already one of the great agricultural countries of the world. The value of our field crops alone in 1924 was almost one billion dollars ($996,257,900). The value of dairy products increased from $97,040,000 to $238,693,000 in the last fifteen years. And as yet less than half of our land suitable for farming is occupied, and less than one-quarter of it has been brought under cultivation.

To promote the rapid and permanent settlement of the great areas of land still available for farming, the Department of Immigration and Colonization is encouraging the settlement in Canada of practical farmers from the British Isles, Ireland and the Irish Free State, the United States of America, and the agricultural races of Northern Europe. This settlement is on a strictly selective basis; quality rather than quantity is the watchword; preference is given to the family unit, and when once the family has been selected practical steps are taken to place it on a farm and ensure its permanency and prosperity. This is particularly exemplified in the arrangement for settling in Canada three thousand British families, each of which is being located under the personal supervision of officers of the Land Settlement Branch of the Department of Immigration and Colonization. A particularly encouraging sign is the friendliness and helpfulness with which these new settlers are being received by their Canadian neighbours.

This settlement will all contribute toward the general prosperity of Canada—a prosperity in which Peterborough and its surrounding area will undoubtedly share. Indeed, Peterborough seems to be in a very fortunate position in this connection. Not only is it surrounded by an agricultural country of great fertility, but some of its important manufacturing industries are directly associated with the products of the farm. Many others find their chief markets among farmers. I hope that the "Made in Peterborough" exhibition will be a means of showing how closely the interests of city and country are related, and of promoting the prosperity of both.

TIMBER WOLVES.

Ranchers Are Anxious As Animals Become Aggressive in B. C.

MURRAYVILLE, B. C. June 1—(C.P.)—Timber wolves, which for a time were so ferocious that it was feared that they might attack the school children have been causing ranchers near here considerable anxiety. The male wolf of the pack recently followed a rancher along a road and approached within 15 feet of him before being scared away. The wolf was subsequently shot and measured more than five feet six inches from tip to tail. The female and two cubs are still at large and are responsible for much depredation among the chickens and sheep of the district.

In Germany, a single man who makes only $1,000 a year must pay an income tax of $82, but the man who makes a million has to part with only $347,630, as compared with $429,645 in the United States.

Stockings For The Feet Turned Out By The Mile On The Up-To-Date Machinery Of Lavoie Knitters

"Feet by the yard, or feet by the mile," might be the most appropriate descriptive sentence for the factory that turns out woollen stockings, complete from top band to toe splice.

In the old Town Hall of Ashburnham, one of the historic landmarks of that portion of the municipality that now Christens itself East City, whirling wheels turn out woollen articles by the dozens.

One machine literally grinds out, day by day, miles of stockings. These are the stockings that are cut at a certain point in their manufacture and feet grafted on, by a gentle process. Yarn goes into one end of the contrivance and out of the other comes the stockings, by the yard. More interesting still, perhaps, is the machine that can make a sock, all complete, in the space of five minutes. Patient grandmothers, laboriously fashioning the heels and toes of stocking feet, would gaze with envy at the swiftly-turning wheels of this mechanical appliance.

The workrooms of the Lavoie Knitters, at 99 Hunter street east, produce many lovely things in wool, plain and brushed, and their store at 440 George street has them on sale. Mr. Wm. A. Lavoie is the manager. No silks or cashmere mixtures are used. All the articles are in ribbed goods. It is a factory that employs at times thirty-five hands, and how has an average of about sixteen boys and women.

Pretty sweaters in light, assorted colors are in the boxes of the small shipping department, with "Chappie's Sister," the garment that has displaced in popularity the "Chappie" coat, sports suits with gay diagonal bands on their white skirts, in mixed wool with artificial silk stripes, golf hose, from a patent of Mr. W. A. Lavoie's, and bathing suits of all sorts and cuts and colors.

A complicated stocking machine is one of the most interesting bits of mechanical furnishing in the factory. From fourteen to sixteen dozen of hose a day is the capacity of this machine, which runs amiably along in one direction while turning out the leg, but becomes temperamental and wags back and forth like a rotating meat chopper, when it comes to the heel and toe portion.

MILK PRODUCTS IS A PLACE OF GREAT VARIETY

Pasteurized Milk is Safe Milk is the Motto of the Company.

SPOTLESSLY CLEAN

G. A. Gillespie Has Brought Business to Its Present Splendid Position.

Fresh odors of many sorts from the most lasting impressions that one carries away after a visit to the Peterboro' Milk Products factory on Aylmer street. The warm, rich smell of the milk in the pasteurizing vats, the whey odor of the cheese room, the appetizing smell of fresh butter in its own section and the sharp aroma of ammonia in the refrigerating plant, all linger in the memory.

Fluid milk, condensed milk, butter, ice cream, and cheese are the output of the Peterboro' Milk Products plant. And everything is pasteurized. There may be germs that find harborage in some of the odd corners of the big place, but there can't be many of them alive in the departments where a strict pasteurization of the raw product goes on.

Down in the lower regions of the plant are the two extremes of temperature, hot pipes which are burning to the touch, and within a few inches of them, a quarter of an inch layer of pure white frost over the ice-cold tubes from the refrigeration section. Upstairs are the vats that will hold a thousand pounds of milk, with the apparatus that pumps it to overhead rooms to be pasteurized.

There are can washers, where testing of cleanliness is done by the nose, that organ that will detect instantly the least taint of staleness, there are wooden barrels, an odd holder, in a way, for fluid goods, that hold condensed milk or full cream for candy makers of other regions, there are bottle-washing machines in which the glass tubes are laundered with their heads down, first in a cleaning-powder "Wyandotte" solution, then in hot water, and then finished off with a steaming process, and in the basement are huge yellow cheeses on racks, ninety pounds to each cheese.

The cheese-making process is interesting. Coming in at one stage of the manufacture, one finds cheese being "illed." Great long slabs that bend like elastic are in the wooden vats, being pushed through a machine that cuts them into little pieces, then pitchforked to another stage of the game. Canadian cheddar cheese is the only manufacture here. Eleven pounds of milk to make a pound of cheese is the accredited ratio, with three vats whose capacity is 23,000 pounds of milk turning out 23 cheese of ninety pounds apiece.

In the butter room, there is rich cream in big vats, with "churns" holding a thousand pounds of the heavy fluid. In the condensed milk plant, the big copper vats can turn out 50,000 pounds within the space of ten hours.

The test room, for making minute and careful tests of butter fat content, is upstairs, and there is a new ice-cream making machine just being installed, with a capacity of turning out two hundred and forty quarts of ice cream every hour.

In 1910, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, the present manager of the company, took over the plant from Mr. Peter Downham. At that time, a small building, thirty by fifty feet, devoted exclusively to the making of butter, comprised the establishment which has now grown to such dimensions, and possesses land and interior capacity capable of expanding its operations by fifty per cent. of its present turnout. Ten delivery trucks draw in for the Peterboro' Milk Products Company, with eleven milk delivery rigs on the road, and a total of about forty-five employees in its personnel.

LECH FURRIERS IS AN OLD FIRM

William Lech Came Here in 1861 and Opened His Fur Store.

A record for a lengthy tenure of existence in the business world that can hardly be surpassed by any of the other mercantile establishments of the city is that of the store of William Lech & Sons, Limited. This business was commenced sixty-four years ago by the late Mr. William Lech, who came to the city in 1861 and opened a fur store in the premises now occupied by the Mc Williams Fur Company. For over half a century, the firm has been in business in their present store at 413 George street. Although there is no William Lech at present in the business, the old name is still retained. Mr. K. G. Lech and his two sons, Cyril and Keith, carry on the business, which is in furs only, nothing else being carried in stock. The raw furs are converted in upstairs workrooms into finished garments for men and women, by a staff of from twelve to fifteen employees.

TOURISTS HELP IN BUILDING UP MANUFACTURES

LEFT $500,000 HERE

The question has very often been asked "what value is the tourist traffic to industries?" It is obvious that if the buying power of the consuming public, or in other words, if the wealth of a country can be increased, it will increase the demand for manufacturers' products. It is evident that an increase in tourist traffic from other parts to any given sections creates in itself an additional demand, for example, food stuffs. It follows that this additional demand for farm products results in additional buying power amongst the rural communities and hence a demand for manufactured products to improve social conditions or increase the supply of the farm, and completing the circle through which the money circulates, resulting in an additional demand for raw materials, such as lumber and steel.

Many tourists have invested capital in property, mines, industries and business, creating an additional development to the country affected.

One example is sufficient as evidence of this fact. An American visitor of 1923 purchased in 1924 a few hundred acres of land in this district and immediately laid plans to make his investment pay by establishing a summer resort, purchasing lumber, light hardware, furnishings of all kinds, lighting equipment, pumping machinery, canoes and motor-boats. Having established his resort he secures his patrons from his American friends and during their stay here he purchases cereals and food stuffs of all kinds, and they in turn, purchase from him, and in addition purchase fishing tackle, clothing, souvenirs, refreshments, and on finding in Peterborough that they can buy furs, diamonds, etc., to the value of $100 per person without having to pay customs duty on them when returning home and cheaper than they can buy the same articles in the United States, purchase them.

The demands of the tourist traffic from other countries results in the same end economically as the development of export trade with the particular advantage that instead of shipping to markets at a considerable distance, the export market becomes domestic trade.

It is estimated that the tourist traffic in Ontario last year resulted in an additional demand value of $30,000,000, over 95 per cent of which was the result of American tourist traffic alone.

The development of this traffic has been confined almost entirely to last few years and can be attributed to the increased use of the automobile for vacation purposes and the splendid system of highways constructed for their use.

Peterborough and district is in a particularly fortunate position to reap an advantage from tourist traffic situated as it is in the midst of one of the best and most accessible summer resort districts in the province. It is almost an impossibility to say how much the tourist traffic is worth to the City of Peterborough, but estimating only the direct additional value of tourists spending their vacations in the immediate district, (purchases, wholesale or retail, originating here), it is calculated that Peterborough secured the advantage of an additional purchasing power of approximately $500,000, or an equivalent to the payroll of a manufacturing concern employing each year 540 persons.

There is no doubt that the manufacturers of Peterborough have been benefited indirectly not only by the $30,000,000 spent in this province, but also by the estimated $113,000,000 spent in the other provinces of the Dominion.

Investigating the causes for the wonderful development during the past few years, one cannot ignore the advertising carried out by the various tourist associations actively campaigning in the United States.

For this district alone the Trent Waterway Development Association has done a great deal towards this development at a cost to all concerned of approximately $5000 during the past four years.

If all citizens of this province could see the results secured by organization in other countries and even Provinces of this Dominion in the development of the tourist traffic, the support required by the newly formed Tourist Association of Ontario would be assured.

CAMPBELL MILLING COMPANY MAKES MANY POPULAR BRANDS OF BREAD AND PASTRY FLOUR

Process of Preparing Grain for Best Results is Intricate.

GUARANTEE QUALITY

One of Interesting Parts of Business is Bleaching by Electricity.

Among the larger milling companies of the city ranks the Maple Leaf, formerly known as the Campbell Mill, which turns out such well-known brands of our as "Cream of the West," "Maple Leaf," "Monarch," in hard wheat, and pastry flours and "Castle," which is a high-grade bakers' flour..

Being conveniently located at the C.P.R. station, the loading and unloading facilities are splendid.

The wheat is unloaded from cars, weighed and stored in elevators till ready for use. When needed it passes through separators, which remove all foul seed and oats so that the pure wheat remains. It then passes through a scrubbing process and thence to the conditioning bins after being treated with water.

Many Processes'

Before going to the first break rolls, the grain is again weighed by an automatic scale and heated, if the weather is cold, by passing through steam coils. The first break rolls are adjusted so that the grain is merely cracked. Through each successive roll the wheat passes all the while, becoming finer, and having the bran shorts and middlings removed. This separation is effected by large, square sifters, which rotate in a dizzy fashion, while they sort out the various grades of flour.

The screens in the sifters are graded from coarse wire to the very finest of silk. The highest grade of flour passes through the silk screens and the bran is taken out by the coarse wire ones.

The flour is treated with an electric spark, which has the effect of bleaching it a pure white and, incidentally, ageing it. The various grades of flour are conveyed to separate tanks located above the packers.

There are five packers in a row, three of which are for flour and two for bran and shorts respectively. The bags are packed, weighed, and placed upon an endless belt, which carries them to the sewing machine. The tops of the bags are sewed up and they fall to another conveyor, which carries them to the warehouse.

Packing Barrels'

On the floor below are packers especially adapted for filling barrels and small paper sacks. For local trade, the paper sacks are popular as they are of a convenient size, whereas for export the barrels, or great sacks, containing 396 or 430 pounds, are used.

The capacity of the mill per day is reckoned about 700 barrels.

In connection with the flour mill there is also a grist mill where custom grinding may be done.

A large stock of poultry and stock foods are also kept on hand to supply popular demand.

Greatest in Canada'

The company represented by this mill is possibly the greatest in the Dominion, as there are several plants in different cities, all amalgamated under the head of the Maple Leaf Milling Company.

The aim of Campbell's Mill is to supply the highest grade flour obtainable, and for their high grades they supply an unconditional guarantee of quality, backed by the entire Maple Leaf Milling Company.

Shakespeare's House In a Wood Picture

A feature of the Made-in-Peterborough Fair that will arouse interest is the showing of the "wood picture" by Edward Courtney, one of the old and venerable residents of the city. This is a replica in miniature of Shakespeare's house at Stratford-on-Avon. It is composed of 2,000 separate bits of Canadian wood, in oak, maple, walnut, red cedar, cherry, birch, beech, ash, etc. The dark door is a bit of original oak out of the house at Stratford.

This inlaid picture was awarded a large handsome medal and steel engraved diploma at the World's Fair at Chicago in 1893, for excellence of construction, high-class inlaying and historic value.

'THE THREE KIDDS' PRODUCE REMEDIES

Gallagher Remedy Co. is Busy and Fast Growing Establishment.

The pungent smell of camphor permeated the mixing-room of the Gallagher Remedy's establishment on the sunny afternoon recently when an Examiner representative stepped in to give the plant the once over. There is a cheerful atmosphere about the small establishment at 332 Water street where the herbal remedies that make up the stock in trade of this concern have their being and commencement, to achieve an end somewhere in the many homes of the province to which they penetrate.

Commenced in 1921, on an auspicious occasion, July 1st, the company has in this year of 1925 just applied for a new charter, making its capitalization $100,000. "The three Kidds" as they call themselves, are at the head of affairs. W. H. Kidd is managing director, W. E. Kidd, assistant manager, and David M. Kidd, secretary. They have about twenty-two salesmen taking their herbal remedies into the households of the province, and are at present starting out on a campaign to invade Quebec, having just completed preparations for a stock of French labels, cartons and literature.

There are half a dozen employees in the little factory, which turns out proprietary remedies of the family and veterinary type, using purely vegetable matter, with no minerals in their make-up. They make cold creams and vanishing creams, mustard ointments, eczema and external liniments, cough syrups, kidney and lung remedies, vermifuges, blood purifiers and healing preparations, also condition powders for horses, cattle and poultry.

The blue of a Celestial tapestry, the indigo shade that awakens the deepest admiration of the Chinaman and the Occidental alike, is on their bottles and the little white jars that contain creams and ointments. Into some of these little pots busy fingers were putting the campholatum ointment that was in process of manufacture on a recent visit.

BROOM FACTORY PRODUCES OVER 27,000 IN YEAR

Thomas McQuillan Has Thriving Business That Interests Every Housewife.

USEFUL PRODUCTS

Fifteen Feet of Wire Used in Producing Every Broom.

In front of the Fire Hall and down a narrow laneway there is modestly located the factory of Thomas McQuillan, broom manufacturer, which for sheer interest and usefulness of product vies with any concern in the city.

How many Peterborough housewives know that the broom which they ply so busily fifteen times every day may possibly be made right here in this city? Yet every year Mr. McQuillan sends from his modest premises 27,600 brooms which are distributed throughout this district.

The straw of which the broom is composed grows like corn in the states of Illinois and Oklahoma from which it is imported.

Where ordinary corn has a feathery top the broom corn grows to a main shaft which disintegrates into a number of spikes. These tops are cut off and cured in specially designed sheds in order to prevent mould.

The corn comes to the factory in bales weighing between three and four hundred pounds and is immediately stored in a dry shed.

Before the bristles can be used in making a broom they must be sorted to size and quality and the seeds are scraped off by a revolving spiked wheel.

A special machine is used for fastening the straw to the handle. A small bunch of the corn is placed on the proper end of the handle which is revolved, winding steel wire as it turns around the straw, and binding it firmly into place. More straw is added and the ends which protrude too far up the handle are cut by a sharp knife.

Some of the straws are placed pointing up the handle, wired and bent down in position. The velvet and tin binding is then placed over the ends of the straw stems. This binding is firmly tacked and wired in place.

About fifteen feet of wire is used in every broom. When the sweepers leave this machine the straw has a general round appearance.

They are taken to the broom sewing machine which laces the hempen twines midway in the straw and changes the straw from a round to a flat contour. The ends of the bristles are then trimmed by a knife and the finished brooms are tied in bundles of twelve ready for shipment.

SHIP HOUSES IN BOX CARS FROM ALADDIN

Ready-Cut Dwellings Produced and Plans Supplied for Building.

EFFICIENT FACTORY

Result is Like Magic of Aladdin's Lamp—Everything Provided.

A house ordered from the Canadian Aladdin Company is shipped out complete with everything above the foundation included; lumber, roofing, nails, glass, hardware, and paint; and in some cases cement has been shipped out for the foundations.

This is one of Peterborough's newer industries, having started operations in 1920. On an average, about twenty-five men are employed in the fabrication of ready-cut houses, under the management of B. C. Robinson. Besides the houses a certain amount of custom work is done for contractors in the city, who buy a considerable amount of interior trim there.

The catalogues of the company show houses of all sizes and many different plans. When one of these standard houses is ordered the cutting list is taken and every piece called for in the construction of that house is provided. The window sashes and doors are made in the factory, wainscotting and moulding are cut and all the pieces of lumber required are made ready. The requisite number of pounds of nails of different sizes are put in, the shingles or rolls of roofing are made ready, and finally everything is loaded into a car and goe away to the waiting owner.

The company will provide everything needed except the lot to build on and the carpenters to erect the building. The parts are all numbered for their proper places in the house so that no trouble should arise for the builder.

The number of parts there are in a house is surprising. A little house, large enough for two, contains about four thousand pieces while a larger structure will have as many as ten or twelve thousand. The largest house ever shipped from Peterborough filled two box cars while very few take less space than half a car. A house, when in a car, ready for shipment, looks like a pile of boards, with a few boxes of parts and some bundles of roofing.

The plant is one of the most modern and best laid out woodworking mills in the country. The lumber passes from saw to planers and drills and other tools in easy progression. The machines are very efficient, doing the work in the most economical way. The shavings are kept in a large cement building and conveyed to the boiler house through a pipe.

The demand for small houses keeps the factory working pretty steadily and a great many of their houses are to be found in all parts of the country, particularly where wood is scarce.

300 LOAVES IN FIFTY MINUTES

Bredin Bread Company Turns Out 15,000 Loaves of Bread in Week.

CLEAN PREMISES

The factory which makes Bredin's Bread was originally established in capacity of three hundred loaves each, every fifty minutes.

With this equipment the staff of life can be supplied to many Peterborough citizens.

All operations are carried on in clean, sanitary surroundings such as to aid the maintainance of health in the homes where bread is sold.

The bread is a quality product and calculated to remind one of the ample loaves which mother used to pull from the oven, and it is made to satisfy a universal taste.

1885 and has been under the present management for a year.

Bread and buns are the products sold in Peterborough and surrounding districts.

One hundred and twenty five bags of flour are made in one week which results in 15,000 loaves of bread or 2,500 loaves per day.

In order to deliver this bread four wagons and one motor truck are used.

BARRIES' FACTORY TURNS OUT FURS

"From Trapper to Wearer" is Slogan of Big City Business.

"From trapper to wearer" is the slogan of the firm of Barrie's Limited, whose big building at 312 George street occupies four stories, with salesrooms and offices on the main floor, two office floors containing some twenty-nine offices intervening, and the full top flat and basement given over to factory uses.

Thomas Barrie is the managing director, E. G. Hiland has charge of the manufacturing end, and Francis Mather is department manager.

"One of the finest factories in Central Ontario" is the eulogy of various travellers, with regard to this big fur-making establishment, which is equipped with the very latest ideas in mechanical appliances for turning out fur garments, carries a factory staff that varies from twenty-five to fifty people, and has branch factories in Toronto, Regina, Saskatoon and Moose Jaw.

The salesrooms on the ground floor are particularly attractive, handsome, well-furnished and large, with soft-toned rugs and hangings, and a multiplicity of the full-length mirrors that delight the heart of womankind. In the main, long salesrooms are the furs, coats and scarves and chokers, luxurious and rich, with heads of enormous deer and elk and moose looking down from the walls above.

In the little grey and rose salesroom devoted to ladies' ready to wear goods are cloaks and frocks, lingerie and dress accessories, all of the most up to date type. There are long mirrors here too, with palms in big pots, and soft-hued grey furniture, with bright cushions and gay window curtains.

DIVERSITY HELPS.

Made in Peterborough Fair Shows Wealth of Variety in Products.

The depression this country and others have been passing through has been generally felt, but the manufacturers of Peterborough are to be congratulated upon the manner in which they have kept their wheels turning and their employees engaged and have turned out and marketed their products, and we as residents of the city have recognized this and con congratulate ourselves that the industries have been kept going as they have. One reason why we in Peterborough have not felt the depression as much as it has been felt in some other cities is that our industries are of a varied character, as will be seen at the Made-in-Peterborough Exhibition, and this diversity of industries has been and is of advantage. The success of the industries with such a variety of product has also demonstrated, what has long been recognized, that Peterborough is an admirable location for industries of all kinds, owing to its central situation, its cheap hydro-electric power, its shipping facilities, and the steady, industrious and intelligent class of labor. As soon as business conditions generally revive we may look for a period of expanion in Peterborough, as our industries have made preparation to take advantage of the revival of trade as soon as it appears.

WILL CUT LOGS AFTER 8 YEARS

Peterborough Lumber Company is Starting Cutting Here Again.

A PLANING MILL.

Over on Burnham's point the mills of the Peterboro Lumber Company present a view of industry to tourists who arrive in the city by the Trent Canal.

At the present time the mill is equipped only as a planing mill, the rough lumber being brought down by scows from the company's mill at Buckhorn. A very efficient plant is installed and the lumber is dressed and cut for all purposes.

As the mill stands, the romantic part of the sawmill business is missing, as the big logs do not float down the river, to be drawn up into the whirling machinery, barked and cut, and sent out into the yards as slabs, lumber and shingles. But this is to be remedied.

Men are busy at the mill now, installing the machines which will cut the logs up into lumber and once more, after an absence of eight years, the forest monarchs will float down the river and crawl up the slope into the saws. The drive is already at Buckhorn, and is expected to arrive about July 1, by which time the mill should be ready to receive it.

COCA-COLA CO. COOLS CITIZENS

Plant Established Here in 1922—Sixty Cases an Hour.

EVERYTHING CLEAN

In 1922 a branch of the Coca Cola Company was established in Peterborough and since that time has aided considerably in ameliorating the civic thirst developed in hot summer months.

The machinery consists of a bottle washer and filler, which has a capacity of sixty cases of twenty-four bottles each, per hour. Seven thousand, two hundred bottles can be filled each day. The empty bottles are placed upside down on a travelling belt which conveys them through various washing solutions, including alkali, live steam and cold water. As they approach the filling machine, they are taken off by the operator, placed under the filling nozzles, which put measured quantities of syrup and carbonated water is held in steel tanks caps the bottle.

The syrup is contained in two five gallon crocks and is led to the filling machine by tubes. The carbonated wtaer is held in steel tanks and the two solutions are mixed in definite proportion just before they are forced into the bottles..

The plant is large and scrupulously clean and as all materials entering into the composition of the beverages are absolutely pure, one can be confident that the drinking of them will be followed by no ill effects.

While Coca Cola is the trade name of the firm and of the drink in which it specializes, many other products are included, such as Gold Seal, Orange and Lemon Cream Soda and Ginger Ale.

The syrups for these beverages are prepared by the Toronto branch and shipped in large casks to Peterborough and other branches.

Two trucks distribute the cases and collect the empties, the larger one dealing with the rural sections, while the smaller attends to the needs of the distributing points within the city.

HOOPER BAKERY HERE 30 YEARS

Thomas Hooper and Sons Have Made Bread, Cakes and Pastries.

SUPPLY STORES.

The firm of T. H. Hooper and Sons is one of the oldest-established in the city. For over thirty years Thomas Hooper has done business in Peterborough, with the assistance of his two sons, Percy and Fred. There are three stores, at 601, 414 and 327 George Street, with ice-cream parlors in connection with each. An extensive lunch room is maintained at 414 George Street, where the Palm Room is available for various social functions of a public nature. At the upper store, the bakery for the retail establishments is located also. Here the breads and cakes and pastries for the three stores are made, in huge coal ovens, where three hundred loaves of bread may be baked at one time. The output for the three stores is in the neighborhood of a hundred and twenty-five loaves a day, with double that amount for Saturday patrons. Twelve employees man the three establishments. Before the war, the firm had a number of delivery rigs on the road, selling bread, but this practice was discontinued at that time, and the bakeries confine themselves now to making supplies

MAKING BRICKS OF MANY KINDS

Curtis Brothers Turn Out Bricks of All Colors and Styles.

40,000 DAILY

Out on the Warsaw road, just beyond the canal is an industry intimately connected with building in this part of the province. This is the brickyard of Curtis Brothers. In this yard are made stock bricks, ornamental [illegible] bricks and viewed from a little distance there ...ms to be nothing but a collection of open sheds and some ponds of muddy water. Nearer approach shows that the sheds shelter long rows of bricks from the rain while allowing the wind full play through the rows to aid in drying the bricks. Near the racks are the piles of clay, taken from the ponds in the fall, and the kilns where the bricks are burned.

When ordinary bricks are being made a mixture of clay and water is put into a hopper, from which it is pressed into moulds which hold six bricks. The bricks are turned out of the moulds on boards which are placed in racks under reversible roofs. The rows run north and south and the roof is turned so as to let the sun shine on the bricks. After about four days drying they are placed in the kilns, which hold about fifteen thousand bricks. The bricks remain in the kilns about six days, during which they are kept at a temperature of 2,100 degrees, fahrenheit. They are then taken out and are ready for sale. The colors of the bricks come from the clay, which is red or white, and is mixed for special shades. A pink color can be produced by heating the bricks up quickly to a higher temperature when they are nearly ready to come out of the kiln.

Tapestry Bricks.

In making tapestry bricks, tile and flue linings, a stiffer mixture of clay is used. This is forced out through a die of the required shape and size. As it comes out on rollers it is cut to the proper length by wires. The tapestry bricks are scratched on the sides with a tool like a comb and are placed to dry. When they are dry they are put in the kiln and left there for several days. While these bricks are drying they are protected from the wind which would crack them. Different shades are made by mixtures of red and white clay or by altering the temperature in the kiln and bricks are shown in the office in all colors from white to red, including pink, rose, brown, and even some which are green or blue. Sometimes when they are wet they are sprinkled with a mixture of manganese ore and water, which produces a black splash on the brick; or manganese and red clay, which produces a brown splash.

About thirty men are employed in this brickyard, which has a capacity of about forty thousand bricks a day. The season for making bricks lasts from about May 1 to October 31. During the winter bricks cannot be made as they would freeze while drying. Sometimes this happens after work starts in the spring and the bricks have to go back through the process once more.

PAPER BOXES CARRY GOODS FAR AND WIDE

Chocolates and Alarm Clocks Packed in Peterborough Boxes.

NONE COLLAPSIBLE

Hugh Niven is Manager of Interesting Plant—Some Processes.

There is something intriguing about a box. From the wedding ring and the wedding cake that come in boxes, right to the plain or fancy box, which is the final repository of the majority of human beings, life, in its various facets of romance and business and death, is bound up in the contents of boxes. Pandora's box, of ancient times, was the home of magical good things; the djinns of the Arabian Nights sprang forth from boxes to wreak weal or woe to human beings, and Shakespeare founded one of his most famous bits, the "casket" scene from "The Merchant of Venice," on the inmost contents of three small boxes. The idea of the unknown quantity in the box has always appealed to the imagination.

In the Peterborough Paper Box Factory, the thriving little establishment which occupies a portion of three separate floors at 343 George Street, and is managed by Hugh M. Niven, this city also has its manufactory of boxes of the "rigid" or "set up" type. If the seeker for a box desires the "collapsible" sort, the kind of box like the holder for a cake, for instance, that is, of the "knockdown" variety, he must go elsewhere; but for any form of made-up box, from a sample two inches wide, for jewelry, to the suit box that measures twenty-seven by sixteen inches, he can get it here.

Boxes go out from this centre that hold all manner of things. Shoes, bathing suits and jerseys, chocolates, lamp cord for electric lights, alarm clocks that sound their warning to sleepyheads from the Arctic Circle to the Equator, shallow little boxes to hold labels in cotton and linen for clothing, and others for milking-machine parts, boxes with protecting fly-sheets for balls of yarn, fancy Christmas boxes for retail stores, covered with imported colored papers, boxes for toothsome Alaska pies, for automobile brake-lining materials, boxes for elastics and arm bands.

"The outside of the platter must be shiny." A trim and pretty box, it seems, is an invaluable aid in selling the goods that box contains. The head of a great business in the United States, with a record of sales built up through long, careful years, is credited with saying: "Take my money, take my capital and my factory, but leave me my box, and I will once again build up a fortune."

And a salt company, whose boxes cost three times as much as the salt contained therein, say that since they stopped selling in bulk and concentrated on boxed sales of their salt, their business has increased by seventy-five per cent.

The box business in Peterboro was commenced in 1920 by William Hall and thereafter continued by A. H. Stratton, who removed the machinery from its present quarters to the Review building on Hunter Street. When Mr. Nevin took over the business in November of 1922, he went back to the former premises, where a number of employees are constantly busy in turning out the various types of boxes needed by customers. Here is the scoring machine which does the initial work, the "guillotine" that cuts the cardboard, the slitting and staying and ending machines, and the human fingers that operate the machinery and complete the paper covering operation and adjust edges. As with so many other things, the motions necessary in the making and covering of a box are manifold and interesting to watch.

KNITTED WEAR AT THE ALBION

Bathing Suits, Sweaters and Hosiery Produced on Park Street.

HOUSEWIVES' ENVY

The old schoolhouse building that now houses the manufacturing establishment of the Albion Knitting Company, on the corner of Park and Murray Streets, still retains much of its scholarly atmosphere. The men and women who work there hang their hats in neat, pupil-like rows in the halls, where school boys and girls used to deposit their wraps. And they labour in rooms where wide windows admit plenty of light and high ceilings help to keep the air fresh and cool. Even the front entrance and the wide stairway with its polished rail, contribute to the pedagogic impression of the making of the woollen garments that comprise the list of the Albion Knitting Company's activities.

An average staff of some twenty employees works in the old school building. Cecil Wolfe is manager. The output includes mostly everything in knitted woollen wear, with ladies' and children's bathing suits in bright colors, boys' jerseys, men's sweaters and coats and sport hose, the bright "Kid Boots" sweaters, and the little "Oliver Twist" suits for kiddies.

From the little cones on which the light yarn threads are twisted, to the completed garment, ready for wear, and boxed for shipment, is the route followed in the making of various articles. A stocking machine, electrically-driven, as are all the other machines, turns out bright hose with startling rapidity, even turning the heel without any apparent discomfort or hestiation. An intelligent machine, with an automatic stop, makes striped garments, stopping at the psychological moment to lose the stripe in a stretch of plain material, turning out its product with a mild, sizzling noise.

Downstairs is the steam press, a contrivance that might be envied by housewives, with a huge flat board pressing the garments between heavy boards.

There is a seaming machine and an over-seaming machine, the latter covering up raw edges with careful, criss-cross threads; there is a button-holing machine that should delight the heart of any woman laboring along with difficult buttonholes, and best of all, and most ingenious, is the machine that puts on dome fasteners in an instant's operation. It is fascinating to watch the gentle movements of this electric invention, with a mild, whirring sound, depositing the domes and their fasteners in the proper places without undue fuss or flurry. There is only one thing to mar the joy of the workers here, that is the fact that there is no machine to put on the buttons. These are placed by hand.

FARM AND CITY ARE JOINED IN PETER HAMILTON CO. SHOP WHERE IMPLEMENTS ARE MADE

Making of Machinery to Support Farmer in Turn Supports City.

BIG BUSINESS

Ore Used in Plant is Obtained on Shore of Lake Ontario.

Interesting to those who are country born are the products made by the Peter Hamilton Farm Implement Manufacturing Company which operates a large plant for the sole purpose of turning out implements for use on a farm.

The greater part of the ore comes from Canada, more particularly from the great iron mines along the north shore of Lake Ontario.

The coal used for reduction and smithing operations is imported from Pennsylvania. All castings and forgings are made in the Peter Hamilton foundry and blacksmith shop where huge trip hammers fashion the glowing metal at the will of the master mechanic.

All the machining and milling is accomplished in a modern equipped machine shop where milling machines, lathes, punch presses, drill presses and thread cutting machines do their part in forming the metal pieces so that they may become integral with some mechanism.

The metal parts for hayrakes, mowers, binders, harrows, drags, root cutters, ensilage machinery and numbers of others are fashioned in the machine shop, while the wooden members are being sawed, planed and painted on another floor.

They are assembled and either stored or shipped for immediate use to perform their tasks of aiding food production whereby thousands exist.

Making Ploughs.

Mould boards of ploughs which roll the earthy acres in long straight furrows are hammered, curved in a special machine, tempered and polished.

Long bars of square iron are clipped into short pieces, heated ad pointed by a dropping trip-hammer which draws out the diamond tooth of the drag which mulches the soil.

Pitman shafts for mowers are quickly shaped by whirring upright knives, mounted on a perpendicular mandril, which shape the solid oak sticks into rods which drive the sliding mower knives.

Spokes are hammered into cast iron hubs, rims and steel tires fitted for wheels which carry the machinery back and forth.

Every machine is designed to perform some operation which in turn fits up machinery with which to till the soil and feed the workman who labours at the lathe. And so goes the round, each cog fitting in the corresponding groove, each belt turning its appointed pulley and performing its own tasks.

While the Peter Hamilton Company makes farm machinery, yet on that same machinery hangs the prosperity of Peterborough citizens and it may be seen that in most cases of this kind all existences are inter-related. One must live that others may remain in existence.

Canada now exports to the United States one-sixth of its total production of electrical energy.

CANADIAN CANOE IS POPULAR ON STREAMS OF OLD ENGLAND AND IS FOUND IN AUSTRALIA

...tory of the Canadian Canoe Co. Has Been Here 35 Years.

HOME MATERIALS

Dominion Trees Supply Wood — Excellency of Workmanship Renowned.

The factory of the Canadian Canoe Company is very interesting, especially to those who spend vacations on a great part o' their time out of doors. All lines of canoes, skiffs and boats are built for every variety of pastime and labour, where water is found.

Canadian Canoes bearing the name of Peterborough are shipped to England, France and Australia, where that type of water craft is becoming increasingly popular. In England especially, Canadian canoes and boats are becoming more generally adopted and the products of the Canadian Canoe Company are largely instrumental in filling the demand.

The factory for the manufacture of these excellent boats has been established in Peterborough for thirty-five years and it is now able to make from 800 to 1000 craft every year in all styles and types ordered. While many of these canoes are distributed in Canada others go around the world, advertising the workmanship and stability of Canadian goods.

Canadian canoes are used today which have been in constant use since the Canadian Canoe Company first started their factory here, which is ample proof of the marvellous faithfulness in construction and a tribute to the skilled hands which have made such endurance possible.

Three years ago a skilled canoeist crossed Lake Ontario in a sixteen foot canvas canoe. This frail craft was product of the Canadian Canoe Company and the first to effect such a daring exploit.

That same canoe has travelled 2,900 miles without repairs. It is records such as this which sustain the reputation of a firm.

Canadian Materials.

Materials for the manufacture of Canadian Canoes are produced in Canada. Some of the wood, notably Cedar, comes from British Columbia while much of it comes from Peterborough district.

Only the very finest of wood is used in the construction of the boats as the presence of flaws decreases not only the appearance but the sales value of a canoe.

The ribs of small water craft are made largely of cedar, elm or oak woods which can be readily bent to shape and which hold that shape when once bent in the desired way. Cedar and basswood are used for the planking while the thwarts consist of birch or oak. The decks are made usually of a finer wood, such as oak, birch, butternut, walnut or mahogany.

The materials for the various parts are shaped on circular and bandsaws and the wood is planed smoothly. The canoe builders then begin their work of construction. Forms which are the shape of the desired craft are set in position. A narrow strip or inner keel is placed and held firmly in position along the upturned keel of the form.

In the notches along the keel specially prepared ribs are set and bent around the curved side of the form. These ribs are tacked into their proper positions and the planks are nailed on. On the canvas canoes copper nails are used, while on the painted boats the iron nails are quite suitable.

When the planking or boarded outside is nailed on firmly, the protruding ends o the ribs are cut off and the liners are placed around the edges.

Thwarts, decks and seats are then placed into position and men smooth the surface with sand paper. The basswood or lap board models are then painted or varnished, allowed to dry and are either stored or shipped to some distant point.

Making Canvas Canoes.

For the canvas canoes a special seamless canvas is used. This is placed over the bottom of the craft, stretched from end to end and pulled at the sides, being nailed in position when a sufficient tautness has been attained. The bang irons are then placed over the end, gunwales are put on, and the canoe stands ready for painting.

The canvas is first sandpapered and treated with a special filler which renders the canoe impervious to moisture. In the first grade canoes a coating of lead is first used; this is sandpapered and the filler is put on, another coating of lead, followed by a coat of colour is then put on—a rubbing process follows, after which a coating of varnish is applied which is followed by hand rubbing process.

As one of the merr said. The greatest essential is lots of elbow grease." The inside of the canoe was finished with one coat of shellac and two coats of varnish.

It is considered that the canvas canoe is much more durable than the cedar or exposed wood canoe as the surface has a much harder finish and one which lasts much longer than the wooden surface.

When wooden canoes must be allowed to soak before they can be used the canvas canoe can be dumped into the water and no water will seep through. A canvas craft can be left to dry in the sunshine and no harm will result, whereas a wooden canoe would shrink and crack.

Exhibit at Wembley.

At Wembley last year there was an exhibit of models made by the Canadian Canoe Company which carried away a gold medal and diploma. When an exhibit is deemed worthy of such recognition it is certain that there must be exceptional qualities manifest. Such advertising is the very best which it is possible for a country to have.

Canoes are used for pleasure by canoe clubs and private people. At popular resort and camps life would be tame without the light and seaworthy craft for long trips or fishing expeditions.

Far into the northland trappers, surveyors, prospectors and hunters endure audaciously with canoe and gun, paddling their way into the solitudes.

Wonderful Ancestry.

The Canadian Canoe has a wonderful ancestry. Constructed on the lines used by the Indians on their models, the craft of the present day is a worthy descendant which will steadily maintain the old traditions. Where Indian canoes were used often for warlike purposes, those made today carry a message of peace and bliss.

Canoes are designed for a variety of purposes and consist mainly of the all-wood and the canvas covered. The latter is rapidly gaining in favour as, during the last year orders for them were more numerous than those for the wooden canoes.

Motors Demanded.

The introduction of the outboard motor has created a wide demand for a special canoe arranged so that such a motor may be attached to the stern which is dubbed off flat instead of having the usual pointed end. The stern is strongly re-enforced to carry the added weight of the motor.

A number of skiffs are made, notably the lapstreak, the varnished cedar strip boat with a smooth "skin" or surface and the smooth "skin" basswood skiff.

Some skiffs are specially designed for use with an outboard motor; these include the lapstreak and the varnished cedar strip; there is also a canvas covered variety.

The Canadian Canoe Company not only designs the canoes and skiffs but has facilities for supplying paddles, oars, sails and cushions.

Paddles used are made by a special paddle making machine which allows the shaft to run far down the blade, greatly increasing the strength of the paddle.

Canoes from 12 feet in lenth to twenty feet are listed, while the beam may vary from thirty-six inches to fifty-two. The large ones are of course designed for carrying heavy loads of freight or long trips, while the lighter ones are pleasure craft or used by prospectors and all needing a portable canoe.

The workmen are taught to use a painstaking care in the selection of materials and the workmanship so that down to the veriest detail perfect work must be turned out. It is factories of this kind which will win for Peterborough an enviable place in the industrial world where a good job, well done, is the only one which counts.

WORK FOR VETERANS

Hon. Dr. Beland, Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, in presenting the estimates of his Department in the House of Commons, pointed out that while reductions had been made in the staff and others, to a small extent, would take place in future, the time had arrived when the extent of the work being performed would not change materially for some years to come.

The Department is operating under a minimum expense for administration, the total expenditure for 1923-24 being as follows:

DIRECT PAYMENTS TO MEN AND DEPENDENTS—
Pensions, Canadian	$33,048,619.26
Pensions, Imperial	4,463,648.49
Pay and allowances to men undergoing treatment, unemployment relief, sheltered employment, vocational loans, returned soldiers' insurance, etc	4,057,954.18
Total	$41,570,221.93
Services provided by the Department, including hospital treatment, pension examinations, artificial limbs, burials, workmen's compensation, etc	$ 5,648,188.40
Payments to outside organizations, including Last Post Fund, Federal Appeal Board, etc	233,425.88
Capital expenditures	6,120.54
Recoverable expenditures and casual revenue	1,593,222.90
Making total payments, apart from administration	49,036,179.65
Total administration costs in connection with this work during year	2,485,645.17
Making total expenditure of	$51,541,824.82

The percentage of administration costs to the total is slightly over 4.8 per cent. for the year.

Dr. Beland stated that he personally was not anxious to remain as Minister of the Department longer than was required by the Department. On the other hand he pointed out that the suggestion that the Department be abolished was quite futile if those who made the suggestion had any idea of curtailing the work being done for Ex-Soldiers. The payment of pensions, provision for treatment supply of artificial limbs, and all other services handled by the Department must go on.

WILLIAM HAMILTON CO. BUILT LARGEST ROD MILL IN WORLD

Supplied Hollinger Mines With Machinery That Weighed Eighty Tons.

HERE SINCE 1856.

Company Has Great Record of Machine Building—Huge Castings.

The William Hamilton Company Limited was established in Peterborough in 1856 and is accordingly one of the pioneer industries. This company has a glorious record of great machines which it has turned out for other manufacturing companies throughout the Dominion.

This great plant is equipped for making pulp mill, hydraulic, turbine and sawmill machinery as well as mechanism necessary to the mining industry such as sand pumps, ball mills, rod mills and ore and rock crushers.

The largest casting made by the William Hamilton Company was a flywheel pulley in two sections each, which weiged ten tons.

They have also cast the drier rolls for pulp mills each of which would approximate seven tons. They have also built the rod mills for the Hollinger mines which are seven feet in diameter by fifteen feet in length. When weighed with the liners they tripped the beam at eighty tons and to this day are the largest mills of their kind in the world.

Many Other Lines.

In addition to the heavy steel machinery, steel plates, fabricated steel plate work, boilers and stacks are made. The boilers and stacks are rivetted by pnewmatic hammers which head the rivets while they are still glowing at a white heat. As the steel pin cools it contracts bringing the plates tightly together so that there is small possibility of leakage.

The greater part of the pig iron comes from Canada but the steel and structural steel is brought in from the States.

When running full time about a hundred and fifty men are employed, designing moulding, making patterns and machining the various pieces.

Some of the machines used are planers, lathes, shapers and drill presses.

Huge steel tables move backwards and forwards, carrying lengths of shafting while a sharp tool set just above shaves a groove in the solid metal.

This is just one operation of the hundreds which may be observed in this interesting plant.

All manufactures marketed by this firm are sold for domestic use and are keeping the wheels of Canadian Industry turning as they supply the bulky castings and boilers without which factories and mills could not operate.

MARBLE FRONTS ON STORES ARE LOCAL PRODUCT

Ontario Marble Company Has Most Interesting Processes in Plant.

MANY VARIETIES

Takes Gang Saw a Full Day to Cut Through Four Inches.

The marble fronts which add to the beauty of store windows, bank counters, and showcases are a product of one of Peterborough's industries, the Ontario Marble Company, at its plant on Maria street, near the mouth of the canal. Switchboard panels, stair treads and partitions are also made of marble by this firm, which is a subsidiary of the Vermont Marble Company of Proctor, Vermont.

The marble used for these articles comes to Peterborough in large blocks, just as it was hewn from the quarries, with the marks on it where it was drilled all around. The color varies from pure white through all shades of pink, green, blue, and grey to an almost pure black. The marble is received from Vermont, Tennessee, Alaska, and Italy.

When a block of marble is required it is lifted by a large crane in the yard, to a low truck, which is run under a gang saw. The saws are bands of soft iron and are spaced in the frame at the required widths to provide slabs of proper thickness. From a pipe overhead a stream of sand and water is run onto the saws. The actual cutting is done by the sand which is worked back and forth by the bands. The rate of progress is about four inches a day, although this varies according to the type of marble being sawn. A block of marble is on the truck for about three weeks before it is entirely cut into slabs. The bands used as saws last long enough to cut two blocks, by which time they are worn so thin as to be useless.

When the slabs have been cut out the marble is cut by a pneumatic chisel roughly to the size required. The chisel cuts a line along the panel so that it breaks. The pieces then go to the rubbing machines, which are large steel tables which are turning all the time. The pieces of marble are laid on them and they are kept wet with sand and water. The table, sliding around under the marble, puts a smooth surface on the marble.

Polishing is the next step. The slabs are coated with oxide of tin and round polishing discs are rotated over them, quickly producing a beautiful finish. They are then ready for shipment unless a bevel or rounded edge is required.

Pieces are sometimes required in special shapes and sizes. In such cases the work is done by hand, air chisels being used for cutting the marble.

The company has its own pumps, drawing the water from Little Lake. The sand and water after passing through the saws or rubbers, is discharged into the lake, providing a fine beach which is the swimming center for the youth of that part of Ashburnham. For a number of years the company dug sand on its own lot but the sand of good quality has been exhausted and now steps are being taken to run the sand and water into the pit to fill it up. The sand cannot be used again as it is too finely ground in the cutting processes.

Unmarried women were forbidden to wear pearls during the reign of Caesar.

TANGLED SKEIN RESOLVED INTO PRETTY CARPET

Brinton Company Products Grace Homes All Over the Dominion.

MARVELLOUS WORK

Intricate Patterns Are Woven With Apparently Superhuman Dexterity.

A room full of racks, containing a confused mass of spools from which is unreeled a tangled mass of thread which nothing on earth, either man or machine could sort out, is the impression gained on entering the weaving room of the Brinton Carpet Company on Braidwood avenue. But on passing around to the other side of the looms a far different scene presents itself as yards of smooth carpet with beautiful designs of all colors on them, come rolling out of the machines.

In this plant, beautifully situated on the bank of the Otonabee river south of the city, about 100 people, men, boys and girls, take jute from India, linen from Italy, cotton from the Southern States and wool from Australia, and put it through various processes, resulting finally in soft carpets of pleasing designs for the floors of Canadian homes from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The basis for the carpet is made of jute, linen, or cotton, or some combination of them, while the pile or nap is made of wool or worsted. The material for the base is passed through a mixture of dye and starch and is wound on large reels.

The wool and worsted yarns are washed, dyed, put in extractors to take out the surplus moisture and then sent through driers. From the driers it is reeled up on spools.

Wonderful Machines.

The spools of thread or yarn of the various colors required are placed in order in the large racks which tak up most of the space in the weaving rooms. They are led down through the looms under a number of long steel rods known as needles, which are actuated through the holes in a cardboard pattern overhead so as to bring up the yarns of different colors through the base and make the pattern required. This system is used on the Brussels and Wilton carpets while on the Axminsters a row of nipper picks of little pieces of colored yarn according to the pattern and places them in the fabric. The loops drawn up in the first two varieties are cut with a knife on the end of the rod which regulates the length of them so as to leave the short ends standing up.

Some of the carpet is made in one yard widths which have to be fastened together and some is made in three and four yard widths for seamless rugs. After they come from the looms the carpets pass through a machine which smooths the pile and from there they pass to girls who go over them and fix any defects by hand. The seamless carpets are then ready for the stock room. The narrow widths are sewn together and glued, after having been steamed. The seams are carefully ironed out and are very difficult to see when finished.

Pattern Making.

The patterns which actuate the needles so that they pick out the right colors for the designs are made from strips of cardboard. Holes are punched in these cards for each line of the design and they they are sewn together into long chains which pass into the machines as often as necessary. The designs are painted in color on square-ruled paper and cut up into the proper width for the strips of the pattern.

This company has been greatly responsible for building up that part of North Monaghan immediately south of the city and a large part of the attendance at St. George's church is recruited from the Kidderminster carpet weavers who form a large part of the workers in the factory.

HOW PETERBOROUGH CANOES SAILED ON AFRICAN RIVERS

Traveller Writes to Manufacturer Here to Tell of Adventures.

NATIVE PADDLERS

Chief Delighted With Softwood Crate When Boats Unpacked.

April 13, 1925.

Mr. W. A. Richardson,
Peterborough Canoe Company.

My dear Mr. Richardson,

You may have wondered just ... happened to two of your freight cars that were sent to Lagos, Nigeria, in August, 1923.

It gives me great pleasure to write you about my experience with these boats, as they were highly satisfactory throughout.

First of all, the canoes arrived in Lagos in good shape. From Kano in northeastern Nigeria the canoes were carried on top of a Fiat lorry to a native town one hundred miles east of Kano. There it seemed best to take them out of their crate, which was "dashed" to the native chief. I enclose a photograph of this. He was greatly delighted with this gift, especially as soft wood is rare and very expensive in that country.

From this town of Jemaari, the canoes travelled overland on a trailer behind a small lorry for four hundred miles until they reached the Shari River. There we used them for a few days and then had them sent up-river by natives to one of the head waters—a small bahr—where I later joined them.

Accompanied by seven natives, only three of whom were boatmen, I travelled for six weeks on this river, covering some five or six hundred miles. The canoes seemed to me to combine the best possible lines for lightness and capacity. They travelled easily on the trailer, although some fo the going was very rough. On the river, where I used them, they carried all manner of outfit, amounting at one time to about seventy porter loads, besides several men. I mounted a moving picture camera in the bow of one of them and took many pictures and did much shooting while on the move. The sails were not used, but the paddles and poles were excellent and the repair outfit was admirable. Altogether, the Peterborough outfit helped greatly to make the river expedition most enjoyable in every way.

At the big French post where Mr. Bell and I sold the canoes we saw the two that he had bought from you some years before and had used in the same region.

I think back with great pleasure of your hospitality and courtesy to me on my visit to Peterborough when I picked out the boats for Africa.

Yours very truly,
J. MALCOLM FORBES.

LITTLE THEATRES FLOURISH ON BROADWAY

NEW YORK, May 12—"Little theaters" have come into their own in New York this season as never before. While the old line producers have bewailed the times, each of half a dozen dramatic organizations not strictly commercial has found audiences most favorable.

The tiny Triangle Theater, in a basement seating only 110, brought out a revival of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," made a sensation and sent it from Greenwich Village for a run of several weeks on Broadway.

The Provincetown Playhouse brought out Eugene O'Neill plays under the title of "S. S. Glencairn," early ... and they are running still, upstairs ... same theater followed with ... Gilbert and Sullivan "Patience," ... ed with cheers.

The Cherry ... layers, also a Greenwich Village ... ization revived Congreve's "The Way of the World" two months ago, and many a night since they have played to standing room.

Over on the lower East Side the Neighborhood Playhouse cut short its highly successful run o the Grand Street Follies to give the Hindoo poetic drama "The Little Clay Cart." It is one of the most warmly lauded of the year's achievements and is drawing prosperously.

The best example of all is the Theatre Guild. It has so grown up from its "little theater" origin however, that it scarcely can serve as an example. Each of its first two subscription plays of the season "The Guardsman" and "They Knew What They Wanted" proved phenomenal hits. They promise to run the length o the season.

Another non-commercial venture, even if not in the little theater class, is that of the Actors Theater backed by the Actors Equity Association. One of their productions proved a quick failure, but the other "Candida," is excellent enough to cover almost any multitude of outside disappointments.

All these theaters operate on a subscription basis seats being sold to members cheaper and under more favorable circumstances than to non-members. The plan insures a certain minimum of income for the production.

The Triangle, surrounded with the most village-ish atmosphere of all the groups mentioned, makes no admission charge at all to members. It has been operating for two years and has produced more than 300 plays, most of them one-act.

Ante-dating them all is the Neighborhood Playhouse, now in its eleventh year. It grew out of the work of Henry Street Settlement. The Provincetown Playhouse has to its credit the original production of Eugene O'Neill drama in New York, which is honor enough.

The Theater Guild dates to the Washington Square Players, organized in a bookshop in February, 1915. After a promising struggle with one-act plays, they were disbanded by the war. The chief spirits got together again late in 1918. With the financial backing of Otto H. Kahn they leased the Garrick Theater and they are there yet.

COACHING DAYS HAVE RETURNED IN GLORY TO SOUTH OF ENGLAND

Appearance of Stage on Brighton Road Recalls Another Age.

SOME HAZARDS

Highwaymen, Wrecks and Snowstorms Threatened Every Passage Made.

Doubtless the shades of a host of "swell dragsmen" of palmy days gone by are smiling now. Perhaps they are also cracking their ghostly whips with zest, tilting their beavers a whit more rakishly. They ruled the road in the days when it was in its glory. From one end of England to the other, along smooth and famous highways, their renown went forth. That was, of course, when the stage coach was in its heyday, and that was a long time ago.

Why should the shades of the old "dragsmen" rejoice? Because there has come the announcement that the glory of the road is returning to one highway at least. Let those who will travel by the roaring, cindery railroad; a dash of the ancient romance has come back the defy modernity. A stage coach for passengers is to be run between London and Brighton, along the very route where the bucks of the Regency and King George himself handled the ribbons from the box seat.

Those were good old days that England knew when the roads were thronged with spanking turn-outs. They live now in the pages of old books, in collections of ancient prints that hold still the flavor of the times that were. Always there has clung about the stage coach of old England a certain glamour that is hard to define. It is a glamour that has crept into the chronicles of romance—a pulsing, vivid sort of atmosphere filled with the merry tooting of bugles, the clatter of hoofs and wheels, the hearty greetings of landlords of galleried inns along the way and, not quite so pleasant but certainly most impressive, the hoarse, "Stand and deliver" of the gentlemen who rode Hounslow Heath in the dark of the moon with a horse-pistol in each hand and an eye out for the coming of the lumbering stage coach whose passengers were prone to carry valuable watches.

On the High Road.

Turn back the pages of the years and see what the days of the stage coach really were like. Join for an instant in the satisfaction of the traveller who wrote the following:

"Suppose a fine Spring morning when you find yourself seated by the side of a pleasant companion behind four blooded horses, the roads sufficiently watered by an April shower to lay the dust; the hedgerows shooting forth, buds unfolding, flowers bursting out, the birds carolling cheerfully as if to welcome the return of Spring; the sun smiling on the snug cottages, the pictures of village rchurches, the small hamlets, the peaceful homesteads, the neatly kept gardens where early produce is beginning to blossom—such were the attractions of the road.

"Every mile presented a new feature; the green fields, the earth teeming with fertility, the velvet lawns, the verdant fields, the luxuriant woods, the peaceful valleys, the shady lanes, the blossomed orchards, all combined to raise your spirits to a state of ecstasy. Then the excitement as the well-appointed drag drove through the village, the guard sounding his cheerful horn, and the coach pulled up for a snack at a cleanly wayside public house where the buxom landlady and the pretty barmaid dispensed the creature comforts to the hungry guests, their appetites sharpened by a drive of some twenty or five-and-twenty miles."

There are pictures that are conjured up by jottings such as the above. The picture, for instance, of the typical coachman of the day, mutton-chop whiskers framing a rubicund face, white hat set swaggeringly on the head, immaculate corduroy breeches and driving gloves. What wonder that he was a figure of admiration wherever roads ran! What wonder that passengers paid an extra price for the privilege of sitting with him on the box seat and sharing his rug and conversation!

For the coachman was an amiable fellow. As like as not he would be willing to pass over the reins to his new-found friend and let him have a go at "driving the cattle." There were plenty of times when from within the coach there arose the sound of anxious voices as the amateur on the box seat "sent 'em down the hill for a bit of a spurt," but that was all in the game of travelling.

What the Garlands Meant.

He had an eye, too, for a pretty face along the road, did the personage on the box. Life to him was a glorious succession of greetings and of hearty "snacks" as he pulled up the coach at its innumerable stops along the way. And there were times also when the coach was more than just a lordly conveyance. Decked in laurel and flowers, with ribbons trailing colorfully out behind, it sped through the countryside, and as it passed the bells in the village fires pealed out gloriously. For when the coach came down with garlands on it only one thing was meant—the British arms had gained a great victory somewhere.

There was no regular means for disseminating news in the countryside of England of that day. Waterloo and Trafalgar alike were heralded by the coach long, long before the tardy leaflet press had penetrated to the rural districts. It is even told how in one remote Lancashire hamlet the bells chanted merrily a full year after Waterloo. It was the first time the village had heard the news.

Coaching had an amazingly swift development in England. The cumbersome six-inside "coaching machines" of the seventeenth century were replaced by the fast four-inside models, which reached the height of speed and comfort about the 1830's. The Bath Road, the Exeter Road, the Portsmouth, Brighton, Dover, York and Holyhead Roads all beckoned to the traveller by coach. The run from London to Brighton, 51½ miles, was being done in 5¾ hours; London to Shrewsbury, 154 miles, in 15 hours; London to Manchester, 87 miles, in 9 hours; London to Liverpool, 203 miles, in 21 hours.

May Day was the great date in the chronicle of coaching, for on this day all the coaches raced against time. The independent Tallyho made the 109 miles between London and Birmingham in the record-breaking time of 7 hours. The ability to drive a coach had become as much a part of the education of the young gentleman of fashion as the Latin and Greek with which he crammed himself at Oxford.

It was from the inns and the public houses of London, brimful of noise and cheer, that the coaches pulled out to take the road for their distant destinations. They were bustling, colorful places, too, these courtyards, according to the descriptions of them penned at the time. Where could there be found more life and action than in the White Horse Cellar, in Piccadilly, famous setting-out place for scores of coaches?

"The almost perpetual blowing of horns, the arrival and departure of numerous stage-coaches, the busy, impertinent, resolute cads also on the lookout to procure passengers, persuading them nearly against their inclinations to mount 'this or that 'ere coach' with which their interests are connected, men with newspapers, others with umbrellas, oranges, pencils, walking sticks, etc., form a most extraordinary assemblage and absorb the whole attention; indeed, the ignorant are very liable to make mistakes, and in more instances than one it has been discovered too late to rectify their error. When many miles out of town they have had the mortification of learning that they have gone by a wrong coach! What a blow the exceedingly fat gentleman must have experienced when, having given orders to his man to take him two seats, he found that one was booked outside and one in!"

And then the fast coaches were off! Off to do their prodigious number of miles with the stalwart "dragsman" on the box warbling, perhaps, "The Woodpecker Tapping the Hollow Beech Tree," or some such popular song of the day, and the passengers crammed inside looking forward to the stop at the first inn where the enjoyments of travel could be heightened just a little bit more by a noble cut and a nobler tankard. That is the picture of the pleasant side of travelling by coach, extolled in song and story. But how about the other?

There was Hounslow Heath to be passed by the coaches on the Great Western Road. There was Finchley Common on the Great Northern. And regularly on a dark night there would be waiting the knights of the road in their cloaks and with their loaded pistols. Being stopped by highwaymen was a regular occurrence in the old coaching days. The guard might reach for his blunderbuss, the coachman might send his whip flying over the leaders in a desperate attempt to escape, but the end would be the same. The calm, assured gentleman on the horse would catch up to the coach and the muzzles of a very large pair of pistols would add authority to his commands. When such peerless exemplars of the highwayman's art as Dick Turpin and Claude Duval were roaming the Heath, the art of holding up the stage-coach was raised almost to perfection. They caught Dick Turpin and they also caught Claude Duval, and Tyburn Tree got them in the end, but in the meantime they had shown the stage-coach a merry time.

Here lies Du Vall: Reader, if Male thou art,
Look to thy Purse: If Female to thy Heart.

Such were the lines of epitaph inscribed above the burial place of Claude Duval in Covent Garden Church.

In those days there was not much rancor exhibited toward the gentlemen of the horse pistols and the light fingers. They robbed and rode away regularly, and the newspapers of the period were filled with the advertisements of stage-coach passengers, framed often along such humorous, bantering lines as the one which appeared in The Flying Post in 1696:

"Whereas six gentlemen, all of the same honorable profession, having been more than ordinary put to it for a little pocket money, did, on the fourteenth instant, near Kentish Town, borrow of two persons in a coach a certain sum of money without staying to give bond for repayment, and whereas fancy was taken to the hat, peruke, cravat, sword and cane of one of the passengers; this advertisement, therefore, is to desire the said worthies, how fond soever they may be of the other loans, to unfancy the cane again, and send it to Will's Coffee House in Scotland Yard, it being too short for any such proper gentlemen as they are to walk with and withal only valuable as having been the gift of a friend."

There is no record as to whether the amiable gentleman got back his cane. Probably not, inasmuch as there was a reward of $100 out for the capture of every active highwayman. Travellers were taking to the coaches armed as though for battle. The qualifying words, "if God permits," were also invariably inserted by the stage-coach companies in their advertisements of the running-time of their lines.

The Passengers Help.

When the rains came, time and again the coaches became embedded in the mud and out popped the passengers to put a shoulder to the wheel. Accidents on the road were of frequent occurrence, and bones were broken and lives lost. Probably the outstanding case of this kind came when two rival coaches raced down a steep hill. At the bottom the two collided, a passenger was killed, and others were badly hurt.

The case was taken to court, where the two "dragsmen" were charged with wilful murder. Every one connected with the case conceded that there had been no excuse for such a breakneck, downhill gallop. The murder charge fell through, but both the coachmen were found guilty of manslaughter and there was an end, for a time, to promiscuous racing on the road.

The weather played an important part in the comforts of coaching. A bad winter meant torture on the road. When the famous snowstorm of 1836 blanketed the roads with drifts from twelve to twenty feet in height there simply was no travel throughout England for ten days. Coach after coach was snowed in on the road and had to be abandoned. The Exeter mail was buried five times. In an earlier winter the Bath coach pulled into Chippenham with two of its outside passengers frozen to death and a third dying.

Now coaching is coming back, temporarily at least, on the Brighton Road, perhaps the most famous of them all. For it was along the Brighton Road that the Regency "Corinthians" in their wide-brimmed, bell-topped hats and their huge wide stocks, drove down to Blindley Heath and Crawley Down to see "the Fancy" fight it out with bare knuckles—merry coaching parties, in which a King of England and a Czar of Russia joined. Boxians, that famous journal of the ring, in its own choice slang, has vividly described the Brighton Road on the day of a big fight:

"The Fancy were all upon the alert soon after breakfast to ascertain the seat of action, and as soon as the important whisper had gone forth that Crawley Down was likely to be the place the toddlers were off in a twinkling. The gigs were soon brushed up, the prads harnessed and the boys who intended to enjoy themselves on the road were in motion. Between the hours of two and three in the afternoon upwards of 100 gigs were counted passing through Croyden. The Bonifaces chuckled again with delight. Long before eight at night everybed belonging to the inns and public-houses in Godstone, East Grinstead, Reigate, etc., was doubly and some trebly filled. Those people whose blunt enabled them to procure beds could not obtain any sleep, for carriages of every description were passing through the above towns all night. Then the swells in their barouches and fours, and the swift-trotting fanciers, all hurried from the metropolis and the road exhibited the bustle of the primest day of Epsom Races."

The Light Post coach, the Alert, the Meteor, the True Blue, the Night Coach, the Royal Eagle, the Royal Clarence, the Life Preserver, the Vivid were some of the famous coaches that made the run between London and Brighton, with their picturesque coachmen "hitting 'em and holding 'em" from the box seat.

Stray bits, these, from the colorful canvas of coaching which for decades spread its allure across England. Its hues are faded now. Long ago there entered the prosaic railroad where travellers ride, as one old "dragsman" expressed it, "by machinery, like bags of cotton and hardware, not as nature intended they should, on pikes with coaches and smart, active cattle."

BRAZILIAN FISHERMEN JOINING CO-OPERATIVES

At the end of 1924 there were 21,050 fishermen, with 9,011 boats, in the 140 co-operative fishing colonies established and fostered by the Brazilian Government, according to information gathered by the International Labor Office of the League of Nations in Geneva. Since 1921 the Federal Government has been promoting more fishing colonies along the coast. Every colony has its own schools and is otherwise favored by the State.

A fishing colony is defined in the decree establishing the system as a group of at least forty fishermen, Brazilian by birth or naturalization, inscribed on the port registers as fishermen, and set up in the zones determined by the Department of Fisheries. The object of this provision is to create a bond of fraternity among the fishermen.

FORTUNE GIVES DOUBLE CHANCE TO DISCOVERER

Erasmus, Transvaal Prospector, Ignored White Specs in Panned Gold.

REALIZED VALUE

Returned to Same Anthills and Found More Precious Platinum.

South African imagination is excited by another Barney Barnato—another prospector whose bitter struggles against hope deferred have all at once and strangely come to a climax in brilliant success.

Adolphe Erasmus, discoverer of the new platinum lode, in the future of which Johannesburg is wildly speculating, really had found this platinum once years before. But as he was looking for yellow, not white, metal, the significance of the find did not then appear to him and he trekked elsewhere. Chance rumors that gold had been unearthed in his old diggings drew him back—and he came upon deposits of platinum, which may alter all South Africa's economic future.

It is a romantic tale of treasure lost and found. The story in the South African Journal of Industries of December, 1923, indicates that chance played its part in the platinum discovery for platinum had never been found before in such soil.

Adolphe Erasmus is a prospector of long standing in the Transvaal. In 1923 he was prospecting for tin when reports reached him of gold finds in the northern district. They interested him, because once he himself had found specks of gold on a farm there and he had often found among the yellow specks a small white "tail" in his pan; but what now concerned him was that gold had been uncovered in paying quantities.

Very often good gold "panning" can be obtained from the man-high antheaps or termite mounds which abound in Africa. Erasmus, therefore, decided to return and delve into them. His new panning of a mound gave him not only a few specks of gold, but a heavy tail of grayish white concentrate that lagged behind the gold in the pan.

Arguing that this was heavier than gold, as otherwise it could not lag behind it, he at once concluded that it was platinum.

He kept up the work. The first platinum, which he found by continuous panning of the antheaps, was in nuggets about the size of a pinhead. Small pieces of float in the antheap soon gave suggestion of the rock in which platinum was to be sought. Then by sheer luck a wonderful panning was got from one of the first samples taken from the outcrop, a loose piece of rock showing visible native platinum.

Thus the existence of rich platinum on the formerly abandoned prospecting lot was proved. The lode was found to traverse a number of farms, and by November, 1923, as many as five companies had acquired rights. The platinum found occurs for the most part in small, well-shaped flattened crystals and in stringers and aggregates of such crystals.

The bulk of the world's platinum has come so far from alluvial deposits derived from dunnities and allied rocks and the so-called black sands. The recent discovery of platinum in a quantity lode in acid country rock extending over a considerable distance is therefore something new and unique.

Stock Speculation Begins.

Naturally, the public was at first skeptical, but soon the platinum company stocks began to go up. About six months ago an automobile with some of the leading Transvaal stock brokers left Johannesburg for the North. On a piece of property belonging to the so-called Cornerhouse, platinum was said to have been found and already speculators were besieging these brokers for information.

The Cornerhouse is the strongest and most powerful combination of gold mines, industrial and commercial enterprises, in the Union of South Africa and has its tentacles everywhere. The shares of this company (its real name is Consolidated Land) had begun to soar and the brokers wanted to "see for themselves" before they put the stock into their clients' hands.

On the macadam road which stretches from Johannesburg to Pretoria the investigating party sped, halting at farm Reitfontein, about ten miles west of Naboomspruit Station.

To the Boers, who principally inhabit that region, the name Reitfontein has appeared significant and almost in the nature of an omen, for the naboom, a tree-like cactus, grows not only in the irrigated parts of South Africa, but also in the desert. While its juice burns and scalds in spite of its innocent milky-white appearance, the tree has always directed the African pioneer to a treasure more valuable even than platinum: wherever a naboom grows, there you may dig for the trekke's most valuable and most sought-after necessity—water.

When the gold experts and the gold share brokers arrived and inspected the find, they were astonished, but apparently convinced—for as soon as they returned to town, the shares of Consolidated Land soared quickly.

MYSTERY

There are plenty of things, it appears, must have wings, for they come and they linger, then go. It is well worth a smile how you have them a while, and they're gone and just where you don't know.

It is well we begin on the mere little pin for its life is a short one at best. It serves you a day, then it passes away into nowhere, to join all the rest.

And then comes to mind any pencil—you'll find that no matter how costly or cheap, one minute they're here; then they just disappear. They're a mighty hard object to keep.

And say, where's the fella who's owned an umbrella, who's managed to keep it for long? It's suddenly borrowed; the owner is sorrowed. Another good rain-stick gone wrong.

I'm inquisitve, so I would sure like to know what the answer to all this can be. Things go, that we know, but just where do they go? It is always a mystery to me.

BLAME CONSERVATIVE GOVERNMENT

Declare Preparations Being Made to Seize Country by the Throat and Compel It to Submit to Plunder — Appeal to British Workers.

Concrete evidence that the Communist International is using the excitement caused by the murder of General Sir Lee Stack, British Sirdar of the Egyptian Army, to stir up anti-British sentiment all over the world is afforded by a pronouncement found in a recent number of the International Press Correspondence, the news sheet of the Communist International published in Vienna. This appeal, signed for the Eastern Bureau of the Communist International by four Asiatic Communist chiefs, including Sen Katayama of Japan and M. N. Roy of India, reads in part as follows:

"Fellow Workers: The Conservative Government of Great Britain renewed its activity by a murderous attack against Egypt. Using the assassination of General Lee Stack as a pretext, the British Conservative Government has taken a decisive step toward the destruction of even that pseudo 'independence' which Egypt was presumed to have. As compensation for the assassination of the General the British Government imposed on Egypt a fine of 500,000 and demanded the severe punishment of those guilty of the assassination.

"In order to instill into the minds of the Sudan population respect for British bayonets several officers and soldiers of the Egyptian and Sudan Army have been hanged and shot by British Generals. This plan of action was devised by Ramsay MacDonald, who mentioned in his letter to General Allenby in October last. The British plunderers desire to utilize the assassination of General Lee Stack as a pretext for carrying out their predatory plans in Egypt and the Sudan.

* * *

"Final preparations are being made to seize Egypt by the throat and compel her to consent to allow herself to be plundered.

"Meanwhile, the leaders of the Egyptian bourgeoisie, together with the landlords, are shamefully capitulating to the imperialist bandits.

"In spite of these traitors the revolutionary national movement will grow and become stronger until the chains of imperialist oppression are completely broken.

"British workers: Ward off the criminal hand of your aristocrats from Egypt! Rectify the terrible crime committed against the Egyptian people by the Government of Ramsay MacDonald. Confound the piratical plans of the Baldwin-Curzon and Chamberlain Government. Compel your leaders to come out actively in defense of the independence of Egypt. Fight against the predatory ultimatum! Form a united front with the Egyptian workers and peasants!

"Workers and peasants of Egypt: Do not despair. Keep a brave heart. The advanced workers of all countries are coming to your aid. Expose the shameful conduct of the Egyptian Government! Unite around your Communist Party! Demand the release of the imprisoned Communists! Demand a determined and irreconcilable struggle against British imperialism for the complete and real independence of Egypt!

"Workers and peasants of all countries: Raise your voices in protest against the British Government's ultimatum! Compel the Colonial pirates to restrain their appetite! Demonstrate your solidarity with the oppressed peoples of the East! Down with the Colonial pirates! Long live the fight for the independence of Egypt! Long live the fighting unity of the toilers of the world!"

DELONG. — In sad and loving memory of our dear son, Carl Delong, who died at the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, June 1st, 1922.

In a shady spot at "Riverside,"
In a grave not far away,
Sleeps dear son, Carl, who died
Three years ago to-day.

We often think of you, dear Carl,
No eye may see us weep,
But many silent tears are shed
When others are asleep.

Friends may think we have forgotten
When at last they see us smile,
But they little know the heartache,
The smile hides all the while.

Death cannot separate us from thee,
"dear Carl,"
Nor sever the cords of love;
He is just resting sweetly with Jesus
In that beautiful home above.

BIGGEST ENTRY IN LADIES' GOLF

Hot Weather Affects Play in Ontario Golf Championships Play.

HIGH CARDS.

TORONTO, June 1 (Canadian Press).—The Seventeenth Ontario Ladies' Golf Championship opened at Weston this morning, with the largest entry list in the history of the event. Of 124 players an even hundred represent Toronto clubs. Weather conditions are affecting the play, the temperature being the highest of the season to date, and there is a strong west wind blowing which is causing a number of penalty strokes. The first sixteen players will compose the championship fight, and judging by the scores turned in by the low handicap players, who were first away, the cards will be high. It is likely that players with 103 or under will get in match play for title. Miss Ada MacKenzie, of Mississaugua, is leading with 87, being seven strokes in front of the defending champion, Mrs. Gordon Ferrie of Hamilton.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY PASSES TO HISTORY

Fifty-first Is Last Gathering of Present Constitution of Church.

TORONTO, June 1 Canadian Press).—The fifty-first and last general Assembly of the Presbyterian Church as constituted at present will open in College Street Church here at eight o'clock on Wednesday evening with the election of a new moderator, who will be, it is expected, Rev. George C. Pidgeon, of Toronto.
The present moderator, Rev. Principal Clarence MacKinnon, will then present his report. The final sederunt of the Assembly will be held on Tuesday afternoon, June 9, and the following day the church enters the United Church of Canada.

DENIES RUMOR.

Lieutenant Governor of Ontario Will Not Be Leader of Opposition.

BRANTFORD, June 1.—(Canadian Press).—Referring to a statement in the Toronto Globe this morning that he was slated to succeed Meighen as leader of the Conservative party, Colonel Harry Cockshutt, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, commented: "Merely newspaper talk. It is not correct."

WILL MEDIATE.

Hon. James Murdock Announces He Will Act If Permitted.

GLACE BAY, N.S., June 1 (Canadian Press)—Provided that officials of the British Empire Steel Corporation will acquiesce to his acting as mediator in the wage dispute between the corporation and its employees, Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor, has consented to the request of the United Mine Workers' Executive to use his good offices in bringing about a settlement of the coal strike which has entered its fourth month.

OLYMPIC RULES.

Once Professional Always Professional, Is Decision of Congress.

PRAGUE, June 1 (Canadian Press)—Any athlete who is, or has been, knowingly a professional in any sport cannot compete in the Olympic games was the decision reached today by the Olympic technical congress. Congress laid down the general principle, "once a professional, always a professional."

FINANCIAL NEWS.

Serious Crop Situation Send Wheat Prices Up

CHICAGO, June 1. Canadian Press Decidedly higher prices for wheat resulted to-day from reports by experts emphasizing the serious aspects of the crop situation. One authority pointed out that in North Central Illinois there had been no material rainfall for five months and said that the wheat was heading short and that the crop condition was 15 points below the prospect a month back.
Opening prices ¼ to 1 7-8c higher; July $1.63 3-4 to $1.65½, and September $1.61 3-4 to $1.62, were followed by slight sag and then by a rise to $1.65½ for July and $1.62 5-8c for September.
Corn and oats were responsive to wheat strength. After opening unchanged to 3-8c off, Sept. $1.18 to $1.18¼, the corn market scored moderate gains all around. Oats started unchanged to 1 5-8c higher; Sept 49¼ to 50 1-2c and then continued firm.
Notwithstanding the lower quotations on hogs, the provision market was firm, sympathizing with the action of grain.

Wall Street Irregularities Failed To Halt Climbers

NEW YORK, June 1. — Minor irregularities marked the course of the forenoon trading in Wall street but the prospects for a good summer business and reports of continued large earnings continued to play favorably upon speculative sentiment. The uneven movement of prices however indicated that buying was of a highly selective character. Profit taking caused recessions in American Can, Mack Truck, Baldwin, Willys-Overland, and some of the public utility issues, but failed to halt the general upward movement. Absorption of local traction stocks continued on a large scale and bullish demonstrations took place in international Telephone, which jumped 6½ points before noon and in Maxwell, Woolworth, Frisco, Commercial Solvents and U. S. Distributing issues which rose 2 to 3 points. General Electric extended its gains to 5 points. Call money received at 4 per cent.

Toronto Trading Quiet With Con. Smelters Weak

TORONTO, June 1.—(Canadian Press).—Trading on Toronto Stock Exchange was quiet this morning. Cons. Smelters, opening at 82½, showed considerable weakness, dropping 2¼ points to 79 3-4, while B. C. Fishing was a close second with a decline of two points from 42 to 40. Twin City also proved weak, dropping one point to 67½ from yesterday's close. Brazilian advanced ¼ to 53, while Commerce remained steady at 200½. City Dairy advanced from 80 to 80 7-8, with very little of this stock changing hands.

SOCIAL SCIENCE YET IN STATE OF DIAGNOSIS

Rotarians Are Urged to Study the Causes of Poverty.

DR. BLAGRAVE SPEAKS

Lack of Ambition is Advanced as One Important Reason.

That it is the duty of the members of such organizations as the Rotary Club to study the causes of poverty and to collect all the criteria and data available in connection with the under-privileged was the message of Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave, of St. John's Church, in a most interesting address at the weekly luncheon of the Peterboro Rotary Club to-day.
The speaker pointed out that social science was in a state of diagnosis at the present time. Just as it was impossible for a doctor to diagnose a case unless he had the medical history to guide him, it was impossible to find a cure or a remedy for distress conditions unless the causes were first located, and Rev. Dr. Blagrave advised the Rotarians to interest themselves in that phase of the problem.
He advanced as some of the causes of poverty, first, lack of ambition, secondly, the feeble-minded, and third, industrial machinery. Lack of ambition, he declared, was found in every strata of society, and he warned his hearers that the over-privileged boy, the youngster who was over-indulged by his parents, was about as badly handicapped as was the under-privileged boy.
The feeble-minded, of which there were 60,000 in Ontario, ten per cent. of whom had to be taken care of and the rest of whom could be classed as high-grade morons, were another cause of poverty and a menace.
The machinized age of industry did its part by killing initiative and making useless those instincts that had come down to us from the past. The boredom of one operation had a demoralizing effect on many workers as this could be overcome perhaps by giving the worker a share in the profits.
In conclusion, Dr. Blagrave declared that there should be no poverty in Canada, and he urged Rotarians to develop a spirit of optimism.
Rotarian Bert Rose, of Windsor, formerly of Peterboro, was a visitor at to-day's meeting, which was presided over by President John H. Seels.

FOREIGN REDS AT CONFERENCE

Despite British Government's Announcement That Country is Closed to Them.

LEFT EARLY.

GLASGOW, June 1 (Canadian Press).—Two foreign Communists appeared on the platform today at the opening session of the annual conference of the Communist party of Great Britain, despite the announced intention of the British Government to allow no foreign radicals to enter the country for this meeting. The two foreigners, Dr. Stoecker, of Germany, and Mademoiselle Marcell Aval representing the French Communist party entered the country surreptitiously. After they delivered fraternal greetings they left the meeting.

TO INVESTIGATE GASOLINE PRICE

Premier Ferguson Announces Appointment of G. T. Clarkson, an Auditor.

MUNICIPALITIES ASK.

TORONTO, June 1. — (Canadian Press).—Premier Ferguson announced this afternoon that G. T. Clarkson, of the firm of Clarkson, Gordon and Dilworth, auditors, had been appointed by the Government to make an investigation into the cost of gasoline in Ontario and the apparent inequalities in prices existing in Ontario and United States. The appointment of Mr. Clarkson follows the request of several municipalities to have the basic cost of this fuel determined:

REV. BEN SPENCE DENOUNCES BEER

Says People Do Not Know Full Significance of Political Atrocity.

STRATFORD, June 1 (Canadian Press).—The province of Ontario does not yet realize the full significance of the political atrocity which the government and the legislature has perpetrated in their 4.4 beer policy." So declared Rev. Ben Spence in an address to United Church people here last night. "They are undoing the work of a generation in more senses than one."

OBITUARY.

The death occurred this morning, at her late residence, 49 Alfred Street, of Miss Annie Eliza Timm, after a long illness. Miss Timm attended and was a member of All Saints' Anglican Church. The funeral will take place at All Saints' Church, on Tuesday, conducted by Rev. J. A. Paterson, at 11 a.m., proceeding to the noon train for Montreal, where the body will be interred. There are left to mourn her loss, her father and five brothers: Charles Henry ofMontreal, Wilfred, Peterborough; Ernest, Fred, Lawrence, Montreal. Also two sisters: Mrs Stevens, of Parent, Quebec; Mrs. Melton, Peterborough.

ORENZO HUMBER

The remains of the late Orenzo Humber were laid to rest this afternoon in Little Lake Cemetery; service at the home being conducted by Rev. W. Harold Young. The deceased immigrated from the Isle of Wight seventy-eight years ago accompanied by his parents, who settled in the town of Bowmanville. After living there for a few years he decided to seek a place in which to settle. Coming to Peterborough at the age of twelve years, he has lived here ever since, with the exception of a few temporary removals. His ambition was gratified to the extent of being one of the citizens who helped build up the town of Peterborough along architectural lines, when not employed otherwise.
He was esteemed by the potential lumber magnates of Ontario for his efficient ability in the operation and installation of all classes of machinery. He was a capable foreman of many large lumber mills throughout the province, having had charge of the Dickson Co. Mills where operated, also of the McDonald Co.'s Mills of this city.
He had the responsiblity of directing the erection of the concrete forms for the Lift Lock, and other details in connection with it.
He was a man of sterling worth, having a capable mind and capable hands, possessing a genial disposition and a faithful personality which won for him a host of friends.
The pall bearers were chosen from the tenants occupying his houses.

FACTS ABOUT OPTOMETRY
By Trying To Do Without Glasses
When you should wear them you harm your eyes. But even that isn't so of it, nor the worst of it. Strained eyes have a bad habit of upsetting things generally. There are many conditions, outside of the eyes, that eye strain causes. And proper glasses remove them all, almost at once in many cases. We find and eliminate the cause of eye strain.

BRITISH FREIGHTER BEACHED IN FLAMES AFTER THREE-DAY RACE FOR LIFE AGAINST FIRE IN HOLD

Entered New York Harbor in Cloud of Smoke—Fire Boats Respond.

FIRE CONTROLLED

Crew of 39 Men Fought Blaze From Friday Until Sunday.

NEW YORK, June 2.—(Canadian Press).—Beached on the Red Hook flats off South Brooklyn, the British freighter Fenchurch was still smoking last night after a three-day race for life against fire which broke out in her hold Friday night while 500 miles at sea.

Although the Fenchurch sent out S.O.S. calls when the fire broke out which brought the freighter Chedale to her assistance, officers decided to bring the ship in under her own power. Throughout Friday night and Saturday 39 weary men stood to their posts holding the fire down as best they could while all possible speed was made for shore.

As the ship neared New York on Sunday night the fire was still raging, and when she entered the harbor smoke was pouring from her in great clouds. Tugs were waiting at quarantine, and the burning ship was towed to the flats, where it was beached early Monday.

Fire boats were called, and all day poured tons of water into the burning holds. Last night it was believed that the fire was under control, but it was still burning, and plans were made to keep streams of water pouring into it all night.

DENY AMUNDSEN RUMOR.

No Message Received From Polar Party.

OSLO, Norway, June 2.—(Canadian Press).—The Norwegian Aeronautical Association last night issued a denial of the rumors that Captain Raold Amundsen had returned to Spitzbergen from his Polar expedition. The association announced that a message had been received from the supply ship Hobby that the situation was unchanged.

Rumors of Amundsen's return have been current since early Sunday, but bulletins were posted in the windows of the newspaper offices declaring they were untrue. Early inquiries among the relatives of the members of the expedition failed to confirm the report in any way.

May Return By Land.

LONDON, June 2. — (Canadian Press).—The feeling increased here Monday, the eleventh day since the Amundsen-Ellsworth expedition hopped off in two flying boats from King's Bay, Spitzbergen, for the North Pole, that the explorers would not return by air but had been forced to undertake a long, weary land trek back toward civilization.

DEPOSITORS OF HOME BANK MAY GET 65 PER CENT.

Have Received Already 25 Per Cent. of Deposits From Sale of Assets.

PAID BY BANKERS

Another 35 Per Cent If Government Grants $5,450,000 for Relief.

OTTAWA, June 2. — (Canadian Press). — That depositors in the Home Bank will only receive from 60 to 65 per cent. of their holdings, even if the Government grant them the sum of $5,450,000, was the statement made Monday by G. G. Henderson, Mayor of Fernie, B.C., and one of the inspectors appointed by the liquidators of the refunct bank. Mr. Henderson is in the city in connection with claims of local depositors.

He pointed out that the statement had been made that the Government had already advanced moneys to the depositors, when as a matter of fact not a cent had yet been received from the Government.

Up to date, the only amount received was 25 per cent. of the value of the deposits from realization of the bank's assets. This had been advanced by the Canadian Bankers' Association, and most of it had been paid back to that institution from the collectable assets of the bank.

If the Government advanced $5,450,000 it would represent another 35 per cent. of the whole deposits, or 60 per cent. in all. If the depositors were able to collect another five per cent. from the assets of the bank he thought they would be very lucky.

MURDOCK REFUSED AS INTERMEDIARY

GLACE BAY, N.S., June 2.—(Canadian Press).—The B. E. Steel Corporation has refused to be a party to a proposal that the Minister of Labor, the Hon. James Murdock, act as intermediary in the miners' wage dispute in district No. 26, United Mine Workers, Vice-President McLurg stated yesterday.

CHIEF NEWHALL STOLE MARCH ON OFFICERS AND CITIZENS

Popular Police Chief Married in Toronto on Saturday.

ANNOUNCED TO-DAY.

Honeymoon in Winnipeg at Annual Convention of Police Chiefs.

Chief of Police Samuel Newhall stole a march on his officers and associates on Saturday, when he took a life partner. The wedding took place in Toronto and the happy bride was Mrs. John Holmes. The chief and his bride proceeded to Winnipeg, where the Police Chiefs' Convention is being held this year.

The wedding was announced before court opened this morning, Magistrate Langley breaking the news in a short address in which he expressed the pleasure and congratulations of the police department and the citizens in the steps taken by the chief. His words were echoed by Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, and J. A. O'Brien.

FOUR FIRES IN ONE TOWNSHIP AT SAME TIME

Fenelon Farmers Lost Animals and Implements From Lightning Storm.

SOME INSURANCE.

Not Sufficient Protection Carried to Cover Entire Loss.

LINDSAY, Ont., June 2.—(Special.)—The Township of Fenelon, Victoria County, was the scene this morning at four o'clock of four disastrous fires as a result of lightning. The barn of Mr. Elwood Hewie, near Cameron village, was destroyed. Mr. Hewie saved his auto and fowl, but a number of implements were burned.

A barn on the McNevin farm, at Zion, leased by Mr. Newton Wilson, was destroyed, together with six cows, implements, harness and fowl.

At Cameron village two barns were destroyed at the same time. Mr. Mitchell Herron, whose son was drowned recently at Peterborough, lost his barn, all his hay and grain and some implements. Bert Northey suffered the loss of his barn, four calves, gain, implements and poultry. All carried insurance, which will not cover their loss.

NO BEER SOLD AT RAILWAY STATIONS

Travellers Are Complaining Because 4.4 Cannot Be Obtained.

TORONTO, June 2 (Canadian Press).—The railway companies are not serving 4.4 beer at their station restaurants and some complaints about this have been made by travellers. Attorney General W. F. Nickle explains that the transportation companies have not been discriminated against in the matter of licenses, but restaurant licenses have not yet been dealt with by the department.

MACHINE GUNS USED BY POLICE IN STREET RIOT

Rioting Students Fired On Foreigners in Streets of Shanghai.

MARINES LANDED.

Trouble Arose From Treatment of Chinese Strikers By Japanese.

SHANGHAI, June 2 (Canadian Press).—Chinese student riot participants today fired from the housetops in three directions into Shanghai streets upon a unit of the United States Volunteer Corps, shooting Thomas G. McMartin, dentist, in the back, and killing the horse upon which he was riding.

British, Italian and United States marine forces landed in Shanghai this afternoon and are quartered ashore tonight.

Machine guns opened fire on mobs of Chinese students as demonstrations were continued against the treatment of the Chinese workers on strike at the Japanese spinning mills here. Machine guns were brought into play in the Thibet-Nanking Road, one of the principal thoroughfares in the central district of Shanghai.

Cabinet Protests.

PEKING, June 2 (Canadian Press).—The cabinet today decided to instruct the foreign office to prepare a note of protest to the diplomatic corps against the recent firing upon Shanghai rioters by Sikh police there.

The cabinet decided to appoint high commissioners to proceed to Shanghai to investigate the situation, it was announced.

OFFICERS SHOT DRUG SMUGGLER NEAR BOUNDARY

Investigation Into Shooting By U. S. Agent Who is Held.

IN WHICH COUNTRY?

It is Not Known Whether Victim Was in Canada or States.

ISLAND POND, Vermont, June 2 (Canadian Press) — Canadian and United States officials today were investigating the shooting of Joseph Amadee Bilodeau, of Sherbrooke, Que., who was killed early Saturday morning while fleeing from United States narcotic agents on the international boundary line near Canaan. While Edward Murtz of Boston, a federal narcotic agent is held on a charge of manslaughter and Robert Price of Sherbrooke and Louis Nadeau of Canaan, companions of Bilodeau are on $1,000 bonds for hearing later on charges of possessing narcotics, officers of the two neighboring countries threshed out the problem whether Bilodeau was shot on Canadian or United States soil.

The agents asserted that they were on the United States side of the boundary when they questioned Bilodeau and his companions but admit that only a few feet separated them from Canada. The question has arisen as to the position of Bilodeau at the time the shot was fired.

NOT COMMUNISM BUT ITS CAUSES STIRS BALDWIN

British Premier Refuses to "Waste Time" Denouncing the "Red" Element.

URGES EFFICIENCY

Directs Special Appeal to Employers for Accord With Labor.

LONDON, June 2. — (Canadian Press).—Premier Stanley Baldwin is not worrying over Socialist movements, and he does not intend to "waste his time" denouncing them. Instead, he is going to attack the conditions and evils which produce such movements. This was his stated policy Monday when he addressed fifty thousand people at a victory rally at Welbeck Abbey, Nottinghamshire, and expressed his indifference to Conservative critics who complained that he did not sufficiently denounce his opponents.

The Prime Minister made a strong appeal for an all-round increase of ten per cent. in industrial efficiency and announced his intention to appoint a permanent food council to carry out the recommendations of the Royal Commission headed by Sir Auckland Geddes, which recently investigated food prices in Great Britain.

Industrial Harmony.

He pointed out with much pleasure that his appeals for an industrial truce had resulted in the representatives of the employers and the workers sitting down together and facing realities as never before. Yesterday he urged still further cooperation and invited the employers to seek a more intimate relationship with the workers. They should also, he said, seek brains and new ideas for their organizations wherever they existed. To the workers he suggested that they approach the employers in a broader spirit and take them more and more into consultation regarding routine management and working conditions.

The largest turbine ever built recently was set up at Niagara Falls. In a year it can do the same amount of work as 9,000,000 men.

EMPLOY DISABLED VETS.

British Legion Favors Preference For Ex-Service Men.

LONDON, June 2.—(Canadian Press Cable).—The British Legion conference, of which Earl Haig is chairman and which was opened in Queen's Hall on Saturday last, yesterday passed a resolution in favor of compelling employers to employ disabled ex-service men wherever possible, and in favor of preventing the displacement of ex-service men by female clerical assistants in government offices. The resolution also condemned the action of certain church bodies which were said to be employing ex-service men on work at starvation wages.

Earl Haig read a telegram from the King thanking the Legion for its loyal message to his Majesty.

It was decided by a large majority to hold the next conference also in London.

COUNCIL FROWNS ON BATHING AT CITY BEACHES ON SUNDAY AND WITHDRAWS CARETAKERS

Annual Debate Ends This Year in Victory for Antis.

CAN'T STOP BATHING

Alderman McIntyre Moves Amendment and Would Chase Bathers Away.

After three years of Sunday bathing with their three regular discussions of the subject in council, the antis carried their point last night and did away with protection at the beaches on Sundays this year. The annual debate was opened by Aldermen Phelan last night just when it was time to extend the sitting a second half hour, and he proposed that the beaches be open on Sunday and that a caretaker be provided them by the City Council. "It is only right that bathers should have the privilege of using the beaches," he said, "when those who are fortunate enough to belong to the golf club can go there to enjoy their Sunday play." Alderman Phelan also pointed out that whether there is a care taker at the beaches or not the people will go there to swim, and if there is an accident because a caretaker has not been provided, then the council will be blamed.

Mayor Turner thought the council should not be forced to have supervision there on Sunday. It accepts the responsibility six days a week, and should not be compelled to go against its wishes, whatever they may be.

Alderman McIntyre moved in amendment that the bathing beaches be closed on Sundays. In addition he would have the police there to chase away all attempting to use the beaches on Sunday.

Aderman Turner pointed out that while on the first two years that Sunday bathing was permitted with the Council's approval there was no trouble, certain rowdiness had developed last year which took away the savor. He thought it would be easy to publish a notice of the hours and days when protection is provided, relieving the council of responsibility at other times.

Alderman Denne seconded the motion and Alderman Greene seconded the amendment. "The poor man should have a chance on his day off," Alderman Denne said.

Alderman Phelan expressed the fear that the city would obtain a bad name for prohibiting Sunday bathing.

The amendment declaring there would be no care taker at the bathing beaches on Sundays, and that the dressing rooms would not be open, carried. Alderman Jones, Turner, Hancock, McIntyre, Crowe and Greene voted to support it.

Alderman Phelan closed the incident by asking His Worshirp whether it is permissible to visit the beaches for the purpose of throwing stones in the water.

Life Saving

Alderman Crowe suggested that there may be need for more life saving apparatus at some of the locks, and a letter will be sent to the proper authorities suggesting that more apparatus be placed at the scene of the recent fatality. Alderman Turner reported that the bathing beaches are equipped with boats, pike poles and life belts.

Plan Thirteen Concerts In Parks During Summer

The following are the band concerts for the summer season as arranged at a conference between the Parks Committee of the City Council and the various musical organizations. All the concerts will be given in Victoria park except where otherwise stated. None is scheduled for a Sunday.

Regimental Band:
June 12; June 19 (massed concert).
July 3; July 17 (King Edward park).
August 7; August 21; August 28.

TO SEND PLANES INTO NORTH TO BEGIN SEARCH

Two Seaplanes Will Leave on Ship Ingertre on Friday.

GOVERNMENT ACTS.

Chose Ships Fitted With Wireless For Search of Explorer.

OSLO, Norway, June 2 (Canadian Press).—The Norwegian Government has decided to send two seaplanes to the Arctic preparatory to a search for the Amundsen flying expedition to the North Pole, which started from Spitzbergen, May 21.

It was announced today that the Government had selected the ship Ingertre to transport the two seaplanes towards the Arctic when they will undertake the search for the explorers.

The Ingertre, a 4,700-ton ship fitted with wireless, is expected to reach Horten, Norway, on Christianafjord, 32 miles south of Oslo, today. She will probably sail for Spitzbergen Friday.

AMEND ACTS TO GAIN CONTROL

Department Has Better Supervision Over Trade in Farm Produce.

CONTROL EXPORTS.

OTTAWA, June 2 (Canadian Press).—Third reading was given in the House of Commons last night to bills amending the Fruit Act and Livestock and Livestock Products Act. The amendments to the Fruit Act abolished the grades on certain fruit and established regulations respecting grading for exportation. The amendments respecting livestock were to facilitate business in the stock yards by referring all money received on account of sales for livestock sold by a commission firm to be deposited in a shipper's livestock commission account in a chartered bank. Other amendments were to provide for the licensing of egg buyers and exporters of live stock, meat, poultry, eggs and wool in order that the department of agriculture might secure supervision as to the manner in which these products were shipped from Canada.

HEAT TAKES TOLL.

Warm Spell and Storm Killed Seventeen People in Middle West.

CHICAGO, June 2 (Canadian Press)—Seventeen persons dead and nearly a score seriously injured was the toll today of the heat wave and the ensuing wind and electrical storms which hit the Middle West.

WEATHER

Yesterday's high point was 87 degrees. This was within 2 degrees of the warmest that we had last summer, the thermometer failing to reach 90 degrees during the whole season. A succession of thunderstorms during the evening and night gave a total rainfall of .55 of an inch. The ground should now be thoroughly moist, and if warm weather follows the growth should be rapid.—W. P.

FIRE CHIEF TO HAVE NEW CAR COSTING $1,700, SAYS COUNCIL

Alderman McIntyre Fights Proposal and Recalls Estimate Debate.

CARRIED 5 TO 4

Safety of Chief and Men Cited as Need for Heavy Auto.

Considerable heat developed in the discussion at last night's City Council meeting on the proposal to purchase a new car for the Chief of the Fire Department, Alderman McIntyre pointing out that he had been expressly informed that there would be no money remaining after other essentials were obtained. He warned the Fire Water and Light Committee chairman (Alderman Jones) that there might be many contingencies to meet before the end of the year.

The proposal was passed, and Chief Gimblett will have a new car, costing $1,700 with the allowance of the old car deducted.

Alderman McIntyre said the estimates drawn a few months ago were supposed to be rock bottom figures, yet this makes the second car purchased out of the appropriation. "They are making children of the Council," he declared. After fighting to have this particular estimate trimmed $2,000 he had been told that everything set out was absolutely necessary to the efficiency of the department. Those things were not being purchased and the money now to be spent on two cars that did not appear in the estimate, Alderman McIntyre said.

He admitted the chief needs a car, but thought a lighter car would suit. The fire fighting preparedness of the department should not suffer through the proposed purchase.

When the authority to purchase had been given by a vote of 5 to 4, a second item of business was disposed of and then Alderman McIntyre called for the yeas and nays. He was told, however, that he was out of order, the matter having been closed and passed by.

LARGE FELT HAT.

There is an attempt being made to launch the very large felt hat in bright colors. It is very attractive with mannish suits and topcoats.

Government Loans Falling Due This Year $164,408,633

OTTAWA, June 2—(Canadian Press). The refunding of maturing liabilities is provided for in a resolution introduced in the House of Commons Monday by Hon. J. A. Robb, Acting Minister of Finance. Mr. Robb explained that the Government would this year have to meet five maturing loans, the total of which was $164,408,633.33.

On July 1, $60,800 would be required; on August 12, $24,333,333 would fall due; on September 15, $90,000,000; on October 15, $8,000,000, and on December 1, $42,014,500.

The House went into committee on the resolution which carried.

A bill based on it was given first reading.

What The Council Did

Passed a by-law setting a tax of $25 a year on every gasoline pump and $5 on every automatic air pump on city property, to become effective July 1.

In the same by-law provided that all applicants and operators must sign agreements accepting all liability in connection with the pumps.

Granted permission to Maple Leaf Shows to pitch on the part of James Stevenson Park outside the fence from June 8 to June 13.

Gave the City Engineer authority to appoint an inspector at the sewage disposal plant.

Accepted the proposal to put a wig-wag signal at Donegal street crossing, but will ask to have the bell omitted.

Gave Alderman Turner authority to engage a caretaker for Lake street bathing beach.

Visited and declared open the Made-in-Peterborough Fair.

Decided to keep the bathing beaches closed on Sundays so far as protection is concerned.

Authorized the purchase of a new car for the Fire Chief.

GASOLINE PUMPS ARE TAXED $25 A YEAR ON JULY FIRST BY ORDER OF CITY COUNCIL

Automatic Dial Air Pumps Must Pay License Fee of $5 a Year.

LONG BATTLE

Proposal to Demand Removal Was Not Considered in Order.

As a mark of their disapproval of the cluttering up of the city's sidewalks more than as a means to raising money, the members of the City Council last night passed a by-law imposing a license fee of $25 a year on every gasoline pump and $5 a year on every automatic dial air pump on city property. The same by-law provided that applicants for licenses must sign agreements undertaking to indemnify the city against any action brought by reason of an injury sustained through the presence of the pumps on the street. The by-law comes into effect on July 1. It does not avoid the citys' right to order removal of the gasoline tanks at any time, but in the event of this order being given during the life of a license, a refund is provided for pro rata.

Alderman Fife introduced the by-law, naming the rates that were finally adopted, but Alderman Turner was quick to suggest increasing the proposed fee to $50. Alderman Greene supported him.

Alderman Hancock thought the whole scheme of licensing pumps a mistake, and declared all gasoline pumps should be moved back off the street on to private property. He could not see why, he said, if gasoline pumps are allowed on the sidewalks, the banana man should not set his produce out there too.

City Solicitor Joseph Wearing reported that in his opinion the city

Dog Catcher Has Trouble Catching and Holding 'Em

That the dog catcher be given authority to shoot dogs on the street without the formality of locking them up in the pound first was the startling proposal of Alderman Joseph Crowe at last night's meeting of the City Council after the dog catcher had unfolded a tale of woe. Not only, apparently, did the dog catcher miss an aristocratic name, but now even the dogs are turning him down, and he complained that they are too hard to catch. His Worship suggested the use of a net, but even this, the official said, would not reach a dog that persisted in keeping fifty feet in front of his pursuer.

And that is not all, or even the worst. After he had stalked, caught, and safely locked up a dog, someone on Sunday broke into the kennel at the pound and set the dog free. And the miscreant even carried off the lock.

Mr. Lytle was present as a deputation of one to protest the methods he said the dog catcher uses to add to his string. While the dog catcher is endeavouring to entice household pets of good pedigree from their lawns, Mr. Lytle said, five or six mongrels are chasing one another around the door of the police station without being disturbed.

The dog catcher was dismissed with Mayor Turner's exhortation to do his best. His Worship said Alderman Crowe's proposal to allow the official to snipe at dogs on the street entailed too much danger to life to be practicable, and the City Solicitor remarked that shooting within the city limits is illegal.

MADE IN PETERBOROUGH FAIR

To a rattling salvo of thunder claps and an outside illumination by electricity that surpassed anything the directors in charge might have hoped for, the Made-in-Peterboro Fair opened last night with what might be said to be a real bang. While Mayor Turner spoke the opening words, rain rattled on the heavy roof, thunder provided a loud accompaniment and lightning flashed through the many windows. The crowd, however, was not as sparse as might have been anticipated on such a very bad night. It was not anything to boast of, but those who came seemed to enjoy themselves immensely.

It would be hard for anyone to fail to enjoy this Fair, which is something unique in the history of the city. It fully lives up to, and even surpasses, any expectations that might have been entertained as to its real worth. The old Motor Show, in its palmiest days, could scarcely hold a candle to this splendid Fair. It certainly marks an era in the community development of the city and demonstrates conclusively just what can be done in a good cause when every factor puts a collective shoulder to the wheel and works co-operatively for a good cause.

The faces of the directors were not long last evening, notwithstanding the bad weather. They had no reason to be. Owing to the extensive ticket-selling campaign, the Made-in-Peterboro Fair opened with a tidy balance of over two thousand dollars to its credit, assuring financial success right from the start. The orange and black sign over the front door that beckons the way to the interior is a cheerful augury of the spirit that animates the Fair.

Looking at the massed booths from either of the upper galleries gives an observer the best impression of the ensemble. The colorings are brilliant and gorgeous, the arrangement of articles on view is artistic and effective, and the extra lighting put in makes for a very bright interior. A note of patriotic fervor is injected into the scene by the multiplicity of flags that adorn every available space. Huge flags are draped on the walls; there are flags, large or small, in nearly every booth, and the upper area of the hall is criss-crossed with countless strings of gay-hued pennants.

The booths are arranged in the kermesse, or street fair, pattern. There are aisles along either wall and at either side of the single line of booths that fills the central space. Flanking these, north and south, are double tiers of booths, making a total of upwards of seventy of the enclosures. When one realizes that an extraordinary amount of care and attention and skilful work has been lavished on each single section, one can grasp some idea of the general effect, an outstanding item of which is the good taste of the combined colorings.

The western upper gallery has been attractively decorated with evergreen boughs down its entire length, interspersed with colored strings of artificicial flowers.

In the annex at the western end also are the amusement centres which had a fairly large patronage last night. These include a miniature bowling alley, a couple of dart games, a "hit the nigger" ball game, and some of those popular stunts in which good marksmanship is rewarded by the donation of a shining piece of kitchen ware.

Against the west wall is arranged a beautiful display of pictures from the Roy Studio, with velvet hangings as a background. Directly beside these are several hooked and braided rugs, the work of Mrs. C. H. Reid, and the little inlaid piece, Shakespeare's House, done by Mr. Edward Courtney, who also shows a dainty cabinet in dark wood.

The Peterboro Canoe Company has an exhibit here of its wares, in four beautiful canoes, arranged in tier fashion, a motor launch, and a display of snowshoes, skis and toboggans. The Canadian Canoe Company's green-bottomed canoes are a feature at the other side, and between the two, facing the west wall, is an artistic little section in purple and white, dedicated to "The Churches of Peterboro," with the motto, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto me," and a purple cross flanked by evergreens as its sole, very effective, arrangement.

Topping this long line of central booths, to add a little touch of extra adornment, are orange and white ornaments, and a special feature of the whole Fair is the system of marking the booths by individual signs. These are overhead, swinging affairs in the pennant fashion, done in deep black with gold lettering. They are just another item in the extremely artistic effect of the whole interior, and an evidence of the minute attention lavished on the details which go to make up a satisfactory and interesting whole.

Messrs. Miller, Powell and Company, in a section done in black and white crisscross pattern, with round colored ball lights as an overhead fringe, show electric stoves and ranges; the De Laval Company, Limited, arrange milkers and separators against a gay background of flags, with small flags as decorations; Messrs. Grant and Thorpe, in a double space, exhibit electric fans and induction motors, electric stoves and washers, and a cooling coil for refrigerators, in a white, red and green interior that is enlivened by the representation of the two old-time gentlemen examining a modern electric lamp.

The Gallagher Remedies, Limited, have a cool and attractive section, done in the blue and white characteristic of their herbal remedies, with wide banding of the two colors on the walls; the Peterboro Business College, in glistening red, with numerous devices on view to obviate office labor, are offering a clothes' brush premium to anyone supplying the name of a prospective pupil; the Peterboro Lumber Company exhibit doors and samples of roofings against a patriotic background of red, white and blue; the Peter Hamilton Company show the steel plows that make the backbone of the agricultural industry, with deep blue decorations; the Nugent Drug Company have a display of their own healing preparations, in a pretty yellow and white interior, and the Peterboro Paper Box Company use a checkerboard effect in dark blue and white for their display of pretty colored and plain boxes. Next door is the Imperial Oil Company's section, with auto polishes and greases arranged in effective style; the Ontario Marble Company's white section with a huge slab of polished marble, and at the corner is the double booth of the Quaker Oats Company, in red, white and blue, with girl attendants in white. Here are chick feeds and Quaker products of many sorts, with a device showing the puffing of rice and a pen of Gerald Wood's prize chickens.

Progressing down the central aisle one finds Bond's Drug Store exhibit, done in striking effect with red, curtained counter front, bordered in "French roll" effect with blue and white, with huge V's of red and white on the blue walls and fringes of white crepe paper. "Aids to feminine charm" and kodak's and thermos bottles are on display here.

What can be done with such a strictly utilitarian product as leather is demonstrated conclusively in the section devoted to Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, Son and Company's exhibit. Polished leathers make the hangings, with a central decoration of orange artificial flowers and a display of the boots and shoes that may be made from these skins.

Probably the most striking section of the entire exhibit is that devoted to the Life Underwriters' Association of Peterboro. A large double section is filled with the solar, "setting sun" effect done in deep blue, with a black front and an upper rim of deep red rosettes. Centrally located is a girl's torso in white, its hand raised in benediction over a presumably, insured small bungalow.

Messrs. Wm. Lech and Sons, Limited, have furs of all sorts, nicely displayed, with a chilly ittle polar

STORMS RAGED OVER DISTRICT THROUGH NIGHT

Barn Burned With Considerable Stock Near Millbrook.

CALVES KILLED.

High Wind Blew Fences and Trees Down in Douro.

MILLBROOK, June 2. — The barn owned by David Armstrong was burned when struck by lightning about 8.30 o'clock last evening.

There were eight thoroughbred pigs burned and a number of poultry; also all the wheat stored in the barn, and several implements.

Another barn nearer the house also caught fire but was saved, thus saving the house also. The neighbors were promptly on hand to assist, and the rain helped a great deal to extinguish the fire. There is some insurance but not sufficient to cover the loss.

BARN STRUCK.

DOURO, June 2. — The storm which raged in Douro last night did not cause any fires. The barn of Wm. McKeever was struck at the gable end but did not catch fire, as the lightning ran down the eavetrough. The horses and poultry were uninjured. This occurred at five a.m. this morning.

FOUR CALVES KILLED.

WARSAW, June 2 — There was a terrific storm in Warsaw last night and Edward Leahy lost four calves, which were struck by lightning.

The wind blew a number of fences down, in some places the rails being blown right into the road.

A large tree was blown down across the road in the first conces-

CAMPBELLFORD TOWN COUNCIL.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 2.—The Town Council came to a deadlock last night over the construction of the sewer on Market Street and Oliver Road, the issue being whether this work should be done by contract or by day labor, the latter plan having been followed with the other sewers put in during the past two years. Some time ago it was decided by the Council to ask for tenders for this sewer as the work was regarded as comparatively easy owing to the absence of rock.

Two tenders were opened last night, both from local men. Henry Redden's bid was for $3,985.00, the town to supply the tile.

John Hall submitted a tender, offering to supply everything, tile included, for $4,638.00, or for $3,513 if the town furnished the tile. Mr. Hall backed up his tender with a marked cheque for $350.

Councillor Cole stated that he had secured an estimate from Street Superintendent Fox, under whose supervision the other sewers have been built by day labor, and who has completed every one of them under the engineer's estimate. Mr. Fox was of the opinion that the town could construct the new sewer for $4,740, including the engineer's services, and putting the roadway in shape after the main part of the work was done.

Councillor Kingston and Deputy-Reeve Palliser moved that the tender of Mr. Hall be accepted, he to furnish the tile.

Councillors Cole and Abernethy moved in amendment that the sewer be put in by day labor.

Councillors Southworth and Wiggins brought in an amendment to the amendment that the entire matter be postponed until the next regular or special meeting of the Council.

When the vote was taken, Councillors Cole, Abernethy and Reeve Davidson supported the day labor system, while Councillors Southworth and Wiggins alone voted for their amendment and Councillor Kingston and Deputy-Reeve Palliser for the main motion. Councillor Moore was absent.

As there was no majority for amendments or motion, Mayor Meved to return Mr. Hall's cheque.

To Oil Main Streets.

After a long discussion it was decided, on motion of Deputy-Reeve Palliser and Councillor Wiggins, to purchase a water tank to be used in connection with the new steam roller and to oil the main streets after they have been graded. The Clerk was instructed to secure prices on 8,000 gallons of road oil.

For a time it looked as if the majority were in favor of using water instead of oil on the streets, the town to purchase a sprinkler, and a motion to this effect was made by Councillor Southworth and seconded by Reeve Davidson, but this was finally withdrawn.

Want No Oil.

A number of residents on Sebastopol Street joined in a petition that no oil be used on the streets in front of their premises as they did not care to stand the cost. This request was on motion of Councillor Abernethy and the Reeve.

Grading Front Street

Councillor Cole, chairman of the committee on roads and bridges, asked permission to take up three crossings on Front Street before the roller and scarifier are put to work on that thoroughfare. This request was granted and the committee were also authorized to employ the services of an engineer who will give them the proper levels so that there may be no trouble over the thorough draining of Front street after it is graded.

To Repair Jail

Now that there are two policemen on duty in town it has been decided to repair the town jail which has long been condemned as unsanitary and a building from which escape is easy. Reeve Davidson brought this matter up and the police committee of which the Reeve is chairman, were instructed to confer with Chief Brown with regard to the necessary changes.

Minor Matters Disposed Of

A communication was received from the Union of Canadian Municipalities inviting the Council to join in a excursion by boat from Montreal to the maratime provinces, the

The invitation was promptly declined as cost was regarded as out of all reason.

The Bell Telephone Company, which is extending its service, was given permission to erect thirteen new poles on River Road and Nelson street.

Another street light was ordered for the Oliver Road.

The court of revision, the members of which have already been announced, will meet Friday evening June 26.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 2. — While some of the councillors were waiting the arrival of a quorum last night there was a severe electrical storm in progress, and at about 8 o'clock there came a most vivid flash of lightning with an almost simultaneous peal of thunder. The electric lights all over the town went out like a candle in a gale. The whole municipality, including the assembly room in the Public Library, was plunged in blackest darkness, and residents waited patiently, but in vain, for the lights to come on. Finally, at nearly 9 o'clock, Reeve Davidson went out and borrowed an oil lamp, and with this rather inadequite illumination, the Councillors disposed of their business programme.

About 11 o'clock the lighting service on the west side was restored, but the east side was still in darkness, and it was reported that there was no chance of restoring the service before morning, as some difficulty was met with in locating the place where the damage had been done.

The storm was the most serious eelctrical disturbance of the season, and it is expected that reports of damage by lightning throughout the district will be heard to-day.

Campbellford Personals

CAMPBELLFORD, June 2—Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Dalgleish and family, accompanied by Mr. Alex How, motored to Port Hope on Sunday.

Albert William Nayler was called to Marmora last week owing to the death of his father, the late John William Nayler who was buried last Thursday. On the day of the funeral the son's mother-in-law, Mrs. William Fry, died at her home near PICNIC PLANNED.

Great Liberal Meeting in York County For Premier King.

TORONTO, June 2 (Canadian Press).—Plans are under way for a great Liberal demonstration and picnic in honor of Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Premier of Canada, to be held late this month or early in July in York County.

GASOLINE JUMPS

would now be liable for any accident due to the presence on the street of gasoline pumps.

Alderman Greene said the Council is putting the cart before the horse and suggested that every pump be removed to private property.

Drastic action of this kind was not approved by Alderman Fife.

Alderman Hancock moved as an amendment to the amendment that all tanks be removed on reasonable notice. This was not considered applicable to the question.

Alderman Phelan thought the fee should not be made so prohibitive that tourists could not find a tank.

The amendment lost and the fee of $25 stood.

Another clause provided that licensees must sign agreements assuming all liability for injuries and accidents occurring through the presence on the street of a pump or tank or automatic air pump.

Reduced Staff.

City Clerk S. R. Armstrong, in his capacity as superintendent of city offices, reported that tax bills had been completed for the year with the help of his office staff and that of the city treasurer, without employing extra help.

Suburban Commission.

Ex-Alderman H. Gainey, city's representative on the Suburban Area Commission, reported on the work being done by that body. The work on Park street south will cost $1,000 this year. The extension of Sherbrooke street has been taken off the Suburban Area Commission, he understands, and has been returned to the township council. The Commission has already spent $1,000 on that section.

Mayor Turner remarked he thought the Council made a good choice in appointing Mr. Gainey as its representative.

Show Coming.

Mr. Brody of the Maple Leaf Shows, the midway attraction that camped at James Stevenson park last year, applied for permission to use the land again for the week of June 8. The payment last year was $175, and His Worship suggested $250 payment this year, to include the license fees, payable in advance. This was adopted.

Works Inspector.

Approaching the proposition of appointing an inspector at the sewage disposal plant, Alderman Denne suggested that if someone must be named he should be a returned soldier who is qualified.

A resolution moved by Aldermen Fife and Jones gave the City Engineer authority to hire a man.

Alderman Phelan asked whether the contractor is hiring foreign labor. He declared it a shame that city men should walk the streets now and be expected to pay their taxes to pay part of the cost next month.

The City Engineer said all the men had told the contractor they were from Peterborough.

Mr. Parsons said he would give bona-fide applicants a letter to the manager of the works. In a couple of weeks there will be 35 or 40 more men put on.

Crossing Protection.

The Board of Railway Commissioners recommended that Donegal street crossing at the C. N. R. be protected by wig-wag and bell, 25 per cent. of installation to be paid by the city, 25 per cent. out of railway crossings fund, and 50 per cent. by the railway. The railway would be responsible for upkeep.

His Worship suggested the bell would be a nuisance, as it might be ringing for fifteen minutes at a time when trains are left standing.

Council will reply suggesting that the wig-wag will be sufficient protection.

Saving Lights.

Alderman Denne drew attention to the burning of a small lamp within five feet of an arc lamp at the Peterborough Club corner at an expense of $9 a year. Alderman Jones, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light committee, said these defects are being rectified as quickly as possible, but time is needed to cover the whole city.

No Representation.

An invitation to the City Council to attend the unveiling of a monument at Bewdley on Sunday was received without action. There will be no official representation of the Council.

OBITUARY.

BURNBRAE, June 2.—An aged resident of the Burnbrae district passed away on Thursday in the person of Mrs. Wm. Fry, who died suddenly following a paralytic stroke. Deceased was eighty years of age and had lived here since some years before her marriage. Her maiden name was Miss Ann McRobbie. Besides her aged husband, she leaves to mourn the loss of a loving mother three sons, Will at home, George of English Line, Thomas of Zion; and four daughters, Mrs. J. Naylor of Milton, Ont., Mrs. Bert Naylor of Campbellford, Mrs. Wm. Longmuir of Burnbrae, and Mrs. T. Naylor at home. Funeral services were held in St. Andrew's church Saturday afternoon with interment in Burnbrae cemetery.

MRS. JOHN GOODFELLOW.

NORHAM, June 2. — Funeral services for the late Mrs. John Goodfellow, a much respected resident of Brighton township, who passed away at 9.30 on Wednesday evening were held in Mount Olivet Methodist church on Friday afternoon at 2.30. The esteem in which the deceased was held was evident from the many floral tributes and the large number of friends and neighbors who assembled to pay their last tribute of respect. The auditorium of the church was filled to capacity. The pastor, Rev. J. F. Everson, spoke briefly from Phil. 1 and 21, "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain."

Mrs. Goodfellow, nee Louisa Dingwell, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Dingwell was born in Cramahe township 2½ miles east of Morganston on Sept. 13, 1850. She married the late John Goodfellow on Oct. 26, 1876 and settled in Brighton township where she has resided ever since. She was a life long Methodist and for many years a valuable member of Mount Olivet church. Her home was always open to her neighbors and friends and especially to the ministers of the gospel for whom she held the highest esteem and regard.

During the service Mr. and Mrs. D. Hulbert Orser, who were married and settled in the Mount Olivet neighborhood just a year previous to the late Mr. and Mrs. John Goodfellow, and who have been fond friends and neighbors for nearly 40 years sang, "My Mother's Prayers Have Followed Me."

Among those present from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Goodfellow and Mr. and Mrs. William Buchanan, all of Colborne.

She leaves to mourn her loss one brother, David Dingwell, of Cramahe, two sons, David at home and Grant also of Brighton township.

The pallbearers were John Dinner, Ira King, Walter Ames, William Wilson, Harper Piester and James Plumpton.

Her remains were laid to rest in Mount Olivet cemetery beside those of her husband who predeceased her nearly fifteen years ago. With fond hope her friends rejoice in the resurrection of the dead.

A HUGE SUCCESS.

The Made-in-Peterboro Exhibition is bigger even than it was prophesied it would be, according to the verdict of the hundreds who visited the Armouries last night.

If you were among those present it will not be necessary to urge you to pay a return visit, for doubtless you have already promised yourself that: if you haven't seen the Exhibition yet, however, the Examiner advises you to visit the Armouries tonight.

It is a big show, thoughtfully planned with exhibits that show you nearly every article made in Peterboro and entertainment features that make the hours pass rapidly.

It is education, instruction, recreation, fun and social service work all rolled into one big community enterprise, and the result of so many people joining their efforts enthusiastically on behalf of a common cause cannot fail to be reflected in a healthier community spirit and a better understanding among Peterboro's citizens generally.

Nothing better in this line has been staged in Peterboro, and the attendance throughout the week should be in keeping with the merit of the cause that is to be helped and the magnitude of the Exhibition itself.

Roll up a record attendance and hundreds of people who receive the benefit of the Health Association's activities will thank you daily.

THE FLAG INCIDENT.

The flag incident in Toronto in which a constable removed an American flag from the automobile of a visitor from the United States is to be regretted.

The visitor perhaps was an accessary to the excitement by not flying a Canadian flag beside that of his own country, but in the interests of international friendship it is to be hoped that in cases where from lack of thought or otherwise this courtesy is neglected by visitors the matter will be dismissed merely as a demonstration of ignorance and not made the cause of unpleasantedness.

Canadians visiting the United States should profit by the Toronto incident and remember that in flaunting their flag in the face of the people of another country they are not showing patriotism, but rather lack of common sense.

There is no particular reason why they should decorate their cars with Union Jacks in visiting the United States; their license plates tell their nationality in any case, and if they do consider it necessary to display their flag common politeness should suggest to them the desirability of also flying the flag of the country they are visiting.

The man who visits another land and insists on waving his own national flag all the time he is there is as big a bore and a nuisance as the proud parent who persists in visiting his neighbor and talks of nothing but the cleverness of his own child during the whole extent of his visit.

A FINE EXHIBITION.

Smith's Falls has a school situation that has not been equalled in the Province for some time. The students at the Collegiate went on strike over a week ago over changes in the staff, seven teachers having been dismissed, says the London Advertiser. Since then the School Board has been in session off and on, the last meeting running for five hours. The students have also held meetings, and the Mayor has been called in to see what he can do to still the troubled waters. The last gathering of the trustees gave out a statement in which it was agreed to reinstate four of the dismissed teachers, but this was not considered satisfactory, and when the outcome was announced to the students most of them walked out again.

The Board of Education, in its sessions, has carried on behind closed doors, and it may be surmised that the trouble is not in any way diminished by that procedure. There is apparently trouble some place, and when it reaches the stage now experienced in Smith's Falls the general public, who pay all the bills, should be told definitely what the rumpus is all about. A curt, carefully-prepared statement does not help to heal over a breach of the dimensions of the Smith's Falls rupture. The closed door creates more suspicion and builds up an atmosphere that breeds more trouble instead of diminishing it.

Neither can there be any apology made for a situation wherein the students resort to a strike to inflict their views on those who have been elected to conduct the affairs of the school. If there is one thing that makes even an advanced institution like a Collegiate a good school it is a fairly large amount of discipline. In this age of experiments, theories and fads, it is easy to get away from that old idea of school discipline. Much of the new idea argues that students in a Collegiate are different to those in primary schools, and therefore they must have greater latitude. In theory that may be correct, but in practice it is a failure.

The entire Smith's Falls situation is a demonstration of what can take place when plain, old-fashioned common sense and a reasonable amount of wholesome discipline take their departure.

THE TOURIST TRADE.

The tourist season has begun and the license plates of many American States are to be seen on automobiles on Peterboro's streets or along the highways in the district.

Are we prepared for the coming of the army of visitors?

Of course, we are in a material way; we have our 4.4 parlours, our service stations, our gas tanks, the counters and shelves in our stores are filled, our supplies of souvenirs and souvenir postcards complete; in brief, we have plenty to sell.

But that is not enough.

We should be prepared in other ways.

Prepared for one thing to be courteous and friendly and helpful to these guests who come from afar to visit us.

They're neighbors and should be treated as such, not as "good things" to be plucked and looted.

We want them to go home and say to everybody they discuss their trip with "You'll never meet finer people in your life than those up in Peterboro, Canada; they couldn't do enough for us when we were there."

It is all very well to say these tourists have plenty of money and want to spend it; they have and do, but they want to get value for what they spend, and they know when they are being gouged by profiteers who endeavour to make their fortune in one year out of the tourist traffic.

The district that treats them as "easy marks" may have one good year—but it is likely to be followed by many more than seven lean ones.

Peterboro must not make that mistake.

It should be everybody's duty to act as a sort of informal reception and entertainment committee for our visitors, to courteously supply them with information, to cheerfully tell them about the things they want to see, to be satisfied with a fair rate of profit on what they purchase, to make them feel at home, among "home folks" who are glad to see them and who want them to have a good time and to come back again.

They'll appreciate that treatment and it will do more than tourist associations or paid publicity to advertise Peterboro and the whole district among the very class of people we are most anxious to reach.

The popular song, "A Smile Will Go a Long, Long Way," applies just as much to the tourist traffic as it does to life generally.

A community that creates the impression on visitors that "here are people who are really glad to see us" easily sells itself as a logical mecca for tourists.

The store where the floor-walker receives you with a friendly smile and ready information and the clerks show a real interest in getting you what you want is the store you go back to again; just as the store that has an atmosphere of "nobody cares whether you buy any or not" almost invariably drives you out never to return.

Communities are just the same so far as tourists are concerned; it is easy to create a good impression, and, unfortunately, it is just as easy to disgust visitors.

The Examiner hopes that Peterboro citizens who come into contact with tourists will remember the importance of dealing fairly, courteously and neighborly with our friends from outside the district.

It is a policy that cannot go wrong and the dividends are sure to be large.

Remember, there will be other years besides 1925, and also remember, there are many other places than Peterboro for tourists to visit.

CAN SPECULATION BE CURBED?

Toward the latter part of January wheat for May delivery was $2.05 a bushel. In two months the same wheat had gone down to $1.36. There is not a man in existence who could produce sufficient reason from crop conditions or from world supply to justify either one of these prices. That is the question which U. S. Secretary of Agriculture Jardine is turning over in his mind. He would like very much to know where this 70-cent difference went, and also what caused the fluctuation. He could go on asking the same questions all over again, because a similar process has been in operation since the first of the year.

Judging from the tone of U. S. papers it is possible to get opinions as to what should be done that are as far apart as the spread in the high and low prices of wheat itself. The Philadelphia Inquirer believes that the law should step in and stop the sending out of false crop reports by grain speculators. The Inquirer remarks: "It is a jailable offence to peddle worthless stocks and bonds through the mails. Then why not make it a crime for grain speculators to raise up world-wide fears through false crop reports and trade conditions? Such wide speculation as that last winter, followed swiftly by a terrific tumble in wheat, could hardly occur without world-wide propaganda about crop conditions, supplies and demand."

If the mails are being used for any such purpose, the remedy is very simple—stop it. In fairness to the grain exchange it should be said that its membership, scattered all over the continent, sends out weather and crop reports that are based on actual facts, and any deviation from this would cause a forfeiture of all standing or membership.

Some of the papers discussing the subject refer to the protection of the public. What is needed is a realization on the part of the public that dabbling in wheat or any other commodity for future delivery is pure speculation, and not investment. Putting it at its best it is plain guesswork. A man follows crop reports, weather conditions, etc., and he guesses that in July wheat will be selling at a certain figure. It is on his own idea of things that he bases his dealing. He buys at a lower figure, expecting to sell out later for more. In the meantime other conditions turn up that he never anticipated, and the result is he finds out that his guess was no good and pays accordingly for the discovery.

As far as the actual producer of wheat is concerned, the Nebraska Farmer maintains that he is neither helped or injured by the fluctuations in the price of wheat. The New York Journal of Commerce does not believe legislation can change the manipulation of the wheat market, if there is manipulation. The Journal considers that there will always be an element in every community "ready to take a chance in a game it knows nothing about in the hopes of getting rich quick." The Journal adds that "those who suffer most are those gullible sporadic speculators who permit themselves time and again to be drawn into the markets at the wrong time," a truth so painfully obvious that it hardly needs to be stated. The closing statement of this financial paper has a degree of truth that cannot be overlooked: "These have a perfect remedy at their disposal. All they have to do is to attend to their own business."—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Made-in-Peterboro Exhibition is on its way to a triumphal success It is just as big as its advance notices said it would be.

Every cent taken in at the Made-in-Peterboro Exhibition helps to make Peterboro a better city in which to live.

A THOUGHT.

REINCARNATION.

Into space limitless I look afar—
Through showers of satellites, of suns and star,
And wonder where my future home may be—
When I shall travel o'er that noiseless sea
Of azure, to some still and spectral sphere,
And meet again those near and dearest here
On this old Earth. Shall, I, remembering, know
That we were playmates in the long ago?

Shall I there wander 'neath the sultry palm,
Still silent sentry of the tropic calm,
And hear again a name my heart should know
As through the vales of memory I go?
Perhaps this Earth then as a moon will stay,
Its chilling finger pointing out the way—
Where you will wait beside the yucca tree,
As once you waited on this Earth for me?

Or am I bound alas to Earth and fear,
Having attained no real perfection here,
But chained by self, must I again return
To gain the lessons I have failed to learn?
Perchance one gleam of higher self will shine,
To light the pathway to life sublime,
That I may rise above this sordid Earth,
Freed from the fetters I have forged each birth.

Perhaps I yet may gaze in space and see
This now the Earth, shine as a star to me,
May hear it called by yet another name,
And memory fail to know it for the same.
Oh, Lords of Karma, grant me but the prayer—
To know her face in the assemblage there,
And I will care not, be it great or small,
Which is my star—or be there star at all.

HAD BOILS ALL OVER HIM

There is only one way to get rid of boils and that is by going right to the seat of the trouble—the blood—as the bad blood must be made pure before the boils will disappear.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

cleanses the system and removes all the foul matter from the blood in a way that few medicines will do.

Mrs. Chas. Rankin, Bulyea, Sask., writes:—"A few years ago my husband had a terrible time with boils. On one arm he had 16 between his elbow and wrist; five on the back of his neck, and several more on different parts of his body. He tried everything he could think of, but got no relief until he took Burdock Blood Bitters, and to his surprise it completely relieved him of his boils in a very short time."

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

The general average quality of export and butchers' cattle at the Union Stock Yards today was the best this season. Receipts were 314 cars, 5,403 cattle and 509 billed through, 699 calves, 2,526 hogs and 329 sheep and lambs.

Light butchers and babies were snapped up fast and any good butchers were taken at $7.50 and some choice ones 50 to 75 cents a cwt. higher. Average baby beeves were $8 to $8.60 and extra good ones $9 up. Rogers and Maybee have boat space for 1,400 to 1,500 head this week. They carried over 200 last week, and this with their direct shipments will leave them to buy around 1,000 on the market this week. Export steers were firmer by fully 25 cents a cwt. and one load of 1,320 lbs. each co. $8.40 a cwt. Six weighing 1,370 lbs. each sold at $8.70 a cwt.

Export bulls were bought about steady at $4.75 to $5.75 a cwt., and a choice butcher's bull sold at $6.50 a cwt. Butchers' cows were in demand at steady prices, good cows selling freely at $5.75 to $6 a cwt. Several loads of Western stockers were weighed up during the morning, the best of them bringing $5.75 a cwt. The export steers were slow in moving owing to the firmer asked prices and less than 400 were bought up till noon. The general active trade will move most of the offerings during the day.

Calves were quite steady at last week's firmer prices. The bulk of the offering were common to medium calves. Common calves were 4½ to 6 cents, and mediums about 8 cents. Good calves brought 9 to 10 cents a pound.

The sheep and lamb market was little changed. There were no choice sheep on sale and lambs not choice sold at $13 to $13.50 each. Odd yearling lambs were 12 cents a pound.

Hogs firmed up 25 cents a cwt. over the week end and sellers were looking for a $12 a cwt. f.o.b. market today, with the packers bidding $11.75 a cwt.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 1.—Wheat values underwent a lively tumble in the late trading today, notwithstanding an easier advance. Good rains over the northwest, and showers elsewhere led to selling which brought about the upset. Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 2 to 2 7-8 cents net lower; July $1.60 3-4 to $1.60 7-8, and September $1.57 1-2 to $1.57 3-4.

Corn finished 2 1-4 to 2 7-8 cents down; oats 1 1-8 to 1 1-4 cents off and provisions 15 to 50 cents up.

At first the wheat market was ruled chiefly by adverse crop reports, especially from Illinois and Indiana. Besides a leading authority had issued an estimate that the total yield of wheat in the United States this season would be 200,000,000 bushels less han was harvested last year. Buying support for the market gave out, however, when report of relief from drought began to come in.

STERLING RATES

Sterling demand $4.85 3-4.

Sterling cables $4.86 1-4.

EGG MARKETS

OTTAWA, June 1.—Receipts of eggs are lighter and owing to this and competition in buying, the market is firmer. Offers from the Prairie Provinces are being made to Eastern markets on the basis of extras 30 3-4, firsts 28 3-4, seconds 25 3-4 f.o.b. Manitoba shipping point. Ontario country shippers report paying extras 28, firsts 26, seconds 22, and making sales extras 32 1-2, firsts 31 1-2, seconds 25 f.o.b. in new cases.

Toronto—Jobbing, specials 37, extras 35, firsts 33, seconds 29.

Montreal—Dealers paying delivered, extras 34, firsts 32, seconds 27 1-2 to 28.

Manitoba—Dealers quoting delivered extras 28 1-2, firsts 28, seconds 22.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, June 1—There was no change in the condition of the market for baled hay, prices being steady with a moderate amount of business passing and sales of car lots of good No. 2 timothy hay were bade at $14 to $15 per ton, No. 3 timothy hay at $11 to $12 per ton, and clover mixed hay at $10.50 to $11 per ton, f.o.b. cars here.

The trade in potatoes was slow on account of the more liberal offerings of new crop supplies and the fact that buyers are now only operating in old crop stock in a limited way. The tone of the market was about steady and prices were unchanged with No. 1 Green Mountains quoted at 65 cents per bag, and Quebec varieties at 55 cents per bag of 90 lbs. in bulk, ex-track.

The stock of cold storage eggs in Montreal today was placed at 89,737 cases, which showed an increase of 46,785 cases as compared with the same date for the previous month, and an increase of 1,305 cases with June 1, 1924. While the stock of fresh eggs on the 1st of the month was 1,353 cases below that of May 1st, and 3,241 cases less than a year ago.

There was no important change in the condition of the market, the undertone being firm with a fair volume of business passing for local account in a wholesale jobbing way. The receipts were 2,347 cases, as compared with nil for the same day last week, and 2,061 for the corresponding day a year ago.

Butter Storage.

The stock of creamery butter in Montreal was placed at 17,265 packages, as compared with May 1st, and a decrease of 28,095 packages with a year ago, while the stock of dairy butter was 396 packages smaller than that of May 1st, and 312 packages larger than June 1, 1924.

The receipts of butter were 192 packages, as compared with nil for the same day last week, and 857 for the corresponding day a year ago. There was no important change in prices, but the undertone to the market was firmer in sympathy with the strength in the market for cheese. There was a steady demand from local buyers for supplies and a fair amount of business was done.

Cheese Export Higher.

The stock of cheese in Montreal was 155,473 boxes, which showed an increase of 54,594 boxes as compared with a year ago. The exports of cheese from here last week showed an increase of 1,783 boxes, as compared with the previous week and an increase of 1,633 boxes with the same week last year, while the total shipments for the season to date have been 14,826 boxes in excess of 1924 for the same period.

The receipts of cheese today were 95,766 boxes, as against nil for the same day last week, and 4,577 for the corresponding day a year ago. In sympathy with the strength that prevailed at the country boards at the close of last week a stronger feeling developed in the spot market yesterday, and prices were advanced 5-8 to 3-4 cent per lb., but there was very little business passing as the best bids received from over the cable were considerably out of line with this market.

Beans were selling at $2.60 to $2.70 per bushel.

SUPPLY BILL PASSED.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 1.— An interim bill, granting the government for current expenses a further one-sixth of the main estimates, on $31,409,846, passed all stages in the House of Commons to-day.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Burton

THE STORY SO FAR:

GLORIA GORDON, beautiful flapper, marries DICK GREGORY, a struggling lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes ....but no work or children.

Dick borrows his mother's maid, MAGGIE to teach Gloria to cook but she refuses to learn. Later Maggie leaves disgusted with Gloria's wild par. Then Gloria hires RANGHILD SWANSON although Dick tells her they can't afford a maid. Her extravagance swamps Dick with debts. . . .

Gloria begins to see a great deal of STANLEY WAYBURN, an actor with whom she b comes infatuated. Her best friend MAY SEYMOUR, wife of DR. JOHN SEYMOUR, begs her not to see Wayburn. She tells her how she, herself, has been snubbed because of a foolish love affair with JIM CAREWE. MOTHER GREGO Y also begs Gloria to mend her ways.

Dick becomes dangerously ill with pneumonia. While he is recovering Wayburn tells Gloria he expected to leave town soon to get a job in New York. He needs money. Gloria gets $200 from Dick's secretary, MISS SUSAN BRIGGS, by telling her she wants it to have some gardening done as a surprise to Dick.

Wayburn promises to pay it back within three weeks. Gloria goes shopping to buy new dress, so as to appear attractive in Wayburn's eyes. She discovers, to her horror, that she is getting fat.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Well . . . you're out of a job," Dick answered her.

"Oh, I might have known that was what you were going to say," Gloria snapped. "You think work is the answer to everything!"

Dick took his pipe out of his mouth. "It is," he said.

"Marriage is a job like everything else," he went on. "But you won't work at it. You'd be happy enough if you got up every morning and made the coffee and got breakfast. You wouldn't have so much time to cry about being lonesome if you had to dust the house every day. You'd have something to look forward to if you were sitting there making a little baby dress this minute. . . . You haven't anything to do! That's all that's wrong with you, honey."

He tapped the tobacco from his pipe into an ash-tray and rose.

"Think it over," he said.

Gloria tossed her head.

"You've got me all wrong, smarty," she cried. "It isn't dusting I need to make me happy. It's dancing!"

Dick laughed.

"Jazz baby!" he said. "Tied up to a nine-o'clock husband!"

"Well, it's no joke . . . you needn't laugh!" Gloria answered him hotly. "I hate to stick around the house like this every night, slowly dying of dry-rot. I want some fun, some parties! . . . If this is married life, I hate it. So there!"

"Well, I'm sorry, Glory," Dick said soberly. "But I don't see how I can help you out. . . ."

He crossed the room to the bookcases and brought her a thick, shabby volume. It was Flaubert's "Madame Bovary."

"Here's a story of another woman who hated married life," he said. "Read it. There's a lesson in it for you, Glory."

Gloria took the book and hurled it across the room.

"I don't want to read about life. I want to live it!" she cried. "You Sunday-school prig, you!"

Without another look or word, Dick went out of the room.

After a few minutes Gloria could hear the thud of his shoes on the floor of his room upstairs as he threw them down. Then came the sound of his window being raised. . . . The hall clock struck nine.

* * *

"Ye gods!" Gloria wailed to herself. "What a life! Is this what I'm going to do every night for the next 50 years? Sit here, alone, waiting for the clock to strike?"

She hadn't noticed before how deadly dull these evenings with Dick could be.

She was sure Dick didn't think they were dull.

The mere fact that he was in the same room with her satisfied him. He often said so.

There was no doubt about it. . . . Dick adored her.

But she didn't want to be adored in that good, quiet way of his. She wanted to be thrilled—to be swept off her feet!

Gloria's thoughts swung back to Stanley Wayburn.

Little flames seemed to prickle in her cheeks as she thought of the battle they had had that day when she had wrecked her automobile.

Stan had been rather too thrilling that day! . . . She had been afraid of his hot kisses that seared her cheeks . . . of his hands pinning her arms down to her sides.

Yes, she was glad that she had struck him! He had gone too far. . . . But it would be nice to see him again, all the same.

She missed him, terribly.

Gloria sighed as she stood up. Her foot was asleep. She went painfully around the room, snapping off the lights.

She lay awake, tossing on her pillow, until midnight . . . thinking of Stanley Wayburn.

The next morning Gloria started out to walk to her mother's house.

But on the way she changed her mind.

She would go and see May Seymour instead! May was always cheery and peppy. And Gloria felt that she was badly in need of both cheer and pep.

She found May in the kitchen washing her little chow dog, Mah Jong.

May's hair was wound up in curlers. She was in a pink crepe kimono and her face was shiny with traces of cold cream. She looke anything butn pretty

"Hello," she greeted Gloria. "Look at me, breaking all the rules of 'How to hold a husband'! This is the way I hang around the house most of the time . . . looking like the witch of Endor! And John sees me this way and he goes right on loving me just as much as if I were a raving beauty. Can you beat it?"

"You cannot," Gloria answered, seating herself on one corner of the kitchen table. "But don't take too many chances, May. Men don't stay in love forever with wives who run around the house in curl papers and cold cream. They all fall for a pretty face."

May rolled the struggling, yipping Mah Jong in a towel before she replied.

"No," she said then. "You're all wrong, Glory Gregory! When a man really cares about you he loves you just as much when you're ugly and blue and have a cold in the head . . . as he does when you're wearing a marcel-wave, a pound of make-up and your vampiest clothes! . . . That's the way John cares about me. He likes me, not my looks."

Gloria shook her head.

"I cannot agree with you," she remarked.

"Now, there's Jim," said May, with her head on one side. "Jim can't see a girl for trees unless she looks like a movie queen. . . . Speaking of Jim reminds me of something else. Have you been asked to the party Mrs. Wing is having this afternoon?"

"N-no," Gloria faltered.

"Looks as if she was giving us the hinky-dink, doesn't it?" May asked. "Does she know you've been skipping around with Wayburn?"

"No," Gloria began. Then she stopped. She remembered that she had been out walking with Wayburn one day when they had met Mrs. Wing.

"Yes, she's seen me with Stan," she said.

"And she started the story that you were out riding with Wayburn the day you ran your car into the ditch!" May burst out excitedly. "I'll bet she's put you in the same class with me and Jim. . . . She thinks I'm terrible. She doesn't even speak to me when we meet on the street anymore. She hands me the ice-tongs right!"

She scrambled up from the floor.

"I'll tell you what, Glory! We'll throw a party ourselves!" she cried "I'll get some of the old gang together for this afternoon! Eh! wot?"

"Fair enough! Let's do it!" Gloria was delighted. "I'm starved for a party!"

May sat down at the telephone in Dr. John's study.

Gloria took Mah Jong into the living-room where a wood fire was burning in the grate. She rubbed the little beast until he was dry and fluffy. The minute she set him down on the floor he scurried away to find May.

He was at her heels when she came into the room.

"I couldn't round up very many people," she said disconsolately. "I guess most of the girls are going to Mrs. Wing's party. But I got Ann Somers. And Jim is going to bring out a couple of boys from his office. Awfully nice fellows. I told them all to come for lunch. . . . Will you run over to the delicatessen and get some cold meat and a couple of pies while I get dressed and set the table?"

CROPS SURVIVE SEVERE FROSTS; RAIN ABUNDANT

Growth in Prairie Provinces is Far Ahead of Last Year.

HOPES RENEWED

Moisture Plentiful and Crops Strongly Rooted — Cutworm Causes Loss.

WINNIPEG, June 2.—(Canadian Press). — Improved weather conditions have given renewed hope to the farmers of Western Canada, and the crops, after surviving an early season of night frosts, now are reported to be far in advance of last year. The weekly crop report of the Canadian Pacific Railway Agricultural Department indicates that rain has been general throughout the prairie provinces, and with abundant moisture, growth has been uniformly good, with wheat well above the ground at many points.

Coarse grain seeding is nearing completion, and at scattered points where farmers got their seed in early, germination is progressing favorably.

In Manitoba, the report states, most of the wheat is up from six to eight inches. Cutworm has made its appearance in Moore Park and Russell districts, but the damage to date has been slight.

Damage By Cutworm.

With the exception of some flax and green feed, seeding is completed in Saskatchewan. All grains are showing well with strong growth and root development has been really stimulated by warmer weather and timely rainfall. Central sections of the province have suffered considerable damage from the cutworm pest. The loss is principally on summer fallow. It is expected some ruined fields will be seeded to flax.

The cutworm also has attacked several districts in Alberta, but recent rains have localised the menace. The crops are making splendid headway, and sufficient moisture now is in the ground to promote steady growth.

Grasshoppers a Menace.

In common with other parts of the West, the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia districts have been favored with ideal weather. Grasshoppers are infesting fields around Grande Prairie, but effective measures are being taken for their eradication.

Winter injury to the fruit crop in British Columbia is just becoming manifest. While an accurate estimate of the loss due to frost is impossible, it is thought that soft fruits will be short, notably in the Creston and Cranbrooke districts. Northern portions of Okanagan Valley also are affected. All ground crops are making good progress.

CAR WAS DAMAGED AVOIDING HORSE

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Morrissey Escaped Serious Injury.

KING'S WHARF, June 1 — What might have been a serious accident occurred on Wednesday night when Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McIssey and family were returning home from Downeyville, a blind horse was on the road, and in trying to avoid hitting the horse Mr. Morrissey's car took the ditch, breaking a front wheel and the rods. The occupants escaped unhurt but were badly shaken up.

A very large number from here attended the sale of Mr. Stewart Graham, Ops, Tuesday, where the stock was of high breeding quality and sold very high. Cows sold as high as $175; yearlings from $65 to $100; the herd bull brought $320, and young bulls from $65 to $80.

The Maple Leaf cheese factory opened on Monday, and it is a great benefit to the surrounding district.

The recent hard frost has kept back the growth but it kept so cold after the frost that no serious damage was done although hard ice was on the water.

RIFFS' MACHINE GUNS USED IN SHARP ASSAULT

Made But Slight Effect on French Line in Ouergha Sector.

TWICE REPULSED.

Concentration of Moroccans Continues, But No Evidence of General Attack.

FRENCH MOROCCO, June 2.—(Canadian Press).—The Riffian invaders Monday launched another attack upon the heights of Bibane, on the Ouergha front, but with little success. The Riff appear hypnotized by this sector, where they had their first success against the French, but where more recently they have suffered two serious defeats

Concentrations of Adb-El-Krim's forces continue to be reported from different parts of the troubled zone, without seemingly bringing any nearer the decisive push that the French have anticipated for some time.

Reports from the central sector of the front state that 2,500 men have been observed there, although with the exception of sharp fighting in the region of Bibane only desultory firing has occurred.

The attack yesterday was made with machine guns, though previously the Riffs had used 75 and 100 millimetre pieces against the Bibane stronghold.

PLAY AT BRIGHTON.

Cobourg Young People Gave Three Act Comedy in Town Hall.

BRIGHTON, June 2.—On Friday evening, May 29, a three act musical comedy was presented by sixty-five Cobourg people in Brighton Town Hall, under the direction of Theodore H. Bird. The comedy was entitled "Nobody's Baby." The parts were well taken and, as advertised, there were sixty laughs a minute. The solos and choruses were pleasing to all.

After the show a dance was held and a good time was enjoyed by everyone.

Order Proved Its Value to Soldiers and Empire in World War.

MEET IN OTTAWA

Tributes Paid to Mrs. Clarke Murray of Montreal, Its Foundress.

OTTAWA, June 2 — (Canadian Press).—Mrs. P. E. Dolittle, of Toronto, National president of the Imperial Order of Nurses, in addressing the annual convention of the Order which opened here Monday, pointed out that this year was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Order in Montreal. She expressed regret that the foundress of the Order, Mrs. Clarke Murray, was unable to attend.

The Order, organized in 1901, as an outcome of the stirring and deep National and Imperial spirit, consequent upon Canada taking part in the Boer War, had proved its value in the Great War in the many forms of patriotic activity by which Canadians at the front had been assured of support and stimulus. Mrs. Dolittle stated that the Order had more than justified its existence, and those who have watched its development realize that it must keep abreast of all national activities and even anticipate Canada's needs if it is to be a vital and thriving organization.

"The work undertaken now," she said, "has many phases and aspects, but the aim remained unchanged to form a bond of union for the women and children of the British Empire and to preserve those high traditions which have made the Empire a great league of varying dominions and dependencies."

Founded During Boer War.

While the Order was formed at the conclusion of a war and has done its greatest work during the great conflict, the members are animated with a desire for peace which will ensure the world's progress in all the arts of civilization, Mrs. Dolittle said. Hence, while every effort is made to keep alive the memory of brave and heroic deeds, there is also cherished a spirit of charity toward all.

Mrs. Dolittle outlined the work of the Order, touching on the various phases of the work, laying particular stress on that branch dealing with war memorials. The required sum of five hundred thousand dollars, to carry on this work, has not yet been raised, but it was the hope of the Order that in this year of the silver anniversary, that there would be a final response to the appeal, for the remaining amount necessary for the carrying out of this educational enterprise.

Immigration is a subject which has a vital interest for every chapter. Its co-operation with the Victoria League of London, England, had been of mutual benefit in its intercourse between the Mother Country and the Dominion.

In conclusion, the National President said: "We cannot survey the progress of our Order and the varied nature of its activities, without a fresh realization of our opportunity and responsibility."

A warm and hearty welcome was extended the officers of the National Chapter, and visiting delegates, by Mrs. N. C. Smillie.

Mrs. H. Colin Campbell, president of the Provincial Chapter of Manitoba, on behalf of the National Chapter, responded to Mrs. Smillie's address of welcome. No forward work for our country can be made without a knowledge of the history of our great Dominion, she said. Progress is never a straight march forward. The I.O.D.E. progressed by strange paths, rough hewn by the early founders and workers. After twenty-five years they have left to the women of Canada a noble highway. The women of to-day owe a debt of gratitude to the pioneer leaders of the National, Provincial, municipal and primary chapters of the Order, who by their willing self-sacrifice and service have rounded out in the first quarter of a century a work for their loved country and beloved Empire second to none, recorded in the annals of history.

Tribute to Foundress.

Mrs. Campbell paid great tribute to the work of the foundress, Mrs. Clarke Murray, who longed to link the women and children of the Empire in closer fellowship for all time. She conceived the I.O.D.E. of which the objects, aims and general lines of organization are unchanged today.

The British women of South Africa had a similar vision. Within three weeks' time of the inception of the I.O.D.E. they had formed a sister society, the Loyal Women of South Africa. Two years later British women in the Motherland marked the memory of Queen Victoria by organizing the Victoria League of London, with which League the I.O.D.E. co-operates. The Daughters of the Empire today embrace national chapters in Bermuda, the Bahamas and Newfoundland. The Victoria League has since been adopted by South Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

CHICAGO, June 2.—Working in a torrid court room, the prosecution was able to cull only one prospective juror from 27 veniremen examined Monday in the Shepherd trial.

The twelve men locked up last night included three jurors sworn ten days ago, two veniremen tentatively passed on by the prosecution and six veniremen who had not been reached for examination as to their qualifications when court adjourned until to-day.

FIGURES SHOW OIL TANKS ARE SAFE BUILDINGS

Percentage of Fire Losses is Only One-Tenth of One Per Cent.

HOUSES 0.63 PER CENT.

Steel Tanks Are Six Times Safer Than Ordinary Dwelling Houses.

In view of public opinion with reference to residing close to oil storage tanks, the following, taken from Engineering News Record, May 28, is very interesting and reassuring:

"Statistics just published by a committee of the American Petroleum Institute on oil tank fires, covering a record of ten years, make the remarkable showing that oil tanks are safer than ordinary dwelling houses. The percentage of dwelling house fire losses in one year is 0.63 per cent., the committee states, while the percentage of oil tanks burned is only 0.10 per cent. per year. In fact, steel-rooted tanks are much safer even than the last figure indicates, having a loss ratio of only 0.03 per cent. The committee states, "Steel-roofed tanks as a class appear to be negligible risks, regardless of the kind of oil stored. It is doubtful if there are many insurable risks than can show such low fire frequency.' This is a violent overturning of current ideas, according to which an oil tank is by no means a specially desirable neighbor with respect to fire risk. It challenges one's faith in statistics, to a certain extent. The sketipcal mind can, in fact, find some grounds for argument in the conceded incompleteness of the record of oil-tank fires and in the fact that the committee report is an ex-parte statement, made by the oil industry for the advantage of the oil industry, with a view to furnishing a defence against certain demands on the part of fire-protection interests in the matter of oil-tank spacing. The other side has not yet been heard from. However, the report will probably raise an argument more because of its conclusions than because of its basic statistics, which latter can hardly be so far wrong as to invalidate the general comparison above made. Making even large allowance for error in the record, the comparison indicates that an almost marvelous degree of safety has been attained in the storage of highly inflammable material—which is greatly to the credit of the men engaged in the oil industry. At the same time it casts an unfavorable light on our national achievement in fire protection of the home. In short, we must make our dwelling-house fire record about six times better than it is at present before the average home will be as safe an abiding place as the roof of an oil tank."

CAPITAL GIVEN LARGER GRANT BY GOVERNMENT

Increase of $25,000 to Ottawa for the Use of Municipal Utilities.

OTTAWA, June 2.—The resolution to extend the agreement between the City of Ottawa and the Federal Government concerning certain joint public works came up in the House of Commons Monday. The annual grant from the government for this purpose would be increased from $75,000 to $100,000. The Minister of Public Works explained that while the government did not admit the right of the municipality to tax the government, in the case of Ottawa it had always been agreed that the government should help to bear the cost of such things as fire and police protection, sewerage works, upkeep, etc., in which the government shared the benefit.

In answer to a question from Sir Henry Drayton, Dr. King read a list of the additional expenses for upkeep of bridges, parks and squares, which with the grant of $150,000 to the Ottawa Improvement Commission, totalled $365,000 in addition to the item now under consideration.

H. C. Hocken, (Conservative, Toronto West) asked if the Government had ever considered the Washington plan, and would think of making Ottawa a Federal district. Premier King said that such a plan might be carried out some day but meantime he thought the house would agree it was one calling for careful consideration. He implied that it was not under consideration at the moment.

The resolution carried and a bill based on it received first reading.

POOL OF LIQUOR STOCK ALLEGED

Conservative Election Paper in Regina Uses Document to Attack Dunning.

REGINA, Sask., June 2.—(Canadian Press).—"The New Standard," an election newspaper published by the Conservative party organization in this city, reproduced yesterday the text of an agreement drawn up on the legal paper of Cross, Jonah, Hugg and Forbes for certain persons named, providng for the pooling and sale of liquor stocks. The document is being used as the vehicle of an attack on the Government of Premier C. A. Dunning, which is seeking re-election at the polls to-day. Hon. J. A. Cross, Provincial Attorney-General, is a member of the legal firm mentioned Nothing to connect Mr. Cross personally with the transaction has been published.

Publication of this domument followed earlier reproduction of a cheque for $50,000 drawn in favor of F. B. Jonah, another member of the legal firm, signed by Z. Natanson, convicted of a liquor law violation in 1924. The Conservative organ calls for a Royal Commission to investigate the connection of the Attorney-General's firm with the transactions mentioned.

F. B. Jonah issued a statement yesterday with regard to the allegations of the Conservative paper. His statement admits receipt of the cheque for $50,000 dated March 5, 1923, which, it adds, "was paid to me personally as trustee to be held pending settlement of dispute which Natanson advised he had been for some time outstanding between Z. Natanson and R. Bronfmenn in regard to liquor and other matters. The proceeds of such cheque were held by me in trust and every dollar was paid out to P. Bronfmenn and Z. Nathanson in accordance with settlement made between them in which settlement I took no part. Not a cent of such amount was retained by me."

The statement adds that neither Hon. J. A. Cross nor any other member of the firm with the exception of himself had anything to do with the transaction.

RICHARD HALL & SON

SHOWER GIVEN TO BRIDE TO BE

Bailieboro People Brought Gifts to Miss Annie McConnachie.

HAPPY GATHERING.

BAILIEBORO, June 1.—On Thursday evening, May 28, the community hall, Centreville, was crowded with young and old, seeking to do honour to Miss Annie McConnachie, on the occasion of her approaching marriage to Laurence Finnie of South Monaghan.

A dainty invitation had been sent to the "bride-to-be in the following words:—

"On the twenty-eighth of May,
Please wend your way
To our elegant old-fashioned party.
The hall will be bright,
The lunch nice and light
And, the company, cheery and hearty.
The night being fine,
We'll expect you at nine,
All fussed up like a dainty wee flower.
You may bring "that best fellow"
And, perhaps an umbrella
"a shower."

Signed,
"Some Old Pals."

J. C. McRoberts took charge of the proceedings, and at nine o'clock called for "the guest of honour" Miss McConnachie was then brought in by Miss Kathleen Isbester and Miss Evelyn Donaldson, and on reaching the platform, the curtains were drawn aside, displaying a magnificent array of gifts from a host of friends. Miss Emma Tate read the address of presentation as follows:—

Dear Annie:—

We think of you tonight as our "guest of honour" at this social gathering of friends, who meet to bring to you good wishes on the occasion of your approaching marriage.

During these years since first you came to us as "a little Scotch lassie," you have endeared yourself to all, a friend to all, at all times.

We desire to express to you our appreciation of your companionship and your help in this community. You will be missed in our church and in our choir, where you have been a faithful and willing worker. What is our loss here, will be another's gain, for we believe you will carry your loving and helpful qualities into still another sphere.

We ask you to accept these remembrances, as tokens of our love and goodwill to you, and in your new home, may they often bring to you pleasant reminiscences of Centreville, "your first Canadian home" and of the friends of Centreville Church.

Suitable Reply.

Miss McConnachie apologized for reading her brief reply in these words:—

Dear Friends:—

This is a time when you feel you want to say a lot and can't. I certainly have been dealt kindly with since coming to Canada, but the event of this evening surely surpasses all. No person feels worthy of such a shower of kindness as this, but I can assure you that I am more grateful than I can express, for your gifts and good wishes. I will never forget the host of friends I have made in these parts, and seeing that I am going to reside among you, I hope to keep you all on my list of friends. I trust we will often meet on social occasions in time to come and hope to have the opportunity to welcome you

Let me thank you one and all most heartily, and allow me to call on my Dad for a few words. (The audience then joined in singing "For She is a Jolly Good Fellow").

Rev. A. H. McConnachie.

The Rev. A. H. McConnachie said he wanted to echo the thanks so imperfectly given by his daughter. Any kindness shown to her was kindness shown to Mrs. McConnachie and himself. Apart from the costly gifts, the presence of such a company was a wonderful mark of respect and goodwill. There were many ways of helping the farmer's cause. He had been blamed for favoring the U.F.O., and had served the cause at some cost to himself. Now he was making a permanent contribution to the cause, by leaving his daughter among them. He was sure that she would make good on the farm as she had done in business. Again he thanked them for their presence and many valuable tokens of respect and honour. They would never be forgotten, and he would never cease to pray for their good.

Other Speakers.

The other speakers included Mr. D. Dodds, Mr. Ronald Deyell and Mr. Harper of Bailieboro. Other items on the programme were a piano duet by Mrs. J. Hutchison and daughter, Gwen, and an instrumental by Miss Viola White, who also presided the the pianoforte throughout the evening and led the community singing. The chairman in bringing the first part of the evening to a close, again voiced the sentiments of the company in expressing the appreciation of the character of Miss McConnachie, and the value of her work in the choir. In public service she had shown a kindly disposition, and he was sure she would continue to exercise the same wherever she went. The company then joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne."

The ladies, after their usual custom, served a dainty and abundant lunch. The young folks thereafter spent a short time in dancing. The whole evening was voted a splendid success in every way, even the weather favoring the auspicious occasion.

FILM SHOW OF WOOL INDUSTRY

DOURO, June 1.— On Thursday evening, Mr F. C. McCrea of Norwood gave a motion picture evening at the request of the U.F.Y.P.O. in the schoolhouse at S.S. No. 12. A fair-sized crowd was out and a pleasant evening was spent. The programme opened with the singing of "The Maple Leaf Forever." Then Miss Lulu Bell gave a vocal solo in excellent voice. The first reel of motion pictures was an intensely interesting one "Wool from the sheep to the finished product," Every stage was shown—immense flocks grazing, the shearing, grading the wool, washing in immense vats twice, the picking machines, carding machines, spinning mules and weaving machines at work. The weaving of cloth and rugs was shown.

Then followed a reel showing the Kemptville Agricultural school. Summer school teachers were shown studying poultry, school gardening, field crops, alfalfa, root crops, bees, etc. Some fine pictures of the 1924 field day were shown, farming operations such as filling silo, spraying orchard, etc., were shown.

A comic reel "Up she goes" showing the troubles of a young husband when his wife takes to saxophone playing, was very funny. Next came an animated cartoon, "Bobby Franks' Tank Factory" and later another comic reel.

Mrs. Thos. J. Whibbs and son, Roman, visited Mrs. Whibbs' sister Mrs. Dennis O'Toole in Otonabee on Monday.

Mrs. Mary E. Condon, Lakefield, spent a few days with her son, John, recently.

Mrs. Wm. Forsythe with several other ladies from Cottesloe district attended a Sunday school convention in Cobourg on Wednesday.

Mr. Joseph Garvey had a "bee" on Tuesday, when upwards of twenty-five neighbors, assisted in moving stone-piles. In the evening the workers and their women folks were entertained by a social evening.

Miss Florence Allen spent a few days with friends in Peterborough.

Miss Agnes Sweeney spent a couple of days this week with friends in Peterborough.

Mr. Daniel Kennedy was called to Detroit on Tuesday owing to the illness of his brother John.

HER NERVES SO BAD SHE COULD NOT SLEEP

Mrs. Grace Kitchen, St. George, Ont., writes: "After having a severe attack of pneumonia I was left in a weak and run down condition. My nerves were so bad I could not sleep nights, and in the day time I had terrible fainting spells, caused by my heart being weak. Finally I got so bad I had to take to my bed for weeks at a time, but one day I read about so decided to try them.

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

After taking one box I felt a slight improvement. I have now taken five boxes, and have gained 35 pounds in weight. I am now more than able to do all my own housework as well as considerable outside work. I cannot recommend Milburn's H. & N. Pills too highly for those suffering as I did."

COUNCIL APPOINTS WOMAN TREASURER

Mrs. A. M. Windsor Chosen By Burleigh and Anstruther.

APSLEY, May 30.—The Municipal Council of Burleigh and Anstruther met at the Town Hall on Thursday with the Reeve and all the members present. The tender of Hugh McColl for building a fence along the Town Hall lot for $35 was accepted on motion of Councillor Tucker and Downing. The Colonization By-law No. 200 received its final reading and will be forwarded tothe Dept. of Lands and Forests. On motion of Councillor Downing and Reid, Mr. A. M. Windsor was appointed Treasurer of the municipality at a salary of $40 per annum, and the By-law confirming the appointment received its several readings and was signed and sealed by the Reeve and Clerk. The following accounts were paid on motion of Councillors Downing and Reid—Board of Methodist Church Trustees, rebate of dog tax $4.00; John Coones, car to Burleigh Falls $6.00; Simon Windsor, salary as Treasurer, four months $13.36; Isaac Lean, balance due Collector $35.00; Isaac Lean, Assessor $75.00; Isaac Lean, equalizing Union School Section $3.00; Isaac Lean, Excise stamps on tax receipts $3.38.

At a Court of Revision held in the Town Hall on May 28th, G. K. Fraser's assessment was lowered to $2,000, and Ben Coones new house was assssed at $100. Giles Stone was assessed for

PASTOR WALKED TO CONVENTION

Rev. Mr. Pinkerton Made Long Journey By Nature's Motive Power.

WARSAW NEWS.

WARSAW, June 1.—Pastor Pinkerton walked up from Indian River to attend the S.S. Convention. Two car-loads of ladies went from Cottessloe to Cobourg to attend the Presbyterial Missionary gathering on Wednesday.

The girls of the soft ball club gave a dance on Friday evening. The music by Warsaw orchestra was exceptionally good and the girls had everything well arranged. However, the storm lessened the attendance, and the alarm of fire tended to break it up. The girls are practicing faithfully.

The Woman's Missionary Society will hold a special rally service on Thursday, June 4.

There was a slight frost again last night, but reports are that not so very much damage has been done. Apple blossoms have opened out.

Clover does look a little wilted, and farmers seem to expect a small hay crop.

One farmer has his corn up and it is all frozen up.

One of the old timers always said, that no matter how warm it might be, never to trust the weather until after the full moon which came after the middle of May, it might be early in June. When that full moon comes, there is apt to be frost.

The rain was needed.

Plans are made for more buckwheat, hungarian, and other late crops, that was planned at the beginning of the season.

The Orangemen's entertainment on Monday evening was quite a success. Rev. F. G. Weir was chairman. The program was all local talent which included one of the new arrivals. John Sargent. Some who were to have taken part did not appear, perhaps because they had been a bit disfigured in the ball games.

Presentation.

On the evening of the Congregational meeting of Bethel Church, after the regular business was over, the congregation and members of the Bible Class presented Mrs. E. R. Hamblin with a mahoghany clock and a set of silver handled stainless steel knives, Adam pattern community plate. The pastor, Rev. F. G. Weir, read the address and Mesdames Arthur Carveth and Reefus Payne made the presentation. Mrs. Hamblin was completely taken by surprise, but was able to make a suitable reply. She had never felt that she had done all she would have wished. Mrs. Hamblin taught the young People's Bible Class for fifteen years and the Adult Bible Class for five years.

For the past four years she has been church organist and was choir leader for fifteen years before that. For the past nine years, since the envelope system was introduced, she has been financial secretary. The following address was read.

Dear Mrs. Hamblin —

The Organized Bible Class, and your friends of Bethel Church, have taken this opportunity by word and deed, of expressing their sincere appreciation of the ungrudging service that your have rendered in the church, and in the community. Your faithfulness to duty, your willingness to assist, and help on every worthy undertaking, have meant much in securing that measure of success, which we have enjoyed in our church work.

We regret, for your sake, as well as our own that it has become neecssary for you to relinquish those services for a while and trust you may speedily regain your former health and vigor. So much we say in words, but words at best, poorly express our feelings, therefore we beg you will accept this clock and silver—and may the regular tick-tock of the clock be a constant reminder of your friends and their regard

We trust it will serve you as faithfully as you have served us, and trust, also that it will continue to tick out nothing but joyous moments, pleasant hours, happy days, and many years of richest life.

Signed, Mrs. Arthur Carveth.

PUTTING ARMOR ON RUM RUNNERS

Bootleggers Are Having a Fleet of Armored Boats Constructed.

NEW YORK, June 2.—(Canadian Press).—The New York Times says it has been learned that the New York bootlegging ring is having constructed a fleet of armored rum-runners which will battle the coast-guard boats blockading rum row.

The liquor smuggling syndicate has given orders to a shipyard for the construction of this fleet. In addition to a heavy armor as protection against the bullets of rum chasers, the boats, it is understood, will carry machine guns.

OFFICIAL VISIT TO LORNE LODGE

Omemee Masons Received C. Burgoyne, of Fenelon Falls, D.D.G.M.

BANQUET FOLLOWED.

OMEMEE, June 2.—On Thursday evening, May 28th, Rt. Wor. Bro. C. Burgoyne, of Fenelon Falls, D.D. G.M., Victoria District, No. 20, paid his official visit to Lorne Lodge No. 375, A. F. and A. M., Omemee.

Dr. MURINE FOR EYES IRRITATED BY SUN, WIND, DUST & CINDERS

RECOMMENDED & SOLD BY DRUGGISTS & OPTICIANS

After the work of the evening was completed, the gathering adjourned to the U.F.O. Hall, where a sumptuous banquet had been prepared. The tables presented a most inviting appearance with their snowy table linen adorned with garlands of rose crepe paper and floral decorations of lilacs.

Members and guests, numbering seventy-five, did ample justice to the tasty viands provided by a number of the members' wives, following which speeches were given by the D.D.G.M., Rt. Wor. Bros. Townley, Fenelon Falls, and Begg of Lindsay, Wor. Bros. Scobie of Ottawa, Johnston and Kelly.

The happy gathering broke up at 11.30 by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne." Among those present from a distance were: Bros. E. Stubbinge, W. Allelly, A. Johnston, I. B. Beggs, J. Lawton, A. Woods, F. C. Nugent, W. Piercey, G. W. Hall of Lindsay, Capt. Burgoyne, T. Townley of Fenelon Falls, F. Cullin, C. Bottum, C. Junkin and Murphy Brothers of Bobcaygeon, and numerous others.

Personal.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenny, of Little Britain, visited the latter's brother, Mr. James McQuade, last week.

Mrs. J. A. Black, Mrs. E. H. Mitchell and Mrs. S. J. MacKey attended the W.M.S. Presbyterial at Cobourg last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Telford and Messrs. Green and Wm. Glass, of Bridgenorth, also Mr. Samuel Glass, of Cleveland, visited friends in town on Friday.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Blackheads

There is one simple, safe, and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads; that is to dissolve them. To do this, get two ounces of peroxine powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The peroxine powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.

Mr. Dave Deyell was a business visitor to Woodville on Wednesday.

Mrs. F. W. Rowland spent a few days last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Musgrove, of Toronto.

Mrs. R. Tate visited Campbellford friends last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. H. Fee, of Peterboro, spent Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Grandy.

Mr. Arthur R. Parsons of Toronto is visiting his brother, Mr. T. J. Parsons, in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Cottingham and children, of Oshawa, spent the week-end with Mrs. Cottingham's brother, Mr. Wilbert Fee.

Miss Marjorie Adams and friend, Miss Buchanan of Orono, were the guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Adams.

Dr. Neil of Peterboro made a professional visit to town on Thursday.

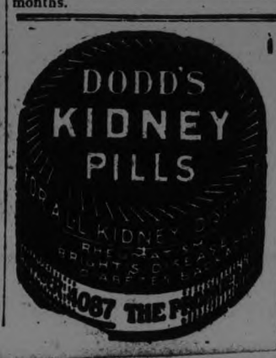
Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Mahood, accompanied by Miss Lila Parsons, motored to Toronto on Saturday and spent the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Wood, Sr., Mr. Lloyd Wood, Jr., and daughter, Miss Dorothy, of Lindsay, visited Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rutherford on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Stinson, of Lindsay, visited the former's sister, Mrs. J. Bushnell, on Saturday.

Mr. K. Griffin, of Bobcaygeon, is spending a few days with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Griffin.

Commencing on Wednesday, June 3, the merchants and places of business will, as in past year, observe the half holiday for the summer months.



WOULD PREVENT AUSTRIAN UNION

French Fear That Germany May Annex Austria.

VERY DANGEROUS.

PARIS, June 2. — (Canadian Press)—How to prevent Austria from throwing in her lot with Germany has within the last few days become of principal interest on the Quai d'Orsay. The pact with Britain, guaranteeing the inviolability of the Rhineland is considered assured, but the annexation of Austria by Germany, which would give Germany the dominating influence on the Danube and in the Balkans, is considered from the Allied viewpoint as a dangerous possibility.

STRONG SERMON ON PROHIBITION

Rev. Mr. Watson Delivered Stirring Address in Millbrook Presbyterian Church.

FIELD DAY

MILLBROOK, June 2.—"The Temperance Cause—with her right hand she forces along the liquor seller; with her left, she carries the drinker; and with her shoulders she heaves along the drunkard's apologists up the steep and rugged hill of reform, with a firm and steady step,—like Samson with the doors, and gate, and posts of Gaza."

Representing the Ontario Prohibition Union, Rev. Mr. Watson, of Toronto, preached in Grace Presbyterian church on Sunday morning, developing the theme as outlined in the opening sentence from two passages of Scripture,—Second Chronicles 26:15, "He (Uzziah) was marvellously helped until he was strong"; and Romans 15:1, "We that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves."

According to the action taken at the recent Durham county convention of temperance workers held at Orono, Sunday was to be Field Day in all the churches of the county, with Bowmanville, Orono, Port Hope and Millbrook, centres for mass meetings addressed by speakers from Toronto, and with soloists accompanying them from the city, making the musical part of the gathering of added interest.

For some reason this plan was not carried out in detail here, Rev. Mr. Watson speaking both morning and evening in Grace church only.

In the morning discourse, Mr. Watson made a strong plea for continued and united effort, with grateful recognition of the act that, like Uzziah of old, "we have been marvellously helped of God. In spite of all handicaps, opposition, and imperfections of temperance legislation, we have made progress, and we see God's hand, and power in it."

The present law is the outcome of strenuous, self-sacrificing effort in the past, with God leading, and the motto now is: "From strength to strength, and from victory to victory."

"Further progress toward the star the achievement means that reliance must be put upon God. Our fathers would have been glad to live in our day, seeing the strides forward that have been made, but we must not rest from our labors, but press on until the dyke of total prohibition has been placed round the whole Dominion, and the sale and manufacture of intoxicating liquor has been completely stopped."

The gospel of Jesus Christ cannot be disassociated from temperance reform, because it builds up the hearts, that have been yielded to Him in His righteousness, Daniel being an outstanding example; and it is the only power that can reclaim lives which have fallen into evil ways. Steadfastness, loyalty to a high cause, courage and wisdom, fit the heart for the task, when Christ is enthroned within.

Education is another necessary factor. A reorganization of temperance societies as centres of influence in the church and community, keeping the minds informed, and leading to intelligent enthusiasm, would be a decided factor in determining the personal attitude in relation to the question of temperance reform.

Pledge signing, placing the individual responsibility where it belongs, might profitably be again introduced, reviving it from the "limbo of forgotten things," where it has been relegated of late years.

Industries, by their attitude toward their employees in demanding total prohibition because of increased efficiency, have done much to educate the public mind on the temperance issue. Explorers in Arctic regions have also insisted upon the injuriousness of liquor as a beverage.

Legislation is an indispensably and effective way of combating this traffic which is carried on to the undoing of hearts and lives. What is legislation? Just gathering up, concentrating, and putting into operation, the conscience of the people in the great temperance cause. The organized traffic must be met in an organized way."

"The alcoholic increase in the content may seem a small matter, but it raises the question whether we will stand true to prohibition throughout, or have part prohibition, and part license. It may not intoxicate to the extreme of former days, but quite evidently it is a compromise intended to open the door wider and have stronger liquor introduced."

Some doubt the statement that prohibition does prohibit, but it makes furtive action necessary to obtain strong drink, and compared with legal sale in open bars, a vast difference is noted.

The responsibility for further promotion of temperance reform rests upon those who have enjoyed its benefits in the bettered conditions of the present time and day. "Wives and mothers have expressed to me their dread lest the open sale of liquor be restored, entrapping and ensnaring their husbands and sons who have been rescued by the legislation already enacted."

The childish plea, a matter of personal experience, "Father'd be all right if he was only helped," expresses the anxiety felt in many hearts. "Ye that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak."

"Every man on his knees, every interested worked united in concentrated effort, is the price to pay that our nation may be saved from this curse, by the grace of God."

BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR AGED COUPLE

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. C. Lauder Gathered to Celebrate.

72 YEARS OLD

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Lauder, Mt. Julian was the scene of a happy gathering on Saturday evening, May 23 when a number of relatives, friends and neighbors gathered to-gether in a surprise party to celebrate Mr. Lauder's 72nd birthday and also that of Mrs. Lauder which is in a few days. They were presented with a handsome upholstered chair and a framed picture. The following address was read by Miss. M. Patterson and Mr. Victor Shewen made the presentation.

Mt. Julian May 23, 1925

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Lauder:

We, a few friends, desire to express to you our apreciation of you and what you have done for the community. We take this opportunity of wishing you both many happy returns of your birthdays. May you live to enjoy many more.

You have always been very faithful and willing workers among the people in this neighbourhood. In time of need and sickness, you are always there with a helping hand.

We ask you to accept this little remembrance not for its intrinsic value, but as a token of our respect and good will to you.

Signed on behalf of the neighbors and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Lauder both replied in a few well chosen words, thanking their friends for their kindness and remembrance.

The guests requested to play progressive euchre.

The first prize winners were Mrs. V. Shewen and Mr. Joe Norwhich will be held this year at the city of Quebec on September 22, 23 and 24 next.

It is planned to bring before the delegates, by means of papers and discussions, some of the most important problems dealing with road construction, the financial obligations attached thereto and the vital question of maintenance in view of the tendency of modern traffic to spread to districts off the main travelled routes.

One of the most important papers that will be submitted wil deal with equitable taxation for highway construction and maintenance and this will provide scope for discussion as to the best way of levying such taxation and the proportion that each section of the community will bear. The burden of highway buiding and maintenance is a problem that is causing anxiety to many municipalities, and those who are desirous of placing the cost on the shoulders of those who benefit by the use of such roads will have ample opportunity to make their views known at the convention. This paper has a bearing on another paper entitled "What we have learned from the traffic census." This will give the municipal authorities a great deal of valuable data to aid them in regulating the use and restricting the abuse of the highways.

The efforts that have been made to secure the continuance of federal aid, and the results achieved in Canada and the United States to date will be reviewed in another paper, which wil cover the situation from all sides, and point out ways and means for promoting a continuance of the grants which had been granted in the Dominion. Another subject of general interest will be that dealing with dust elimination on gravel roads. For many years to come the majority of the highways in Canada must of necessity be gravel, and one of the problems congronting road engineers is the elimiation of the dust nuisance. Eminent engineers have given this subject much study and the results of various experiments will be placed before the convention by competent authorities.

Provincial maintenance systems will also come under review, and due to the widening area of general traffic this is a question that will be of particuar interest to municipal authorities. There will be also papers dealing with the principal permanent types of construction, such a bitumen, cement, and so on.

Practice in road construction in other parts of the world will also be brought before the convention, for in addition to a representative of the English Road Board who will speak on the highways of Europe, the association is inviting the executive of the American Road Builders' Association to hold a conference during the convention in order that there may be an opportunity of an exchange of knowledge and ideas on highway matter with them.

The question of the opening and maintaining of winter roads, not only in the vicinity of the big cities, where motor traffic is carried on throughout the year, but in the suburbs and outlying municipalities will also be forward and some useful data on then ecessary equipment and the cost of keeping the roads open will be placed before the delegates. Colonization roads and their close connection with the provincial highway systems is another subject that is of increasing importance, and suggestions for the closer linking of the two will be put forward. One of the sessions of the convention will be held outdoors, for the delegates will be invited to inspect the different types of pavement used in highway construction in the vicinity of Quebec city.

The selection of the ancient capital of the province for the convention this year will provide an exceptional opportunity for delegates from other parts of the Dominion to become acquainted with the Eastern section of Canada. The historic atmosphere of Old Quebec; the cradle of Canadian history, with its quaint customs and unbounded hospitality, together with interesting excursion to Ste. Anne de Beaupre and Montmorency Falls, as well as a boat trip to the world-famed Saguenay River at the close of the convention, offer, apart from the value of the program, a strong argument in favor of a record attendance.

ROAD DELEGATES TO DISCUSS TAXES

Important Papers at Convention of Good Roads Association.

The special committee of the Canadian Good Roads' Association, under the chairmanship of [illegible] Squire, has drawn up a tentative program for the annual convention which will be held this year at the city of Quebec on September 22, 23 and 24 next.

GEO. HARVEY RESIGNS.

WASHINGTON, June 2 .—The Washington Post to-day announces the resignation of Colonel George Harvey, former Ambassador to the Court of St. James, as its editor.

The announcement says that other obligations now demand Mr. Harvey's time and energies.

they and the consolation prize winners were Mrs. Oliver Church and Mr. E. Lean.

There followed a period spent in singing music and social intercourse.

A substantial lunch was served by the ladies.

The exceedingly pleasant evening spent by all who had the privilege of attending and enjoying the warm hospitality of their host and hostess ended by singing " For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and "Auld Lang Syne."

University Building Closed When Girls Are Attacked By Men.

CALLED SCANDALOUS.

VIENNA, June 1.—(United Press) — Chancellor Sperl has closed the mail building of the University of Vienna, because of the "scandalous behavior" of Pan-German undergraduates who seized and dragged girl students with bobbed hair, shouting the slogan, "No respectable German girl bobs her hair." The police have made numerous arrests.

NATURE LORE

(By Wallace Havelock Robb).

The migration of birds is a bit of a mystery. We used to know practically nothing about it. All we knew was the fact that the birds went south in the winter. But every spring, when the birds came back, folks would get to talking and being curious and—well, they just have to be answered, that's all, for curiosity never lets go.

Take the swallows, for instance; they arrive from nowhere, all of a sudden. Yesterday, we'll say, there was no sign of them, and here they are in the old place.

I had an example of this the other day, about the first week in May. I was walking down the main street in Belleville and the Martins had just arrived. They were not there the day before, because I had wondered what was keeping them. Well, there they were, going in and out of the old holes in a store roof edge and for all the world like ourselves, when we arrive home after long absence.

A few days after that, I was in Brockville and in the very same kind of a place, on the main street, where folks usually look for bargains and not birds. I noticed Martins chattering away, and chasing out the English sparrows. It is always interesting to see the Martins put the sparrows out, for the sparrows just can't quite make out where they come from and you can see that the sparrows are both surprised and dumfounded.

The Martins are a branch of the swallow family and are our biggest swallow. They are lovely dark blue birds and are called Purple Martins, but the male bird is a blue black gun metal colour, the female a little lighter. They live in groups and are very sociable, going in and out and gurgling, maybe about what a dirty housekeeper Mrs. Sparrow is.

Martins know their friends. A very poor man in Montreal stuck up a small colony bird house on a wobbly pole and just to show how hard pressed these birds are, for suitable coiony houses, they surprised him by taking the house. He did not know there was such a bird in the world and some bird lovers, to whom he had appealed, gave him a real martin house, with spare rooms galore, and the birds took possession at once.

CANADA CLAIMS LAND TO POLE

Hon. Charles Stewart Says Canada Has Sovereignty Over Arctic.

NOT WRANGEL.

OTTAWA, June 2. — (Canadian Press).—Notice was served in the House of Commons last night that Canada claims sovereignty over all the lands lying north of the mainland of the Dominion, "right up to the North Pole," it was voiced by Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, during the discussion which preceded the final adoption of an amendment to the North-West Territories Act, under which all foreigners entering the hinterland will be required to take out a Federal license.

"We claim right up to the North Pole?" asked J. L. Brown (Progressive, Lisgar).

"Yes, right up to the North Pole," replied the Minister, who, in answer to further questions, stated that the Dominion has no interest in Wrangel Island, and that the British Government had expressed itself to the same effect.

CROP OUTLOOK GOOD IN WEST

C.N.R. Weekly Crop Report Credits Rain and Warm Weather.

GRAIN SHOWING.

MONTREAL, June 2 (Canadian Press).—Not for some time has the crop outlook in Western Canada been better than at present, according to the eighth weekly crop report just issued by the Canadian National Railways. Warm weather and considerable rain prevailed during the past week throughout the Prairie Provinces, making the best possible conditions. Growing wheat, the seeding of which is now completed, is from 3 to 6 inches high throughout, and some of the early sown oats is showing. The growth is very even at all points.

MORE ACCIDENTS DURING MONTH

Increase Both in Numbers and Fatalities Over April Figures.

35 WERE KILLED.

TORONTO, June 2 (Canadian Press).—The Workmen's Compensation Board awarded during the month of May $450,283 in benefits to injured workmen and their dependents, $373,767 of this being compensation and $76,516 medical aid.

Accidents reported during the past month showed an increase as compared with the prior month, both as to the total number and as to fatalities, the total being 4,623 during May, as against 4,342 in April, and fatalities number 35 in May as against 28 in April.

CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL AGREEMENT APPROVED

A meeting of the Ratepayers of S.S No. 7 Chandos was held in the Schoolhouse on Monday evening to discuss the Consolidated School Agreement. The Revs. J. W. Ogden and C. A. G. Spence were both present and explained in detail the working of the scheme, and cost, and the regulations of the Department of Education regarding consolidation. Mr. T. Tanner presided at the meeting. A resolution approving the agreement and authorizing the trustees to sign it on behalf of the Section was unanimously carried, and the Trustees did so at the close of the meeting.

MARCH TRAFFIC SHOWS DECLINE

Freight and Passenger Business on Canadian Railways Less Than Year Ago.

FEWER EMPLOYEES.

OTTAWA, June 2 — (Canadian Press). — The monthly statement issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics on revenues and expenses of the steam railways in Canada states that in March, 1925, revenues showed a seasonal increase over those of January and February, but were $4,266,153, or 11.4 per cent., below those of March, 1924, with freight traffic lighter by 9.8 per cent. and passenger traffic lighter by 13 per cent.

Expenses were cut $3,359,953, or 10.5 per cent., making the decrease in the net revenues $906,199. The total pay roll was less by $933,233, or 4.9 per cent., and 7,909 fewer employees were on the rolls.

For the three months, gross revenues showed a decline of $9,686,000, expenses a decrease of $9,394,259, and net operating revenues were less by $291,741.

On the Canadian National Railways, freight traffic was lighter by 6.8 per cent. than for March, 1924, and freight revenues fell off $1,714,561, or 13.3 per cent. Passenger traffic was lighter by 14.3 per cent., and passenger receipts were less by $306,145, or 11.8 per cent. Total revenues showed a reduction of $1,889,060, or 11 per cent. The entire system, including the lines in the United States, showed a decrease in the net operating revenues of $657,343, for March and for the three months, January, February and March a decrease of $35,192.

On the Canadian Pacific Railway, with a reduction in freight traffic of 12.7 per cent., and in passenger traffic of 13.6 per cent., gross revenues declined 12.3 per cent. of $1,780,246. Operating expenses were cut by $1,482,163, or 12.2 per cent. Net operating revenues were reduced $298,080, and the operating ratio increased slightly to 84.04 per cent.

For the first three months of the year gross revenues were below those of last year by $4,405,465, expenses were less by $4,079,652, and net revenues were less by $325,813.

A. Y. P. A. OF ALL SAINTS' MET AT FESTIVE BOARD

Annual Banquet of Church Young People Was Very Successful.

GOOD ATTENDANCE

Rev. R. B. Grobb Was Presented With Set of Brushes by the Association.

The annual banquet of All Saints' branch of the Anglican Young People's Association was one of the most successful affairs carried out in the Parish Hall this year and was well attended by members and friends. The Association was fortunate enough to have the banquet coincide with the visit of the former rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, who during his pastorate was one of the most enthusiastic workers for the success of the organization. Mr. Grobb was the principal speaker at the gathering, being chosen to respond to the most important toast that to the ladies, on whose behalf he made a most interesting address.

The newly elected president, James H. Price, was chairman and after all had partaken of the good things set before them by the ladies of the Guild, he proposed the toast to the King, which was honored in the usual manner. The various toasts were then ably proposed and answered.

The toast to the Rector was proposed by Bert Hope, vice-president of the association. In a very able speech he called on the members to co-operate with Mr. Paterson and make the work of the church progress. Mr. Paterson made a very suitable response in which he mentioned some of the work of the church and the rector.

The toast to the guests was proposed by Miss B. Dawson who welcomed them to the annual banquet, mentioning particularly Mr. Grobb and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Davis, who have recently returned to the parish from the United States. Mr. Paterson responded on behalf of the guests.

The toast to the A.Y.P.A. was proposed by J. C. Adams, past president. Mr. Adams recounted the works of the association during the year, which consisted chiefly of putting a supply of new hymn books in the church. The response by Miss Stout, told of the aims and objects of the A.Y.P.A. and named them from the initials of the society.

The toast to the ladies was proposed by W. H. Buller who gave the ladies a most useful recipe on how to preserve a husband. Mr. Grobb, who said he had been chosen because, as a bachelor, he knew nothing about women, responded to this toast on behalf of the ladies.

A short musical programe was contributed, consisting of piano solos by Miss Marjory Turner and Miss Margaret Johnston and vocal solos by Miss Robinson and Mr. Clark.

A Presentation.

Following the musical numbers Mr Price read an address and Mr. Adams presented Mr. Grobb with a set of brushes in a case, as a momento of his return to the parish. The address follows:—

Dear Mr. Grobb:—

"The members of the Anglican Young People's Association have asked me to act in the role of spokesman in making you a small presentation.

"We have known you for so many years that it is certainly quite as old friends that we are here this evening. We can scarecly recall any incident in the past which has caused us so much pleasure as we experience at the present moment in welcoming you to the field where you labored so long and so faithfully and where you made so very many devoted and warm friends.

"The members of the A.Y.P.A. especially welcome you for you were ever a most untiring and unselfish worker in their interests, and they ask you to accept this small token of their regard and love for you, coupled with all the earnest hope that in your new and enlarged sphere of work you may be abundantly blessed."

Cynthia Grey Says

Suppose that you are a girl just out of school.

It is not necessary for you to work.

Yet you feel that you want to be independent—like so many modern girls do. And so you go into the business world.

But are you independent?

"Believe me all this talk about gaining independence by going into the business world is sheer bluff," says a young British woman who has been very successful in business.

"I fail to see any independence in being at the beck and call of a man, in strap-hanging six days a week, and poor tea shop luncheons. You don't find the gaiety and change in work that you expect. The girl at home is very much more independent.

"But more than that, every girl, no matter how independent she may want to be dreams of marriage. And, believe me, most men prefer the home girl over one who has asserted her independence."

Of course, there are many girls who feel they must work, but if you have the opportunity to choose, it's true you will find more independence at home than in the business world.

HOME TOWN RECIPE.

1½ cups flour.
1 cup sugar.
1 cupt suet.
1 cup raisins.
1 cup currants.
1 cup grated potatoes.
1 cup carrots.
1 level teaspoon baking soda.
Steam three hours.

FORD WANTS A FOOL PROOF CAR

One That Will Run Without Any Meddling or Adjusting.

THE IDEAL CAR.

DETROIT, June 2. — (United News.) —Fool-proof, that's Henry Ford's idea of an ideal automobile. "Why don't you instal one of these carburetors which are supposed to double gasoline mileage?" a United News representative asked him on Monday. "Too much adjusting," Ford answered. "We want a car that will run without meddling. An ideal car would be fool proof."

MORE LULLABIES ARE BADLY NEEDED

Next Generation Would Have Better Emotional Balance, Says Woman.

CHICAGO, June 2. — (United Press.)— If more mothers would sing their babies to sleep with lullabies these days, the next generation would have a better emotional balance, declares Miss Mary McDowell, Chicago Commissioner of Public Welfare. "There may be a definite relation between a restless jazz generation and the vanishing of the lullaby," she said Monday.

"Music is an expression of the people. American must live more serenely and evenly before it gets away from jazz. When women had time and patient nerves, they sang their babies to sleep. Now most of them have neither."

METAL MESH CLEANER.

A cleaner of metal mesh is a good investment, because it cleans pots and pans much more efficiently than scraping with a knife. It also saves the wear on a regular dishcloth.

SCISSORS FOR CHICKEN

Cut up chicken for a salad with a knife instead of chopping it in the chopping bowl. A pair of shears will do the work effectively, too.

LAUNDRY HINT

Badly soiled garments should have the dirtiest parts dipped in water, well soaped and tightly rolled up before they are put to soak.

IS THIS YOUR BIRTHDAY

TUESDAY, JUNE 2—You have shrewd common sense, if today is your birthday. You will do better if you follow this strong intuitive talent, rather than taking the advice of others. Unlike the egotistical people, you rarely rely on your own judgment, but always seek the advice of others and so often it proves unreliable. If a woman, you have an inclination to flirt, which you should curb before it leads you in to a regretful escapade. You were born under the Gemini, the zodiac sign meaning twins. This influence will make you extremely affectionate and generous, very courteous and kind.

NATURE LORE NEW FEATURE

Wallace Havelock Robb Will Write For The Examiner Daily.

PRAISED BY PRINCE.

Beginning today, Nature Stories will appear daily, under the title, "Nature Lore," by Wallace Havelock Robb, who has recently been appointed an honorary game warden for the Dominion of Canada.

Everyone is interested in outdoor life and particularly in the fascinating little things that wild birds and animals do. Some things that Mr. Robb tells, are so full of human feeling that folks just can't help reading them.

Even H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, when on his late visit to Canada, was so interested that he wrote Mr. Robb a special letter about his nature work.

Where does he get these stories? He sees them happen, in most cases, for he gives his whole time to observation and wild life work.

Where does he write them? In a small camp, on a tiny island, deep in the Canadian woods.

Most folks are curious about nature and our readers are invited to ask questions through "Nature Lore" in this paper; Mr. Robb will answer them if he can.

SCHOOL CADETS PARADE FRIDAY

Annual Inspection Will Take Place in Central Park.

HARD TRAINING

Final details for the annual inspection of the Peterborough Public School Cadet Battalion have been completed, and the inspection will be held at Central Park on Friday, June 5, at 3 p.m.

All Peterborough Companies will report to Sergt. Major Instructor Thomas at Central Park on the above date at 2.45 p.m. After forming up the Battalion under Battalion Cadet Commander, Harold Coleman of Central School will carry out the following programme.

(a) General Salute by the Battalion in line.
(b) March Past in Column of Platoons.
(c) Company Drill by each Company in competition for the Denne Cup, now held by C. Company, Central School, followed by Physical Training Exercises.
(d) Formation of 3 sides of square for short addresses and presentation of the Cup.

It is hoped to make this 1925 inspection a banner one for the Public Schools, who have been working hard and faithfully under their respective Instructors and Officers.

The bugle band of the Collegiate Institute has been kindly loaned by Principal H. R. G. Kenner for the occasion.

Official invitations have been sent to the Board of Education, and each Home and School Association and they are expected out in full strength. Public School Inspector A. Mowat has kindly consented to have all classes dismissed at 2.45 p.m. to allow all teachers and pupils to be present. In addition to this every citizen of Peterborough is not only invited but requested to come along and boost the boys in general and the school from their own district especially.

In addition to the work to be performed in public, the cadets for the past season in many competitions being very high, and above all every boy concerned has proven to be a good clean sport, and deserving of all the encouragement hat the citizens in general can give them.

ALL FOUND GUILTY.

THE BLIND FIDDLER

(By Jeannette)

There on the corner of the street
The blind man stands.
A violin beneath his chin its music
Rippling from roughened hands.

Unheeding, the crowd passes. Men
And women loitering go.
Into the cup beneath the old brown fiddle
A little stream of silver pieces flow.

What does he play — this sightless fiddler
Standing in the rain.
A dirge? A funeral chant of sororw?
A cry of ceaseless pain?

Listen. From out the tightened strings
Comes music gay and sweet.
"Virginia Mammy" and "Tipperary"
That war-time music for marching feet.

Life for him may be murky twilight
To those who pass 'tis a golden noon.
But music springs from the heart,
says the wise one.
Hark to the lilt of the blind man's tune.

LAKEFIELD MAN NOW A DENTIST

W. J. Lemay Passed His Final Examinations for Degree of D.D.S.

LAKEFIELD NEWS

LAKEFIELD, June 2.—W. J. Lemay has passed his final examinations in the Ontario Dental College and is now a full fledged D.D.S. Dr. Lemay is a graduate of the Lakefield High School, obtaining his matriculation here in 1915. He enlisted in the 93rd battalion in August of that year and served overseas for the duration of the war. He is well known in the village and his success is a matter of general interest and satisfaction.

Mr. A. V. Hill has completed his new store built on the site of the one destroyed by fire in February and will open for business very shortly. The new structure is an attractive looking building with metal sheeting and fire proof roofing.

The long heralded 4-4 made its appearance in the village last week and received a hearty but far from uproarious welcome. While it is considered slightly better than its predecessor 2½% it is far from being an intoxicating beverage. The optimist hopes it will improve with age.

Mrs. W. E. Gillman entertained the members of the Ladies' Bridge Club on Thursday evening when a delightful time was spent.

MARITIMES ARE OVER GOVERNED

Three Governments Where One Would Suffice, Says Clergyman.

GREATER BENEFIT.

TORONTO, June 2 (Canadian Press) — What is patent to every open-eyed Canadian is the fact that the Maritime provinces are over governed is a statement in the report by Rev. Dr. James Ross, Superintendent of Home Missions for the Presbyterian Church in the Maritimes, which will be presented to the General Assembly this week.

"There are three governors and three legislatures," he declares, "where one governor and one legislature could govern with more intelligence and with greater good to the people.

A LINE-O-TYPE.

The Made-in-Peterborough Fair opened last night with a bang, when a fierce thunderstorm accompanied the ceremony. There was nothing lacking, however, in the enthusiasm shown by those who were managing the booths and attending to the needs of the first night. And those visitors who braved the storm to get in on the first night's activity were loud in praise of the splendid show. It was generally conceded that the manufacturers have surpassed themselves in their preparations and that the citizens are assured of a splendid week's entertainment and education.

Off With a Bang

Alderman Phelan's fear that a prohibitive tax on gasoline pumps would cause their removal so that tourists would have inconvenience in filling up. The other aldermen feared that now they have trouble in finding the buildings.

It was pointed out yesterday that certain workmen engaged in stringing wires on city streets have a careless disregard for the way in which trees are trimmed in their operations and the tree that took thirty years to grow is destroyed in thirty seconds by bad pruning. A tree is not necessarily properly trimmed when it continues to live after the operation. It's beauty and symmetry may have been destroyed.

Trim Carefully

All trimming of trees on the city's streets and boulevards are protected by the city, and cannot be legally trimmed except by permission and under supervision of the City Engineer.

It is worth while attending to these requirements because they make for the present and future beauty of the city. Any thinking man will agree that the regulations should be strictly enforced.

The spectacle of a dog-catcher sniping at dogs from behind trees would have been at least something new. But where would he collect his money?

Quebec Lady Used Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Madame E. Trembley suffered with neuralgia, headaches and pains in her back.

GROSSES ROCHES, Que., June 1.—(Special).—No place appears to be too small to furnish at least one person who is prepared to say that they owe their health to the great Canadian Kidney Remedy, Madame E. Trembley, a well-known resident here, is one of them.

"Your Dodd's Kidney Pills have done me much good. I am very satisfied with the results. I had pains in my back and head. My sleep was broken and unrefreshing, and my appetite was fitful. Six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills have done me much good."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are a kidney remedy. They strengthen the kidneys so they can do their full work of straining the impurities out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills have been used for backaches, diabetes, rheumatism, dropsy urinary troubles and heart disease. People who use them are loud in their praise.

NOSE DIVE BY LEAFS IN BUFFALO DROPPING DOUBLE-HEADER AFTER RUNNING VICTORIES TO NINETEEN

Lepard Held Toronto to Four Hits in First Game and Started Second.

ORIOLES BEATEN

Reading Won Entire Series From Baltimore—Syracuse Clean Up Rochester.

BUFFALO, N.Y., June 1.—Toronto's upward flight was checked today when the Bisons annexed the double header by scores of 13 to 7 and 9 to 7. Lepard was unhittable in the opening game, Toronto getting but four hits, while Stewart and Johnson were found for 18 smashes. Lepard tried the iron man act by starting to pitch the second. Toronto went after him viciously, and scored four runs in the opening frame, adding three more tallies while he remained up to the fifth. In this frame the Bisons made a great uphill fight and overcame the big lead. Anderson cracked out two home runs while one each was registered by Walsh, Kingdom and Webb.

It was Anderson who delivered the solar plexus blow to the Leafs' winning streak when, in the fifth inning of the first game, he drove his second homer of the game over the left field wall, scoring Spencer and Lepard ahead of him. It was Anderson's fifteenth of the year and established him in the league leadership. Scores:

First Game:

Toronto.... ....000200000— 2 4 2
Buffalo ....10004323x—13 18 1

Stewart, Johnson and Manion; Lepard and McAvoy.

Second Game:

Buffalo.... ....000081x— 9 11 2

Seven innings by agreement.

Glaser, Gibson, Thomas and Manion; Lepard, Auer and McAvoy, Hill.

Reading 17; Baltimore 9.

READING, June 1. — Reading swept the series with the Baltimore Orioles, defeating them today, 17 to 9. The six time champions committed nine errors. Dutch Schroeder, Reading southpaw, broke a finger on his throwing hand in the fifth and retired in favor of Mattison. The game was called in the seventh inning to permit Baltimore to catch a train. Score:

Baltimore.... ....1010304— 9 10 9
Reading..... ....323027x—17 13 1

Jackson, Harwood, Millegan and Cobb; Schroeder, Mattison and Smith.

Syracuse 9; Rochester 2.

SYRACUSE, June 1.—Syracuse made a clean sweep of the series with Rochester here today, when it pounded its way to a 9 to 2 win over the Tribe. Frankhouse pitched flawless ball for the Stars, allowing but five hits. Quellich hit a homer for Rochester with two down in the ninth. Score:

Rochester ....010000001— 2 5 5
Syracuse.. ....20001060x— 9 10 0

Jacobi, Gressett, H. Thormahlem and Lake, Head; Frankhouse and Niebergall.

Jersey City 6; Providence 4

JERSEY CITY, June 1.—Jersey City made it four games in a row from Providence by winning today 6 to 4, giving the Skeeters six consecutive victories. Gene Sheridan led the hiting with four hits in four times up. Score:

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Maker of 51 Golf Champions. "Golf's most successful teacher," says "Chick" Evans

The run-up, and the pitch shot too must be accomplished by throwing the blade directly through ball. This is the reverse of quitting with the blade at the ball, or jabbing. Sometimes a shot can be jabbed and a fairly good shot result, but the practice is not a good one. Jab only when the ball is in a hole or the lie otherwise compels a jab. A fault many players have is of quitting at the ball with the mashie blade. In the shortest run-up for instance, the blade must be sent through the ball. This keeps the ball straight and also makes it run. It is the blade passing through the ball that gives the ball the overspin. The blade merely slapping the ball does not spin it at all, hence the ball that is slapped or jabbed, for a run up, will stop far short of the objective. Shove the blade through as if the ball were not there. The stroke ends not at the ball but at a point six or eight inches in front of it.

SLIPPING WHITE SOX LOSE AGAIN TO COBB'S CREW

O'Rourke's Home Run in Ninth, With Score Tied, Decided It.

RUTH RETURNS.

Yankees Fail to Hold Senators—Browns Win From Cleveland.

DETROIT, June 1.—Detroit won the opening game of the series with Chicago here today, 6 to 6. The outcome of the game was in doubt until the last inning. Going into the ninth with the score tied at 6-6, Doyle doubled to left and Haney fanned. O'Rourke hit the ball to the left field fence, the ball rolling into the street for a home run. Neun, running for Doye, scored ahead of O'Rourke. The score:

Chicago ....010022010— 6 12 0
Detroit ....020120102— 8 13 2

Faber and Schalk; Whitehall, Doyle and Bassler.

St. Louis 10; Cleveland 2.

CLEVELAND, June 1—St. Louis won the first game of the series from Cleveland today, 10 to 2.

Williams made a home run, a triple and a single in five times at bat. Rice made two triples and a single in five times up. Score:

St. Louis.. ....000110404—10 14 2
Cleveland.. ....200000000— 2 8 3

Bush, Vangilder and Dixon; Karr and Myatt.

Washington 5; New York 3.

NEW YORK, June 1.—The Yankees' losing streak continued to-day, despite the return of Babe Ruth to the line-up, the Senators winning, 5 to 3. Ruth, who has been absent from the game for eight weeks due to illness, played six innings for his first appearance this season in a major league game. Veach replaced the heavy hitter in right field in the seventh, it being considered advisable not to allow Ruth to exert himself. Score:

Washington.. ....000100301— 5 11 0
New York ....000100002— 3 6 0

W. Johnson, Marberry and Ruel; Jones and Schang.

Boston 5; Athletics 3.

BOSTON, June 1.—Boston celebrated its home coming today by defeating the pace-making Philadelphia Athletics, 5 to 3.

Boone bounded a home run into the right field bleachers in the first inning off Walberg. Heving's double off the same pitcher in the seventh scored two runs and put the Red Sox ahead, 4 to 3. Score:

Philadelphia.. ....001101000— 3 9 0
Boston ....10010021x— 5 7 0

LACROSSE MATCH.

Benefit Game to be Played Friday, June 5.

All lacrosse players are requested to meet at Stevenson Park Wednesday night for practice for a benefit game to be played Friday, June 5.

Umpires—Geo. Donald and E. Eagleson.

The opening game between Burnbrae and Seymour West for Wednesday night was postponed, owing to the inability of the West side club to obtain enough players to form a team. Eric Coulter, first baseman of the West Seymour team, has had the misfortune of a broken arm.

SPORT GOSSIP AND COMMENT.

The big item in sporting circles this week locally is, of course, the Kingston Ponies-Petes' clash at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, on the result of which will hinge for the time being at least the Central Ontario League leadership. There is nobody the Petes would rather beat than the Ponies, principally because of the manner in which the Kingston press agents vaunt their own team and refuse to see a good point about the opposition, and besides the Johnston clan want to wipe out the defeat sustained in Kingston. It will be a bitter battle and should attract one of the biggest crowds in recent years in view of the fine showing of the Petes in winning three games last week.

* * * * * * * * *

It would be a fitting finish to the Made-in-Peterboro Week to beat the Kingston Ponies with a made-in-Peterboro team, and everybody in the Petes' camp from Manager Johnston to the fiery-thatched bat boy is determined to turn the trick.

* * * * * * * * *

Can you imagine a Peterboro team leading the league in home runs? That's just what the Petes are doing at present with four circuit wallops to their credit. Batstone of Kingston is the only other player to hit for four bases.

* * * * * * * * *

It is possible that Peterboro fans may get a look at Young, the new Kingston right-hander, in action on Saturday. The former Sydenham twirler finished Friday's game against Belleville after Cairns was batted out of the box in the first inning and held Belleville to five hits and two runs in the last eight frames.

* * * * * * * * *

The Petes' next two games are with Kingston here on Saturday and back in Kingston on Wednesday. The present plan of campaign is to send Whitehouse in against Batstone and company on Saturday and assign "Heck" to the task of subduing the Ponies on their own heath. Just like railway timetables, however, these plans are subject to change without previous notice.

* * * * * * * * *

Fans from all over the district are planning to see Saturday's fixture. The impression has got around that the Ponies and Petes are the class of the league and that the championship will be fought out between them, and naturally the enthusiasts want to be on hand when the leaders meet. Ken Colling of Belleville and Si Dell of Oshawa are the umpires for this game, with the former working behind the catcher.

President C. M. Anderson, head of the Central Ontario League this season, was one of the spectators at Saturday's game in Oshawa. So was Jack Nott, former league secretary. —F. D. C.

ROSENEATH WON IN EXHIBITION GAME

Team From Cobourg Were Losers of a Close Game of Ball.

ROSENEATH, June 2 — Roseneath baseball team, last year's champions of the Northumberland league, defeated Cobourg in an exhibition game at Roseneath on Saturday by the close score of 9-8. It was a good exhibition of baseball despite the fact of many errors which showed the lack of practice. Zufelt, the new left-hand twirler, pitched the first five innings for Roseneath and performed in good style and had it not been for errors behind him the score would have been small. Leach pitched the last two innings and held the visitors scoreless, striking out two men in the last inning of a seven inning game. Wilson, also a new recruit for Roseneath, turned in a creditable performance behind the bat.
